German Troops for Austria.

Kaiser Forces Surrender of Russia by Menacing Frontiers.

His Troops Take Places of Those on the Servian Border.

Move Endangers Balance of Power—England Is Alarmed.

BY H. R. CHAMBERLAIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Peace for the present in the Balkans now seems sufficiently assured to permit closer attention to a greater crisis, of which the Austro-Servian quarrel is but a single feature.

It must be recorded that unless the situation changes unexpectedly within the next day or two, Austria-Hungary and Germany will have gained a complete victory in the bold game which they began to play last October. It is the development of the past two days which are most illuminating and significant.

It was suddenly announced that Russia, which was supposed to be the last power to assent, had yielded in advance of England, France and Italy, her unqualified recognition of Austria's annexation of the Serb provinces. Today we know she surrendered in the face of unmistakable threats by Germany.

THREATS OF WAR.

These threats took the form of a definite military demonstration. Austria, for weeks past, as is well known, has been concentrating her military forces upon the Servian and Montenegrin frontiers. To do this she practically denuded her garrisons on the Russian frontier.

In their place come German officers in mufti and others, in uniform, and in some of the frontier towns notices were posted to the effect that German soldiers were to be received and treated as if they were Austrian troops. The German army corps on the eastern frontier were strengthened, and it was definitely arranged that, in case of war, Germany was to take the initiative in hostilities against Russia.

RUSSIA BLUFFED OUT.

When all was ready the German Ambassador at St. Petersburg urged Russia immediately to recognize Austria's action as to Bosnia and Herzegovina. One account says that the Kaiser wrote the Czar to this effect. This is very likely true, despite German denials. At all events, the desired effect was produced, and Russia succumbed to the German pressure. This, of course, means peace for the present. But it augurs ill for the future.

The London Times today uses ominous language on the subject. It says "the situation with which Europe is confronted involves much more than the fate of Servia. We trust that it may not mean the permanent overthrow of the balance of power in Europe."

This action by Russia has produced a remarkable effect in this country. I have had the privilege of receiving a frank expression of the views on the situation held in the highest financial circles. They may be summarized as follows:

DANGER TO COME.

Nothing is so abhorrent to the financial and commercial world as war. We are confronted by a peculiar situation. There has been serious danger of war in the present Balkan quarrel, but we are convinced that there is far greater danger of a general war a few years hence, when the outcome will be much more uncertain than now. It is hardly surprising, under the circumstances, that the great body of opinion in the financial world is in favor of immediate war. Let it come as the lesser of two evils and have it over.

There is no abatement in the public demand in this country for the immediate construction of eight Dreadnaughts. Unless the government gives way, a vote of censure on Monday will, of course, be defeated by a party majority. Then the question in one shape or another must come up in the House of Lords, and it is not improbable that [illegible] dissolution.

THREATENS UNITED STATES.

The Spectator today calls attention to a feature of the situation which is of vital interest to the United States.

It says: "There is one point in the tremendous acceleration of Germany's programme which deserves notice. It is an open secret that the great navy which the United States has built up is in no way aimed at this country. Its object, to put the matter in the shortest compass, is in the first place to enforce the Monroe doctrine, which is as dear now as ever it was to the American people, and secondly, to secure American interests in the Pacific.

"The able, far-seeing men who control the naval policy at Washington, know perfectly well that if the American fleet is not as strong as, or stronger than that of Germany, there is very little doubt but that some day, whether in Brazil, Venezuela, the West Indies, the Monroe doctrine will be challenged by the power whose commercial interests are dominant in many parts of Spanish America."

"UNCLE JOE" AMBITIOUS.

Hears Call of the Golf Links and May Learn the Game.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Uncle Joe" Cannon, 73, and erstwhile "shinny" champion of Danville, Ill., is thinking of going in for golf. The education of Vice-President James Sherman in the game by President Taft has excited in Uncle Joe's breast an ambition to take a try on the links himself.

The Speaker has only handled a golf club once. That was during the Portland exposition, when a covey of pretty girls got him to take a wallop at a little white golf ball.

The call of the Chevy Chase links is being heard above the popular roar for tariff revision, and Speaker Cannon may go in for the game.

Police Smash Down Doors of United Railroads' Offices—Luther Brown Arrested on Larceny Charge and Warrant Is Out for W. M. Abbot.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—Following the arrest of five men accused of conspiring to secure confidential papers relating to the graft cases from the private office of Dist. Atty. Langdon, the office of Patrick Calhoun, president of the United Railroads, as well as the adjoining rooms occupied by his legal staff, and the general offices of the railroad company, were forcibly entered and searched tonight by detectives sent by the District Attorney's office.

Luther Brown, head of the railroad detectives, and James Handlen, claim agent of the company, were arrested on warrants charging them with larceny, and a warrant issued for the arrest of William M. Abbot, assistant general counsel for the company, on a charge of receiving stolen goods.

The raid on the legal offices in the Balboa building, was conducted by police Detective Thomas Murphy and Assistant District Attorney Harrison.

ROGERS PROTESTS.

Accompanied by a dozen plain-clothes men of the staff employed by W. J. Burns, special agent connected with the graft prosecution, they appeared before the door. Earl Rogers of Calhoun's counsel in the bribery trial, answered their knock. He refused to admit them, claiming that the search warrant they presented was not entirely sufficient for the search. The detectives broke through the glass panel in the door, and entered the room where they searched every desk and box they found.

Meanwhile they had summoned aid from police headquarters and thirty or more bluecoats jostled elbows with a couple of dozen detectives and special agents in the halls while the ransacking of the rooms proceeded.

After the glass door had been shattered Rogers and Stanley Moore, also of Calhoun's counsel who, with several other attorneys were in the offices, made no further objection.

The policemen, detectives, newspapermen and sightseers who had made their way into the building thronged the rooms, trampling the broken glass under foot. The searchers proceeded from room to room with some member of the railroad legal staff always on watch beside them and not a drawer or safe was missed by the eyes of the detectives.

SEARCH SYSTEMATIC.

At the Oak-street car barn, where the general offices of the company are located, the search was equally systematic. As the combination to the safe could not be obtained the lock of the strong box was forced and every paper inside looked over. The search warrants call for certain papers al-

LOCAL OPTION FIGHT IN OHIO ANTICIPATED.

Saloons Closed at Springfield and Troops Are Ready to Go Into Black Belt, Where Battle of Wet and Dry Forces Is Rumored—Proposed Attempt to Seize Armory Is Reported.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPRINGFIELD (O.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fearing that the "wet" and "dry" enthusiasts who will battle [illegible] in a riot in the black belt, all the saloons were closed at 8 o'clock [illegible] and troops have been ordered to keep themselves in readiness to leave for Springfield.

The militia companies in Dayton, Urbana, Bellefontaine and Xenia have all been ordered by Adjt.-Gen. Weybrecht to hold themselves in readiness for trouble. It is not known who made application for the troops. Sheriff D. D. Lawrence states that he was called by telephone late this afternoon, and ordered to have every available deputy in readiness.

It is stated from Columbus that information was filed with the Adjutant-General that the "wets" in the pending local-option fight were preparing to seize the armory of the two Springfield companies of the National Guard, secure the arms and ammunition, and start to shoot up the negro quarters in an effort to intimidate the negro voters, most of whom will vote "dry" according to every report, in Monday's election.

The leaders are greatly exercised about the story. Webster P. Huntington, the "wet" manager, laughs at the story, and denies any knowledge of the matter. They are disposed to put the blame for the scare on the "drys," but Frank M. Knapp, the "dry" manager, and all the temperance leaders, while admitting that they have heard incidentally of the orders, deny that they were in any way responsible for them.

It is held by some that neither wet nor dry leaders are behind the movement, but detectives from the outside, who are employed in some numbers by both sides, are at the bottom of the panic.

The saloon keepers declare that the closing of the saloons at 8 o'clock tonight was purely voluntary on their part, and only as a precautionary measure to prevent trouble. Other information from an unknown source is that the saloons were closed by order of the Adjutant-General.

Frenzied Mother Cuts Throats of Three Children and Her Own—Puts Torch to House.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) March 27.—In a fit of despondency following a long illness, Mrs. John Lynch, living on a farm near Cedar Rapids, this afternoon cut the throats of her five-weeks-old baby and her 3-year-old son. The frenzied mother then attacked her three other children but two of them escaped. When help arrived Mrs. Lynch had cut her throat and had set the house afire. It was impossible to rescue the bodies from the flames until the house was burned to the ground.

A third child, a girl 4 years old, was found in the ruins with her throat cut. She was rescued before the house was burned down and at a late hour was still alive.

TROLLEY COLLISION FATAL.

PITTSBURGH, March 27.—Three persons were killed, two probably fatally hurt and fifteen others sustained injuries late this afternoon in a head-on collision between two electric cars on the Pittsburgh and Butler street railway near Bryant station, this county. The dead: H. J. Cross, conductor; Alfred W. Snyder, Albert Heindman.

CLUBHOUSE BURNS.

NEWARK (N. J.) March 27.—The Baltusrol Golf Clubhouse, three miles from Summit, burned to the ground early today, half a dozen club members and the servants escaping scantily clad. The clubhouse cost about $100,000.

MILLION FOR TAPESTRIES IS ONE ORDER.

Masterpieces of Gainsborough and Reynolds to Hang in New Mansion—London Art Dealers Have Carte Blanche in Providing Decorations—Removal of Duty Aids.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The famous Bomcher tapestries, costing $1,000,000, will form a part of the library decorations of Henry E. Huntington's new mansion in Los Angeles. These five tapestries formed part of the famous Rudolph E. Kann collection which was purchased by Duveen Brothers for $5,000,000. The Duveens are planning the entire interior decorations of the new Huntington mansion, which is destined to be an art palace. The library in which the tapestries are to be hung will be of the Louis XIV period, the drawing-room a Louis Seize example and the boudoir of the same period, while the dining-room and corridor will be purely Georgian. The Duveens are now collecting masterpieces of painting and sculpture and objects of art to harmonize with the various rooms.

In the Georgian room the paintings and furniture will be entirely by English masters. Already some of the most valuable Gainsborough and Reynolds canvases have been secured. The same plan of consistency will be carried out in the other rooms. The Duveens have been given carte blanche in the decorations and it is impossible to estimate the immense sum which the mansion will ultimately cost.

The Duveens and other London art dealers are delighted at the prospects of the removal of duty upon art objects by the American Congress. Joseph Duveen said:

"It will lead to a tremendous increase in art purchases by Americans who hitherto have been deterred from purchasing by high duties and it will mean that America, within a few years, will have secured a large percentage of the world's art treasures.

"At present I have stored here millions of dollars worth of art objects which Americans have purchased, but which they would not import owing to tariff duties. They felt certain that some day the oppressive duty would be removed and their judgment, in view of recent Congressional recommendations, seems sound. Naturally I cannot disclose the names of these owners but I can say that they include five notable Americans."

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE WRECKED.

DYNAMITE EXPLOSION IN NEW BUILDING.

Supposed Hole Was Bored Between Blocks of Granite and Explosive Inserted—Strike Has Been on and Former Workers Are Suspected of Plot.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON (Mass.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The New Boston Operahouse, at Gainsboro and Huntington avenues, was partially wrecked by dynamite shortly before midnight tonight. The whole front of the building, which is in process of construction, was blown out. There has been a strike of the iron workers on the building, and the police believe that the explosion may have been due to a disgruntled workman or body of workmen.

Judging only from the action of the explosion, it is presumed that the hole was bored between two heavy blocks of granite near the ground at the corner. When the charge was exploded the upper block, a piece five feet long, four feet wide and a foot thick, was hurled the full width of Huntington avenue, about seventy-five feet, and fell, leaning against the fence of the American baseball grounds.

Large quantities of scaffolding used in the construction of the walls, were torn down, broken to bits and scattered broadcast for rods around. Even a portion of the iron ribs which held the massive stonework in place, was wrenched away, and scattered on the pavement. The effect of the charge was so great that the police postponed entering the building until daylight, fearing that the whole eastern side of the structure had been weakened and might fall at any moment.

George W. Harvey, the contractor, states that he is convinced the explosion is due to the work of some present or former employé. There is no strike on at the present time, but there has been one within a short time.

"I can give no other explanation," said Mr. Harvey. "It was dynamited and was undoubtedly the act of some workman."

Wedding Ceremony Quietly Performed in Episcopal Church.

Mother Says She Is Fully Justified in Insisting on Marriage.

Couple Go to Ranch for a Honeymoon and May Settle There.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Gladys Helen Emery was married today to Gunjiro Aoki, her Japanese lover, in Trinity Parish Church, Rev. H. H. Gowan officiating. Immediately following the ceremony at 11:45 a.m., the pair left by private launch for the fruit ranch of an old family friend on Hood's Canal, which the groom has a proposition to manage on shares. The ranch is the property of a friend of the bride's father of San Francisco, whose name is withheld. The couple may not remain there, however, but may go to Idaho where Aoki thinks of buying a ranch.

The wedding today followed a family council in which a complete reconciliation is said to have been effected. The original plan was to have the ceremony performed in Vancouver, B. C., but at the girl's expressed wish, the wedding took place in Seattle. She remembered the anti-Japanese riots across the border some time ago and feared further unpleasantness. As it was the ceremony was very quiet. At the request of the girl's father, two bluecoats patrolled the sidewalk in front of the church, but this precaution was not necessary. Mr. and Mrs. Emery [illegible] today and the latter declared she had the best reasons in the world for insisting on the marriage and believed her determination in the matter fully justified.

BRIDE SURE OF HAPPINESS.

Shortly before the ceremony the bride said: "I am tired of this fleeing from place to place and dodging people and concealing my identity. I have done nothing to deserve it and because I love Mr. Aoki and am willing to marry him is no reason I should be hunted by everybody. I know we will get along well after our marriage and I look forward to a happy future. Mr. Aoki is a perfect gentleman, kind and considerate and I am as proud as he of the fact that he is a Japanese with the traditions of a family of noble fighting men behind him, who have never done anything to smirch their name and men who could look the whole world in the eye and not flinch."

Archdeacon Emery, his wife, and J. Sunada, proprietor of the Great Northern Hotel, were the only witnesses to the ceremony. The big granite church at Eighth avenue and James street was dimly lighted for the ceremony.

CLOISTERED WEDDING.

There was the true "cloistered aloofness" which the Japanese, Aoki, the former house servant of the Emerys, had traveled almost the length of the coast to obtain. Outside the church there was no gathering of any kind—Aoki and his white bride, had finally landed before a Christian altar and in the sacred silence of the granite walls of Old Trinity they plighted their troth.

HILL AND HARRIMAN SMOKE PEACE PIPE.

After Years of Effort Problems Relating to the Big Portland Terminals Are Settled on Eve of Harriman's Departure East.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—Edward H. Harriman is scheduled to leave for New York at 11 o'clock tonight and his special train, carrying the party that accompanied him on his two months' tour of the South and West should reach the Atlantic Coast within a week, if his present plans are not changed.

Apparently unconcerned with transportation and finance, Mr. Harriman spent the entire day at Burlingame, a few miles from San Francisco, and while considerable of his time was taken up in consultation with officials of several roads, the greater part of the day was devoted to recreation. In the morning he tramped the muddy lanes that divide the country estates of the millionaire colony. In the afternoon he watched a polo match at the Frank C. Carolan home, and tonight his entire party was entertained at a farewell dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Crocker.

Through Louis Hill, president of the Great Northern, who has been closely associated with the Harriman party during the past three days, it became known that today's conference related to affairs in and about Portland, and it was announced that the problem of terminals in that city had been definitely settled, after years of effort, during which time the Hill and Harriman interests have held in abeyance improvements aggregating millions of dollars.

During his stay in the neighborhood of San Francisco Mr. Harriman has flatly declined to subscribe to current rumors relating to the state of his health and his impending retirement. When asked today if he contemplated the transfer of any of his duties and cares to a governing board composed of his lieutenants, he said:

"I no longer pay any attention to reports of that character emanating from Wall street. You may recall that I have heretofore refrained from affirming or denying that particular

LEMON TARIFF UNDER ATTACK.

Harrison of New York Objects to Increase.

Smith Shows Oranges Have Been Cheapened.

Longworth in General Defense of Payne Bill.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Francis Burton Harrison of New York, in a speech on the tariff today, declared against an increase of duty on lemons, declaring that it was local legislation and designed solely to benefit local California growers by making consumers of the Atlantic seaboard pay the freight from California when they might otherwise get cheaper fruit from Italy. Smith of California asked if it were not a fact that oranges, under protective duty, had become cheaped to the consumer. Harrison begged the question but maintained his hostility to the lemon tariff.

Present plans seem to be to have a vote taken on half a dozen of the big schedules, including lumber, hides, wool, ore, coal and perhaps barley, and then put the bill to vote. It is predicted now that lumber will lose even the dollar given it by the Payne bill, but the lumber interests are looking to the Senate to put the tariff back to $2. Needham and McKinlay are both prepared to speak on the tariff bill Monday.

Debate on the tariff bill in the House was largely devoted to an academic discussion of the question and political issues involved, although Mr. Gardner (Massachusetts) thoroughly reviewed the question of free hides and a tariff on leather goods.

Mr. Longworth (Ohio) and Mr. Harrison (New York,) the Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, were the only representatives of the tariff-framing committee who made speeches.

Mr. Hardick (Georgia) maintained that the South still condemned protection. He also declared that it was not the truth that the South was turning to Taft.

Mr. Hardwick asserted that the tariff on sugar results in a clean gift to the trust of $67,000,000 per annum.

VOTE IF LOSES HEAD.

While Mr. Gardner was arguing for the retention of the duty on boots and shoes and in favor of keeping hides on the free list, Champ Clark (Missouri) wanted to know if he would support a bill which would compel the shoe manufacturers to stamp on the shoes they make a statement showing the ingredients that enter into this manufacture.

"Oh, I will vote for it," Mr. Gardner replied, "but they will take my head off down in my district for doing it. But the gentleman is right."

In an argument for free lumber Mr. Ansberry (Ohio) was very sarcastic in referring to the opposition of Gifford Pinchot, forester of the United States.

The Ohio Congressman said that Mr. Pinchot attained his position in public life because he was a protege of Theodore Roosevelt, and had the confidence, therefore, of the American people. "But when the cat is away, the mice play," quoted Mr. Ansberry. About the time of the so-called lumbermen's banquet held in this city in February, rumors began to be current that Mr. Pinchot was wavering but it was not until Mr. Roosevelt had retired from the Presidency that Pinchot finally lined up on the other side. The lumbermen advanced on Washington. They saw, they converted, and when they left the national capital, it is said, that Gifford Pinchot was chained to their chariot.

Turning to other features of the Payne tariff bill, Mr. Ansberry said it had been framed to protect special interests.

LONGWORTH IN DEFENSE.

Declaring that the Payne bill is a practical fulfillment of the pledge of the Republican party, Representative Longworth of Ohio spoke in defense of its various provisions.

"No tariff bill in history that I know of has ever been framed by Democrats and Republicans acting together," said Mr. Longworth. "It is a matter of personal regret to me that I cannot have the pleasure of seeing a complete Democratic tariff measure. I confess to a feeling of deep curiosity to know upon what basis the gentleman from Missouri, and the gentleman from Alabama and the gentleman from Texas could have met."

Mr. Longworth declared the Republicans do not claim that the Payne bill is in all respects perfect.

"No one of us believes that there is everything in it which ought to be in it, and nothing in it which ought not to be," he said. "We do claim for it, however, that it represents a bona-fide revision of the tariff from top to bottom.

"The Republican party always has favored and always will favor the policy of protection, but we do not favor rates so high as to shelter monopolies, and which amount in effect to prohibition."

Mr. Longworth defended the expenditures of the government, and said that he believed the time is at hand when the government must spend more for the improvement of inland waterways. He said coal and iron ore have been placed on the free list, and the lumber tariff cut in half, in order to conform with the proposed conservation of the natural resources.

The House adjourned to meet again at 10 o'clock Monday. The House will meet for ten and a half hours each day. The hours agreed upon are from 10 in the morning to 6 o'clock at night, when a recess of two hours is to be taken, the House to continue in session from 8 to 10:30 at night.

CANAL BILL.

INCREASE PRESIDENT'S POWER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator Crawford of South Dakota, successor to Senator Kittredge, who was chairman of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, has signalized his entrance into the Senate, by introducing a bill which would abolish the Panama Canal Commission and place in the hands of the President all authority over the canal zone.

The bill authorizes the President to proceed with the excavation of the canal to completion, and to appoint a director and a chief engineer. He is given authority to fix their compensation, but Congress is permitted to change the amount if it so desires.

The President is also given authority to remove any of the zone officials at his pleasure. It is specified that "all orders and regulations with respect to the government of the canal zone hereafter enacted by the President or pursuant to his directions, or authority, are ratified and confirmed without prejudice to the power to revoke or amend the same."

LAST OF BEAUTIFUL SISTERS ENGAGED TO WED.

Miss Nora Langhorne, of Southern family famous for beautiful daughters, whose betrothal to Paul Phipps of England was announced yesterday.

SURRENDERS.

LAST OF LANGHORNE BEAUTIES IS TO WED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RICHMOND (Va.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chiswell Dabney Langhorne of Mirador, Albemarle county, today announced the engagement of his youngest daughter, Nora, the last of the famous Langhorne beauties, to Paul Phipps of England. Both the young people have been spending some time at Cliveden, the country seat in England of Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, Miss Langhorne's sister.

Miss Langhorne has spent much of her time with her sister, Mrs. Astor, since her début, having become quite a favorite in the smart set of England.

Miss Langhorne was a débutante of last year. She possesses all the accomplishments which made famous her sisters, Mrs. T. Moncure P[illegible]kins of this city, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson of New York, Mrs. Reginald Brooks of Long Island, and Mrs. Astor.

Mr. Phipps, who is a young architect, is a grandson of William Butler Duncan of New York, and a nephew of Alexander Butler Duncan, who married the beautiful Mrs. Kernochan, and who has been a frequent visitor in Virginia. He is well known to the hunting set in Virginia.

RIGHT IDEA.

PRESIDENT IS FOR ECONOMY.

SEEKS CO-OPERATION OF LEGISLATIVE BRANCHES.

Committee of Three Members of Cabinet Directed to Consider All Estimates of Expenditures Before They Are Submitted to Congress No More Haphazard Finances.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Taft has taken steps to bring about a thorough coöperation between the executive and legislative branches of the government in the interest of economy. The new committee of the Senate, which has been created for the purpose of subjecting all appropriations to rigid scrutiny will have the cordial coöperation of the President and heads of the executive departments.

President Taft has directed that a committee, of three members of the Cabinet be appointed to consider all estimates of expenditures before they are submitted to Congress. The object of the Cabinet committee will be to discourage extravagance in public expenditures and see that all department estimates hold down to figures warranted by the revenues. The President and thoughtful members of the administration and of Congress are satisfied that the haphazard way of appropriating public moneys must cease.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, following the President's wishes, today addressed a circular to officers of the Treasury Department notifying them that all feasible economies in expenditure should hereafter be practiced and that estimates of different departments would be considered together by the whole Cabinet. Other secretaries will send out similar notifications.

PLAN FOR POST ROADS.

Representative Proposes an Original Scheme for the Improvement and Increase of Highways.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—In order to provide better post roads in the States and Territories, Representative Adamson of Georgia has introduced a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to make an accounting of the funds in the treasury at the end of each fiscal year, and after deducting the amounts required by law to be kept in the treasury, he is required to declare the remainder a surplus, which is to be distributed per capita among the States and Territories and the District of Columbia, according to the last general census.

All people of cities of more than 30,000 population are excluded from the count. The bill provides that the surplus shall not exceed $25,000,000 annually. Any State using the funds for other than the improvement of post roads will not be allowed to participate in further distribution of the funds until the Secretary of the Treasury has been satisfied the amount wrongfully used has been replaced by the State illegally using the money.

SOME FANCY SHOOTING.

Two Companies of Coast Artillery Make Eight Hits Out of Nine Shots With Mortars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Record of hits within time limit at a moving target, made by 12-inch mortars, was broken on October 12 last by the Twenty-first and One Hundred and Third companies of Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort Howard. Eight hits were made out of nine shots at a target moving 5.2 miles an hour, at ranges between 4000 and 6000 yards.

The Seventeenth Company Coast Artillery made an efficiency record of 8.81 under similar circumstances, at Fort Monroe on the same date. While only six hits were made on this occasion, the time within which the shots were fired was so much less that the record is considerably better. In both cases special commendations of officers and men has been recommended by the Chief of Coast Artillery.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Negro Musicians Only.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Hereafter negro men only will be appointed chief musicians of negro regiments in the United States army. An order to that effect was issued today by Gen. Bell, chief of staff, by direction of the President. White chief musicians previously serving with negro regiments, have been transferred to white regiments.

Salary Reduction Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Representative Edwards of Georgia today introduced a bill to reduce the salary of Congressmen from $7500 to $5000.

No Favoritism.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Peremptory orders have been issued by Gen. Bell, chief of staff, that there shall be no officers' club, or similar social organization of officers at any military post or station occupying any part of tended to all officers on duty there. a public building other than the private quarters of an officer, unless all privileges connected with it are ex-

IS BALDNESS DOOMED?

Baltimore Specialist Says It Is Unnecessary, and Proves It.

BALTIMORE, March 27.—The intense interest in the wonderful work that is being accomplished in Baltimore and other cities by William Charles Keene, president of the Lorrimer Institute, continues unabated. Many cases of baldness and faded hair of years' standing have been remedied by the remarkable preparation being distributed from Mr. Keene's laboratory, and its fame is spreading far and wide, and thousands of persons are using this remarkable hair food with gratifying results.

What makes this treatment more popular is the fact that free trial outfits are sent by mail prepaid. Those who wish to try it are strongly advised to write to Mr. Keene at the Lorrimer Institute, Branch 301, Baltimore, Md. They will receive the full trial outfit free of charge, and much useful information about the hair which will put them on the road to a rapid and certain improvement.—[Adv.

CASTRO MENACE TO PEACE IN AMERICA.

Paris Hopes United States Will Take a Firm Hand in Venezuelan Situation and Still Fears Power of Deposed President.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Cipriano Castro's theatricalism, though ignored by the French government, promises, in the opinion of the European public, to furnish perplexing problems for the Washington administration unless the Caracas authorities act with unexpected energy against the returning "Black Eagle of the Andes." Paris journals hope President Taft will not neglect any step calculated to prevent a return to the old disorderly régime which flouted the United States and Europe insolently and helped to beggar an oppressed people.

"Now that Mr. Root has been instrumental in getting Castro out of the dictatorship, Mr. Knox should see to it that he is kept out, and the followers of Gomez may not be able to defeat the renascence of Castro unless they have assistance from outside," says a Paris writer, impressed by the "courageous Venezuelan's latest pronouncement."

Castro has met with some success in Germany in his efforts to interest financiers in Venezuelan projects, though the support he desires is dependent upon his ability to convince the people of Venezuela that the movement by which he was deposed was treason greater than any charged against him.

That he is to be reckoned with still is assumed in Berlin and Paris. According to a Berlin paper, his enormous mail has contained "assurances entirely satisfactory to him," that a powerful band of partisans eagerly awaits an opportunity to rally to his standard as soon as he can set it up again in South America.

"With health restored and his swarthy Andean tribesmen in readiness to follow him," says a London reviewer, "Castro is far from being a negligible factor."

The report that the British government has been inquiring concerning the intention of Castro to land at Port of Spain, Trinidad, is not true. The Foreign Office shows no interest in the movements of Castro and prefers to await developments. Castro left Pauillac yesterday on the steamer Guadeloupe.

CARING FOR BABIES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—Steps for a comprehensive campaign to insure the proper care of babies in the congested districts of Chicago during the coming summer have been taken by the United Charities. The action followed statements that 70 per cent. of the babies in the poorer districts, particularly among the foreign element, graduate from their natural diet to one of beer, coffee, sauerkraut and bologna sausage, and that with proper precautions the lives of thousands of such, who die of summer complaint, might be saved. A corps of 500 visitors will be placed in the field next month.

HARD ON DARWIN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—Darwin's theory of the evolution of species has received a disconcerting blow in a decision by Judge Windes, that a "missing link" exhibited at a local animal show is a dumb imbecile Louisiana negro boy. The court has awarded his custody to the mother. The boy was called "Congo" at the show, and a graphic story was told of his capture at great risk in Central Africa. Thousands of persons have stared at him as a "cannibal," "ape man" and "wild half-animal savage." In reality he is declared to be, despite his grotesque face and head, docile and harmless. His name is Willie Wilson, and his mother declared he was kidnaped thirteen years ago.

ANCIENT WRONG.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—The battle of Chicago women for municipal suffrage is receiving the earnest support of Catherine Waugh McCulloch, Evanston's woman justice of the peace. In an address to her sex she said: "Did you ever stop to think that the women got the worst of it even as far back as 1773? Do you recall the Boston tea party, when our forefathers tipped 340 chests of tea over into Boston harbor in their fight for the principle that 'taxation without representation is tyranny?' You'll notice that it was a woman's luxury that they sacrificed. If it had been tobacco instead of tea, the tax would have been paid."

PLAN FOR WORKERS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—Legislation in the interest of the workers of the country will be the subject of discussion at a conference of economists, educators, manufacturers and labor leaders from all parts of the United States, which is to be held April 10, under the auspices of the American Association for Labor Legislation. The government will be represented by Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor, and Daniel G. Keefe, Commissioner-General of Immigration.

HITS DOPE FIENDS.

OPIUM BARRED EXCEPT FOR MEDICAL USAGE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—After April 1 next, neither opium nor any mixture or compound containing or representing opium in any form can legally be brought into the United States or any of its outlying possessions except for strictly medical purpose. This carries into effect a law passed at the last session of Congress embodying this restriction and the Secretary of the Treasury today issued regulations in which is indicated the term "opium" which shall cover all of its forms, including the following named alkalis, their salts or combinations as it may be found necessary to include in the future:

Morphine, codeine, doenine, diacotyl, morphine heroin, peronine, their chlorides, sulphates, phosphates and all mixtures or preparations containing them. The term "for medical purposes only" is meant for the treatment or prevention of diseases of man or animal.

Smoking opium will be seized forthwith and destroyed as an illegal importation.

Opium other than smoking opium and its derivatives, imported for medical purposes, may be entered for immediate transportation in bond to and for consumption or for warehouse, at the following named ports and no other cities:

Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Honolulu, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Porto Rico, San Francisco, Seattle and St. Louis.

Importers are required to file with the collector a declaration stating that the importation is made in good faith and giving the name of the firm by whom it is to be used in the preparation of medicine, etc.

Importations of crude opium are limited to packages containing 100 pounds or more, morphine and its salts to fifty ounces and other derivatives or their salts to twenty-five ounces. Importers are also required to keep complete records as to the persons to whom the articles are sold.

ARRESTED WITH AFFINITY.

Tacoma Man Steps from Train Into Arms of Waiting Woman and Clutches of Law.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ray H. Campbell, salesman for the Davis-Smith Company, was arrested this morning in company of Nellie Maskell, his affinity, on a warrant sworn to by his wife. Officers learned that Campbell was due to reach Tacoma last night on the North Coast Limited from the East, and met the train at the depot. When the train pulled in, Miss Maskell rushed up to Campbell, and threw her arms about his neck. The two conversed in low tones for several minutes, and then left the depot together. Campbell and the woman were arrested later, and the former was locked up in the City Jail.

Mrs. Grace E. Campbell, wife of the prisoner, swore out the warrant for his arrest yesterday afternoon. She says that her husband has been keeping company with the Maskell woman for some time. Campbell had gone to Grand Rapids, Mich., his former home. Mrs. Campbell says he has started some kind of a lawsuit against her father for the apparent purpose of getting her to return East. She says Campbell and his affinity induced her here from Michigan; that she raised money and came west on Campbell's promise to drop the other woman and return to her. They have been married seventeen years.

RHODESIA TO MR. ROOSEVELT.

Duke of Abercorn Offers Teddy Invitation.

Big Inducements Offered in South Africa.

Gun Silencers Promise Big Game Records.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, Thursday, March 18.—In the hope that Theodore Roosevelt might be persuaded to include Rhodesia in his forthcoming African tour, the Duke of Abercorn recently sent him a cordial invitation from the board of the British South African Company to visit that country. In his letter the Duke pointed out the many attractions affordeded by the journey from Cape Town and drew particular attention to Victoria Falls and the Matoppo Hills, in the midst of which is the tomb of Cecil Rhodes.

The Duke of Abercorn also called attention to the excellent prospects for the hunting of big game in Northern Rhodesia. Possibly this was uppermost in the ex-President's mind when, in his letter, heartily thanking the Duke for the invitation, he wrote: "Your proposal is so very attractive that I should certainly have closed with it if there had been time."

It is said here that the guns Mr. Roosevelt will use in Africa will be equipped with silencers, in which case he will likely make new record in big game hunting.

Letters received here from Mombasa say that Mr. Roosevelt probably will proceed from Mombasa to Kapiti plains, a station on the Uganda Railroad, 278 miles inland, where he will organize his caravan on the estate of Sir Alfred Pease.

CHINESE RESENTFUL.

Object to Purchase by Methodists of Property for Mission Near Confucius's Tomb.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKIN, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Native resentment over the purchase by American Methodists of property for a mission near the tomb of Confucius is a factor in the anti-foreign demonstrations in Shan Tung. The seller has been jailed.

Feeling is intense and the matter has been referred to the American legation at Waiwupu. Missionaries report anti-foreign feeling is strong in Chu Fou, Tung Hing Chou, and Tsao Chu Fu, notorious hotbeds of secret societies.

There is no evidence of immediate danger. Diplomats are confident that the soldiers sent by the government of Shan Tung will be able to cope with the situation.

BISHOP SCORES MODERN CHURCH.

SAYS "LIVE LIKE CHRIST" PLAN IS OF MORBID TENDENCY.

Leader in Methodist Denomination, South, Ridicules Modern Machinery of Religion and Declares Ministers Are Whittling Down Gospel and Preaching English Literature.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE (Md.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In scathing terms Bishop Warren Candler declared himself against the "live like Christ" movements that have been conducted recently in several cities. He was speaking in the business session of the Baltimore annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the South today. He paid his respects to the so-called modern movements of the churches, declaring that the so-called demands of the twentieth century for a revision of the religion of Jesus Christ were foolish and all wrong.

He ridiculed the excessive church machinery, which so many ministers nowadays consider a necessity, and pleaded for a personal religion. He was especially severe in condemning men who preached English literature and kindred subjects.

"All these so-called movements," continued the Bishop, "to make people live like what they think Christ would live, have been failures. From Thomas A'Kempis down to all who have tried, such plans have ended by becoming morbid. He succeeded better than the many in Kansas and a great deal better than others in Cleveland. These campaigns did no good.

"Some ministers try to see how much about Jesus they cannot believe without being brought to trial. They whittle the gospel down and then state the twentieth century demands it. I do not care what the century demands; I care only for what Christ demands."

STANDS BY HIS ROYAL BROTHER IN TROUBLE.

Prince Alexander of Servia, who is expected to succeed his brother, Prince George, as heir to throne, but who declares his brother must not lose position of Crown Prince.

THREATS TRUMPS.

ment of the Austrian-Servian crisis is appreciably nearer. Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, and Baron Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister have not as yet decided upon the wording of the note in which Servia is to make formal renunciation of its aspirations but the differences between the two ministers are so small that diplomats hold it to be inconceivable that they can stand in the way of an agreement.

CROWN PRINCE IS STILL OBDURATE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BELGRADE (Servia) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Despite the efforts of young officers of the war party to induce him to withdraw his renunciation of the succession to the throne, Crown Prince George adheres to his resolve, to the intense relief of the nation at large. It is untrue that he has left the capital, but he refuses to see anybody.

It is learned that the King gave $2500 to the widow of Kolakovich, the valet for whose death, it is alleged, the Crown Prince was responsible and endeavored to prevent the affair being made public, but the Prince was intractable in the matter and, indeed, refused food for four days, so heavily did the death of the man weigh on him. He is still in a highly nervous condition.

In contradiction of an official statement that Kolakovich declared at the hospital that his injury was the result of an accident, the socialist leaders allege that they obtained a statement from him on his admission to the hospital, which he later was forced by the police to withdraw. He is reported to have said:

"The Prince was about to leave the palace and ordered me to take a letter to one of his friends, admonishing me not to forget the order. I replied: 'You may rely on me; I won't forget it.' Suddenly the Prince exclaimed: 'I must pierce your hand lest you forget.'"

Just what then happened the man could not say, but he remembered being knocked down and trampled upon.

The valet signed this statement, but it is said the police later extorted from him a declaration that the Prince had not ill-treated him.

There are various rumors as to the Prince's plans. One is that he will enter the Russian army; another is that he intends to retire to a monastery.

BROTHER STICKS TO CROWN PRINCE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BELGRADE, March 27.—Prince Alexander, the second son of King Peter, is taking an active part in smoothing over the difficulties that have surrounded the Crown Prince, his brother, since the latter's statement that he renounced all claim to the Servian throne. Alexander said:

"I shall, under no circumstances agree to take my brother's place. If he cannot be a good King, neither can I. I will stick to my brother through thick and thin, George must remain Crown Prince."

At a meeting of the Cabinet today at which King Peter was present, the resignation of Prince George as Crown Prince, was accepted. The subject will come up before the National Assembly tomorrow when in all probability Prince Alexander will be proclaimed his successor.

SERVIA MUST NOW ABANDON CLAIMS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VIENNA, March 27.—It is semi-officially reported that Servia's dismissal of the reservists would not in itself satisfy Austria, which demands the abandonment of all the Servian claims made in connection with the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

It is further stated that unless Servia gives a precise declaration by Monday of her intention, Count Formach, the Austrian Ambassador at Belgrade, will present the final note of the Austro-Hungarian government on Monday evening.

SIX-SHOOTER FOR FARE.

Woman Starts Panic on Electric Car by Flourishing Gun When Asked for Nickle.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—Mrs. Harriet Mohr, who said she was from Virginia, created a panic in a Sixth avenue surface car last night with a revolver. She was arrested after a terrific struggle with a policeman. The trouble started when the conductor asked Mrs. Mohr for her fare.

"Here's my fare," she cried, drawing a revolver. "I'm from Virginia, and I'm looking for my husband, and when I find him, I'll blow his head off."

At the police station she said she had not meant to cause a disturbance, that she was merely looking for her husband.

HILL AND HARRIMAN.

statement, and I do not think there will be any early change in my attitude."

Mr. Harriman repeatedly declared that his health was not seriously impaired, and other members of the party, calling attention to his reported increase in weight, now said to be 135 pounds, several times affirmed that he would return to Wall street in better physical shape than he has been for a long time.

RAPS SKYSCRAPERS.

While the members of the party have seen little of reconstructed San Francisco since their arrival from the south, Mr. Harriman was disposed to criticise local business men because of the immense amounts invested in office buildings. On this subject the railroad builder did not spare New York or Chicago, saying:

"Before the fire here people lived in homes. Now the tendency is toward apartment-houses and hotels—all towering structures. It has resulted in the wiping out of neighborhoods and districts as it has elsewhere. The skyscrapers in the business district result in congestion, while they leave vacant corners that should be the sites of buildings of more modest height. Your office buildings should not be more than eight stories, and six would be better. New York and Chicago, especially New York, have been ruined by adhering to this policy of erecting twenty-story structures, and San Francisco should avoid this mistake."

When the subject of a union depot in San Francisco was revived by one of the newspaper men, he spoke somewhat bitterly, advising that the people be educated to meet the Southern Pacific company half-way, and adding:

"You can not deny that where we make investments of this magnitude, we add to values in the neighborhood. But when we have announced no intention to buy or build there have been people put obstacles in the way or try to hold us up. I am not prepared to say that we have in contemplation any new projects involving large expenditures, but the railroads will keep up with the procession."

MISSES SEEING POLO.

Although Mr. Harriman was so anxious to witness a polo match by the players who participated at San Diego that he offered a special cup, his attention was diverted from the field when a large party of visiting railroad officials arrived at the clubhouse. While the ponies thundered up and down the grounds, Mr. Harriman remained in the center of a group composed of Louis Hill, H. C. Nutt, generaly manager of the Northern Pacific; L. C. Gilman, assistant to Mr. Hill; C. F. Carey, an attorney identified with the Hill interests; E. E. Calvin, General Manager of the Southern Pacific; Zere Snow of the O.R. & N., J. P. O'Brien of the same road and F. B. Clarke, president of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle line.

W. F. Herrin of the legal department of the Southern Pacific had previously visited Mr. Harriman in reference to Portland affairs, and Mr. Hill immediately confirmed the statement that all differences relating to terminals and kindred matters had been satisfactorily adjusted.

"There has been no war between the Harriman and Hill interests except when the newspapers conducted imaginary hostilities," said Mr. Hill. "This matter was practically settled and it required only this meeting to determine the details. From present indications there will be no immediate resumption of activity in Portland and vicinity consequent upon this arrrangement."

Mr. Hill and his wife will go to Del Monte for a few days, his private car leaving Burlingame as part of the Harriman special.

NO CHANGE IN PLANS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BURLINGAME, March 27.—If Edward H. Harriman contemplates retirement in the near future he does not intend that the fact shall be known prior to his return to New York. The improvement in his physical condition, to which he calls the attention of each new visitor, has shortened the period of his stay on the Pacific Coast, and tonight his special train will be headed eastward.

Railroad officials who have been in close touch with the magnate since his arrival in California, express a confident belief that there will be no early announcement of a plan whereby Mr. Harriman is to transfer to the shoulders of trusted lieutenants, a share in the direction of his complex business affairs. With the inspection of the lines in Mexico achieved, and his desire to observe other matters of minor importance gratified, it is said he has lingered in this State because he felt himself able to spare the time.

Occasional twinges of rheumatism are said to have caused him more inconvenience than has developed from any nervous disease, and it is the general belief that he was able to convince Dr. Fixon, his physician, that there was no actual necessity for a more protracted stay at Paso Robles.

The entire party will be the guests at dinner to be given tonight by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crocker at their Burlingame home. As soon as the affair is ended, the special will depart.

IN MANILA.

DECLARE PAYNE BILL WOULD HURT ISLANDS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MANILA, March 27.—Floor Leader Queson of the majority of the Philippine Assembly presented a resolution today embodying a memorial to Congress opposing the Payne bill.

The resolution recites the provisions of the bill and then declares that its enactment would be "prejudicial to the interests of the Filipino people, especially so far as it concerns an economic administration."

The resolution then continues:

"The approval of the bill would produce a great loss of revenue for the insular treasury, so much so that it would be impossible to sustain the present government. The financial condition of the country is such that it would be impossible to impose new taxation, direct or indirect."

The resolution next approves a resolution adopted in May, 1908, which asks the admission of sugar and tobacco to America without any concessions here, and insists upon the adoption by Congress of that resolution.

In conclusion, it protests "respectfully but energetically" against free trade for America here and limitations on Philippine products in America.

The resolution also declares that the Philippine Legislature cannot in any possible manner devise new means for producing an income to maintain its government.

The Assembly later amended the resolution by adding the declaration, that in the belief of the Legislature, the passage of the Payne bill would prove prejudicial to the independence of the Philippines. Then it was adopted without division.

Assemblyman Lukban of Manila advised the acceptance of the terms of the Payne bill, and a few other members apparently were opposed to the resolution, but when the clause relative to the future independence of the islands was inserted there was no further opposition and a motion to make the vote unanimous prevailed.

Commissioner Smith has gone to Baguio for a conference with his colleagues and it is expected the commission will consider the resolution early next week.

Smith expressed the belief that the commission will succeed in devising a plan to reduce the prospective deficit to about a million pesos.

NOT REPRESENTATIVE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Harold W. Pitt, chairman of the Committee on Reciprocal Trade, and special representative of the Manila Merchants' Association, made a statement today, in which he declared that the opposition on the part of the Filipino Assembly on that provision of the pending tariff bill for free trade between the islands and this country, indicated in the dispatches from Manila, was to have been expected. Mr. Pitt added:

"The members of the Assembly are politicians whose desire is to hasten the withdrawal of the United States from the Philippines, in which event they will be in control. That they do not represent the material interests and more intelligent classes is attested by a petition signed by nearly 100,000 of the responsible business and professional people throughout the archipelago praying for free trade with the United States, which is now on file with authorities in Washington."

INDUSTRIAL SCIENCE.

COLLEGE PROFESSOR FINDS PAPER SUPPLY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MINNEAPOLIS, March 27.—What is considered a significant industrial discovery was claimed today by S. Dean George Frankforter of the college of chemistry of the University of Minnesota. It means, he asserts, that the United States will produce a hundred times as much wood pulp paper as was believed possible and that every cord of fir lumber will yield $10 profit on by-products alone and that the greater part of the 60 per cent. of a tree now wasted, will be turned into profit.

The perfected process consists of taking small pieces of waste wood or dust, laying it on a steel incline over a furnace and subjecting it to a chemical process of distillation. Carbon bisulphide or gasoline is poured over the saw dust dissolving the turpentine and resin which pass off as gas into a coil of pipe leading to a tank. The process is similar to the distillation of sugar. Wood pulp remains free from pitch and is suitable, it is said, for the manufacture of paper.

The common method of distillation leaves the pulp in the form of charcoal of little value, chemically.

Dr. Frankforter extracted from one cord of Norway pine, worth $7.50, turpentine worth $41 and wood pulp worth $39, or a yield of $80 from $7.50 worth of raw material.

Walking one day in 1897 through the pine woods of Northern Minnesota, Dr. Frankforter noted an old stump, which gave out an odor not unlike that of ordinary turpentine. He took a piece of the stump back to the university and began to experiment. Within a week he hit upon the present process which later he perfected at a small experimental plant erected near his home.

and forgot the jeers and threats of physical violence of the California towns which they had so lately quit for good.

Literally driven from California, Mrs. Emery and Helen Gladys were forced to seek a State where the laws would not prevent the girl's union with a man of the Japanese race. Oregon was barred to the loving twain—her laws absolutely forbid such marriages, and the District Attorney of Portland announced that if the plighted lovers appeared on the street of that city they would be arrested as common nuisances.

BRIDE, MERE CHILD.

Archdeacon Emery, his wife and child arrived here yesterday afternoon in company with the Japanese. The clergyman and his wife and daughter registered at the Hotel Savoy. Having obtained the aid of local Japanese he met the mother and daughter at the Savoy last night and there completed all arrangements for the wedding.

Aoki is a short, ordinary-looking Japanese youth, dresses in black, well-fitting clothes, and has a small black mustache. The girl is slender, about five feet, four inches tall, fair-haired, blue-eyed and has a charming expression. She is for all the world the picture of fair, girlish innocence. Nor does she seem to be 21 years old, as the marriage license reads. At 11 o'clock this morning Archdeacon Emery obtained a marriage license for the wedding of the pair at the county Courthouse and by arrangement with Rev. H. H. Gowan, rector of Trinity Parish, took his wife and daughter to the church. There, awaiting them, was the groom and Sunada.

The Episcopal marriage service was performed and the party quickly left the edifice.

After the wedding the girl's father went to the Hotel Savoy, paid the bill and packed his grip for the south. He said:

"Mr. and Mrs. Aoki will spend their moneymoon on a ranch in the Hoods Canal country. It is owned by a business man of San Francisco, a friend of mine, whose name I shall not divulge. He has offered them a lease of the place on a percentage of the crop from the fruit trees.

"The wedded pair will either make that place their home, or they will purchase a fruit ranch in some other part of this State—I cannot say where. This proposition is under advisement. I am pledged not to divulge any of their plans, and, as a matter of fact, their future has not been settled on. My wife will remain here for a time and I shall go back to San Francisco. I shall not be at my work there for some time as I have other engagements which will take some days."

OBITUARY.

BOWDOIN (Me.) March 27.—Capt. Frank H. Punington, a retired sea captain, for many years engaged in the trade between San Francisco and China and Japan, died at his home here today aged 64 years.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Mrs. Eliza M. Zerega, widow of Augustus Zerega di Zerega, who, before her marriage, was Eliza Moerch Van Uytendaele, Baroness Von Breton, died here yesterday, aged 100 years. She was the daughter of the Baron Von Breton of Denmark.

SEEK STOLEN PAPERS.

leged to have been stolen from the District Attorney's office, and as the warrant for the arrest of Abbot was issued shortly after search of the general office was completed it is believed that papers of importance were discovered there.

The first desk opened was that of Abbot and according to the statements made by Burns late tonight, papers were found there which had been taken from the detective's office. These were the papers called for by the search warrants.

At about the same time, Raymond Burns, son of the detective, led a party to the office of Luther Brown in the Pacific building and a search under a warrant issued by Police Judge Deasy, is stated to have brought to light other papers alleged to have been taken from the office of Burns and that of the District Attorney. All these papers were appropriated and Brown's arrest followed.

Of the five men arrested this afternoon, Rex N. Hamlin, Burns's secretary; A. L. McKinley, an employé of the United Railroads; William Corbin, said to be an employé of Frank J. Murphy and Abraham Ruef; Jerry Van Wormer, of Brown's office; E. A. Platt, a former employé of the District Attorney's office. Hamlin, McKinley, Corbin and Platt are said by Burns to have confessed that they took papers from his office and turned them over to the United Railroads men. The detective stated that Hamlin aroused his suspicions some two months ago, and since that time he has been watching and testing him.

When arrested, Hamlin quickly gave way, and admitted his guilt. Burns at once gathered his men for a raid, and secured search warrants for the railroad offices and Brown's office. He first sent them to Oak street, where the general office is located, but on later information decided to try the Balboa building.

In the meantime, he had heard that a number of United Railroad men were being gathered at the car barn and asked the police to send officers to the railroad office. This was done and the search of the quarters occupied by the attorneys was made with the halls crowded with bluecoats.

The nature of the confessions made were not made public, but they are stated to connect the men arrested with a systematic betrayal of information secured by the District Attorney and Burns relative to the graft matters to Brown, Abbott and Handlon.

Abbot was arrested at a late hour and released on bail.

Prominent Oil Operator and Bakersfield Society Leader Is Sued for Divorce.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Harry W. Thomas, one of the most prominent oil operators in the State and a leader in Bakersfield society circles, is being sued for divorce by Mrs. Thomas, who alleges cruelty.

The suit was filed in the Alameda County Court at Oakland about March 1 and until today has been kept secret. Mrs. Thomas has begun proceedings in the Kern Superior Court by lis pendens, which will restrain Thomas from disposing of any of the community oil property.

Thomas is interested on an extensive scale in oil companies of worth in the Kern River and Maricopa fields. Thomas returned today from Tonopah, Nev., where, it is said, he means to establish a residence in order to file divorce proceedings on his own part. The Thomases have two minor children.

Elevator Boy Runs Car Up and Down Through Smoke Till All Escape.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—Through the alertness of an elevator boy the twenty-four families in the fashionable Robert apartments, in West 107th street, escaped early today, when fire, which had started on the fourth floor, filled the big apartment house with a dense smoke. The tenants were all asleep when the fire was discovered.

Mrs. Leopold Hersendeler, who lives on the fourth floor with her husband and infant daughter, was awakened by the smoke and found the kitchen in flames. She ran to the window and raised an alarm. The elevator boy, William Vanderporf, went to the switchboard on the first floor, rang the telephones in the apartments, telling the occupants to hurry to the halls and down by the elevator. Then he ran the elevator up and down until every one on the sixth floor was taken down safely. Many tenants reached the street scantily clad and most of them sought shelter in near-by apartment houses.

LOST AT THE RACES.

Cannon Reported to Have appeared, Leaving Debts Aggre- gating Thousands.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] J. L. Cannon, the contrac- who erected the big Catholic Cathedral and one of the best known builders in this city, is reported to have left for parts unknown, leaving unsatisfied notes and debts behind him aggregating between $30,000 and $40,000.

Seattle banks, the National Surety Company and the Pinkertons are said to have been on the trial of Cannon for the past two weeks with the intention of prosecution.

Information reaching this city from San Francisco is to the effect that Cannon has probably gone to Mexico and his family having left his last known residence, No. 1909 Grove street, Berkeley, about March 12.

Several local banks complain of having been victimized by Cannon, among them the First National Bank, reported to have loaned the contractor $20,000 on worthless notes.

Cannon lost his money on the race course. He was the owner of a race horse known as Mary G. Clark, which was entered in a number of races at The Meadows last year, where he was frequently seen betting and mingling with the crowd.

LIED TO TAX COLLECTOR.

Now Angeleno, Converted, Wants to Pay Money Due to Pierce County, Washington.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] County Treasurer Meath received a unique communication today from Henry Oeke of Los Angeles, who declares he cheated Pierce county of poll taxes ten years ago, and is anxious to pay amount which he evaded at that time. Following is the letter:

"I, Henry Oeke, testified that I was over age when the Tax Collector came after my poll tax in 1899. I confess that I lied. I want to beg pardon, and will pay the bill if you can find it against me. The reason I do this is because I am a Christian now, and want to make wrongs right. I feel that I ought to straighten every wrong and pay up. Good-by, and write soon.

"HENRY OEKE,

"No. 2424 Le Grande street, Los Angeles, Cal."

Deputy County Auditor Harry Austin wrote Oeke in reply, regretting that bill could not be traced on account of changes in tax laws. He suggested a liberal donation to some charity as a means of relieving his stricken conscience.

EPWORTH LEAGUE OFFICERS.

ELECTION AT STOCKTON.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

STOCKTON, March 27.—The Epworth League conference will come to a close tomorrow after a most successful week. Tonight, Dr. Carl M. Warner of San Francisco delivered the address. The election was held this afternoon and eighty-five delegates were taken down the river in launches. Dr. Gouth of the University of the Pacific will preach at the services tomorrow morning, and a Pentecostal meeting, led by Rev. Bane, will close the conference Sunday evening. Officers were elected as follows:

President, B. H. Marsh of Sacramento.

First vice-president, Charles M. Cadman of Alameda.

Second vice-president, Miss Mary Lewis of Campbell.

Third vice-president, George C. Colliver of San José.

Fourth vice-president, H. J. Stetson of San Francisco.

Secretary, Charles F. Canfield of Alameda.

Treasurer, F. H. Lamb of San Francisco.

Intermediate superintendent, Mrs. W. E. Hotle of Sebastapol.

Junior superintendent, Miss Edith Edmison of Woodland.

GOING UNDER HAMMER.

BIG PROPERTY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At Bellingham next week, the bulk of the holdings of the Fairhaven Land Company and the property of the Hackett Cold Storage Company, located on what is known as Commercial Point, near Bellingham, will be sold from the steps of the Whatcom County courthouse. The Bartlett Estate Company of Oakland, has, after months of litigation, foreclosed a mortgage for $135,437.81 and the property must go under the hammer.

The cold storage company's holdings are valued at $380,000. The plant is located in ten acres of land. On the tract stands the ocean dock and the Welch salmon cannery. In addition there are two strips of valuable water front. There are also thirty-two South Bellingham lots.

COAST VULNERABLE.

MUST HAVE FLEET.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—Naval Constructor Holden A. Evans of Mare Island, speaking at a banquet given by the Rotary Club in this city, declared it was absolutely necessary to maintain a powerful fleet in Pacific waters. He said:

"The Pacific Coast is especially vulnerable and can only be defended by a powerful fleet. Without such a fleet an enemy can raid the coast, destroy commerce and effect landings at many places.

"The acquisition of the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands has brought the United States into world politics, and has left this country with responsibilities which it cannot shirk."

WEALTHY CHINAMAN DEPORTED.

CAUGHT IN COURT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—Lee Kim, a young Chinese merchant, wealthy and possessed of some education and more than ordinary intelligence, was ordered deported by the Immigration Commissioner today, because of facts revealed when he came into court to testify in behalf of his friend, Yum Kee, who faced a similar fate. It was shown that Lee Kim had known the defendant all his life. Surprised at the suddenness of the attack Kim admitted that he had not complied with immigration regulations, and was ordered deported.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Drummer Arrested.

STOCKTON, March 27.—H. E. Cuthbert, claiming to be a commercial drummer from San Francisco, was arrested here this afternoon on a forgery charge. Cuthbert got $30 from the Imperial Hotel on three checks, which were found to be worthless. He claims to have funds in a San Francisco bank.

Monitor Bound South.

REDDING, March 27.—A freight train on the Southern Pacific was wrecked early today at Tunnell No. 6, between Delta and Kennett. Five cars were demolished and part of the track was torn up. The southbound passenger train has been sidetracked at Delta, and the northbound overland is being held at Kennett.

LIFE'S SEAMY SIDE.

SHOT THROUGH HOME WINDOW.

Prominent Resident of New Mexico Victim.

Assassinated by Enemy Who Fired from Dark.

Prisoner Guarded Against Possible Lynching.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA FE (N. M.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] R. C. Pooler, chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Taos county, and one of the most prominent Democratic politicians in Northern New Mexico, was assassinated last night at Taos by George Potter, a local character. Pooler was shot down as he was sitting by a lamp reading in the parlor of his home, his slayer firing through the window with a 40-70 Winchester.

The bullet pierced Pooler's lungs and death followed within a few moments. Pooler expired in the arms of his wife. Because of threats made by Potter, suspicion at once pointed to him as the murderer. He was arrested a short time after the shooting, and the Winchester with which the shooting was done was found in his possession. He was placed in jail under a heavy guard, as threats of lynching were freely made last night by friends of his victim.

News of the killing reached here this morning, and has caused a sensation. Gov. Curry has ordered Capt. Fred Fornoff of the Territorial mounted police, who is at Raton, to proceed to Taos at once to take charge of Potter, and bring him to the Territorial penitentiary here for safe keeping, as the jail at Taos is a ramshackle affair. Fornoff will reach Taos tomorrow. In the meantime every precaution will be taken to prevent a lynching.

THE RECKONING.

DEATH BRINGS A CONFESSION.

MRS. FARMER, FACING ELECTRIC CHAIR, TALKS.

Woman Convicted of Murder of Neighbor to Secure Property Has Told Priest Her Story, Which, It Is Said, Will Save Her Husband from Death.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AUBURN (N. Y.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Mary Farmer, who dies within the next forty-eight hours in the electric chair, lapsed into a complete stupor when the final preparations for her death were made today. Utterly oblivious to her surroundings, she sat staring at the ceiling of her cell, her mind seemingly benumbed and her reason apparently utterly dethroned.

Before her collapse Mrs. Farmer told the truth about the brutal murder. The confession was made to Father J. J. Hickey. Father Hickey, after spending some time with the condemned woman, left her cell at noon and went direct to Warden Benham's office. The priest's manner indicated that he had something of importance to communicate. He refused to affirm or deny the report of the confession, which had spread about the prison after his interview with the warden.

"All I can say now," said Father Hickey, "is that I will have something of importance to make public after the execution of Mrs. Farmer on Monday morning."

Confirmation of the report of the confession came from E. R. Wilcox, attorney for Mrs. Farmer and Jim Farmer, her husband. He admitted that he had succeeded in making the woman talk after her silence of nine months, when he saw her on Thursday. She gave him assurances then, he said, that she would unseal her lips and save her husband's life, who is also under sentence of death.

Mr. Wilcox feels certain that Mrs. Farmer's dying statement will save the man from the electric chair.

Mary Farmer was sentenced to death for a shocking and brutal murder. Her husband, James D. Farmer, is also under sentence of death, he having aided his wife in the crime. This couple, on April 23, 1908, enticed Mrs. Sarah Brennan, 55 years old, a neighbor, into their home in Brownsville and killed her. Mrs. Farmer confessed that while Mrs. Brennan stood looking out of a window she (Mrs. Farmer) stole up behind her and struck her on the head with an ax. Then Mrs. Farmer and her husband chopped up the body so that it would fit into a small trunk. The motive of the deed was possession of Mrs. Brennan's property.

LESS MEAT
Advice of Family Physician.

Formerly people thought meat necessary for strength and muscular vigor.

The man who worked hard was supposed to require meat two or three times a day. Science has found out differently.

It is now a common thing for the family physician to order less meat, as in the following letter from a N. Y. man.

"I had suffered for years with dyspepsia and nervousness. My physician advised me to eat less meat and greasy foods generally. I tried several things to take the place of my usual breakfast of chops, fried potatoes, etc., but got no relief until I tried Grape-Nuts food.

"After using Grape-Nuts for the cereal part of my meals for two years, I am now a well man. Grape-Nuts benefited my health far more than the $500 worth of medicine I had taken before.

"My wife and children are healthier than they had been for years, and we are a very happy family, largely due to Grape-Nuts.

"We have been so much benefited by Grape-Nuts that it would be ungrateful not to acknowledge it."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Charged With Murder of Foreman, Japanese Says He Only Struck First Blow.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SALT LAKE CITY, March 27.—Torahiko Yoshimizu, the Japanese arrested here recently on suspicion of being concerned in the murder of a white section foreman at Betabel, Cal., broke down and confessed last night at police headquarters that he is the man wanted.

Thomas Mulhall, chief deputy sheriff of Santa Clara county, Cal., arrived in Salt Lake yesterday, and went to the station, where he confronted the Japanese.

Yoshimizu at first stoutly denied his identity, but, when confronted by photographs of himself, finally admitted that there was no mistake, and that he struck the foreman, John Kyne, over the head with a hammer.

The story, told in the broken English of the Oriental, in part, is as follows:

"Yes, I struck him with a hammer, but I was not the only one, for all of my countrymen in the camp wanted to kill him, and after the first blow was struck, they all hit him. There were sixty of us in the camp, and few white men. One night, when he had bothered us all day, we got drunk on sake and made up our minds that we would kill him. It was fixed among us that whoever he swore at first was to hit him, and the others would finish the job. He called me a name, and I struck him over the head with a hammer. He fell, but jumped up and ran at me. Then the rest of the Japanese closed in around him, and I ran away, while they were beating him with clubs, picks, shovels and crowbars. I did not kill him myself."

Yoshimizu will be taken back to California today or tomorrow.

SHOT WIFE AND SELF.

J. A. Morris Perpetrates Double Tragedy in Hotel at Salt Lake.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SALT LAKE CITY, March 27.—J. A. Morris tonight shot and instantly killed his wife, then putting the muzzle of his revolver in his own mouth, inflicted a wound which caused his death a few hours later. The shooting occurred in the apartments of the couple in the Orpheum Hotel.

Morris and his wife separated in Reno, Nev., some weeks ago and she came here.

Morris followed her, arriving a few days ago. A quarrel which began in Reno was resumed and the shooting followed. Morris was 26 years old and his wife was three years older. He is said to be a mining promoter.

Mrs. Morris was the divorced wife of Willard Bean, a retired pugilist who is well known throughout the West.

SENTENCED AFTER DEATH.

Hold-ups Given Life Terms and Fourteen Years More as Habitual Criminals.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By a sentence pronounced by Judge Kersten today, two men, convicted of robbery, are by law compelled to serve fourteen years imprisonment after they have ceased living—that is, if the paradoxical punishment could be inflicted by human means.

The two men, who, the law says, must do the impossible, are John Rudnak and John Turner, who were found guilty by a jury of holding up and robbing Mrs. Elizabeth Borz, in her husband's saloon on the night of December 21, 1908.

Rudnak and Turner were given life sentences, but in addition, both men were convicted under the habitual criminal act, which carries a term of fourteen years imprisonment.

END OF A RED NOSE.

New Flesh-colored Product That Heals and Hides Skin Imperfections.

A peculiar feature of poslam, a new skin discovery, is that it is naturally flesh-colored and contains no grease, so that when used on the face for the complexion, or for pimples, red noses, or any other inflammations, blemishes or discolorations, its presence cannot be detected. It can thus be applied in the daytime, the natural color of the skin being immediately restored and the actual healing and curing process accomplished in a few days. It can be had of any pharmacist who sells pure drugs. The Owl Drug Co. makes a specialty of it. Fifty cents' worth will answer either for the troubles mentioned or in curing ordinary cases of eczema. Itching stops at once.

The Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York, are the sole dispensing agents for poslam in the United States, and will send an experimental quantity free by mail in plain wrapper to all who write for it. This will show results after an overnight application.

SUICIDE ENDS TRIAL.

Convicted of Murder, Puts End to Fight for Freedom by Hanging Himself in Cell.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

GOLDFIELD, March 27.—Edward A. Hughes, the convicted murderer of George Gilliam, was found dead in his cell this morning, hanging from the highest of the steel bars by a rope made of strips of blanket. Hughes had been sentenced to life imprisonment, and was waiting a new trial.

He left a note saying:

"This is the best way to end the new trial."

He shot Gilliam on a street in Goldfield, while the streets were full of people, claiming that Gilliam had stolen his wife's affections.

Luther Burbank's Wonderful Flower Seeds on Sale for the First Time

Luther Burbank

Commencing Tomorrow, THE OWL DRUG COMPANY offers for sale in the Big New Store 625 South Broadway, near Jevne's, 12 improved and beautiful selections of Mr. Luther Burbank's most remarkable creations. The price is only 25 cents per package, or $3.00 for the entire set of 12 varieties described below. THE OWL DRUG COMPANY has been granted the exclusive agency for the sale of Mr. Burbank's flower seeds in the cities of San Francisco, Los Angeles and Pasadena. Call early, as we are able to procure only a limited supply. This is the first and possibly the last time during the life of Mr. Luther Burbank, the world's greatest horticultural experimenter and plant scientist, that you will have the opportunity to purchase seeds of Mr. Burbank's greatest and most wonderful creations. This offer is made with the distinct understanding that Mr. Burbank does not promise to permit the offer to be duplicated hereafter. We wish to emphasize the fact that the seeds we are offering have been raised upon Mr. Burbank's own experimental grounds under his personal supervision. Each package of seeds bears Mr. Burbank's autographic seal as a guarantee of their genuineness. This great opportunity until recently was beyond all expectations, and if it were not for the wide awake methods of THE OWL DRUG COMPANY and the persistent efforts on the part of Mr. Burbank's most intimate friends the offer would not be made to the public at all.

1—CARNATION
A new annual strain, blooming abundantly the first season from seed. Produced in pure white, pure crimson, blended pink and striped white and crimson. One of the best of Mr. Burbank's efforts in flower culture. Of rapid and sturdy growth.

2—CORDILLERAS CREEPER
(Scypanthus elegans.) An absolutely new flowering vine lately introduced from Cordilleras of South America.

3—HUNNEMANNIA
Mexican Eschscholtzia or Lemon Poppy. The handsomest of all yellow flowers that grow out of doors.

4—SWEET PEAS
New orchid flowering; mixed colors beautifully blended. Far superior to the common Sweet Peas in size and beauty. These giant Sweet Peas are of brilliant hue and are especially adapted for trellis work. Delicate and fragrant.

5—GIANT ENGLISH DAISY
Magnificent new giant strain of this popular flower.

6—GOLDEN CUP
New Crimson, just produced. A very rare Eschscholtzia, Mr. Burbank advises that there are only two ounces of this variety in existence. They are worth their weight in gold.

7—SHASTA DAISY
Acknowledged to be the most valuable white flower introduced within the past 100 years.
These remarkable Daisies have great resistant vigor and ability to overcome ill treatment, and are without doubt the best adapted to beautify your home in town. The illustration shows a comparison between the Burbank Shasta Daisy and the common Moon-Penny Daisy, to which we are all accustomed. The comparison, as shown, speaks for itself.

8—CALIFORNIA GOLDEN CUP
New colors mixed, crimson, gold, white, yellow, etc.

9—NEW POPPIES
Celestial shades; most beautiful of all known Poppies. Produced in sunset shades, also salmon interchanging to crimson and scarlet. Words will not express their beauty. They are hardy and will prove a great surprise.

10—NEW SHIRLEY POPPIES
Special mixed. Bewildering variety of beautiful shades.

11—LARKSPUR
Burbank's New Giant Hybrid, mixed shades.

12—LANTANA
New strain. Most beautiful, shrubby, free flowering plant.
Descriptions for general culture will be found in each package. These seeds are of extra quality and should be planted very thinly, otherwise the plants will be crowded.

THE OWL DRUG COMPANY will make a great effort to satisfy the demand for these seeds; at the same time the demand for some of the varieties may be greater than the available supply, in which case, if sets are purchased, we will substitute with another superior and rare variety.

We wish it clearly understood that the seeds mentioned herein are the only ones offered for distribution.

Don't forget that this sale starts Monday, March 29, and will be continued throughout the week, or until our supply of seeds is exhausted.

The price is only 25 cents per package, or $3.00 for the complete set of 12 varieties.

For Sale Only at Our Big New Store, 625 Broadway, between Jevne's and Bullock's.

THEIR BUSY NIGHT.

ARMED ROBBERS TRY TO KILL FOUR MEN.

FOUR attempts at highway robbery, in three of which the robbers tried to murder their victims, occurred last night. The last crime was the worst, the victim having his throat cut.

Richard Otto of No. 724 Jackson street was stabbed in the neck, and may die as the result of resisting two Mexicans who robbed him of $7 within 100 feet of his home, at 11:30 o'clock last night.

The Mexicans attacked Otto, after following him from a saloon on Main street. He made a desperate fight, and they retaliated by stabbing him twice. He sustained a two-inch laceration under the left ear, and a gash four inches long just below that, which severed several small blood vessels and exposed the jugular vein.

Patrolman Walker, who has that beat, was at the other end of his district at the time, and did not arrive until ten minutes after the stabbing. He found Otto lying in a pool of blood in front of his home, with his family in hysterics.

The injured man was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where his injuries were cared for. The police surgeons say that he has a chance to recover, but may die from loss of blood.

This was the second successful attempt at highway robbery out of the four last night.

Two negroes sought to rob K. Ota, but were frustrated by Patrolman Carr, who caught one of them, named Walter Fulbright. When Ota screamed for help one of the negroes slashed his hand with a razor in an attempt to cut his throat.

A negro attacked Karl Miller at First and Los Angeles streets and slashed him across th shoulder when he resisted. Joe Barall robbed Joe Willet of a watch at Alameda and First street, and was arrested five minutes later with the timepiece on him.

After the stabbing of Otto a general round-up of all suspicious characters was ordered, but the Mexican wanted for this crime managed to elude capture.

ABDUCTION CASE.

KIDNAPER TRIES TO LEAP FROM TRAIN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, March 27.—Making a sensational and foolhardy attempt to escape from a train going at the rate of thirty miles an hour; denying that she had a hand in the kidnaping of little Willie Whitla; asserting that she is not Anna C. McDermott of Chicago; saying that the numerous stories are absolutely incorrect and strictly maintaining the great air of mystery that has surrounded her, Mrs. James Boyle, wife of the man who kidnaped Willie Whitla, left Pittsburgh today for the jail at Mercer, Pa.

Developments in the famous abduction were rapid and numerous today. The woman broke her silence and talked, but no one could obtain much satisfaction from her remarks.

At every station between Pittsburgh and Mercer, large crowds congregated and cheered her and struggled with the police in their endeavors to see and talk to her. Unlike a trip to prison on a serious charge, her journey to Mercer was more like the triumphal journey of some person of renown.

William McDermott, the retired Chicago fireman who believes that Mrs. James H. Boyle, one of the alleged kidnapers of Willie Whitla, is his daughter, has retracted his declaration made yesterday that he would not assist the girl and on his arrival in this city today, he is said to have retained an attorney to look after the case.

McDermott did not get a chance to see Mrs. Boyle as she had been taken to Mercer, Pa., before he could visit her.

After the departure of the prisoner, it was learned that her sudden removal from this city was due to a fear on the part of the detectives connected with the case that McDermott would institute habeas corpus proceedings to secure the release of the girl.

A special to the Gazette-Times from Mercer, Pa., says that Mrs. Boyle admitted to a correspondent that she was Anna McDermott and that her father was William McDermott of Chicago.

According to the correspondent, she said:

"I'm tired and sick of the whole business. There is no use denying it any longer. When I go on the stand and tell my story it will throw an entirely different light on the kidnaping episode. In no way am I related to the Whitlas or Buhls in Sharon.

"I mean to stand by my husband through this affair. I do not know what his connection with the whole dreadful thing is."

CAREFULLY GUARDED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MERCER (Pa.) March 27.—Mrs. Boyle, immediately upon the arrival of the train, was taken to the Mercer County Jail where she was placed in a cell, and a special guard was placed over her. A special guard also has been placed over the husband of the woman, and it has been arranged that from now until the end of the trial, the two noted prisoners will not be given the slightest opportunity to get away.

HEARING TOMORROW.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SHARON (Pa.) March 27.—Attorney Cockran, representing James P. Whitla, father of the kidnaped boy, has made information before Justice McClair at Mercer, charging Boyle and his wife with abduction. They will be given a hearing Monday.

Mr. Whitla said today that he had positive information that Mrs. Boyle formerly was Miss Anna McDermott of Chicago.

McCredie Very Well Pleased With the Condition of His Men and Says They Are Ready.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, March 27.—The Portland baseball team of the Coast League left for Los Angeles today after a month of preliminary training in this city. Although no diamond practice has been possible for the past few days, owing to the rain, the men are in excellent condition and Manager Walter McCredie is delighted with their appearance. Before leaving he said:

"I am more than pleased with the prospects for the coming season. The men are 50 per cent. better than when we started last season. The infield is better, the catchers are all I want, the pitchers are young but reliable and the outfield is more formidable than ever.

STOCKTON WINS.

FINE BATTING RALLY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

STOCKTON, March 27.—In the greatest batting rally ever witnessed here Stockton won the game this afternoon in the last half of the ninth inning after appearing to be hopelessly beaten. With the score 5 to 2 in favor of the Fresno team, five hits were made off Gray, who pitched good ball up to that inning, and the needed run was made with but two out. Score:

Team—		R.	H.	E.
Fresno	0 1 0 1 3 0 0 0 0—5		11	3

Batteries: Loucks, Fitzgerald and Frambes; Gray and Kuhn.

DOUBLE GAMES.

CHANCE FOR AMATEUR FANS.

Two games will be played this afternoon at Athletic Park. The first one will be between the Cuban Blues and the Wilmingtons and the second between the Los Angeles Cubs and the Edisons.

A double-header is scheduled for Joy Park this afternoon, in which the Rivera team will play the Dyas-Clines and the Los Angeles Giants, the first game to be called at 1 o'clock.

THROOP SHUT OUT.

The Long Beach High School team had an easy time yesterday at Long Beach defeating the Throop team of Pasadena, the score being 13 to 0. The big feature of the game was the pitching of Encoe of Long Beach, who did not allow a hit, although he walked four batsmen. Throop tried three pitchers, but all were easy for Long Beach, five runs being made in the second inning and six in the sixth.

AMERICANS TRIMMED.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Complete reversal of form on the part of the American players in the annual cable chess match today allowed the British team to carry off the victory by a score of five games to four, with one game unfinished, which, according to the experts, will also result in an American loss upon adjudication by Baron Albert de Rothschild of Vienna, to whom the position will be sent as referee. The record of these events now include six wins for America and four for Great Britain.

VERY CLOSE GAME.

SAN FRANCISCO BLANKED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, March 27.—In a fast game here today the State League season was opened by a 1 to 0 victory of the local team over San Francisco. Score:

Oakland, 1; hits, 8; errors, 1.

San Francisco, 0; hits, 6; errors, 1.

Batteries—Moskiman and Hoag; Cooper and Burke.

LONG CONTEST.

SAN JOSE, March 27.—San José and Santa Cruz opened the State League season here today in one of the most sensational games played in San José in years.

At 6 o'clock the score was 1 to 1 at the end of the thirteenth inning. The game was then called on account of darkness.

San José scored in the first inning and Santa Cruz in the ninth. Fielding by Lacey, Broadbent and Van Buren were the features. Score:

San José, 1; hits, 5; errors, 2.

Santa Cruz, 1; hits, 8; errors, 0.

Batteries—Tippett, Stricklett and Eager; Jones, Hopkins and Dashwood.

BIG PURSE OFFERED.

Fortune to Be Given Wrestlers for Match in Australia During Melbourne Cup Races.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—Rumors of a purse of $25,000 for a meeting between Frank Gotch and George Hackenschmidt, in Australia, for the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world, have taken definite shape.

Mr. Sanderson of the Sanderson-Vincent syndicate, which is promoting the match, is here and has received a cable from his partner, making an offer of $25,000 for a contest to take place at Melbourne next November, during the Melbourne cup races.

Hackenschmidt has already consented to the terms and Gotch's signature is all that is needed.

BLACK CHAMPION WILLING.

Johnson Declares He Will Be Ready to Meet Jim Corbett in Fifteen Weeks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In response to a report from Minneapolis tonight that World's Champion Jack Johnson had agreed to fight James J. Corbett, Johnson said:

"Corbett can have a fight, but he will have to wait fifteen weeks, as I am booked for that length of time theatrically in the East. If at that time Corbett, or his backer, covers my $5000 for a fight in New York I will fight him."

F. A. Stokes of Minneapolis today was quoted as having said he would post the $5000 forfeit for Corbett, and also would put up $10,000 to go as a side bet at any time. When informed of this Johnson grinned and replied it would suit him fifteen weeks hence.

HOLLYWOOD BILLIARDS.

HOLLYWOOD, March 27.—The Hollywood Club met tonight and played the final games of the pool and billiard tournament. Five handsome cues were given as prizes. Dr. A. F. Shaw took the first in pool and A. B. Hinkley the second. Three were given to the billiard players, P. J. Beveridge taking the first and being the only scratch man in the game; R. C. Chambers second and G. G. Greenwood third. A smoker was held after the games, 150 members being present.

TWO EXPERTS BEATEN.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Ora C. Moringstar scored his third successive victory in the 18.2 billiard tournament this afternoon, defeating Demarest of Chicago by 500 to 290. Tonight's game was between Slosson and Cure. The Frenchman led by 464 to 299 at the end of the twentieth inning, and Cure ran out his string of 500 in the next two innings, winning the match.

BUCKET SHOP SCANDAL.

Violators of Law Declare They Were "Shaken Down" by Policemen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Startling information in the bucket shop police scandal, revealed through the failure of Gus Nohe, was given today by a representative of the Board of Trade, who is cognizant of the details of the wholesale violation of State laws. According to the official report of the Board of Trade, Chief Shippy was informed more than two months ago that a dozen or more bucket shops were doing business right under the nose of the police and when the Board of Trade man asked what the attitude of the department would be, he was informed by the chief:

"The police are going right after them."

The next thing heard by the Board of Trade representative came in the form of "squeals" from several of the bucket shop operators, who complained of being shaken down by the police and the assertions that Gus Nohe was acting as "middle man" in procuring police protection.

FIRST LESSON TO IMMIGRANTS.

Taught to Regard Jeffries and Sullivan as Ideal of American Citizens.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. David Blaustein, superintendent of the recently established Chicago Hebrew Institute, in a talk at the City Club this afternoon, said that the newly arrived immigrant from the Eastern European countries regarded men like James J. Jeffries and John L. Sullivan as ideal Americans while they learned little or nothing of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Dr. Blaustein told of the impressionable nature of immigrants from the Oriental Greek Catholic countries and how readily they gained erroneous impressions regarding American civilization.

"Their ideas of American government," said the speaker, "are gathered from the lowest type of ward politicians with whom they come in contact in their homes in the slums."

Dr. Blaustein suggested the establishment of social settlements where immigrants, especially those of Eastern Europe, may gain rudimentary knowledge of American government and ideas of western civilization.

BAD MAN FOR CALIFORNIA.

Youth Who Terrorized Shelby County, Kentucky, Starts West to Oblige His Relatives.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] J. W. Thomas, Jr., the young man of Shelby county who created so much excitement recently by going on the war path and barricading himself in the Thomas homestead, where he underwent a long siege, left Louisville last night for Chicago, whence he is to go to California to remain.

Thomas's departure is the result of a family agreement. After he had stood siege in the house, terrorizing the county around Shelbyville, until it was proposed to call out State troops to suppress him, he surrendered and was placed in jail. After remaining in confinement a short time Thomas accepted a proposition made to him by his relatives, which included his promise to leave Kentucky for good, and go to some distant point.

MRS. LAVENDER EXONERATED.

Woman Involved in Methodist Pastor's Scandal Is Held Blameless by Church.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Mary Lavender, involved in the Lavender-Leek-Crawford controversy in the Woodlawn Methodist Church, Sixty-fourth street and Woodlawn avenue, was exonerated from all blame and criticism in the church quarrel at a meeting of a committee, in which her case was to be heard before a lay jury this afternoon. Women in the congregation who listened to the brief proceedings expressed their satisfaction over the verdict by crying and embracing the complainant.

The Rev. A. Horn presided at the meeting, at which the fate of Mrs. Lavender was to be decided. "This has been one of the vilest conspiracies against a woman that I have ever heard," he said. "There is no proof that this woman has sinned. I shall take her case from the jury and dismiss it."

NO EXPLOSION ON MISSISSIPPI.

Reports of Accident to Battleship Are Characterized as Utter Nonsense.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

GUANTANAMO, March 27.—A report of an explosion on the warship Mississippi is false.

Telephone messages from the United States naval stations report that the Mississippi is lying at anchor with all of the other men-of-war and that there is no indication whatever of any disturbance in the fleet.

Commander Charles H. Harlow, commandant of the Naval Station, when asked as to the report declared that it was utter nonsense.

JIMMY WALSH LOSES.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a fast bout at the National Athletic Club tonight Young Pierce bested Jimmy Walsh. Pierce was strong with left-hand jabs and used it in nearly every lead. Walsh put up a game fight, his punches to the body landing with telling effect.

COLDS

A Common Cold is caused by a check in the circulation of the blood; the first indications are lassitude, a chill, a shiver or a sneeze. One dose of "Seventy-seven" taken at once, will restore the checked circulation, start the blood coursing through the veins and break up the Cold. Keep it handy for immediate use, it fits the vest pocket.

The Harmony of Home

Does Not Mingle With or Emanate From the Table of Dyspepsia.

In the home, meal time should awaken in all the inhabitants a peculiar harmony of joy which will make for the home the abiding place of interest and happiness.

If one member at the dinner table is out of sorts, his influence is felt and the harmony is lacking. Conversation and mirth are absent. Devouring thoughts assail the diners and silence prevails.

"At the Dyspeptics Table Ominous Quiet and Gloom Crowds Out Mirth."

All physicians agree that mirth and joy at meal time does much toward digestion. Mirth tingles the whole nervous organism of man, the cells wherein are stored valuable digestive juices, empty their contents under the nerve stimulation and promote the highest degree of digestion.

If gloom and discomfort prevail at table, the reverse action obtains and meals become necessities, not anticipated joys.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are little storehouses of digestion which mix with the stomach juices, digest food, retingle the mucous membrane and its nerve centers, give to the blood a great wealth of digestive fluids, promote digestion and stay by the stomach until all its duties are complete.

If dyspepsia sits at tables, it makes the dining-room a place of awe; these tablets should be taken after meals and dyspepsia of a consequence flees.

No need for diet or fasting. The dyspeptics who will use them religiously will find no sense of nausea in the sight of generous meals or in the odor of rich cooking.

It matters not what the condition of the stomach, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets only improve the juices and bring quiet to the whole digestive canal, of which the stomach is the center.

Forty thousand physicians use these tablets in their practice, and every druggist sells them. Price 50c. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Lumber Company Indicted.

CARSON (Nev.) March 27.—Indictments containing fifteen counts charging the acceptance of rebates from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were returned against the California Sugar and White Pine Lumber Company today, by the Federal grand jury. The railway company was indicted on fifteen counts last week for rebating and as the law provides that the recipient as well as the giver of rebates is guilty today's action against the lumber concern was taken.

WISE TALKS

By The "Office Boy"

The-Man-on-the-Carpet: "But, sir, I must uphold the dignity of my position."

The-Man-Farther-Up: "Yes, and the higher you hold it the surer will some one knock a hole through it. But your dignity, sir, gives you no excuse for being a cad. Appreciation for the work and rights of those under you is the little needed touch that will sweeten and make healthy your business relationships. The man who adopts an air of superiority or disdain toward those under him invariably smirks and cringes in the presence of those above him. Only the little man is ever arrogant or servile. A man needs a backbone of neither rubber or steel, but one of very human tissue. A gentleman, sir, is always gentle. There are some things in this life of ours that are bearable, some that we tolerate and some that we excuse, but caddishness is none of these. Unless you can learn to treat the colored janitor and the boy who delivers packages with the same kindly consideration you would show to me, this institution has no further use for your services."

That's the stuff we can grow only by the good in us. You can plaster the earth with praises of your goods. You can ginger the boys 'till Judgment Day, but if you don't sell good goods at honest prices, you'll hit the toboggan just as sure as fate. We are all in business to please the man who buys our goods, and while a lot of old established firms have been resting on their reputation, the Silverwood Stores have been working night and day to improve our merchandise, our service, our characters and sell better goods at the same price or lower than inferior goods are sold. We have beat them to it simply because we can and do deliver goods that are right, both in price and quality. We sell everything men wear except shoes—either store.

Could Not Sleep. Nerves and Stomach.

Mr. John Loiseau, a well known and prominent business man of Atlantic City, N. J., five years ago was a very sick man. His nerves and stomach were in bad shape, could not retain anything nor could he sleep. He tried doctors in vain. He went to European specialists. He kept getting worse and his purse lighter. On his return home he was advised by a neighber to try Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. He did so. Today he is strong and vigorous, eats and sleeps like he did when a boy, thanks to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

The following is Mr. Loiseau's own way of telling of his illness and recovery: "About five years ago I got some bad trouble with my stomach and nerves and could sleep but very little. I went to see plenty of doctors, but they did me no good. All the time I kept getting thinner, till finally I looked like a skeleton. I had no appetite, and if I did force even the lightest food down, my stomach just turned upside down and up she comes again and I shake like a boy who knows he is going to get a 'licking.' Then I went to France and Germany to see what you call specialists, and I like to know why you call them specialists, for they do me not so much good as our own doctors. Maybe it is because they charge special big prices to look at you. Then I come back home again feeling worse than when I went away. The night I arrived home a lot of my friends called to see me, and all seemed surprised to see me look so badly. One says, 'John, why don't you try Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey? My brother Jim was as sick as you, and he take it and it make him well just the same like new.' The next day I think 'If Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey cure Jim, it won't kill John.' So I buy a bottle and commence taking it. Soon I begin to feel better and feel hungry and don't shake so much. I gained flesh every day, and soon was as hearty and healthy as when I was 20 years old. From that day to this I have never been troubled with any of my old ailments. I can eat and sleep as good as ever and hold a gun as steady as I could when a boy in Canada. I shall never be without Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey whether at home or abroad, for I consider that I owe my life to it."

Every testimonial is guaranteed genuine and is published in good faith with full consent.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women, and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the sytem; is a promoter of health and longevity; makes the old young and keeps the young strong.

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions. It is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey, and is sold in sealed bottles only—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00. Write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for a free illustrated medical booklet and free advice.

The Sheriff stated last night that Beatty had been a model prisoner on the trip. The officer praised Dayton and its officers highly, and said that he had been royally entertained there, several affairs of a social character being given in his honor.

FAIRBANKS TO SPEAK.

Former Vice-President Agrees to Make Principal Address at Banquet to State Legislators.

Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana, former Vice-President of the United States, will be the principal speaker next Saturday night at Levy's, at the banquet to be tendered by local Republicans to the Los Angeles county delegation to the State Legislature, just returned to their homes. Lee C. Gates and Joseph F. Seymour, Jr., of the Committee on Arrangements, visited Mr. Fairbanks yesterday at Pasadena and induced him to give up another engagement in order that he might attend the banquet. Mr. Fairbanks will speak on "Our Country."

Other speakers, so far as decided upon, will be E. A. Meserve, "The Legislators;" Joseph Scott, "Progress of the South;" John G. Mott, "Legislation;" Lee C. Gates, "What We Have Been Doing While You Have Been Away."

Speaker Stanton of the Assembly, and one Senator will make addresses, and there will be talks by two others whose names have not yet been made public. Arthur Letts will be toastmaster, and Stoddard Jess will be chairman of the Reception Committee.

It was stated by Mr. Seymour last night that all of the 1000 tickets have been sold, and that late comers will have a poor chance to attend the dinner. The decorations of the banquet room will be elaborate, and there will be excellent music.

It has been reported in some quarters that this banquet has been arranged solely for the purpose of "boosting" Speaker Stanton for Governor. Mr. Seymour denies that there is anything to this rumor. He points particularly to Stanton's recent public declaration that he never again will seek political office.

MRS. SAGE BUYS HOME.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Mrs. Russell Sage has purchased the old Nathan Hedges place, the home of some of her ancestors, at Poxabaguc, L. I., near Sag Harbor. It is to be rebuilt in the same style of architecture. It is said Mrs. Sage paid an almost prohibitive price for the place because of its associations.

EXPLOSION HURTS TEN.

Stain Your Hair A Rich Brown

Simple Preparation of Walnut-Juice That Defies Detection.

An interesting little book has been issued on the remarkable effects of walnut juice in staining gray, faded or bleached hair. It has the advantage over hair dyes of being non-injurious to the hair, containing no silver, sulphur, lead or other poisons which cause hair falling, and containing no odor, no oil, no sediment and no grease. At the same time, an opportunity is given to every one who wishes to stain the hair to send for one of the laboratory trial packages which Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., 541 Groton Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, will send by mail in plain, sealed wrapper.

Those desiring to procure a trial package of this walnut-juice hair-stain, as well as their book on hair, should write to the above address, and enclose twenty-five cents in stamps or coin, and if it is desired to continue the treatment, the preparation may be obtained at drug stores generally at one dollar for a full-size package.

It is said that the stain blends so softly with the actual color of the hair as to deceive experts. It can be applied in a few moments with the comb every 30 days. It stains nothing but the hair, and does it evenly from tip to root. Any shade can be obtained, from a beautiful rich brown to almost black. It does not rub off on the clothing. One bottle ordinarily lasts a year.

Send for the 25-cent trial package today.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Juice Hair Stain is recommended and for sale in Los Angeles by the Owl Drug Co., 320 So. Spring, and Fifth and Broadway, 628 S. Broadway.

ANOTHER "JOKER" FOUND.

Experts Say Payne Bill Will Boost Cost of Toy Animals to Price of Real.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—Another "joker" has been discovered in the Payne tariff bill. Experts in the foreign buying department of a local store say that toy animals, retailing at present for a few cents, are to become as expensive to import into this country as are the living animals which they represent in miniature, if the bill becomes a law.

A toy horse, for instance, worth $1, will, under the eccentricities of the proposed measure, be taxed $30, just the same rate as will be collected for a thoroughbred racer.

The experts also find that many kinds of clothes and ornaments for dolls will be taxed at the same rate at clothes, and ornaments for the American woman.

The cause of the peculiar situation found to exist under the pending law with reference to toys is contained in paragraph 427 which reads as follows:

"Dolls, dolls' heads and toys, 35 per cent. ad valorem; provided that toys made in imitation or miniature of, or bearing the same name as articles that are provided for in the dutiable list of this section by individual or class designation, shall pay the same rate of duty as such articles, but in no case shall any toys pay less than the rate of duty imposed upon miscellaneous manufactures of the material of which such toys are wholly or in chief value composed."

The "joker" is mainly tucked away in that part of the paragraph relating to toys made in "imitation or miniature" of articles mentioned elsewhere in the bill.

The experts declare that this means simply what it says, and that toys which are miniatures of things elsewhere specified must pay the tax of those articles.

SAVING FISH TRUST.

P. A. Valentine Offers to Reorganize A. Booth and Company, Supplying $1,000,000.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—Upon the arrival here today of P. A. Valentine, fresh from the conferences in New York, plans for the organization of a new company, with a capital stock of $7,000,000 to take over the business of A. Booth & Co., including all debts and assets, were outlined.

Mr. Valentine, who is a heavy stockholder in the company, will, according to his plan, take $1,000,000 from his own pocket, which will be distributed pro rata among 150 banks which hold $5,000,000 worth of Booth & Co. paper. The remaining 80 per cent. of their claims will be satisfied with $1,500,000 in first mortgage bonds of the new company and $2,500,000 in common stock.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—Col. Goethals left for the canal zone late tonight on the steamer Advance. Just before he sailed he alluded to the recent cave-in along the line of the Panama Railroad near Gatun and declared that the slide could not be held in any way to indicate danger to the dam construction.

"The railroad slide was due to a swamp," said Col. Goethals, "which does not reach anywhere a point nearer than a mile and a half to the dam. I am just as certain now as ever that the Gatun dam structure has a soil that will be able to support it for ages."

PRIMA DONNA SLAIN BY RIVAL.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Special cable advices received here from Berlin say that Fraulein Frieda Barthold, the prima donna of the Royal Operahouse of Berlin, was shot and killed yesterday at her home by Fraulein Auguste Zobel, a Berlin woman. The tragedy, the dispatch says, was due to jealousy over a man to whom the singer was engaged.

Remarkable Invention

"Actina" a Scientific Appliance for Relieving Defective Eyesight — Has Achieved Wonderful Results.

If your eyesight is defective or you have any form of eye trouble that might endanger your eyesight, you should lose no time in investigating "Actina." It is applied directly over the eye and its potent action stimulates and maintains the circulation of the blood, thereby removing congestion and assisting nature to repair the defects and restore the eyesight to normal conditions. Hundreds of people owe the restoration of their eyesight to "Actina." Among them are the following:

Prof. T. S. Sligh, Mansfield, La.
Rev. J. M. Foster, Burton, Wash.
Rev. W. C. Goodwin, Moline, Kas.
V. F. Lees, Great Barrington, Mass.
Mr. S. A. Donnelly, Agt. U. S. Secret Service, Louisville, Ky.

Many persons wearing spectacles might better be without them. Strengthen the eye by improving the circulation and it will not require an artificial lens. If you are interested and desire to know what the "Actina" is and what it is accomplishing, write today for our FREE TRIAL OFFER and OUR BOOK—TREATISE ON DISEASE. The book contains most valuable information. A postal card will bring it to you. Address Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89H, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

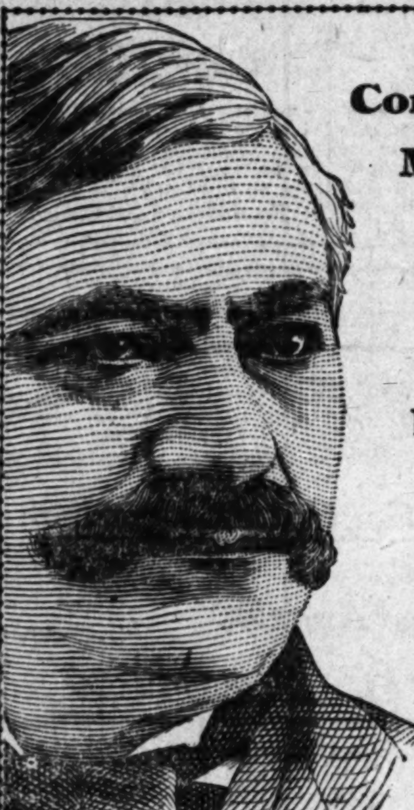
HAD CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.



Congressman
Meekison
Gives Praise
To Pe-ru-na
For His
From Catarrh.

EX-CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON COMMENDS PE-RU-NA.

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing—David Meekison.

OTHER REMARKABLE CASES.

Mr. Jacob L. Davis, Galena, Stone county, Mo., writes: "I have been in bad health for thirty-seven years, and after taking twelve bottles of your Peruna I am cured." Mr. C. N. Peterson, 132 South Main St., Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I cannot tell you how much good Peruna has done me. Constant confinement in my store began to tell on my health, and I felt that I was gradually breaking down. I tried several remedies, but obtained no permanent relief until I took Peruna. I felt better immediately, and five bottles restored me to complete health."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, Bravo, Allegan Co., Mich., writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had had a run of typhoid fever, was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and sour stomach. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peruna advertised, began to take it. It helped me soon, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble, and can now eat anything."

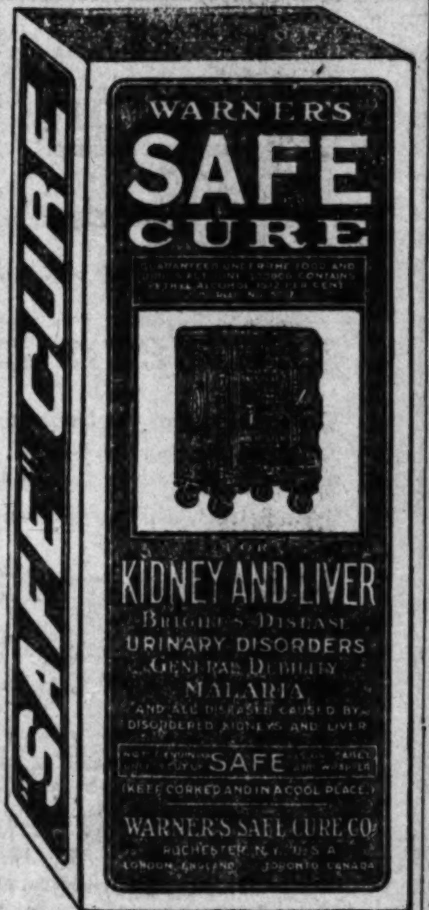
HEALTH IN EVERY BOTTLE

Hundreds of Thousands of Men and Women in all Parts of the World Who Were Given Up to Die of Kidney Disease Have Found Health and Strength and Are Living Witnesses to the Truly Marvellous Effects of

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

A TRIAL BOTTLE OF THIS GREAT KIDNEY CURE WILL BE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EVERY READER OF THE TIMES WHO SUFFERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER OR BLOOD DISEASE.



At every stroke of the clock a human life goes out. Nearly one-half of all deaths are the result of kidney disease. Nine men and women out of every ten have kidney trouble. If in doubt, TRY THIS SIMPLE HOME TEST.

Upon arising in the morning put some urine in a glass or bottle. Let it stand for 24 hours, and if there is considerable white, or reddish sediment in the bottom of the glass, or if the urine is cloudy or milky, or very pale in color, no doubt there is some disease of the Kidneys, Liver or Urinary Organs present, and you should lose no time but get a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, as it is dangerous to neglect your kidneys for a single day.

Warners Safe Cure has a soothing, tonic, invigorating effect; heals the diseased organs, builds up the body and restores all the functions to a normal, healthy condition.

Cures Kidney Disease

Dr. C. F. P. Burchmore, a prominent physician, of 100 Boylston st., Boston, Mass., says: "I always prescribe Warner's Safe Cure for all forms of kidney and bladder diseases and female weakness, and I have yet to see a patient dissatisfied with the result where diseases of the kidneys, bladder or genito-urinary organs existed. Count on me every time as a strong advocate of Warner's Safe Cure."

When the kidneys are diseased the uric acid is not carried off and this causes gout, lumbago, rheumatism of the joints, rheumatism of the muscles, rheumatism of the heart, rheumatism everywhere.

In kidney disease the bowels are often constipated and the liver torpid. Warner's Safe Pills quickly relieve this condition and no ill after effect is experienced.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is put up in two sizes and is sold by all druggists, at 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle. Refuse substitutes which contain harmful drugs and injure the system.

Trial Bottle FREE To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a trial bottle will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in the Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed. If you will write us a full statement of your case, our doctor will send you free advice and a valuable medical booklet describing causes, symptoms and treatment of all diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood, and many convincing testimonials. All communications strictly confidential.

CHINESE HERB TEA CURES Ulcerated Stomach and Liver Trouble

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have been cured of ulceration of the stomach and liver troubles by using Hung Chun Hong and Hop Wing Chinese Herb Tea. I had been ill for nearly a year and had been treated by several American doctors in the East. All failed to effect a cure and I was advised to change climates. I arrived in Los Angeles about the middle of December, very ill. A few weeks later I began treating with the above named company and found their remedies speedy and effectual. Any one suffering from stomach troubles can be benefited by consulting this Herb and Tea Company.

BULLETS FLY.

OFFICER SHOOTS AT FOOTPADS.

NEGROES HOLD UP JAPS AND RAZOR IS USED.

Policeman Chases Highwaymen, Gun in Hand, and Captures One, Who Is Identified by Much Frightened Victim—Other Fellow Escapes.

After a chase of two blocks, during which Patrolman Carr fired four shots, he caught Elbert Fulbright, a negro, who, in company with another member of his race, held up U. Ota near Fourth and Wall streets about 9 o'clock last night.

Fulbright and his "pal" met Ota and another Japanese in front of No. 417 Wall street, and drawing razors, told the orientals to hold up their hands. The latter called for help and one of them escaped.

Ota was so frightened he could not run and as he continued to yell, one of the negroes, becoming enraged, slashed him on the hand.

At this moment the patrolman appeared. Grasping the situation he discarded his heavy overcoat and started after the fleeing footpads, gun in hand. They ran across a vacant lot, doubled toward Third street, and then turned back toward Fourth, where they separated. Carr fired a parting shot at one and kept on after the other, who proved to be Fulbright.

Near the corner of Fourth and San Pedro streets Fulbright attempted to escape by dropping behind a fallen palm tree. The officer saw the move and thought that he had hit the man with his fourth shot.

He dragged the negro to his feet, and finding him uninjured, returned with him to the scene of the attempted robbery, where Ota identified him.

Fulbright was locked up in the City Jail and Ota's wound was dressed at the Receiving Hospital.

SLASHED WITH RAZOR.

Man Receives Cut on Shoulder When He Resists Negro's Attempt to Hold Him Up.

Karl Miller, who lives at the Queen Hotel, was slashed in the back with a razor by a negro about 11 o'clock, last night, when he resisted the latter's attempt to hold him up at the corner of First and Los Angeles streets. The would-be robber escaped. He was probably the partner of Walter Fulbright, who was arrested earlier in the evening for attempting to rob a Japanese.

Miller was waiting for a car when the negro came up behind him and putting one hand on his coat, said: "I guess you are the gink that has the money I want."

A fight followed and the footpad cut Miller on the shoulder. The injured man was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

INTERNATIONAL FAN-TAN.

Game Stopped by Police, Who Capture Nine Japanese and Three Chinamen.

Nine Japanese patrons of a fan tan game and three Chinamen, who operated the layout, were caught in a raid made by the Chinatown squad, last night.

The game was run by Charley Fong, an old offender, assisted by Wong Jack and Ah Fong, in a notorious place at Los Angeles street and Ferguson Ally. The Chinamen each furnished $100 bail for appearance in court, Monday.

The Japanese, who gave their names as K. Wasumi, G. Yamada, A. Sakai, Y. Tanaka, T. Maki, S. Osaki, K. Sati, J. Ishino and Frank Hirano, were unable to procure sufficient cash and were locked up.

BROWN IN THE NORTH.

Los Angeles Broker Charged With Swindling Many People Seen in San Francisco.

According to San Francisco dispatches Harry D. Brown, the Los Angeles broker accused of swindling local people, including many Japanese, out of over $200,000, is thought by the police to be in hiding in or near that city. He is known to have been there on the 18th. inst. On that day, he was taken to the Seal Rock House on the ocean beach by T. D. Habner, the chauffeur who took him up the coast. At that resort he dismissed the chauffeur and paid him after requesting him to "keep mum." No trace of Brown has since been found by the detectives working on the case.

ELOPERS CAPTURED.

San Bernardino Man and Fourteen-Year-Old Girl Arrested at Her Parents' Request.

Mike Marella, twenty-five years old, and Annie Bottini, fourteen years old, who ran away from San Bernardino, Friday night, were captured here last night, and locked up in the city jail.

The arrests were made at the request of parents. Annie will go back to her home and a serious charge will be preferred against Marella, who does not seem to realize the gravity of his position.

WATCH THEFT CHARGED.

Joe Baralla was arrested last night. He is accused of having stolen a gold watch from Joe Willet of No. 207 Olivera street. Willet says Baralla decoyed him to a dark place, near Aliso and Alameda streets, and there relieved him of the timepiece.

INJURED BY LONG FALL.

Charles M. Best, a carpenter living at No. 451 East Hollywood Place, fell thirty-five feet from a ladder while at work at No. 555 South Broadway and sustained severe injuries yesterday afternoon. His right ankle was fractured, and his back sprained. He is in the Clara Barton Hospital.

MOTHER SEEKS HIM.

Efforts are being made by Mrs. Marion T. Boyd, No. 333 North Hill street, to find Chris Martin, who left Los Angeles last August, and has not been heard from since. Martin's mother is greatly worried over his long silence. The young man formerly lived in Omaha.

GERMAN IN GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

At the last meeting of the Board of Education the German-American Alliance renewed its effort to secure the placing of the German language among the elective studies in the grammar grades of the public schools. The committee of the alliance presented figures claimed to have been the result of a postal card canvass, showing that 84 per cent. of the parents of the city are in favor of it. The petition was referred to the Committee on Course of Study.

OPTOMETRY LAW STRONGER.

All Sellers of Spectacles or Eyeglasses Must Have License from State Board.

Within the next sixty days every corporation, firm or individual engaged in the business of selling spectacles or eyeglasses must secure a license from the State Board of Optometry. The cost of the license will be $2 a year. This is the provision of the optometry bill passed by the Legislature, and signed yesterday by the Governor. Opticians already registered by the State board are not affected.

Dr. Fred Detmers, president of the board, said yesterday that the bill, which contains several other amendments to the exitsing law, is the result of three years' work on the part of the optical societies of the State, and of the board.

"There were many loopholes in the law, which enabled persons to evade its provisions," he continued, "and we believe these have been closed. The license feature will affect a great many drug stores, hardware stores and mercantile shops that have been handling spectacles and eyeglasses. The license will not give dealers any new privilege, but it will place them under the eyes of the State authorities, and make their business amenable to inspection and regulation. It is hoped that the license feature will protect the public from imposition, as the board has power to revoke any license if it is proven that the holder has abused its privilege.

"Among the other amendments designed to remedy defects of the old law, one of the most important is the provision relating to the renewal of licenses. Under the original law, an optician's license was revoked if he failed to pay his annual fee of $5. It was recognized that this worked injustice to persons who had passed the examination, but temporarily left the State. The new provision is that when a license has been allowed to lapse, it may be renewed if the owner pays a fine equivalent to the annual dues for the period during which it was inoperative."

As soon as the new law is in effect, State inspectors will visit every shop where spectacles, or eyeglasses are sold and see that it is complied with. Nick B. Harris is the inspector south of the Tehachepi.

LAWYER-DETECTIVE WAR.

Warner and Bailey Knock Each Other Down, and Former's Face Is Gashed.

Attorney A. D. Warner and J. G. Bailey, former superintendent of the Los Angeles branch of the Pinkerton detective agency, came to blows last night in the buffet of the Angelus Hotel.

Warner had been imbibing, and as Bailey was securing a drink, words ensued between the two relative to an alleged debt owed by Warner. The barkeeper endeavored to separate them, but Warner struck Bailey, knocking him down.

In the melee which ensued between the friends of the two principals Bailey gained his feet, and again Warner struck him, Friends then seized Warner and dragged him away, while Bailey was hustled outside.

Hot blood had been engendered, and in a few minutes Warner came back into the buffet and shortly afterwards Bailey reëntered. Immediately the wordy war was renewed. Suddenly Bailey struck Warner full in the face, knocking him to the floor. Warner's face was gashed from his nose almost to his ear.

Bailey was ejected and Warner was assisted to the wash room, where his injuries were temporarily dressed.

CALIFORNIA ALUMNI.

University of California Club Holds Charter Day Celebration and Welcomes New Medicos.

The University of California Club held a charter-day celebration last night at Levy's, at which the jolly good fellows had a jolly good time. The date marked the forty-first anniversary of the State University, the first anniversary of the club, and the first opportunity of the graduates of the Medical College of this city to affiliate themselves with other California alumni since the college has become affiliated with the State University.

Dr. Frank Kelsey and Dr. W. Jarvis Barlow were introduced by Russ Avery, master of ceremonies, and they spoke briefly for the new medical department. Willis Booth spoke enthusiastically of the "greater university," and predicted for it a glorious future.

Prof. B. R. Baumgardt delivered an address on the educational institutions of Europe and America, and illustrated with a large number of stereopticon pictures of Sweden and Norway.

Charcoal Lozenges A Natural Breath Perfume

Charcoal Assists in Gaining and Retaining a Sweet Breath

Breath perfumes should never be resorted to. They seldom conceal the odor and never remove the cause, and are very suggestive.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges sweetens the breath by removing the cause—a disordered condition of the stomach, and by this means imparts to the breath the natural, healthful odor, void of all unnatural or suggestive condition. Charcoal fills a fourfold mission. First, it purifies the breath by restoring to it the natural odor nature intended it to have. Second, charcoal is an absorbent, absorbing 100 per cent. per volume of gas, by this means relieving flatulence and gases of the stomach and bowels. Third, charcoal aids digestion and by this means regulates the action of the bowels, relieving flux, diarrhoea, piles, constipation, etc. Fourth, charcoal oxidizes the blood, thus preventing pimples and other eruptions that arise from indigestion and impurities of the blood.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are a household necessity and should be in every home, containing only young willow wood charcoal and honey. They are perfectly harmless and any quantity may be taken without ill effects. Old and young alike can take Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges with the same beneficial results.

The next time that you have sour stomach, indigestion, bad breath, heart burn, gastritis, bad taste in the mouth, belching or belching up of food, just step in the nearest drug store and get a box of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges and try them; the results will be gratifying and almost instantaneous, the stomach will soon feel better and the disagreeable odor disappear in a very short time.

If you prize a sweet breath and healthy stomach, you should occasionally use Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. A lozenger now and then will suffice to sweeten the breath and keep the stomach in a healthy condition; try them; for sale everywhere, or a sample will be mailed free upon request. Address the F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

CHURCHES MUST DRAW THE LINE.

THEY ARE IN DANGER OF HAVING TO PAY TAXES.

Ordinance Governing Entertainments Appears to Be Fractured by Some of Them—Burglar Attempts to Break Into the Fairbanks Residence—Holmes Buys Hotel.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, March 28.—A closer line may be drawn about entertainments held in churches in this city in the future. If money is taken in at these affairs the churches will not be exempt from taxation. The ordinance on the subject reads: "Church organizations may use church buildings and property in any way that they may desire for the benefit and profit of the church only, without violating the law exempting church property and taxation, provided that such use does not throw the church open to general public engagements for such purposes or bring it into competition with other public halls and operahouses as a place of amusement.

"For instance, any lecturer or entertainer whose services are given to the church free of cost may use the church building, providing the entire proceeds of the lecture go to the church treasury or into the treasury of some auxiliary society of the church."

HE MAY FLY.

Roy Knabenshue may attempt to fly from Tournament Park to Mount Wilson during the week. Should he succeed in reaching the summit and return to the park he will achieve a feat worthy of national notice for it will be the first time that a dirigible balloon will be handled at more than 3500 feet, an altitude of 5000 feet being necessary to reach Mount Wilson.

PURCHASES BIG HOTEL.

Reports from the north are to the effect that J. H. Hoknes, lessee and manager of Hotel Green, has purchased the Hotel Rafael at San Rafael, and will manage it in connection with the Green, on which he last year secured a ten-year lease. The consideration is said to be $400,000.

The Hotel Rafael is about twenty years old and was built by a group of capitalists, headed by Baroness von Schroeder, A. W. Foster and William T. Coleman.

Mr. Holmes left for San Francisco last night and before he departed practically acknowledged the truth of the report.

SEASON'S RAINFALL.

A record for the past several seasons has been set by the rainfall for this year which up to last night was 26.35 inches. The storm during the past three days added 1.05 inches to the record.

THE RIVALS.

The unexpected happened yesterday afternoon. Mayor Earley was walking across Colorado street at the junction of Raymond avenue when he came face-to-face with former Mayor William Waterhouse, who opposes his reelection. Without a minute's hesitation the Mayor stretched out his hand in greeting to his rival. Mr. Waterhouse quickly grasped it, and both men smiled good naturedly and wished each other good luck.

This is the first time the two men have met for some years. Mr. Waterhouse, when he left the office of Mayor departed early in the morning of the day that Mr. Earley took his seat and considerable comment was heard at that time because the former did not stay to meet his successor.

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING.

Developments in the mysterious shooting case on South Orange Grove avenue have reached a point where a statement was made yesterday by Watchman C. J. Woodworth of a detective agency.

His version of the affair is that he saw a man running away from the house occupied by ex-Vice-President Fairbanks and his party, early in the morning. He ordered the man to halt but the fellow continued to run, so the officer fired, but failed to hit his mark. Investigation the next day proved that the man had attempted to raise several of the windows in the house and had evidently been scared away by the officer before he was successful in breaking into the residence.

AT THE CHURCHES.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold a meeting this afternoon in the Friends Church at 3 o'clock.

Rev. G. M. Morrison will speak at the men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at 4 o'clock on "Loyalty."

Rev. Horace Porter of Montclair, N. J., will speak at the First Congregational Church in this city today.

The choir of All Saints' in this city will join four other choirs of the Episcopal church this evening in the rendition of Haydn's "The Passion" at St. Paul'es Pro-Cathedral in Los Angeles.

MEN ENTERTAIN WOMEN.

The gentlemen who are guests at Hotel Green proved themselves royal entertainers Thursday evening when they were hosts at one of the most elegantly appointed card parties of the season. In the Turkish, Moorish and green parlors twenty tables were arranged for progressive euchre, and the scene was a charming one, for the women had donned their prettiest frocks for the occasion. The gentlemen received their guests in the green drawing-room. The parlors were beautifully decorated with immense baskets of violets, the handles being entwined with asparagus ferns and caught with violet gauze ribbons. Tall vases of pink Enchantress carnations and clusters of pink-tinted peach blossoms in big bronze vases were also used about the rooms. Palm fronds and maidenhair ferns added their beauty to the scene.

During the games fruitade was served and at the close of the games a collation was enjoyed. While the ices were being served the gentlemen took the scores when it was found that Mrs. J. Dawson Boyle held the highest score and was awarded first prize, a silver-spangled gauze fan with mother of pearl sticks. Mrs. Mitchell won the second trophy, a coral brooch. Mrs. Amberg of Chicago was the third winner and was given a gold bracelet; Mrs. V. Turner won the fourth, a gold hatpin set with an amethyst. Mrs. J. Mack of Toledo took the fifth prize, a large cut-glass dish, and Miss Sutfiled captured the sixth, a handsome black leather hand bag with purse and fittings. Mrs. G. G. Green was awarded the lone-hand trophy, a silver card case, and Mrs. W. D. Rockefeller took the consolation prize, a beautiful little silver vase.

The young ladies who assisted in passing the lone-hand markers were Miss Stearns, Miss Greenwood and Miss Heinrich and each was presented with a silver pin tray. The lone-hand markers were costly little trifles of ivory, silver and jade.

Each lady present was presented at the close of the evening with a corsage bouquet of violets, and as the company broke up the gentlemen gave three cheers for the ladies. The affair was very jolly. The committee having it in charge was composed of Messrs. I. C. Seamans, Hallett West, E. Groenendyke and Millard H. Dake, assisted by Mrs. George H. Lincoln of New York. About eighty were present.

OHIO SOCIETY BANQUET.

Next Thursday evening the Ohio Society will give a banquet at Hotel Green at which covers will be laid for 350. Ex-Vice-President Fairbanks will be the speaker of the evening and Robert J. Burdette, the toastmaster. On Griday evening, April 2, the Elks will enjoy a dinner at the Green, where covers for about 150 will be laid.

EVANS WILL LECTURE.

"Fighting Bob" Is to Speak at Venice Under the Auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

VENICE, March 27.—May 2 will be "Bob" Evans day at Venice. He will deliver a lecture here under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. Reception committee are being named and every endeavor will be made to bring out the people, and make this a record-breaking spring day by the sea.

The project of constructing a concrete bulkhead for the protection of the shore line against the inroads of the sea is being discussed. The proposed plan is to give the construction a gentle curve to the end that the waves may not strike it will full force. The expense would be greater than that estimated for a wooden bulkhead, but the argument in favor of concrete is that it would endure forever.

The Chamber of Commerce has decided to hold its meeting of next Friday night in the auditorium and devote the evening to the discussion of the proposed consolidation of Ocean Park and Santa Monica. F. K. McCarver, R. A. Phillips and H. C. Rogers were named as a committee to secure speakers.

WELL-KNOWN MASON PASSES.

James C. Kelly Dies at Whittier—Pioneer and Recipient of Many Honors.

WHITTIER, March 27.—Death last night closed the long life of James C. Kelly, a well-known Mason of this city, and one of the oldest past Masons of the order of California.

Mr. Kelly came across the plains to California, in 1852, with five other young men, and the party nearly starved to death before reaching its destination.. He had an active part in the development of this great State, and at his home in Calaveras county, he was Postmaster, Justice of the Peace, master of the Masonic lodge, and prominently identified with the Methodist Church. During his twenty years' residence at Stockton, he held the position of superintendent of the City and County Hospital. During the forty-four years of his identification with Masonry he held every office in the gift of the lodge, being elected worshipful master three times.

Mr. Kelly, who was eighty-three years old, leaves a son and daughter, both living in this city. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the First Methodist Church, Rev. Dr. Cookman, the pastor, officiating. The Whittier lodge, F. and A.M. will have charge of the service at the grave.

GLENDORA REALTY ACTIVE.

Three Orange Groves Sold—Houses to Be Built—Rainfall Thirty Inches to Date.

GLENDORA, March 27.—T. W. La-Fitra has sold a twenty-acre tract, twelve and one-half acres of which are set to seven-year-old navel and Valencia orange trees, to P. W. Delancy, for $20,000. The buyer, who recently sold an orange grove near Covina, will erect a handsome residence.

T. Crawford has sold a forty-acre ranch, twenty-five acres of which are set to Valencia orange trees, 6 years old, to Mr. Curtis of Los Angeles. Consideration stated is $29,150.

Campbell and Bradley purchased lot 1, in block O. O., from J. D. Dyer, for $650, and will build an $1800 residence on it.

K. C. Sipple & Son have bought lots 11 and 13, in block O. O., from M. Stevenson, for $900, and will build a $600 residence.

J. M. Kuns has sold a ten-acre tract set half to eight-year-old navels and half to Valencias, to Pasadena parties for $14,000.

The total rainfall for the season to date is 30 inches.

SANTA MONICA.

NEW LAW WILL AFFECT BEACH.

NON-RESIDENTS NEED NOT PAY EXTRA TUITION FEE.

Special Tax Is to Be Levied—Chafin Delivers Prohibition Lecture. Season's Rain Record Is Large. Hockey Club to Give Dramatic Entertainment.

SANTA MONICA, March 27.—Under the new law, passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor, Santa Monica and all other High School districts within the State will, after July next, not be entitled to collect tuition from pupils attending from other districts in which there is no high school organization. The law now provides that children living in districts not included within a high school district shall be entitled to attend the nearest high school. The tuition for such pupils is to be paid by a special tax to be levied in the districts that do not have high schools. The amount raised by the tax, which is to be estimated on the per capita expense of conducting high schools, is to be divided among the districts which are attended by non-resident pupils. The divsion is to be based on the number of non-resident pupils attending the several districts. Under this law Ocean Park, Sawtelle, Playa del Rey, Machado, Ballona and Palms will have access to Santa Monica's higher educational institution. This year, for the first time in the history of the high school, a small tuition fee was exacted from non-residents during a part of the year.

J. W. VanSant of Los Angeles is making arrangements to build a home in the Palisades. J. Gumaer of Los Angeles has purchased the Wilson residence on Sixth street.

E. W. Chafin delivered a prohibition lecture here tonight, speaking before a large audience on "Health and Waste.

Heavy rains fell intermittently during the night. The total for the storm was .68 and the aggregate of the precipitation for the season has reached 16.96 inches. There was thunder and lighthing at intervals.

For the purpose of raising funds for the improvement and enlargement of the pavilion on the polo grounds, the hockey enthusiasts of Santa Monica are soon to give a dramatic entertainment. The play is now in rehearsal, the cast including nine members of the Hockey Club.

Dr. and Mrs. John A. Balsley have entertained Dr. and Mrs. John Hollister of Chicago.

Health in the wonderful waters of the Arrowhead Hot Springs, and comfort in the luxurious hotel.

Secure rooms at Coronado now.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, March 27.—Mrs. George Loud of Los Angeles has been the guests of Mrs. W. P. Taylor for the past ten days.

D. G. Overell, president of the Tulare county exchange, and F. L. Poage and W. A. Arthur of the Lemon Cove packing-houses, were in Azusa this week, looking over local packing-houses, with the idea of improving their own. They were the guests of Manager Dana C. King.

B. F. Taylor is setting out an orange grove of eight and one-third acres in the southwest part of town. It will be equally divided between navels and Valencias.

The Azusa-Covina-Glendora Fruit Exchange record beats that of 1908 by nearly 300 cars. Up to March 24, 1908, 645 carloads were shipped, as against 924 to the same date this season. Present indications are that the shipments of this season will exceed the record of 1908 by fully 1000 carloads.

BURBANK.

BURBANK, March 27.—The annual meeting for the election of school trustees will be held April 2, at the public schoolhouse, the polls to be open from 1 o'clock to 5 o'clock p.m. Two trustees are to be elected, one for one year, the other for three years. Frank E. Craig and W. L. Pollock are candidates, and it is thought Mrs. I. A. Wood and Mrs. E. Pomeroy will also run. Officers appointed to conduct the election are C. F. Greenman, inspector; A. Sence and T. D. Buffington judges.

The boys of the Burbank Gun Club are planning to give a social in the I.O.F. Hall, Saturday evening, April 10.

Rooms can now be secured at Coronado. Agency 334 S. Spring street.

DOWNEY DEBATE.

DOWNEY, March 27.—The Occidental Academy debating team won its first victory tonight when it defeated the Los Nietos Union High School of Downey in the latter's auditorium by 195 points to 165 2-3. The Downey team so far has defeated no one. The debate lasted a little over an hour. The subject, "Resolved, that the city of Los Angeles should adopt the Des Moines plan of city government," was upheld by Edward Anderson and John Clayton for the winners; while Hamer Graham and Edward Rieces took the negative side of the question for Downey. The judges were Rev. N. T. Edwards of Whittier, Judge Hauser of Los Angeles, Superintendent Bebock of Santa Monica.

CAN THIS BE TRUE?

EARLY BIRDS RAVAGE GARDENS AND DOGS.

CASA VERDUGO, March 27.—Promoters of the Audubon Society would be well advised to give this suburb a wide berth at the present time. The feathered tribe has many friends here, but just at present there is a rupture in amicable relations.

The difficulty is probably due to the unusually heavy snows in the mountains late in the season, causing the birds to be unable to find their usual spring haven there. Immense flocks have descended on the gardens and have proved almost as destructive as one of Job's plagues or the grasshoppers of Kansas.

They have stripped every young and tender plant and have even attacked the larger pea vines now in blossom and about to bear. Some gardens have already been destroyed while others are still in the process. Cats, scarecrows and other methods of defense have proved equally unavailing.

The birds come early in the morning and get not only the worms but the cabbages as well. The only gardeners who have been able to cope with them are the Japanese. In that case it is the early Jap who gets the bird. The Japs use coöperative methods and have an early guard out with the break of day.

Flower gardens suffer with the vegetables. If the birds do not find other pastures their ravages will soon make a noticeable difference in the appearance of the streets and boulevards which are just beginning to blossom under the cultivation of property owners.

With the advent of this pest of birds the nature faker naturally has not been behind hand. Frank Stadler has been exhibiting a Mexican hairless dog, recently acquired, as a specimen of what the birds do to canines or felines set out to guard the cucumber vines.

The wonderful Arrowhead Hot Springs will cure that rheumatism. A model hotel and unapproachable baths.

Large crowds at "Hotel del Coronado," but room for more.

HOT AIR.

PERPETUAL MOTION BUBBLE EXPLODED.

Santa Monica Investors at Last Sorrowfully Awake to the Fact That They Have Lost Their Money. Dreams of Millions Vanish.

OCEAN PARK, March 27.—According to S. L. Hardman, who has just returned from Mars and Washington, Pa., the Leroy perpetual motion bubble has exploded. Hardman went East in the interest of local stockholders in the Leroy Air Power Company. W. R. Leroy was supposed to be there superintending the manufacture of a machine, which he was on the eve of bringing to the coast. According to word received here, the device was completed and operated successfully. It was accidentally started one day by a gust of wind and ran so fast that nineteen men and a boy were unable to stop it. Finally it slowed down when one of the bearings wore out. Then it was that Leroy was to start for the coast with it; but he failed to come. For the purpose of learning what might be the trouble Hardman was sent East. His report is that no machine has ever been built and that the very same patterns that were manufactured here are still stored in a lonely barn at Mars.

When this perpetual motion excitement was at fever heat two years ago there were all kinds of dealing in hot air stock. For ten cents a share on a nominal capital stock quotations jumped over night to more than $10 and millionaires in embryo were at every side. Leroy established the bluff that he had sold his patent to a Chicago millionaire, Nealson by name, for $30,000,000. And as proof that he had received a retainer of $50,000 in cash he suddenly blossomed out in silk tile and broadcloth, with automobile, private secretary, etcetera. He flashed the real mazuma in great chunks, bought of everything to heart's desire, and gave a banquet at which all stockholders were to be permitted to meet the mysterious Mr. Nealson. The banquet was a howling success; but Nealson was conspicuous by his absence, nor did he ever arrive. Great interest developed as the date for the deposit of the big payment of millions approached; but before the eventful day arrived libel suits galore cluttered the court records and Leroy, with tearful eyes, informed his investors that Nealson had back pedaled. And that was the last of Nealson.

RANCH CHANGES HANDS.

Twenty-five Thousand Paid for Hundred and Sixty Acres at Pomona. Other Sales.

POMONA, March 27.—Activity in realty here slackened a little during the week on account of the rain, but there have been a number of sales.

W. A. Johnstone and Edward A. Bost have purchased of Tappe Bros. and Dougall an alfalfa ranch of 160 acres, with a well and pumping plant, for $25,000.

Morris H. Wilson and F. W. Ritter have sold three lots in the Ganesha Park Tract and two in the Walker-Dole Tract. W. M. Avis has purchased of D. Waldon a lot on East Holt avenue and Douglas Doty has bought two on East Seventh street, near the Seventh Ward school.

Hon. Eugene Chafin addressed a large audience at the Fraternal Aid Theater, last evening.

Work is progressing rapidly on the house that is being built for Charles H. Tyler by Contractor Heckman in the high school tract.

IN NEW HOME.

FORGETS HIS WELL.

Long Beach Rancher Deeds it to Highway Commission Along With Eighty-foot Right-of-way.

LONG BEACH, March 27.—The Highway Commissioners are congratulating themselves on the forgetfulness of Jacob Harlow, one of the ranchers on the proposed Long Beach-Los Angeles boulevard. He deeded the commission a right of way eighty feet wide through his ranch on which there is a fine artesian well with a flow of fifteen inches.

When Harlow discovered what he had done he demanded his well back, and a compromise was effected by which the well will be capped below the surface and the water conveyed to the grantor's property on either side. For his part Harlow agrees to allow the commission to use the water from the flowing well and a drinking fountain for "man and beast" will be erected at the edge of the roadway.

George Ramsey, charged with selling liquor in violation of the county ordinance, was acquitted last night.

The rain last night added .20 inch to the season's total which is now 18.08 inches as against 9.57 inches the same time last year.

SPLENDID ADVANCE.

Reports of Historic Wilmington Presbyterian Church Show Progress Along All Lines.

WILMINGTON, March 27.—The Presbyterian Church held its annual banquet last night, when reports for the year were given. Plates were laid for 100, and more than that number were served. This little church has a historic record. It was organized and built nearly forty years ago. It was the first of its denomination in Southern California. Among its first contributors and officers were Phineas Banning and Jotham Bixby. The reports for the year showed a splendid advance along all lines. Rev. W. H. Evans will be installed as permanent pastor in June.

The Wilmington Dock Company is improving its property on J street, north of Seventh street. This street has been widened, and will be an extension of the Los Angeles-Wilmington boulevard, which will be continued around the bay shore to San Pedro.

Coronado is warm in winter.

HUNTINGTON PARK.

HUNTINGTON PARK, March 27.—At a meeting of the recently-appointed board of trustees of the new High School district, this afternoon, it was voted to appoint J. S. Geller, president, and J. J. Shea, secretary, and to ask for bonds to the amount of $65,000.

SELLS "TWIN OAKS."

CLAREMONT, March 27.—C. A. Rusco today sold his home and ranch known as the "Twin Oaks," on the Foothill boulevard, Claremont, to J. S. Townsend of New York, stated consideration $22,000 cash. The deal was consummated by Frank Wheeler.

This property, one of the choicest orange groves in this vicinity, consists of ten acres in full-bearing trees, with a beautiful ten-room house, recently built at a cost of $8000, together with garage and barns.

"Hotel del Coronado" is the best.

IMPROVED SERVICE.

Six Thousand Dollars to Be Spent at Redondo Beach on New Telephone Equipments.

REDONDO BEACH, March 27.—The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company is to expend $6000 on new equipments and improvements for the local exchange. C. M. Seeley and E. H. Lowe, officials of the company, were here today making plans for the commencement of the work. A force of twenty-five men will start Monday. The exchange will be removed into larger offices in the basement of the Garland Block and an entire new system, switchboard, cables and instruments will be installed. The common battery system will be employed, which does away with the annoyance of the present system, the ringing up of central with the bell.

Two carloads of construction materials were received here yesterday, and today a number of new poles were put up. A switchboard with an increased capacity of 400 subscribers will be installed when the office is removed to the Garland building, which will be in two weeks. Solicitors began this morning canvassing the city for new subscribers.

When the improvements are completed the local exchange will be the finest of any city of this size on the Coast.

CREDITABLE ISSUE.

Los Angeles "Mining Review" Has Published Excellent Edition.

The Los Angeles Mining Review has just issued its Great Southwest Number, devoted to the mining interests of the region tributary to this city and including all Southern California, Southern Nevada, Arizona and Mexico. The work is very extensive and complete, covering every camp worthy of the slightest mention and setting forth the great resources of Los Angeles county, including such camps as Ely, soon to be brought into touch with Los Angeles. In addition to the regular staff of the paper a large number of special writers have contributed their services and covered certain localities or special lines. Los Angeles is shown as the great center of all this territory and the place to which business must come.

Besides other mining lines two entire pages are devoted to the oil industry, of which Los Angeles is one of the greatest centers in the world, more oil being produced in the city and immediate environs than in any city of its size, except Baku, Russia.

The issue is in every way creditable to the management and will do much to advance the interests of Los Angeles and its territory.

Pimply Pretty Faces

May Be Made Clean and Clear By Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Trial Package Sent Free.

Pretty faces are daily seen about us marred and marked with pimples, blotches and eruptions.

There is absolutely no necessity for this condition being so exceedingly prevalent. Pimples and skin troubles show that the blood is impure, and is forcing its impurities into the cells and blands of the skin, there festering and breaking out at last into many eruptive disorders.

Don't Mar Your Beauty by Neglect. Stuart's Calcium Wafers Sent Free for Trial.

Calcium Sulphide is one of the greatest blood purifiers known to science, and is so powerful that in a few days dreadful conditions of skin disease are overcome, and pimples and ordinary skin troubles have been removed in a few days.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain this great purifier and preserve its fullest strength in the peculiar process called Stuart's. Combined with the Calcium Sulphide are three other great blood invigorators, each doing a special work intended for rapid and complete mastery over blood impurities and skin diseases.

By using Stuart's Calcium Wafers in a few days one notices the good effects, and in a short time the blood responds quickly and purges itself of its irritating and impure parts.

These wafers are not experimental, they do their great work so fast and are so uniformly successful that they are known in every hamlet and by every druggist. Physicians will tell you of Calcium Sulphide, and how hard it is to prepare it to hold its full strength. Stuart has solved the question with Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They sell at all druggists for 50c, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

THIS GREAT BEAUTY BOOK IS FREE

5,000 Copies of this Wonderful Work on Beauty by the World's Most Widely Known Beauty Specialist Will Be Given Away to Readers of This Paper.

This Remarkable Book Tells of Marvelous New Process That Often Makes Wrinkles Disappear in a Night; That Commences to Grow New Flesh and Tissue on Flabby Cheeks Within 24 Hours' Time.

It Reveals the Complete Formula for the Wonderful Hair Grower That Was Awarded the Gold Medal by the Vienna Jubilee Exposition, and Gives the Original Prescription for Making the Great Skin Preparation Which Was Awarded the Gold Medal by the Paris International Exposition.

Don't Be Ugly, Plain or Homely When This Great Book Can Be Had for the Asking.

The Institute de Beaute has secured the exclusive American rights for the publication of one of the most remarkable works on beauty of modern times on condition that they give away 100,000 copies of this book this year free of charge. The author made this an absolute condition of the contract.

The book is written by a woman who is herself a living example of the beauty and marvelous efficacy of her own beauty discoveries; a woman who took hr own wrinkles out by her own discovery after face massage, masks and steaming pots and beauty doctors had all failed; a woman who stopped her own hair from falling out and prevented what seemed to be almost certain baldness by the same formula which she reveals to you in this book, and which was awarded a gold medal by the great Vienna Jubilee Exposition held under the auspices of His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Austria.

This book also gives the exact formula for making the marvelous preparation for removing pimples, blotches and skin blemishes and for treating eczema and other skin diseases, which was awarded the gold medal by the Paris International Exposition.

We absolutely guarantee that a good druggist can fill these formulas for you without any difficulty whatever at small cost.

This wonderful book tells of a marvelous new process which commences to grow new flesh and tissue on soft flabby cheeks and scrawny necks within twenty-four hours' time; that often makes wrinkles disappear over night and works surprising wonders in developing the bust and bringing back the bloom of youth to the skin and complexion.

It is richly illustrated with the finest photo-engravings, and contains a true picture of the world's most widely known beauty specialist.

No matter how deep your lines and wrinkles may be, no matter how flabby your cheeks or how scrawny your neck, no matter how small your bust nor how sallow and swarthy your complexion may be, no matter what remedies you may have used or what beauty specialists may have treated you, write for a copy of this great beauty book today and test the new methods explained therein at your own home. Each and every one is guaranteed to be absolutely harmless.

These methods have taken gold medals at every international exposition at which they have been exhibited.

It has cost the author years of time and $10,000 in cash to gather the material and make the discoveries of which this book tells you.

Do not waste your money on high priced beauty doctors or in buying expensive products which disappoint and dishearten, when this great book may be had without one cent of cost.

Write for a copy today. Address Institute de Beaute, Suite 526A, Syracuse, N. Y.

No money is required, but you can send stamp to help pay postage if you wish. The book, however, will be sent anyway, as the Institute is compelled to give away 100,000 copies this year to retain its ownership to the copyright.

WILL GATHER AT BEACH.

Arrangements Already Made for Chautauqua and Camp Meeting of Southern Methodists.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, March 27.—Arrangements have already been made here by the secretary of the Huntington Beach Assembly for the annual Chautauqua and camp meeting of the Southern California Methodists in this city. It is expected by leading divines that it will be the largest ever held in Southern California. Evangelist Torrey will have charge and will be assisted by lecturers and speakers of known reputation, under the auspices of the Epworth League.

The General Executive Council of the Southern California Veterans of the G.A.R. will meet on April 14, to decide where to hold their annual encampment this year, but it is confidently believed the council will choose Huntington Beach as it is known that a majority of the members favor this city, where the association has met for four consecutive years.

An association has been formed here for the control of the new local cemetery and will at once make needed improvements. Water is now being piped to the ground and a hedge of cypress will surround the ground, which will be further beautified with trees and flowers.

The question of closing local pool rooms on Sunday is being agitated by the Trustees and a tentative vote upon the question develops the fact that the board stands two in favor of closing the pool rooms and two against, with the fifth member somewhat noncommittal.

The United Boys' Brigade of Los Angeles is making inquiries of the local Board of Trade with a view to obtaining ground for a tenting outing this summer at this place. The brigade will send about 200 boys on the trip.

Rev. Father Reardon of Long Beach is now conducting Catholic services here every Sunday morning. The building of a church in the near future is probable.

SANTA ANA.

USE OF TONGUE IS TOO AMPLE.

BEACH FOLK TALK THEMSELVES OUT OF VICTORY.

Forgot That Yesterday Afternoon Was Legal Holiday and Continued to Spiel Before Supervisors Until Too Late for Latter to Vote on Collins Map Matter.

SANTA ANA, March 27.—The friends of Balboa Bay tract inadvertently talked themselves out of a victory before the Supervisors this morning. The noon hour came before those present remembered that Saturday afternoon is a legal holiday, and though three of the Supervisors would have accepted the disputed map, no vote could be taken.

The contest concerned Collins Island, in Newport Bay. Attorney Clyde Bishop, representing the Newport Harbor Association and the Newport Beach Chamber of Commerce, declared acceptance of the map would be taking water from the people, that it would be a shame to give one inch of bay space to Collins or any other man.

Attorney Montgomery said its acceptance would cut no figure in title, that the title was clear, coming by patents from the Federal and State governments. Bishop declared the people, several years ago, were beaten out of their rights in Bolsa Chica Bay because they did not have the money to fight with, and that the map would give Collins rights in the bay he could not establish in a Superior Court.

"You are afraid to go into a Superior Court and mandamus this board to accept your map, for you don't want to go there, where you have to show clear title, not for a holy minute do you want to go there," said he.

Collins and James McFadden were discussing the situation when the noon hour came. Chairman MacMullen conferred with Dist.-Atty. Davis, and declared that no vote could be taken, it being a legal holiday after noon. The matter will not come up again until April 7. Collins was anxious for a decision today, he having material in demurrage to be used in filling tide land on the island.

MODJESKA RESTS WELL.

Mme. Modjeska was overjoyed at seeing her son, Ralph Modjeska, this morning. He arrived at Bay Island from Chicago late last night. The madam is resting well and is very cheerful.

COLONEL WINS ROUND.

Col. Hoggatt Clopton won a fight in the Superior Court yesterday on a technical point. His wife, Mrs. Jennie Clopton of Long Beach, had cited him to show cause why he should not pay her $250 a month alimony. The court ruled that proper service on Clopton had not been executed.

Thieves stole clothing from a line in the back yard of William Crissman on E street last night.

SHE SAID "DARN IT."

After three days of trial, Mrs. Augusta E. Harlow of Los Angeles was today awarded the possession of her three-year-old son, Leland. Action against her for possession of the boy was brought by her husband, Alamon A. Harlow of Fullerton. The husband failed to show anything derogatory to his wife's character. In reciting incidents of their married life previous to separation, Mrs. Harlow today said that Harlow drank a great deal. On one occasion while building a doghouse he became angered, and threw a hammer at her. It was only by quick dodging that she escaped a blow. Mrs. Harlow declared she never used stronger language toward her husband than "darn it," and "blame it," while his language toward her was often rough and profane.

DRAINAGE DISTRICT.

At a mass meeting of ranchers from the Delhi and Polloreno districts, south of Santa Ana, this afternoon, a committee, composed of James McFadden, O. H. Coulter, J. T. Raitt, Robert Sped and C. F. Heil, was appointed to draw up a resolution of intention to form a drainage district for presentation to the Board of Supervisors. A plan of ditches and boundaries was accepted as drawn up by Surveyor S. H. Finley. In the district as outlined are 6000 acres. A line in Old Newport forms the western boundary, while the northern boundary of one arm will extend to a point near the corner of First and Artesia streets, in Santa Ana, and another arm will reach to the northeast nearly to Aliso station. The main canal will empty into Newport Bay. The action taken at today's meeting assures the establishment of the drainage district, which will be of immense value to the land drained, rendering it all fit for sugar-beet raising.

FINE HARVEST OF CABBAGES.

SIXTY-FIVE CARLOADS SHIPPED FROM EL CENTRO.

Growers Receive Forty-five Dollars a Ton—Onion Market Also Strong. Interesting Legal Point Involved in Druggist's Appeal—Women Plan for City Sweeping.

EL CENTRO, March 27.—This district is now in the midst of the cabbage harvest, and wagonloads of the vegetable are passing through the main streets of this city daily to the packing sheds, where the cars are loaded. It is estimated that sixty-five carloads of cabbage will go to the markets from this point this season, and the average is twelve tons to the car. This week, cabbage has netted growers $45 a ton.

Two carloads of onions were sent out this week, bringing 3 cents a pound. The success of growers has been so marked this season that undoubtedly a large acreage will be devoted to "truck" raising next year.

LEGAL POINT INVOLVED.

The case of the People vs. E. S. Heil, an El Centro druggist, who was convicted in the City Recorder's Court of violating the liquor ordinance and was fined $200, has been appealed. A question involved is that of the right of a City Recorder's court to summon jurymen from outside the municipality for the purpose of trying alleged violations of city ordinances. Heil is at liberty on the promise of his attorney, T. M. McNamara, to produce him in the court when the case is called.

Four other liquor cases pending before the City Recorder's court await the outcome of the Heil trial.

WOMEN WANT "CLEAN-UP."

The women's section of the Ten Thousand Club has made plans for a "clean-up" day. A committee will confer with the Trustees and arrange for a thorough cleansing of highways and byways.

DENIES MURDER CHARGE.

Victor Rios, who claims that his real name is Rivers, has been arraigned before the Superior Court on the charge of having murdered Domingo Quiroz at Potholes, on February 24. He pleaded not guilty. The case is set for April 26, and it appears a bitter contest will be made. Rivers has secured two local firms of attorneys and one in Yuma to defend him. Many of Rivers's old neighbors in the Colorado River Valley were in El Centro this week to appear before the grand jury, and nearly all of them called upon him at the County Jail.

Jasper school district is advertising for bids for the erection of a new building.

Ellis Gould of Los Angeles has come here to be a clerk in the Hotel Oregon.

The Imperial Valley Medical Society has chosen as its delegates to the State Medical Society meeting at San José, on April 20, Dr. Bumgarner of Imperial, Dr. Brooks of Holtville and Dr. Peterson of El Centro.

Wheeler B. Young and Anna M. Kenline, both of Calexico, were married in the parlor of the Hotel El Centro Wednesday by Rev. F. B. Frazer of the Presbyterian Church.

GRAND JURY IN SESSION.

The Imperial county grand jury is in session here, and is investigating cases involving alleged violations of law in the Colorado River district, presumably in connection with attempts to intimidate officers in the Rios-Quiroz murder case.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, March 27.—The rainfall in town yesterday was much heavier than in other portions of the valley. The Lillie rain gauge recorded .55 of an inch, while the Copthorn gauge in town gives .64.

Mr. and Mrs. Sibley Brown entertained the Elsinore Valley Whist Club last evening at their home here. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lillie, Prof. and Mrs. Chickering, Mr. and Mrs. Rush, Mrs. S. J. Powell, N. L. Dickson, Mr. and Mrs. Sibley Brown. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Burton on Grand avenue.

A crowded house enjoyed the high school entertainment last evening at the Bank Hall.

Mrs. M. A. Roy and little granddaughter, former Elsinorians, now of Danville, Ky., are visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brite and son, Raymond, who occupied their new bungalow on the corner of Main street and Heald avenue, for a month, left today for Long Beach.

Miss Ivy Yates arrived last evening from San Diego to visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Yates of Riverside street.

COLTON.

COLTON, March 27.—Frank Corwin has bought of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Wilson a four-and-one-half-acre orange grove at the corner of Eleventh and V streets for $4350. The trees are all navels of about eleven years' growth.

J. Carmillo has sold to F. M. Belarde, through the Hub Realty Company, a four-room house and lot 75x150 feet on N street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, for $1250.

Vergil Patterson of Imperial is in this city today.

E. E. Richardson of Kansas City, Mo., was a guest at the Anderson yesterday.

C. S. Smith of Seattle, spent yesterday in Colton.

S. S. Meikle of Fresno was a business visitor here yesterday.

ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, March 27.—The California Crate Company of this city has just made a shipment of three carloads of onion crates to El Centro and other points in the Imperial Valley, and has other orders from that county to fill.

"OH, MAMA!"

DIE OLD MAID, IF YOU MUST.

BUT DON'T MARRY A MAN WHO SMOKES OR DRINKS.

Temperance Agitator's Advice to Fair Sex at San Diego—Great Demonstration of Women and Children Promised on Day of License Election—Admiral Evans Coming.

SAN DIEGO, March 27.—In an address before a large audience of men and women at a no-saloon rally, last night, Miss Marie Brehm said: "Young women, organize and pass a set of resolutions that you will not associate with young men that drink or smoke, and then live up to them, even if you have to die an old maid. You cannot reform a man after marriage; too many have tried that and have sadly failed. Follow the example of Queen Esther, even if you perish in the attempt."

The anti-saloon organization of the city is conducting a red hot campaign to close the fifty-five saloons here. The question of license or no license comes up at the election on April 5. Miss Brehm, who is a temperance agitator of national reputation, has been conducting meetings during the past week. Dr. Ervin S. Chapman, State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of California, will have charge of a series of meetings to open tomorrow, and Dr. D. M. Gandier, assistant superintendent, will address meetings throughout next week.

A great demonstration is promised on election day, when the anti-saloon people will have a monster procession. All school children, the various women's clubs and church organizations will march through the business streets with banners and bands. Some will be provided with vehicles, and the committee in charge has offered prizes for the most artistically decorated ones. It is anticipated that 1500 women and children will take part.

The United States supply ship Glacier is now on the way from Magdalena Bay and will take mail from here for officers and men of the fleet now at target practice at Magdalena. There is an immense amount of mail now stored at the postoffice.

Admiral Robley D. Evans, who commanded the American battleship fleet on its memorable cruise around the Horn to California, will visit San Diego on April 27 for the purpose of delivering a lecture. He is to make his permanent home at San Diego or Santa Barbara.

Norman Hackett, the actor, was entertained last night by the local lodge of Elks at a reception and banquet. During the performance at the theater a committee of Elks appeared on the stage and presented Mr. Hackett with a basket of flowers.

WIRELESS TELEPHONE NOW.

First Plant on Pacific Coast Installed Here Yesterday—Open to Public Tomorrow.

The first wireless telephone plant on the Pacific Coast was placed in operation yesterday afternoon by the Collins Wireless Telephone Company on the second floor of the Hamburger store. It will not be open for public use until tomorrow, and then will only connect with another floor. As soon as instruments of more perfect design arrive from the factory of the company in Newark, N. J., communication will be established between the Citizens' National Bank and Hamburger's, a distance of six blocks, to demonstrate the utility of the wireless telephone.

The system was perfected by A. F. Collins, in 1900, and has been installed in a number of eastern cities with success. It insures absolute privacy for those using it, unlike a wireless telegraph message, which can be intercepted by any one having the proper apparatus. The principle of the tuning fork has been used, and instruments are attuned to each other.

The transmitter is the same as that in common use, and the rest of the outfit is similar to that employed in wireless telegraphy.

$3 a Month, All Diseases

Until Cured—Medicines Included

Only 4 Days More

DRS. SHORES' GREAT OFFER to treat all diseases until cured for the low fee of $3 a month, medicines free, to prove to the afflicted that CHRONIC DISEASES can be cured PERMANENTLY, expires Wednesday night, March 31, at 8 o'clock and will not again be renewed or extended. Drs. Shores warn the public that if they want to be cured for the lowest fee ever before charged by reputable specialists they must apply at once. Just four (4) days yet remain. REMEMBER THE OFFER—all beginning treatment with Drs. Shores & Shores during March with catarrh or any chronic or nervous disease will be treated until cured for the low fee of $3 a month, all medicine free. Don't wait until the closing hours of the month to apply and be lost in the rush, but begin your treatment at once. COME TODAY, COME MONDAY, TUESDAY, OR WEDNESDAY. There are no strings to this offer. All are invited. At this favorable season of the year hundreds will be cured in one month. This is your opportunity. Don't let it slip. Come any day this month. Drs. Shores are strictly reliable, having treated over one hundred thousand cases in the past fifteen (15) years, and their treatment is indorsed by the best people. CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATION FREE TO ALL FOR ANY DISEASE.

CHRONIC CATARRH, STOMACH AND LIVER TROUBLE.

O. A. Dunman, 1613 Buena Vista st., Los Angeles.

Mr. Dunman says: "For fifteen (15) years I have been a victim of CATARRH. I have always had weak lungs. For the past four (4) years I was always short of breath. Would choke up and wheeze. I always had a pain in the chest and headache. My nose would stop up until I was compelled to breathe through my mouth and I would hawk and spit a great deal, especially when I would take cold, which was a great deal of the time. I also had trouble with my stomach and liver. I would bloat up and was always constipated. I was weak and run down in every way. This was my condition when I began Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment. I can say they have helped me in every way. I feel like a new man, and I take great pleasure in recommending Drs. Shores to all sufferers, for they have done wonders for me. Any one doubting this testimonial is at perfect liberty to call on me, for I feel sick people should know of Drs. Shores' great skill.
(Signed) "O. A. DUNMAN."

Strictly Reliable

If you suffer from CATARRH or CHRONIC disease, just as sure as you read these lines, just as sure will DRS. SHORES & SHORES cure you IF YOU ONLY TRY (except, of course, you, by neglect or improper treatment have allowed your disease to become incurable.) DRS. SHORES are experts in treatment and cure of Deafness, Catarrh and all forms of Nervous, Private and Complicated Chronic Diseases. WRITE IF YOU LIVE OUT OF TOWN.

COMPLICATED CATARRH.

Mrs. T. Bryan, who lives at 1311 E. Fifteenth st., Los Angeles, says: "I have had catarrh for fifteen (15) years. At times I was greatly distressed with my nose stopping up, and I had to hawk and spit, and there was a continual dropping into the throat. I had roaring in my ears and at times I was almost deaf. Seven (7) years ago my stomach became affected, and I was greatly distressed in that way. My food would not digest, and I became a nervous wreck, so much so that I could not sleep at nights. I read Drs. Shores & Shores' advertisement about curing catarrh and chronic ailments, so I concluded to consult them. They seemed to understand my trouble and I commenced taking their treatment, and now I am happy to state that my catarrh and stomach trouble is cured, my hearing is restored and I sleep as sound as a baby. If anyone seeking a cure will call on me, I will gladly verify this statement and tell them how Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment cures.
(Signed) "MRS. T. BRYAN."

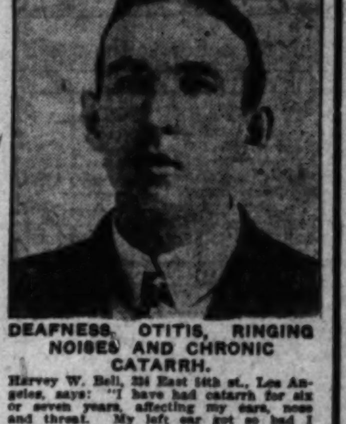
READ THE TESTIMONIALS OF YOUR FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS, THEN COME AND SEE THE DOCTORS WHO CURE.

START RIGHT—YOU MAY NOT HAVE A SECOND CHANCE.

Sick people should remember that a mistake in selecting their physicians cannot be reckoned by the MONEY LOSS ALONE—for in serious ailments if a mistake is made there may be no time to RECTIFY THE ERROR.

Disease does not wait—and people who try first one doctor and then another—always concluding that if one doctor fails they can still secure another—must remember THEY MAY NEVER HAVE THE SECOND CHANCE—and should be sure the FIRST TIME that the physician selected is the most competent and is the most successful doctor, regardless of his charges.



DEAFNESS, OTITIS, RINGING NOISES AND CHRONIC CATARRH.

Harvey W. Bell, 334 East 54th st., Los Angeles, says: "I have had catarrh for six or seven years, affecting my ears, nose and throat. My left ear got so bad I could not hear an ordinary conversation out of it, and it discharged all the time and I had ringing noises in my ears. My nose would also stop up until I could not breathe through it. Would also hawk and spit, especially in the morning. This was my condition when I came to Drs. Shores & Shores just two months ago. In two weeks this discharge from my ear stopped and the ringing in my ears has ceased; my LOST HEARING HAS BEEN RESTORED. I now breathe good through my nose, and my catarrh is better in every way. I had tried other treatment without benefit. Drs. Shores' treatment helped me from the first, and I feel that the afflicted with catarrh, deafness and ringing in the ears ought to know about Drs. Shores' great skill, for they have done wonders for me. Any one doubting this testimonial is at perfect liberty to call on me, and I will gladly verify the truthfulness of this testimonial.
(Signed) "HARVEY W. BELL."

How to Be Better Looking

Ugly teeth will mar the most beautiful face. A winsome smile is one of woman's greatest charms. Bad teeth will make repulsive the most attractive face or the most winsome smile.

Every one can have beautiful, natural looking teeth—teeth that will make attractive the plainest personality. Our ALVEOLAR METHOD OF DENTISTRY accomplishes this. It is not building up a row of false teeth upon a plate that is uncomfortable in the mouth, but it is the building into the jaw itself, with the aid of two or more natural teeth in each jaw, a new set of teeth almost as strong as the best natural ones, yet there is no boring or cutting or surgical operation in the whole process. It is practically painless.

Our ALVEOLAR METHOD OF DENTISTRY is the completed investigation of all that relates to scientific dentistry. When we began business some five years ago people doubted our ability to replace missing teeth, to make firm loose ones, and sound, decayed ones. We use no plates or ordinary bridge work, but a method of our own which we control exclusively. Our assistants are experts in all branches of scientific dentistry.

In the construction of the teeth that we build into your jaw we follow as closely as possible the lines of the most perfect teeth, so that it is difficult to distinguish between the natural teeth and the teeth we put in place of the missing ones.

Our charge is no higher than that of any good dentist. THE ALVEOLAR METHOD OF TREATMENT is far in advance of ordinary dentistry. We have prepared a book that tells you all about it. We will mail it free of charge. We want you to have your teeth examined. An examination costs you nothing. If your teeth need attention they should have it at once. Delay is expensive and often dangerous. Every man, woman and child should have strong, beautiful natural looking teeth. Our ALVEOLAR METHOD OF DENTISTRY makes it possible for every one to have attractive teeth. Thousands of people have been treated by us, and we can show you letters from all over the Pacific Coast. Write or call today. Send for our booklet.

BREVITIES.

Not every lady is willing, or can afford, to pay fancy prices for her millinery work, and, besides, it is not necessary to do so, even for the very best, if they only knew how. This question is explained by Mrs. Kruseman, milliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich (four blocks west of Figueroa,) who makes only to order, and has consequently very small expenses, as she has no display to make and neither has the tremendous loss of spoiled materials. Mrs. Kruseman guarantees perfect satisfaction. Ladies ordering do not run any risk, but will have only advantages. As an example, the low expenses enable Mrs. Kruseman to use the finest Parisian materials, even for medium-priced hats, giving them the rich appearance of expensive headwear. Mrs. Kruseman gives retrimming and work of own materials the same careful attention, thus making the results surprising, and always brings great admiration of her many customers.

Remember the slogan: "Buy and Boost Home Products." For daily references, see page 9, Part II, of The Times, containing list of wide-awake manufacturers, under the heading "Made in Southern California." You will find there are manufacturers of necessities and luxuries here—manufacturers of things to eat and drink—things for the home, the factory, the office and the farm. Buy them! Try them! There are none better. Buy and Boost, and keep your money at home where it will do you and yours the most good!

Times' Cook Book No. 3 ready today, and until the edition is exhausted, is placed on sale the largest, most elaborate and comprehensive cook book of the series issued by The Times. SUES WAR SECRETARY.

LONDON, March 27.—H. C. Woods, a former lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards, who was removed from the army over a year ago, after he had refused to resign when invited to do so, has thrown a bomb into army ranks by bringing suit against War Secretary Haldane and other members of the army council, claiming $375,000 damages. Woods claimed that the council acted unconstitutionally.

Why Is the "Unique" Unique

Because the styles, the models, the colorings, the workmanship every feature of "Unique" garments is distinctive, different superior to garments sold anywhere else in Los Angeles. ¶ T "Unique" maintains in New York City a resident buyer w lives in an atmosphere where new ideas, new styles are continu being created. And this is why our garments are different, and exclusive and unique. ¶ We want every woman in Los Angeles to understand that while the "Unique" does carry a very large line of the most beautiful garments to be found in this country—that we also carry a large assortment of medium priced garments. ¶ These medium priced garments are selected by our buyer with the same thoughtful consideration for every detail as are the highest priced garments. ¶ There is a dash of smartness, of real character in the "Unique's" medium priced garments that can only be found in the garments of such a specialty house as the "Unique," whose whole aim is to show the classiest styles New York City affords. ¶ Our fitting department is under the direction of the highest class fitters that can be found in any of the large Eastern cities. We have recently secured the services of Mme. Finet, late of Mme. Louise, Fifth Avenue, New York. Associated with her are Miss MacIntyre, Miss Anderson and Miss Townsend. We publish a letter received from our New York buyer this week, which we believe, will interest the women of Los Angeles.

New York City, March 20, 1909.
Unique Cloak & Suit House,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: I am sending you by expres this week, some of the classiest garments that I have seen in New York this season. You will find some entirely new models in low neck gowns which are very much in vogue now for theater wear—especially the blacks, also one in the new shade, "Mauton."

I am also sending some very smart coat dresses in white, natural, blue and pongees. These are "the thing" on the Avenue, and are worn by the best dressers here.

You will also find some smart models in white serge suits, the wide wale as well as the narrow—and some pretty linen dresses in new shades with Dutch necks, which are so popular.

I also picked up a few new models in tailored suits, and pretty foulard dresses, with high as well as Dutch necks—and a few beautiful rajah suits in naturals, black and white shades. Yours very truly,

J. J. F.

Specials for Monday

How to Raise Six Burros,
as Dr. Hickman of Indiana, who wrote to the Chief of Police for a supply, seems to view the subject.

THE troubles of the Chief of Police are many. He is called upon every day to pass judgment on scores of family rows and political arguments. If a man in Podunk wants to know the population of New York, he generally writes to the Chief of Police for the information. If a magnate in Honduras wants a couple of hundred canary bird tongues to serve at a select banquet, he writes to the Chief of Police, and asks him to get them for him. The wisdom of Solomon was childish compared with that expected of the Chief of Police.

The oddest letter ever received by Chief Broadhead came yesterday. It was from Dr. T. L. Hickman, of Bloomington, Ind., who is the proprietor of a rest resort. All he wanted was six burros from the herds he thinks roam about Spring street and Broadway and feast on the grass in Central Park.

"Dear Chief—Can you kindly get me six burros between the ages of 4 and 5 years, as nearly matched in color and size as possible," wrote the doctor.

Broadhead has been pondering over the letter and Secretary Lyle Pendegast, always suspicious of written documents, has been taking the clauses apart to see whether they contain a secret code to the Mexican anarchists. He feared at one time that it might be a black hand epistle.

But the Chief has another and more mournful view of the letter. When a man writes to him, asking him to pick out six little donkeys, it appears to be a "roast" on the police department. None of the local officers will do. They cannot fit the age limit and besides, their ears are not long enough.

The Chief as yet has taken no action. He might send Pautz and a squad of trusty officers to search the jungles near Fourth street and Broadway, or gum shoe through the secret passageways beneath the Douglas block or the Mason Operahouse. He might put a squad of reserves on duty in the mountainous region near Jkn's Chowder House, or he might grow a crop of burros and have them ready for reaping at harvest time.

The eminent physician of Indiana probably pictures Los Angeles as a fierce and woolly town, with the Chief of Police clad in chaps and long mustaches. He seems to imagine that burros graze on cactus on Main street, while Gila monsters, centipedes and tarantulas fight in the gutters and extremely annoy the monte and faro players. He probably can see the great white prairie schooners rolling in from the dusty plain and hear the sound of the chanting Indians as they go through the stately evolutions of the Ghost dance.

The "Doc" will probably be surprised to learn that the police department has stamped stationery and that the reply will not be written in Zuni, or Navajo hieroglyphics. And his respect will be increased when he finds that we have stamps with paste on the back so that they can be put on letters, just as is done "back in Bloomington."

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

(The Times freely publishes the views of correspondents without holding itself responsible for writers' opinions. Be brief, write plainly, state clearly. The space of 250 words, on the average, is sufficient for the point. Well-written letters are liable to be declined merely on account of their length.)

The Dollar Mark and the Women.

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The writer is not the first being who has washed his hair and can do nothing with it, neither is he the first to declare the expression, "The pen is mightier than the sword," sophistry.

But with all due respect to the power of the press, the Dollar Mark has been its own advertiser. When I, as a habitual theatergoer, dropped in at one of the first performances, I confess that press quotations at the door, suggested an effusion of Laura Jean Libby, or the charitable comment on the first amateur effort of Charles A. Hoyt. The press has warmed up, has given Mr. Broadhurst the glad hand. The business men have taken time to say it's immense, the tailor-made woman has declared it superb. In fact, everybody is satisfied except the dear little peroxide, pansy-eyed divinity, who declares that Mr. Broadhurst knows nothing about the tender art, that some of his gold should be molded into a key—to the human heart.

It is all very well to say that a successful play can be written without a love interest. Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde had a run but no other playwright took it as a model.

There is no denying that women support the theaters and the playwright must cater to them.

There! I have taken your ground, my dear BUT——

Mr. Broadhurst's intent is to protect the domestic hearth as much as the welfare of the people. He wants to show you that King Midas has robbed you of your birthright, the right to dream, in the same way that he has robbed men of their honor and the people of their liberty. Trace its affect upon Gresham.

If Gresham had done his love making in the first act, before he was touched by the grip of the business world, if he had stood within the sight and sound of the waterfall, with a touch of moonlight and the scent of orange trees, I haven't a doubt that his role as a lover would have thrilled your soul with joy ecstatic. Methinks I can hear him calling her his onliest only tootsy-wootsy, and declaring her the queen for whom the stars delight to shine! I believe he would only have paused to telegraph his application for membership into "The Great-Divide Pressing Club;" that the president's hand after a reception to the D.A.R. would have possessed the virility and alertness of Samson when compared to Mr. Gresham's osculatory organs after the glorious affirmative.

But after two years in the thick and fight of the world, love-making, too, entered into his life, where brevity is the soul of commercialism. He asked her, she said yes, why should he delay telling her what she knew already when his bank was in danger.

You complain that Chandler and his wife were too apathetic over their reconciliation. A great many men kiss their wives every day from habit, so when the baby gets its first tooth, or he wins the lawsuit over the six inches of his garden boundary line, it comes in the natural order of things for him to indulge in undue and unsanitary osculation. But, when husband and wife have lived apart in spirit, a sudden change of events does not precipitate a domestic revolution. The certain, shy reserve that has grown up is not instantly broken down.

And so, my dear, it is not Mr. Broadhurst, but the spirit of the time that is killing romance. All the world that once loved a lover is transferring its affections to Moloch.

Mr. Broadhurst, the Dollar Mark is ALL RIGHT. Here's to you!

140,000 Acres of the
along the Colorado River Delta in Southeastern California and Southwestern Arizona.

Irrigation has opened up an era of wonderful agricultural development in these rich valleys. Prosperous farming communities, bustling towns, green fields, thriving vineyards and orchards have sprung up as if by magic in this brief space of time. The arid and unproductive regions of but a few short years ago have been suddenly transformed into fields of surprising fertility. Many have made fortunes as a result of this sudden transformation and the increased land values. The country is still in its first stage of development, and its possibilities are almost unlimited. President Roosevelt says these lands should be worth $500 to $1500 per acre under a high state of cultivation.

I have 10, 20, 40 and 80 acre and large tracts at $25.00 per acre up. Easy terms.

The ideal locality of intensive farming on small tracts.
Land is cheap, water plentiful and permanent.

MINES AND MINING—Activities in the Ore Districts of the Great Southw

ARIZONA.

VICKSBURG IS STILL GOAL.

Too Soon to Be Sure, Looks Permanent.

Surface Indications Point to Deep Ore Bodies.

Returned Miners All Speak Well of Find.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 26.—Interest in the gold strike near Vicksburg is still keen, not at all dampened by the uniformly good reports of the many who have been on the ground and returned. One of the best descriptions of the find is that by J. W. Milnes of Prescott, who says:

"That this big find is in the nature of a kidney deposit, occuring in seams, is self-evident but not a practical mining man who has inspected the property has dared to assert that it is not permanent. There has not been a ten-foot hole sunk in this particular district, and hence there is only the formation upon which to base an opinion as to the continuity of the ore deposit. It is the general opinion that a well-defined ore body will be found with depth, for it should be stated that the dazzling mineral wealth which has been uncovered was taken from a hole about four feet wide and the same in depth. Not even the most optimistic believes that these phenomenal values will continue, assuming that the vein exists, but all agree that if the stuff is developed, that the mine will be a crackerjack. It is more than likely that the character of the ore will change into a sulphide, and it is probable that with good depth, it will turn into copper. These predictions are of course based upon only observation of surface indications and not even the most skilled of experts can venture even an approximately reliable opinion as to the future until there is some development in the district."

The original strike, which has been bonded to David Shear and a number of Phoenix men, through D. W. Hall, is held by a close corporation. The Salome-Bonanza Mines Company and several other incorporations have been made on the basis of adjoining claims and money is being gathered in Phoenix for proper development of the ground.

TWO TRAINS NEEDED.

Hundreds of prospectors are traveling into the region and the additional business has become so heavy that the Santa Fé company is considering the advisability of putting a second train on the Arizona and California line, getting out of Wickenburg in the morning and returning at night. There is keen rivalry between Vicksburg, Salome, Wenden and Bouse as the starting point for the mines. Vicksburg is nearest, but has not as good accommodation for travelers as the other and larger stations.

Something of a camp has been started already at the Desert mine, a couple of miles from the discovery, which has become the point first aimed at by prospectors and from which most of the prospecting is being done. This camp is favored by a well, with an abundant supply of good water. It has about twenty houses and tents already and a large number of other tents are being put up for the crowds that are coming. Most of the travelers are experienced in such matters and bring their own bedding and food.

Walter H. Weed, a well-known geologist, spent several days of last week in the district around Parker and Bouse, investigating on behalf of the Lewissohns, who lately purchased the Kelvin-Calumet group of copper mines near Ray, to be added to their present holdings in that locality, incorporated as the Ray Central Mines Company. This transfer was made for an announced consideration of $2,000,000 but in that, it is understood, is embraced a considerable quantity of stock in the new corporation. One item of the transfer contract is said to be that the Lewissohn brothers are to spend $310,000 on development of the mine this year and that, if the prospecting be satisfactory, $1,600,000 will be supplied for additional development and to build a large concentrator. When all this has been done, the contract will have been fulfilled and the consolidation will become a reality. The Lewissohns also have a controlling interest in the Miami mines near Globe, where millions of tons of low-grade copper have been blocked and where a concentrator of 3000 tons daily capacity is to be built this year at the end of a six-mile spur now under construction from the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern Railroad.

KELVIN AND GLOBE.

At Ray, 370 men are employed by the Ray Consolidated Company getting out about 500 tons of ore a day for the company's concentrating mill at Kelvin. A survey is in progress for the change of the company's road to Kelvin to a broad gauge.

The well-known Gibson copper mine near Globe is reported to have been sold in Boston for about $450,000, with about $100,000 advance payment. The mine is notable for its high-grade sulphides, with which the Old Dominion smelter for several years has been supplied with a large proportion of its sulphide flux. The higher grade ores above the 400-foot level are said to be fairly well worked out, but development at depth shows a large quantity of lower-grades running about 6 per cent. copper. In a winze last week, however, was struck a magnificent body of chalcopyrite, running from 25 to 35 per cent. in copper. This body, about five feet wide, had been penetrated for about fifteen feet in new ground 500 feet from the working shaft.

SIMILAR STRIKE.

Near Steamboat Springs, a short distance from Troy, Pinal county, J. H. Bates and Alex Sears have found gold ore very similar to that of the bonanza near Vicksburg. The rock is heavily oxidized and is extremely rich in free gold. The exact location has been kept a secret thus far, but one of the finders states that it comes from a well-defined ledge, in which high values have been found in several places widely separated. For years it has been known that an extremely rich gold ledge exists in that vicinity. Nearly thirty years ago a soldier scouting through that country brought into San Carlos a chunk of wonderfully rich gold ore, but was never able to locate the vein from which he broke it. Rich float has been picked up in the neighborhood of Troy and there are several very rich placer claims from which gold has been obtained by dry washing, but the mother lode of the float has never been found.

On the Ben Hur mine, thirty miles north of Phoenix, the main ledge has been struck by a tunnel at the distance of 360 feet from its mouth. The ledge has been cut for ten feet or more and the values have been found very satisfactory, even richer than upon the surface.

The O. T. Smith copper mine near Dragoon station on the Southern Pacific has been transferred to the Empire Copper Company, which will put in a gasoline hoist of forty-horse power. This mine was bonded to a San Francisco company two years ago for $70,000, but the option was forfeited after $1500 had been paid.

Sylvanite Camp, in the southwestern corner of New Mexico, seems to have settled down to steady production and development, following the boom that started over its first rich surface production. Several sales have been made by the original locators at moderate prices to capitalists, who will develop the mines. Several carloads a day are being shipped, values $25 to $50. A number of the properties are being consolidated under one management, and it is probable that suitable reduction works will be built this year.

ZINC IN MOHAVE.

The Golconda mine at Union Pass, fifteen miles north of Kingman, is a fine example of how character of ores may change with depth. It was valuable property when worked at shallow depth, producing gold and silver with a lead base, a combination very common in that locality. At greater depth the owners were grieved at running into zinc in such proportions that the ore became too base for ordinary reduction plants. Now it is worked mainly for zinc, with gold, silver and lead as by-products. The mine has been developed only to a depth of 300 feet, but from the main shaft sixty carloads have been shipped to the American Metals Company at Iola, Kan., running about 47 per cent. zinc and valued at $450 each. The ore comes from a vein with maximum width of four feet. The average values are considerably less than that of the shipping ore, but a concentrator is to be built on the property at once. This mine is by no means alone as a zinc producer, and it is probable that in the future this unusual product will represent much of the wealth taken from the hills of Northwestern Arizona.

RICH TURQUOISE.

Another extraordinary product of Mohave county is turquoise, coming from a small district near Mineral Park, twenty-five miles north of Kingman, from which comes 80 per cent. of the turquoise mined in the United States. The deposits were worked by the prehistoric races and by the more modern Indians, the stone cut out by means of stone hatchets, which are found all over the diggings. The mining is done in open cuts, the ore being gotten out by hand in order to avoid injuring the stone by blasting. More than a dozen turquoise mines are being operated, shipments mainly being to New York, where the Tiffany Company alone is willing to take the entire output. The quality varies broadly, the highest price being paid for the pure dark blue stones, though much of the income is derived from the sale of what is called the matrix.

Two thousand tons of freight will arrive in Kingman within the next two months for the Gold Road mines, mainly consisting of new machinery for the forty-stamp mill, with electric hoists and pumps. The new equipment will cost about $200,000. It will be operated by electricity from the new power-house at Kingman.

NEW RICH STRIKE.

FORTY MILES OF TUCSON.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 24.—News of a strike of a rich vein of gold ore on the Columbia, owned by Dr. J. N. Ball, forty miles south of Tucson, has caused a rush of prospectors to the Arivaca country. The discovery was made while assessment work was being done at the mine. Samples of the ore showing free gold were brought to Tucson, and assayed $40,000.

The Alamo property, in the Catalina foothills, about fifteen miles north of Tucson, was acquired this week by W. H. Sterling, a New York capitalist. It was owned by Maud G. Thomas and James Esthan of Tucson. Sterling announced that a double compartment shaft will be sunk without delay, to 500 feet, and drifts and crosscuts run to explore thoroughly the property.

It has been found that the 700-foot level strike in the mines of the Tombstone Consolidated at Tombstone, extends below the 800-foot level, and it is believed to go below the 1000, to which depth the shaft has already been sunk, and from which a crosscut will be made later. This vein was struck 200 feet below the water level.

This company is sinking a new shaft at the Silver Plume mine. From the Silver Thread ore is being taken, which is treated at the concentrating plant. Regular shipments are made to the company's smelter at Sasco and also to the El Paso smelters. The mammoth pumps are taking 5,000,000 gallons of water out every twenty-four hours, allowing further exploration.

Regular shipments are being made to the El Paso smelter from the Harshel property.

Supplies and machinery for developing the Tombstone Gold, Silver and Copper property have been ordered, and extensive development will be begun within a short time.

President E. T. Davis of the Twin Buttes Mining and Smelting Company, operating the Twin Buttes property, has arrived here from Philadelphia, and will spend some time at the mine overseeing operations. Before he returns to the East a location for a big new shaft will be decided upon as the ore body is pitching away from the present shaft on the lower levels. President Davis stated that the shipments to the El Paso smelters would be increased if it were possible to secure cars. He says the Twin Buttes will purchase its own rolling stock if the shortage continues long.

C. C. Prindle of Minneapolis, president of the Helvetia Copper Company, is at present at Helvetia camp. New pumps have been received, which will be placed at the Copper World shaft to allow of further development. Excellent ore was being encountered at the 400-foot level when a flow of water necessitated a cessation of operations until big pumps could be installed. The Helvetia is shipping between 250 and 400 tons weekly to the Globe smelters. This is transported to Vails station, on the Southern Pacific, by wagon. A traction engine has been tried as a substitute for teams in hauling the ore trains, but it has not been successful. The Helvetia is one of the largest operators in Pima county, and has been carrying on its development operations on a large scale for several years. In that time a great quantity of ore has been shipped to the smelters. The Isle Royale, its deepest shaft, is down 1200 feet.

The Esperanza Mining Company has petitioned the county for a new road to its mines, which will lessen the distance to the Arivaca and Oro Blanco district, about twenty miles. The Esperanza is making weekly shipments, the product being hauled by wagon to the Twin Buttes Railroad.

Johnson Camp is continuing its activity. At the Black Prince mine, the main shaft is being sunk steadily. It is understood that no crosscutting will be done until a depth of 800 or 1000 feet is reached. Work is continuing steadily on the Mammoth property, near by.

Timbering the main shaft on the Johnson Copper Company property has been completed. Mining timbers arrived this week for the timbering of the Mayflower shaft.

Secretary H. H. Marrow of the Empire Copper Company, who resides in Los Angeles, paid a visit to the property last week. The company is increasing its holdings and arrangements have been made to take over the Smith property at Dragoon. It is reported that the force at the Keystone mine will be increased on the arrival of President Miller from the East.

Two million dollars is said to be the price paid by the Ray Central Company for the Kelvin-Calumet properties near Kelvin. The Ray Central company has among its stockholders Adolph and Albert Lewisohn, the big copper mine operators of New York. The Kelvin-Calumet company was formed in 1905, and was a consolidation of the Big Lead and the Calumet companies. It is said that an appropriation of $300,000 has been made for the development of the properties.

A branch of the American Mining Congress has been formed in Globe. The officers are all prominent mining men in that district, viz: President, J. D. Coplen; first vice-president, F. A. Woodward; second vice-president, M. E. McCarthy; treasurer, A. G. Smith; secretary, J. K. Satchell; directors, W. W. Woodson, T. W. Hamilton, A. G. Smith, J. D. Coplen, Louis A. Wright, M. E. Phillips, R. B. Hegardt.

SEVEN TROUGHS.

THREE LEASES YIELD VALUES.

SEVENTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN CLEAN-UP.

English-George Huntington Mill Proves Such a Success That the Seven Troughs Company Contemplates Installing One—Operations in District.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MAZUMA (Seven Troughs District.) March 25.—Three leases of the district during the past week yielded approximately $17,000. These were the Harris, the Reagan and the English-George of Badger Hill. The week before it was the turn of the Wihuja lease of the Coalition, the product of which in the Kindergarten mill, was a return of sixty-one tons netting $7500.

The cleanup of the initial run from the Harris lease was made today, between 100 and 150 tons, and these were sorted to run close to $50 a ton. It was a test, and it was found that there was more left in the tailings than in any previous run through the mill. The result, however, was satisfactory to the management of the lease and to Manager Friedman of the Coalition, and a large owner in the lease, and the Fairview on which claim the lease is located. The ore that has proved rebellious can be easily handled by the mill of the London syndicate, as soon as it is in operation.

Following the Harris cleanup, there will be another shipment to the Kindergarten mill from the Wihuja lease. This run of the Wihuja promises to be the richest which has yet gone through the mill from the pet possession of the Coalition. In the Wihuja they are down to the 375-foot level, where they are stoping and drifting on two different shoots. Both shoots yield the choicest kind of high grade, and the ordinary ore being taken out is the richest which has yet been found in the Wihuja. The further they get into the shoots the better the showing. The grade is broken down on canvas and shipped separately, either to the mint or to the government assay offices.

The Reagan cleanup in the Mazuma Hills mill took place on Saturday, and the character of the ore was similar to that of the Harris. For something over 100 tons, the returns were a little better than $6000. This is the Reagan's low grade ore, the high grade being treated similarly to that of the Wihuja.

The Huntington mill on Badger Hill is proving a most remarkably successful investment for the owners of the English-George lease. The cleanup for the preceding ten days was made also on Saturday, and sixty-five pounds of amalgam netted about $4000. This with the $6000 return from the Reagan and the $7000 from the Harris made up the returns of $17,000. The ore of Badger Hill goes anywhere from $13 to $20 a ton, and they are shoveling it into the mill from the upper tunnel and converting the rock into the coin of the realm like the rolls coming through a sausage machine. So great has been the success of the Badger Hill mill that the Seven Troughs Company, owning the Fairview claim, it going to install a Huntington on its ground, to handle the lower grade of the Fairview as well as of the Harris lease, of which there has been developed quite a deal.

THE LONDON MILL.

The mill of the London syndicate is the scene of remarkable activity, for the plant is being rushed to completion as fast as the machinery arrives, a small army of workmen being employed. The last big piece to come will be the tube mill, which was shipped from San Francisco on the 20th and which is expected within a week at the latest. The sampler is being installed, the finishing strokes are being put on the batteries, and the engines are nearly completed.

The Oliver filter is being put in under the direction of Carl B. Schwartze, expert cyanide man of the big North Star mine of Grass Valley, who has been here for a week past. In this respect, all the individual work on the mill has been supervised by the very best men who could be obtained, and there has not been the slightest detail overlooked in that regard.

The Kindergarten vein on the Coalition will be cut by the shaft before the end of the week, and then there will be big doings on the Coalition. The cutting of the vein means the connecting of the shaft with the underground workings. The latter consist of drifts, and tunnels which have proved the vein for a depth of 300 feet, and the amount of exploration that was done took out in the neighborhood of 1000 tons at an average value of $56. In this were some of the highest grade specimens in the district. After the vein had been proved to this extent, it was determined to sink a double compartment shaft and go after the ore in true miner fashion. As soon as the vein is cut a larger number of men will be put to work, and the mine opened wide. This means that the Kindergarten will be soon again in the ranks of the shippers, and that the Coalition will be well on the road to the dividend paying stage.

COMPANIES IN A SINGLE MILL.

EXTENSION AND WEST END TO USE FORTY STAMPS.

Properties in Big Camp Continue Development at Fast Gait—Tonopah Company Says It Is Not Selling Its Railroad, But Has Money on Hand for Dividend.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) March 26.—Rumors of the erection of one or more mills that have been circulated for months have finally resolved themselves into the bald fact that the Tonopah Extension and the West End are to combine in the construction of a forty-stamp mill, an exact replica of the Montana-Tonopah plant, with improvements up to date. This information is vouched for by Dennis Searles, secretary of the West End and also secretary to "Borax" Smith, president of the company, and B. F. Edwards, vice-president of the same company, both of whom came here for the purpose of closing contracts. In explaning their visit they said: "We have decided not to gouge the property and for that purpose have been limiting the output to shipping grade. Our aim is to get as much mill ore in sight as possible and our superintendent says we have as much tonnage in sight as the Tonopah Extension. We have not fully concluded, but our plans contemplate a mill for joint use. We have a five-years run blocked and active construction will begin in the next sixty days.

WORK IS FAST.

Keeping up its fast gait, the Tonopah-Belmont comes to the front this week with a total of 213½ feet of new ground broken, all of which was done on the thousand and eleven hundred levels. While the result of the week's work has not furnished any particular new development, it has been the means of exposing a vast tonnage of ore in sight and has proven the ore bodies to be stronger with every foot of work done. The Occidental vein, which faulted some time ago on the 1000-foot level, has been picked up west of the fault and shows some good milling ore of an average width of twenty inches.

Excellent progress is being made in the MacNamara shaft, which is going down at the rate of four feet a day, last week's report shewing a gain of exactly twenty-eight, so the 800 point should be reached within the next six weeks, then the company will begin to do some extensive prospecting. The depth will also take the shaft through the quartz that was revealed some time ago by the diamond drill, and which induced the management to send the shaft down. The work done is constantly adding to the known extent of the ore bodies and keeps pace with the extraction, which runs between 250 and 300 tons per week. During the week the company sent out 200 tons to the Montana mill, which completes its contract with that company.

In the Mizpah shaft of the Tonopah Mining Company everything is progressing like clock work. The pump and machinery installed last week are giving perfect satisfaction and the shaft is going down three feet a day. No trouble is experienced with the water, which is coming in at the rate of twenty-five gallons a minute, as the pumps have no difficulty in handling the flow.

WILL NOT SELL ROAD.

The Tonopah management denies that there is any intention of selling the Tonopah and Goldfield Railroad, which was reported from Philadelphia. The treasury is full to overflowing, as the reserve amounts to something over $1,000,000, with only one dividend maturing next month, calling for $250,000. This strengthens the suspicion that there will be an extra dividend. This company occupies a peculiar position in the mining field. While it is known as a silver mine, the quartz carries so much gold that the white metal actually costs the company nothing, as the gold pays the entire cost of extraction. Then on the other hand, the economies adopted by the management have more than offset the depreciation in the price of silver.

EXAGGERATED.

PIONEER MEN TOO TALKATIVE.

OWNERS SAY LEASERS' STORIES ARE VERY WILD.

Statement That Ore Bodies Are Ahead of Those of the Mohawk, Combination or Comstock Taken With Grain of Salt—Keane Wonder Mill Does Well.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RHYOLITE (Nev.) March 26.—The 100-ton cyanide plant of the Keane Wonder mill was put into commission on March 18. It consists of six big leaching and eight regulation tanks and is depended on for a production of between $8000 and $10,000 per month. A brick of bullion weighing 300 ounces was brought in by Homer Wilson, the result of a partial clean-up of the chop block. The plates are catching at the rate of $350 per day. The improvement completed means a practical doubling of the production from this time forward. There is an accumulation of 20,000 tons impounded in the tailings pond which will enable the cyanide plant to keep busy for one year. It is planned to have the present mill of twenty stamps doubled to keep up with the cynaide tonnage, but for the present the output will keep close to $20,000 per month. The mine shows no sensational changes of late except that there is a bigger quantity of ore exposed than ever. All parts of the works are furnishing milling material. On the Keane Wonder proper the ore supply comes from points 800 feet apart and abundantly at intervals between these lenses.

LEASERS' IMAGINATION.

The exploiting of the ore body of the Pioneer lease continues to be the main feature, but the allegations of the leasers are said to be tinctured with some vivid imagination. The statements circulated to the effect that the ore body was larger and richer than the Mohawk or Combination and equal in magnitude to the old Comstock is taken with some allowance even by the owners, who are said to have expressed themselves very strongly about the methods of the leasers in exaggerating the conditions.

The leasers state that the crosscut on the 210 level was in yesterday thirty-three feet in ore without any sight of the second wall appearing. The big hoist has arrived and also the compressor and a thirty-three-foot gallows frame is in course of erection. Two cars of ore were sent out during the week via Goldfield. Frank A. Keith, the manager, returned from San Francisco yesterday and says positively that the shaft will not be sent down below the 210 level and that with the installation of power drills the company will begin making a record for shipping. It is hoped to have the drills ready by the first of April and a mammoth production may be looked for.

The Mayflower mill has been running in excellent shape for two weeks treating on an average of ten tons a day, which probably runs at the rate of $50 per ton. The plates make a saving of over half that amount. A night shift has been put on temporarily in the mine to push development.

The Homestake bi-monthly clean-up, which was delayed a few days, was made yesterday and netted the company $12,000, making the estimated production of the district $51,000 for the week.

The Little Lees controversy is growing in interest and eminent counsel from Los Angeles have been engaged to look after the interests of the present owners. It is impossible to outline the facts in the controversy, but, according to the plaintiff, the ground was jumped by the defendant, while, according to the other side, their location was legitimate.

RAWHIDE.

LEASERS WIN RICHES AGAIN.

ONE HUSTLED SUPPLIES WHILE OTHER MINED.

Bridges and Danlies, the Latest Pair Working on Nothing to Get Rock That Contains a Fortune and Many Others Are Getting Fine Returns for Their Work.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RAWHIDE (Nev.) March 25.—The latest event is the strike by Bridges and Danlies, leasing on the estate of Bethania Mines, Inc. A stringer was followed from the surface, and at a depth of sixteen feet the ore widened to eighteen inches. The fortunate leasers are sacking nearly a ton a day that will run very close to $200, plentifully sprinkled with free gold, and some beautiful specimens have been taken out.

This, following closely on the big strike made ten days ago by the Grutt Balloon Hill, again illustrates the "shoe-string" leaser. Probably none in camp were running on so close a margin as these plucky men. While one was rustling grub and powder the other plodded along the best he could until these essentials were brought in by his partner, then both would put in long, hard hours prospecting the ground they were privileged to operate on. Now that they have struck it rich many eager hands are extended to them with offers of assistance, but it is needless to say that all are declined with thanks and a grin.

In passing, it is interesting to note that every leaser on Bethania Mines estate is working in ore ranging from high-grade shipping to high-grade milling ore. The lease taken just a week ago by the law firm of Stevens, Shelton & Van Pelt encountered the ore for which their tunnel was headed. Fine pannings were obtained all over the breast of the tunnel this week. The Rawhide Queen Bethania Mining Company's lease is into the rich ore bigger than ever. Recent assays show the entire breast of the drift along the big vein to exceed $30 per ton. Ten inches on the foot wall run well into the hundreds. Specimen hunters have been causing the management considerable annoyance the past week and only a favored few may secure access to the workings.

The Little Four lease on the same estate has its winze near the mouth of the adit tunnel down nearly thirty feet and is following the rich ore that the owners have been sacking almost from the surface.

The Gold Reef lease, also on the Bethania claim, just north of the Queen Bethania lease on the Bethania Mines estate has a full force working in good-grade milling ore. This company is under contract with the parent company to have a machine hoist in by April 15, in consideration of an extension of the lease to five years.

A machine hoist was this week installed by the Poor Boy Gold Mining Company. This lease is one of the most promising in the north end, and lies against the west side line of the Little Four and Queen Bethania leases.

The Grutt Balloon Hill lease continues sacking ore worth a dollar a pound. At least a thousand dollars a day is going into the sacks. Drifts are being run both north and south along the rich vein, and each face is in ore running from $500 to $2000. This lease has the earmarks of being one of the greatest high-grade producers ever discovered.

The Mint again came up for notice with a high-grade strike in the winze from the 300-foot level. This lease continues sending ore to the local mills. The management announces the result of the first clean-up made by the new Weiss mill on thirty tons of its ore. Out of this tonnage there was extracted amalgam worth $1080, showing an average value of $36 per ton. The Mint has twenty-five tons on its mill dump ready for the teams.

It is unofficially announced that the recent fifty-ton shipment by the Queen company from the old Kearns No. 2 workings netted $15,000, an average of $300 per ton. Shipments will be continued as fast as teams can be had.

The Jordan lease on the Queen Mascot estate is again in the limelight with a big strike of ruby silver. This lease has taken out many thousands of dollars' worth of high-grade silver-gold ore, and has always been one of the favored workings of the camp. There is on the mill dump 800 tons that run between $30 and $40, and the company is sacking half a ton of the high-grade daily.

Four new sets of leasers have started operations on Mascot No. 1 of the Queen Mascot, part of which estate adjoins that of the Bethania Mines on the south, and is very favorably located to catch its rich leads.

PROVEN AREA EXTENDS.

The proven area was extended this week nearly one-third of a mile to the south by a discovery of high-grade gold ore on the Lucky Strike claim. The credit for this discovery belongs to Mrs. Jewett, wife of a leaser on the same claim. Mrs. Jewett has long been prospecting the ground occupied by and close to her husband's lease. She would daily bring an apronful of likely-looking rock to their cabin and pan it in spare moments. One day this week her pan showed a heavy tail of gold. She shouted for her husband and showed him where the gold-bearing rock had been broken off. He immediately put a couple of shots into the ledge and exposed nearly four feet of beautiful quartz, liberally sprinkled with free gold. Mr. Jewett has been sacking the product as rapidly as he could take it out.

Visitors continue to hang around the Marigold lease like dogs waiting to be fed. All day long the dump is being scratched over, and the sign "Keep Away" has no deterring influence. The returns from the last ten-ton shipment have just been given as averaging $1191. Another ten-ton shipment goes next week.

The Grutt Hill Truitt lease, operating the block adjoining the Marigold with the same working shaft and hoisting plant, is sacking twenty sacks of high-grade shipping ore daily.

The Kearns No. 1 has 100 tons of high-grade milling ore on the dump awaiting teams.

The actual tonnage to the local mills weekly is 542 tons.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Calciferous Rock.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please let me know if this ore is zinc, silver or lead. It comes from Beaver county, Utah.

Yours truly, W. L. B.

ANSWER: The rock is calciferous, with low per cent. lead. Zinc and bismuth present. Not tested for silver.

Not Ores of Tungsten.

CALIENTE CREEK (Kern County) March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] You will find enclosed herewith two samples which I think is tungsten, and two of sediment, which, I wish you would tell me what they are; for I don't know, but think that they are also tungsten. Thanking you for your valuable information, I remain. Yours truly, D. M. T.

ANSWER: You forward two packages of samples. One package consists of: (1) A siliceous limestone with traces of boron present; (2) quartz and iron oxides; (3) same as 1; (4) porphyritic rock with pyrite (iron disulphide) sparingly in the mass.

The other package has two samples: No. 1 is porphyritic rock with pyrite and iron oxides; No. 2 is porphyritic (limestone present) and pyritic.

No Tungsten Values.

MILL CAMP (Chuckawalla Mountains) March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you two samples of rock from the Corn Springs mining district. I have been told that they carry tungsten. Please describe in your "In the Earth" columns what mineral they carry, if any, and greatly oblige.

Yours truly, W. B. McC.

ANSWER: No. 1 is sand (quartz) with magnetite and other iron oxides. No. 2 is quartzitic with magnetite, iron oxides, and biotite (black mica.)

Fluor Spar.

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Maybe this is rose quartz, found fifteen miles south of Tombstone. Please advise me of it through the "In the Earth." Yours truly, P. B.

Tungstic Acid Absent.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am enclosing sample of ore from a two-foot vein about twelve miles southeast of Hawthorne. I believe it is an ore of tungsten. Would you kindly advise me what the rock contains?

If you will look back you will find I am an old reader of The Times for the past fifteen years.

Would be glad to hear from you through "In the Earth."

Very respectfully, C. J. E.

ANSWER: Good for you! May you live to read The Times for many times fifteen years. The granular sample is quartzitic with limestone, feldspar, and limonitic iron oxides.

Indian War Paint.

INDIAN SPRINGS (Nev.) March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This sample is from a claim we located over the dry wash north of Lee. We take it to be Cinnabar. Will you please get your "In the Earth" man to let us know about it. There are many prospectors around here who think it is Cinnabar. Yours truly,

G. L. T. (Prospector.)

ANSWER: The sample is hematite (iron peroxide.) You do not refer to the two small colors of native gold in the mass. Better "look oud't a leetle," or you may miss some fairly good ore. There is no mercury (quicksilver) values present.

Porphyritic and Calcareous.

FREEMAN, March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed you will find four samples of rock from this district. No. 1—supposed to carry tungsten—is from a four-foot ledge. No. 2 is from a four-foot ledge. No. 3 is from a three-foot ledge showing a white matter—what is it? No. 4 I think is copper. Kindly answer in your "In the Earth" columns.

I am an old subscriber to your paper, and would like very much to have an answer.

Very truly yours, F. T. R.

ANSWER: It is, indeed, a pleasure to give you an answer: No. 1 is composed of limestone with zinc traces present, and carrying small garnet sparingly. No. 2 is a scoria, with iron oxides. No. 3 (white matter feldspar) is porphyritic rock with iron oxides. No. 4 is impure limestone. Tungstic acid is not present in any sample.

Correspondents will carefully note the following: When a rock or mineral "fizzes" violently in cold acids, rest assured that it carries no tungsten values.

Limestone Only.

LOS ANGELES, March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This white sample is from a ledge located eleven miles east of San Luis Obispo. My crude methods brings me to the result magnesite (?).

If it really is magnesite I believe it could be handled and sold at a profit.

Please state in your "In the Earth" columns whether it is a good grade, and oblige.

Yours truly, W. L. Y.

tion to Los Angeles and is said to be the first deposit of the kind found in California and one of the finest in the country. The railroad, they say, will open one of the best mineral countries in the west and render it tributary to Los Angeles. This country was generally located in the early days of Inyo county but many of the locations were allowed to lapse so that there is an abundance of prospecting ground for the man who is looking for an opportunity.

ANGELENO IN LUCK.

Douglas White, editor of the Arrowhead, was greeted with good news when he came to Goldfield with the San Pedro minstrels, for the first telegram that he opened was an announcement from Las Vegas, Nev., that his company, the Monte Cristo Mines Company, had made a very important strike. This is a zinc proposition that is said to rank higher than any of the best paying mines of Joplin, Mo., as the assays run on an average of 48 per cent. with the percentage increasing steadily with depth. Mr. White had no definite information about the strike but proposed to stop over at Las Vegas and visit the mine to satisfy himself of the values. If they are maintained as the present indications presage then the Monte Cristo will be one the world's wonders.

Wabuska is to be the smelting center for the Mason Valley, if all reports are confirmed. Dr. Norton, one of the county officers, returned from that district today with this statement. Contracts for the erection of the plant have been awarded, including a branch of the main line of the Southern Pacific which binds itself to have the road in operation by the last day of August. This will involve twelve miles of construction. All the copper properties in that section are active, especially the Ludwig, Mason Valley and Douglas companies. The Nevada Calumet strike has stimulated inquiries for claims in this section as the discovery was made in ground that was not supposed to carry good values.

The Florence mine and mill has occupied the center of the stage ever since Tom Lockhart, president of the company, declared that he would give $10,000 to the man who would prove the statement printed exclusively in The Times to the effect that the big mill had been built over an old stope and was so shaky that it was so impossible to keep the stamps going. Mr. Lockhart says that both the mill and mine are running in excellent shape and that all the criticism leveled at his management will not cause him to deviate an iota from his fixed policy of development and operation.

CALIFORNIA.

SILVER LAKE'S NEW DISTRICT.

SEVENTEEN-MILE POINT TO BE SCENE OF WORK.

Four Claims Are Sold for Twenty Thousand Dollars and Owners Will Be Busy at Once—Blue Bucket and Crackerjack Bonanza Making Good Showing—Ore Blocked.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SILVER LAKE (Cal.) March 26.—Recent events indicate that the rich mineral country surrounding Silver Lake, San Bernardino county, is about to receive the attention which the merits of the district have long deserved. Mining to a depth which will prove the country has at last been inaugurated by several strong companies, and will be prosecuted vigorously.

The operations of the Blue Bucket Company and the Bonanza Gold Mining Company, west of Silver Lake, in the Crackerjack and Red Pass sections, respectively, have received some mention. Both are well supplied with funds, have expended money judiciously, in proper machinery and equipment, and are steadily pushing development in excellent milling ore, a considerable amount of which is of shipping grade. It is the intention of both companies, however, to uncover and block large reserves of milling ore before erecting reduction works.

Two weeks ago there was closed a deal which will open a new camp tributary to Silver Lake, and the showings indicate that big operations will be justified. The Eaton group of four claims, belonging to Henry Ward and A. L. Buys, at "Seventeen-mile Point," about eleven miles east of the Tonopah and Tidewater Railroad, was purchased by J. L. Witney and associates of Los Angeles.

W. W. Hite, who has for nearly two years been quietly investigating the resources of the Tonopah and Tidewater country, represented the owners in the transaction. After a thorough examination and sampling of the property by Mr. Witney, who is a practical miner, as well as an engineer of wide experience, the transfer was made without any question as to the owners' price of $20,000. The property has been opened with two shafts, 80 and 100 feet deep, with crosscuts and drifts of about 100 feet. Four feet of free-milling gold, running better than $20, is exposed in the drift, and higher values in other parts. While this is not a story of "picture rock," it is looked upon by those entitled to judge as a real mining proposition, which will justify a reduction plant for permanent work. Mr. Witney has already shipped machinery to his property, and 200 feet more of sinking has been started.

There are other excellent showings at "Seventeen-mile Point" on half a dozen groups of claims. The geology is favorable for permanent ore bodies, and water sufficient for large milling operations will gravitate to the point of use. Accessibility for getting in supplies is also a feature which argues strongly for this district, an excellent wagon road leading from the railroad, with no hills intervening, to the immediate location of the properties which have been opened to the prospect stage. Altogether, it is safe to predict that the next six months will see development at "the Point" which will mean a new camp on the map and another bullion producer for Southern California. W. W. H.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

There are many treatments advertised in the newspapers for the removal of superfluous hair, but there is little offered by the manufacturers of these preparations in the way of substantial evidence of their worth. This is not the case with the well-known method, DeMiracle. Dr. Starbuck, the prominent physician, says: "After thoroughly testing DeMiracle in my practice I can say that I feel justified in making the assertion that it is the only successful method of removing objectionable growths of hair from any portion of the body. It does the work promptly. It is a cleanly method, and does not injure the most delicate skin, nor does it cause the slightest pain even on the most sensitive portions of the body. I can heartily endorse DeMiracle and recommend its use."

If DeMiracle were not the best preparation in the world for the removal of superfluous hair we could not get the endorsements of so many prominent physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and magazines.

DeMiracle mailed, sealed in plain wrapper, for $1.00. Your money back without question (no red tape) if it fails to do all that is claimed for it. Booklet free, in plain sealed envelope, by the DeMiracle Chemical Co., Desk 3, 1909 Park Ave., New York. For sale by Owl Drug Co., 320 So. Spring st., Fifth and Broadway, 625 So. Broadway.

Fumed Oak furniture for the living room

—a display that is easily best in town

—best variety | —best styles | —best quality | —best values

—For living rooms, Mission design fumed oak furniture possesses every essential to make it ideal from the standpoint of utility, beauty and serviceability. It is without a doubt, the most popular style of furniture used today in California living rooms, and is constantly increasing in favor.

—The best makes in America in this class of furniture are shown upon our floors. Included in our superior display will be found the famous L. & J. G. Stickley line, also pieces from the well-known Limberts "Arts and Crafts" line, and an excellent assortment from Grand Rapids and other factories.

Extra Values This Week

—Below we describe and illustrate a few of the special offerings which we shall feature this week in fumed oak furniture. Others, not specially described, are equally attractive. If you are interested in this direction, this will prove your opportunity to secure some very unusual values.

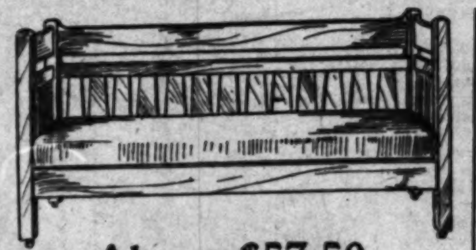
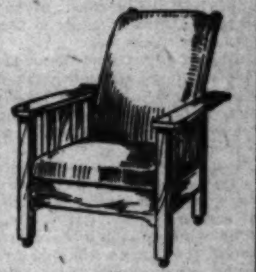
Special This Week $13.75

Mission style, with luxurious cushions for seat and back, covered with leather of lasting quality and finish; substantially built by one of the leading Grand Rapids factories. An excellent opportunity to secure a genuine comfort-giving piece of furniture at a real bargain.



Above $57.50 Davenport
Special At $39.00 This Week

As a rule, we do not offer davenports of the popular mission style at special prices, but this week we do so, to supplement our other offerings in fumed oak. The piece illustrated here is of most luxurious design, well built and nicely finished; the cushion is of guaranteed leather.

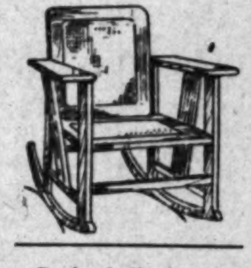


Above $30 Morris Chair Special.... $18.75

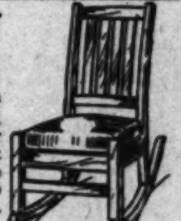
A large, comfortable Morris Chair, complete with quality leather cushions, at a price no higher than usually asked for the cushions alone. The massive style and Mission effect of this piece will lend character to the furnishings of any living room or den.

The $12.00 Rocker Shown Below $7.25

Something unique—a Mission rocker, in the practical, lasting and popular fumed finish, but out of the ordinary on account of its special cane seat and back, making it at once comfortable, airy and sanitary, without sacrificing artistic taste.



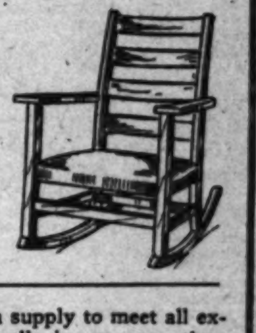
This $10.00 Rocker Special This Week $6



A little armless rocker for which there is need in every home, of one or more. Its leather cushion seat makes it most comfortable, while its size makes it extremely easy to move about; a very handy rocker for sewing.

The $10.00 Rocker Shown Below...... $5.85

This is one of the famous Limbert's "Arts and Crafts" pieces; distinctively Mission in style; built to endure; seat upholstered with quality leather; back is high enough to afford head rest—a comfort feature that makes the piece particularly desirable.



Advertised Specials! NOTICE!

—Back of all advertised specials, except where otherwise stated, we have a supply to meet all expected demands. Sometimes, however, it happens that we have more calls in response than we figured upon.

—If for any reason, advertised specials become "sold out," before the special sale period has expired, we will in such event substitute other pieces at a corresponding reduction, so that no one shall be disappointed. We reserve the right, however, to limit the number to each customer, on such substitutions.

—Our policy of "making good" on every offering, and on every claim, is thus demonstrated in a way that leaves no room to doubt the sincerity of our advertising.

THE ONLY WORK IN SIGHT FOR OUR NEWEST MAYOR.

BY HARRY C. CARR.

Among the most interesting features of a circus day are the humble ring men, who go into the cages all alone after the show to scrub the lions, who curry the horses for the spangled equestrienne, and pack up the tents by flickering torchlight after the performers have gone to bed with the applause of the crowds ringing in their ears.

Interesting features of an army are, aside from the patriots who fight for home and country, the Hessians—the soldiers of fortune, who fight for whichever side looks most profitable to them.

So an interesting part of the recall election came yesterday when the canvas was packed away and the political sawdust raked out of the rings.

The winning candidate was roaming around the streets, shaking hands and saying what things were expected of him, and the losing candidate was saying what he was expected to say.

But the most picturesque men were not the candidates; the most interesting were the political Hessians, the humble political ring men, whose work was done and who had come to get their pay at the recall headquarters.

As they stood in line at the secretary's room in the Equitable building telegraph boys rushed in and out with messages of excited congratulation and jubilation for the generals and the political spangled ladies. No messages came for the Hessians whose work elected the Mayor and won the battle. They were the unmentioned heroes.

ONLY A MAYOR.

George Alexander peeked in past them, bubbling with pleasure. He didn't notice them, and they didn't notice him.

On election day, these ring men of the election had chased excitedly after his auto with high-flung hats and furious cheers. But they didn't cheer him yesterday. They didn't take any interest in him any longer.

He is nothing but a Mayor now. When he ceased to be a performing spangled performer—that is to say, a candidate—they ceased to have any interest in him. He is out of their line.

They only looked at him with sleepy, tired eyes, much, I suppose, as the lions look at the spangled lady by daylight.

Outside on the streets and in the political clubrooms, amateur politicians were excitedly "talking it over," and theorizing and telling each other very wisely that "two thousand dollars would have changed the result," without a very definite idea what they meant.

The Hessians were not talking about this. They were not talking about anything. They were grumbling sourly because the cashier was not paying them off faster and occasionally snarling at some highbinder who tried to sneak in out of his proper place in line.

It was a very c ious band.

Some of them were very interesting types.

A few were young men—hardly more than boys, with their faces fringed with fuzz that had never felt a razor. Many were negroes. Others were ratty-eyed adventurers.

Nearly all of them were faces that have been familiar at election booths for years—even the boys. There are boys who instinctively hang around election places as other boys hang around engine-houses. They grow up to be political ring men, wise in figures, precinct majorities, just as other men know lions, machinery and the ropes on a ship.

IN ALL CAMPS.

Sometimes they are Republicans—sometimes Democrats. On occasion they are advocates of the gas company. Then they are howling down corporations. They enlist in whichever army sounds the most like money, and, on recall election day, they were reformers.

The humor of it probably did not strike them.

Nothing written here should be understood as intimating that the work of these Hessians was politically crooked or corrupt; or that the recall managers resorted to corrupt or crooked measures.

On election days there is wood to be hewed and water to be hauled, and these dull political roustabouts are cheerfully indifferent as to whether they are hauling recall fuel or anti-recall fuel, and all the banners on the election-day automobiles look alike to them.

They are the interesting and little-known characters who are never spoken of except in vague terms, but who are an unconsciously dramatic feature of our American life.

On Friday, they turned defeat into narrow victory—yet they were the only ones who will never be mentioned—the mustered-out soldiers of fortune.

There were no political Hessians at Wheeler's Socialist headquarters yesterday. There was only a litter of election-day literature and a musty smell of stale tobacco smoke.

And it was merely because of these lowly Hessians that the recallers looked upon success instead of humiliation.

After all the profound speeches, all the yards of oratory and political essays, after Tommy Bulivine had stormed and Uncle Aleck had threatened, it was the line of sleepy-eyed, tired, grouchy political ring men that threw the recall down our municipal throat.

Ten automobiles, a few thousand dollars, the squad of unkempt Hessians at the other headquarters and the future history of this city might have been changed.

Foreign writers have invariably commented on the singular way in which America thrills over an election; then forgets it when the votes are counted.

Down at the City Hall yesterday the interest in the topic had already faded.

Some of the political managers who had been watching the fight from the side lines dropped into the Mayor's office during the course of the morning; and they talked it over listlessly as though it were a fairly good show, but didn't matter much.

The civil service clerks cracked a few very pale mild jokes and the old municipal factory wheels started up again.

The pleasant, ruddy-faced Mayor of the inter-regnum period came in and cleaned his desk in readiness for the new Mayor. In the outer office the private secretary cleaned up his desk in readiness for his successor; and the incident had passed.

There are, however, a variety of men much like the old women who make a practice of going to all the funerals. These men were in evidence yesterday more than the newly-elected Mayor.

They appeared, decorated with enormous white "Alexander" badges left over from the election—and they spent the entire day stalking in and out of the various headquarters "talking it over" and discanting to whatever small fry would listen. They overheard conversations and repeated the second-hand pilfered opinions as their own with an air of great wisdom.

They came to the Mayor's office, stalking in portentously and asking the clerk: "Is Mayor Alexander in? No? Ah!"

Then they would march out again as though they had accomplished some deeply momentous errand.

Sweden's royal forestry commission last year supplied forest products worth $13,250,000, yet accumulated timber resources equal to twice the amount of the timber felled.

ANOTHER BIG INDUSTRY.

SILICA MINES TO BE WORKED.

GLASS MAKERS TO EXPLOIT LANG DEPOSITS.

Ninety-eight Per Cent. Pure Product Which Brings New Factory to This City—Within Forty Miles of Los Angeles Development Is Going on—How Glass Is Made.

Silica mines at Lang, forty miles north of Los Angeles, are to be developed from vast deposits found at that point by the California Glass and Soda Manufacturing Company, that is to build in this city the big plant described recently in The Times. These are about 400 yards from the Southern Pacific main line. One ledge is about 300 feet high, from which only one to three feet of facing has to be removed to find white silica, so pure that no refining is required, and needs only to be pulverized before being placed in the heat of 2600 to 3000 deg. Fahr. of the furnaces at the company's plant in the city. For shipping it requires only to be knocked down into a chute and run into the cars, practically the cheapest mining known.

A shaft has penetrated the ledge to the depth of twenty feet, and has revealed a stratum of pure silica as broad, it is said, as a man is high, white and transparent as clear water, which commences about six feet higher on the ledge above the opening of the shaft, and has a downward course to the opposite side of this vast hill of silica. It will be found, it is held, that this silica, stratum upon stratum, will continue through the entire shaft. It is impossible to compute the actual tonnage in these deposits. It is expected to last this and the next generation. Last week several blasts placed in different sections brought to light great massive chunks of pure white silica about one-third the size of a man.

The product in sight is worth $500,000. Dr. Julius Koebig says it is 98 2-5 per cent. pure. Glassmaking on the Pacific Coast has not been considered possible, especially window and architectural glass. It was not known until recently that the necessary raw materials existed here in such abundance and so accessible, and this is very true of the most important ingredients, viz., silica sand and sulphate of soda. These ingredients have always been hard to get in sufficient quantities, except by shipping them from the East. But this discovery has proven that these materials, which comprise fully 90 per cent. of the constituent raw materials, are here in the State of California in greater quantities than ever discovered elsewhere. This will make it possible to manufacture glass cheaper here than in the East.

GLASS MANUFACTURE.

The blowing of sheet glass is a work of considerable difficulty and labor. It is first necessary to have a quantity of soft glass in a furnace containing a tremendous heat. A quantity of this is gathered on the end of a blow-pipe. The workman then blows into it and distends it in a globular form. It is necessary to produce the globular form before it can be elongated. The workman holds his blow-pipe, which is about five feet long, in a vertical direction and the softened globe becomes pear-shaped. By dexterously swinging the blow-pipe from side to side, which he does while standing on a plank over a pit, and by causing it to rise on either side, he converts the pear-shape into a true cylinder having rounded ends. When the cylinder has assumed the exact shape desired, he places his thumb on the end of the blow-pipe, and holds the opposite end of the cylinder in the mouth of the furnace. The glass softens at the heated end, and the expanding air causes it to burst the opening. It is then shaped with a suitable tool, so that it is of the diameter of the cylinder. When the latter is cooled, a piece of hot glass is applied to its shoulder with a pontee, and is drawn out into a thread around it. This makes the glass hot. The thread of glass is removed, a cold instrument is applied rapidly, and the shoulder of the blowing is cut off. The glass is next detached from the blow-pipe, and its ends removed, and it is then annealed for a short time and cut down lengthwise internally, by a diamond. It is afterward placed, with the long cut uppermost, in what is called a flattening kiln, that is, in a sort of oven or furnace heated to a high temperature and having a perfectly smooth stone floor; after a short exposure the glass softens, and a workman, with suitable wooden tools, opens it out where it was cut by the diamond, and causes it to be flat upon the stone.

The city demand in Los Angeles only is tremendous. In five of the prominent large buildings downtown there has been used between $60,000 and $70,000 worth of glass. This manufacturing enterprise is an additional laurel to the industrial enterprises of Los Angeles.

The output is practically all taken among local dealers for the next year to come.

THE NEW CHESTER PLACE

Handsome Home Sites in the West End

Some months ago about twenty well known citizens united to create a private residence park of the highest class. They selected an elevated square of ground adjacent to the right-of-way for the Los Angeles-Pacific subway. The property has been laid off into large building sites, ranging from 60 to 110 feet in width and averaging 150 feet in depth, facing on curving driveways 100 feet wide. These driveways have parkings 30 feet wide with 7 foot cement sidewalks. There is a row of trees on each side of the sidewalk, or four rows along each driveway. At intervals along the curbs are large stone and iron electroliers fifteen feet high, with five large electric globes on each. All the roadways on the property have petrolithic pavement, connecting with asphalt pavement on Pico street which extends to the business center.

No driveway or street names are used, the address being the name of the property, Victoria Park, with the number of the building site. The winding driveways are so arranged that many of the building sites have an outlook which can never be obstructed, down the broad avenues.

These improvements have all been completed, and several residences have been built, all costing more than the requirements, which are that no house shall cost less than $4000 in some parts of the Park or less than $5000 in other portions.

The accompanying picture shows the plan of Victoria Park, but fails to give any idea of the magnificent outlook enjoyed from all of the building sites. The Park, being on the northwest corner of the high table land traversed by West Pico and West Adams streets, has an unobstructed outlook to the east, north and west, across the lower plain to the mountains and the ocean.

The prices of the large building sites range from $2000 to $3500, averaging about $2500. The agents for Victoria Park are David Barry & Co., 211 to 216 Union Trust Building, southeast corner Spring and Fourth streets.

Ramona Park is a well-planned, beautifully kept up residence park. Improvements are well designed—and carried out substantially. The streets are boulevards, running between tree-lined parkways, fifteen feet wide. Cement sidewalks and curbs are all laid—miles of them. Pure mountain water is piped to every lot. Gas is in the streets. Telephone service is available. The commutation car fare is only seven cents.

And a number of substantial homes have already been erected, and are now occupied by their owners. Work will soon begin upon more.

WEBSTER A LEADER.

ident Webster of the Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce is one of the leaders in the movement for the merger of the two beach cities. He believes that it was a mistake to incorporate Ocean Park. He was living in Santa Monica six years ago when the question of organizing a new municipality arose. He opposed the plan at that time and his judgment has been upheld by subsequent events.

"I believe it is absurd to maintain two municipalities on Santa Monica Bay," said he. "There is absolutely no dividing line there; no divided interests, or racial antagonisms. I do not believe any broad, fair-minded man can reasonably oppose consolidation. It is the spirit of the day; it is the thing that all big, broad-minded Americans believe in, for strength lies in unity."

Mr. Webster has been closely connected in a business way with the interests of both Santa Monica and Ocean Park, and views the question from an impartial standpoint. He argues that simply because Ocean Park is largely built on the sand and Santa Monica is back on the hill, that there should logically be no reason for severance of interests.

"I do not believe it possible to promote a good proposition in any locality of the bay that will not work for the betterment of the whole community," he asserted.

"I believe there are numerous advantages to be gained by consolidation. One that will appeal to most is that the tax rate would be reduced. Under consolidation, the beach will have a population of at least 25,000 within the next two years. Under the present conditions of taxation, neither city can expect to grow and thrive.

"I think it has been proven to the satisfaction of the majority in each city, that parties looking for homes are not looking for trouble. When they learn the conditions now prevailing, and hear of the strife, contention and continual wrangle for supremacy, they become disgusted and go elsewhere.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

"The time has come when Santa Monica and Ocean Park are too large to submit to dictation by one man or any set of men. From now on the voice of the people must settle this question. I believe that the consolidation movement is gaining ground every day, and that by election day the people will express their sentiment overwhelmingly in favor of union.

"I know that it seems much to ask of those who would have to sacrifice their places at the public crib in the interests of the general public, and probably few will make that sacrifice without a determined fight. But no man who is not an office holder can offer one good, logical, reasonable argument against consolidation."

Mr. Webster says, after merger, if Los Angeles can show the people how they will be benefited by joining hands, that consolidation with this city would be next in order. "I would be heartily in favor of this," he states, "but at the present time we have not been invited to join the Greater Los Angeles. I believe it would not be to our interest to sever Ocean Park and annex it to Los Angeles, leaving Santa Monica on the outside. We should have all our forces and interests consolidated before we think of uniting with that city."

MAYOR DUDLEY BACKS IT.

Mayor T. H. Dudley of Santa Monica, who has extensive interests in Ocean Park, and is president of both the Bank of Ocean Park and Bank of Venice, is strongly in favor of the consolidation plan.

"This proposition looks very favorable to me," said Mayor Dudley yesterday. "One big city is better than two small ones. We would amount to something then. At the present time we have practically two sets of ordinances and laws for one communty. The license fees of the two cities are at variance, causing disputes, and the existing condition is generally bad.

"Consolidation will bring us nearer to a union with Los Angeles, and I am also in favor of this move when the time is ripe, and it will be easier to join as one city than as two."

BANKER'S VIEWPOINT.

President E. J. Vawter, Jr., of the First National Bank of Ocean Park, favors consolidation for many reasons.

"As a mater of economy, the two towns can be run as one for less money than they can be operated separately," said President Vawter. "The consolidated government would also be more efficient, as the existing conflict would be done away with. We are practically one town now, so far as our general interests are concerned. What will help one of us is good for the other. We should not oppose each other, but should consolidate and work for the upbuilding of this end of the county. Consolidation would simplify the method of taxation, and it would also result in a reduction of the tax rate."

QUESTION SETTLER.

F. E. Royston, one of the directors of the Bank of Ocean Park, is very much in favor of consolidation. He has interests in both Ocean Park and Santa Monica, and he is confident that as soon as the citizens of the two places are shown the advantages of the move, all those who are working for the best interests of the community will vote "yes" on the proposition.

"This plan, if carried out, would settle the sewer question, which has been a constant source of conflict," said Mr. Royston. "One sewer could take care of the entire beach city, and settle this dispute for all time. So far as a matter of economy is concerned, there is no room for argument. The two cities should combine for the very same reason that two banks whose interests are identical, combine—to gain strength and reduce the cost of maintenance.

"I am also in favor of consolidation with Los Angeles, which will come as a matter of course, after we unite. This would be the greatest thing that ever happened for the beach, not for any one section, but for the entire length from North Beach to Playa del Rey."

TO THE POINT.

H. C. Burmister, owner of one of the largest groceries in Santa Monica, and a representative citizen, voiced his sentiments in favor of the consolidation movement in strong terms.

"I am in favor of this move to consolidate, because of the general benefits that will be derived from one beach with one government," said Burmister. "It will do away with the continuous political quarrels that have existed. The rate of taxation will be less, for there will be a larger district to tax for a government no larger than either of the two now existing. This will be but a preliminary move along the line of a consolidation with Los Angeles, which should come in due time."

ANOTHER BOOSTER.

George Brown, secretary of the Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce, is actively engaged in boosting for the consolidation of the two cities for the general good of the entire district.

"One of the principal reasons for this consolidation is to eliminate individual control," said Secretary Brown. "By this I do not mean to attack any particular man, but there has been altogether too much personal bossism in various districts of both Ocean Park and Santa Monica for the good of the two cities. The government of the people is fundamentally based on majority rule, and as soon as one man, either by his wealth or by being placed in a position carrying great influence, tends to become a boss to satisfy his own ambitions, then the government ceases to be beneficial to that community. This condition has been one of the curses of this beach, and we are going to try to do away with it, permanently.

"The only obstacle to the plan for consolidation, with the exception of the bosses, is a belief on the part of some of the taxpayers that it will result in a higher taxation. Obviously this theory is wrong, for there will be more people to bear the taxes and it is a foregone conclusion that one big city can be run for less than two small ones. The consolidation election will carry so far as Santa Monica is concerned, and I believe there are enough good citizens in Ocean Park outside of the section controlled by the Venice company, to carry the cause for that city.

"I am in afvor of an eventual consolidation with Los Angeles, and this is the very best move we can make as a preliminary to becoming a part of Greater Los Angeles."

"There may be a few little things that will be hard to bear for a time, but consolidation will be best in the end," said Henry Wildey, president of the Devore & Pettis Hardware Company of Santa Monica. "It is ridiculous to have two City Halls and two governments along this beach when the community has hardly enough people to make a city, when combined. We want to hurry up and get together in order to be ready for the eventual consolidation with Los Angeles."

C. B. Pettis, a member of the same firm, said: "Go to it. You cannot say too much in favor of the proposition. It will be the making of the beach, and is the first step necessary toward a consolidation with Los Angeles."

C. M. Brundage, who does a brokerage business in both Ocean Park and Santa Monica, is very much in favor of consolidation.

"To consolidate would harmonize the factions, reduce the expense, simplify the government and cut down the number of officials," said Brundage. "I am also in favor of an eventual consolidation with Los Angeles, and this is only a stepping-stone."

A fair conception of the feelings of the citizen taxpayers of Ocean Park in this matter is gained from the statement of H. Fanjoy, a carpenter, who said: "I would vote for the consolidation of Ocean Park and Santa Monica, and then I would vote to consolidate with Los Angeles."

In a consolidation meeting held in Santa Monica the first of the week, Justice J. C. Steele of that city, who had theretofore been opposed to any movement to consolidate, said that he had changed his views.

UNEQUAL CONTEST.

BRAINS OUST BEAUTY IN ENGLISH SOCIETY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 13.—Scarcely a day passes that the papers do not contain the record of a speech by the talented wife of one or another of the politicians of the moment. Today it is Mrs. Winston Churchill, the charming young woman who recently became the wife of that ambitious son of an American woman; yesterday it was Mrs. Reginald McKenna, the better half of the Secretary of the Navy in the present Cabinet, and yet farther back we listened to the well-chosen words of Mrs. Lloyd George, the consort of the harassed Chancellor of the Exchequer. Before these ladies made their initial appearances in public few suspected their ability as speech makers, but it occasioned little or no surprise, as they are but shining exponents of a new craze which has attacked the wives of all the men who aspire to public life in England. A candidate for parliamentary honors here is lost, indeed, without the active support of his wife on the platform.

There was a time when these women worked in the background. Like Maggie Shand in Barrie's play, "What Every Woman Knows," they were content to inject into the oratorical efforts of their husband, by subtle suggestion all unsuspected by their stronger half, the little light touches that make all the difference between a good speech and a great one. Today they save their quips and jests and Shavian epigrams for their own appearances on the public platforms.

Strange as it may seem, this new departure by English society women can be traced to their desire for social triumph. Not far back in the dim past, beauty alone opened the door to social preëminence. Nowadays mere beauty is a drug on the social market. Every woman is beautiful; if not by nature, then by art. The figure of a Venus de Milo and the face of a Raphael Madonna can be purchased at so much per inch from the Swedish masseur or the French beauty doctor of Bond street. Thus it is that the modern society woman appeals to intellect to help her separate the chaff from the wheat, and to political speech making as a new and unique method of demonstrating her fitness for inclusion in the most exclusive of hostesses' invitation lists.

Mrs. Winston Churchill has shown that she is a past master in the art of delivering a bright, witty, entertaining speech that leaves everybody pleased with themselves, the world in general, and with Mrs. Churchill in particular. Her efforts have all the earmarks of being impromptu, but nevertheless are carefully prepared and polished beforehand. As a consequence she is generally regarded as the most successful young married woman in town at the present moment. She is the best advertisement for her husband that he has ever had and that is saying a great deal, for Winston is an adept at the business of self-advertising. Even that clever mother of his, Mrs. George Cornwallis West, has been thrown into the background by her new daughter-in-law.

It is freely hinted in political circles that Mrs. Winston Churchill did not acquire her mastery of the short speech without hard work. Indeed, it is said that ever since her marriage she has been in daily attendance at an academy of elocution studying as hard as any school girl for an examination.

DOWN AND OUT.

UNIONISM DEAD AT GLOBE NOW.

HOW OPERATORS ROUTED WALKING DELEGATE.

Insolent Cockney Wills and His Downfall—American Business Men Waited on Meeting of Foreigners for Leave to Do Business in Old Time—Gambling Also Ended.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 26.—This mining camp is rapidly adjusting itself to new conditions. Globe is now closed tightly as far as gambling is concerned, and in respect to labor it is a wide open town—both of which conditions would have been deemed impossible but six months ago.

The rout of the gambling fraternity was brought about by suicide, highway robbery and crime following in the wake of the notorious black-jack game, all of which was used to impress duly the Legislature, with the result that a drastic anti-gambling law was adopted.

The opening wide of the town to all free workers was brought about by the jawsmiths of the Western Federation of Miners themselves.

Globe was the last stronghold of the federation—such a stronghold as it was. There are about 3000 men at work in the various mines of the district. Of these, about 1200 were affiliated with the Western Federation of Miners. The mines, all of them, were paying what the unions call "standard wages." The hours were not complained of, and working conditions in the mines, with respect to safety appliances, etc., were all that could be desired. Everything was serene and business was booming.

Right there is where the itchy International Workers of the World, the socialistic bunch of firebrands, headed in to their own undoing.

The reds made up but a relatively small proportion of the miners' union, numerically, but their pernicious activity and zeal captured all the offices while their fellow unionists slept or played black-jack in the saloons.

With Johnny Mitchell, a loud-mouthed little socialist, as president of the local union, the reds dreamed sweet dreams of a mining camp forced to swallow socialism. And these apostles of the torch did not stop at dreaming—they went to work in earnest, methodically.

The bartenders were selected as the easiest opening wedge. The propagandists visited all the saloons and ordered the booze slingers to join the I. W. O. W. It was understood that the hashers and the cooks in the lunch-counters would be the next forced into the disorderly "order," with the clerks of all the groceries and stores tumbling in after.

But most of the bartenders sent the red badge outfit to blazes. There were threats of boycott and the names of the saloons that had given in were published in the local paper as an advertisement. Dodgers were scattered over town—for a little while. One of the incendiaries threw a handful of his boycotting dodgers into Keegan's saloon, an "unfair" house. Keegan snatched up a sixshooter and made him pick them up again. The organization of the "public service" had fallen through.

Then the flaunters of the red button turned their attention to the mines. They imported one Albert Wills, a product of old England, who has been in this country long enough to disagree with the climate of Cripple Creek, Bisbee and other camps, where he helped to bring labor-unionism into disrepute, but who has not yet learned how to use his h's.

Wills was made the walking delegate. His brutality, effrontery and audacity made him the ideal duffer for the job. He set about at once to demonstrate his fitness by pulling men off the cages as they were going down the mines, stopping them on their way to work, invading the workings, and holding meetings where and when it suited him, without the least regard for the fact that the miners were paid by the day, and that he made it impossible for them to work.

Lonnie Couch, a stalwart young member of the union, objected to Wills's tactics and punched the stuffing out of the walking delegate. Couch subsequently held up a black-jack game and landed in jail, but his treatment of Wills will go a long way in his favor with the jury, according to opinions given here.

The crisis came when the Old Dominion mine tired of Wills's insolence and intrusions. Orders were posted, forbidding the company's grounds to any but employés. Wills laughed at the orders, and butted in again and again, even after being run off a couple of times by the private watchman.

Then came the order to shut down the mines. The union was served with an ultimatum—get rid of that walking delegate. Every mine in the district followed suit, business was paralyzed.

For four days the miners, assembled in the largest hall in town, debated. The Socialists had the machinery of the organization, and jealously fought for the retention of Wills. Several times the meeting was on the verge of becoming a bloody riot. Pete Bulgin, under indictment for assault to kill, was one of the committee in charge of the situation for the miners, and in that capacity was chosen as one of the interpreters for the Slavs. Everything said in the meeting had to be interpreted in three or four languages, while American business men in town anxiously awaited the outcome.

Mark Page, a miner of Slavonian extraction who understands and speaks the language easily, caught Bulgin deliberately lying to the Slavs and denounced him from the floor. The foreigners became suspicious of all the interpreters, and pandemonium reigned, but in the end the union collapsed and agreed to fire "Brother" Wills, who was given a vote of thanks by way of consolation.

Despite the negative assurances of the unionists, who claimed that the shutdown had been a stock-jobbing stroke, the mines opened for work next morning. This was a month ago.

But since then there has been a steady process of elimination going on throughout the district. Starved out, the Socialists are hitting the trail in the wake of the expelled gamblers.

Business in Globe is now conducted on stable grounds, with no threat of further troubles, such as had been hanging over the camp for many months previously. Deprived of the power of coercion, the union is fast becoming a thing of the past, just as it has become in Goldfield, Bisbee and other camps, where it overreached itself.

ESCONDIDO.

ESCONDIDO, March 27.—Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Petty opened the Commercial Hotel yesterday. It is in the new W. B. Simmons $20,000 brick block on Grand avenue.

The San Marcos Promotion Club has elected these directors: H. V. Huchting, R. D. Borden, E. L. Nicholson, John Hanson and Ned Hall. Mr. Hall is president. The club has property valued at $2300, and indebtedness of $125.

Henry Johnson of San Pasqual has planted fifteen acres to string beans, several acres of which are now in bloom. Mr. Johnson claims to have the earliest garden truck land in California outside the Imperial Valley.

A tribe of Red Men is to be instituted here on the evening of the 31st, and a Homestead of the American Yeomen the evening of April 10.

FETTER TAKEN.

who have been engaged in the hunt that Oswald and Fetter never crossed the international boundary. All of the talk about their presence in Lower California seems to have been inspired, with good effect as to Fetter, and seemingly so as to Oswald.

ALWAYS WITHIN REACH.

As a matter of fact, it was said yesterday by one of the officials most concerned in the apprehension of the pair, that Oswald and Fetter had not been more than fifty miles from Los Angeles since the word went out that they were wanted.

Just what Fetter knows in connection with the allegations of graft is under the hat of the District Attorney. It may be that his evidence will be valuable, and, on the other hand, it may not be worth a copper.

Oswald is the man who really is wanted.

As king of the Tenderloin, he is supposed to know much of importance in connection with the prosecution of the "higher ups."

Fetter and Joseph Durand, the latter the reputed business agent of Oswald, are counted upon to substantiate any testimony that may be offered by "Nick" as to the payment of money to persons connected with the recent municipal administration.

It has been said all along that the case before the special grand jury would fall flat without the testimony of Oswald and his associates. The prospect that he and they will appear would indicate that some interesting developments may be expected.

It is more than likely that Oswald, upon his arrest and arraignment, will tell something of the arrangement he made with E. Tobias Earl of the Express, through which the resignation of Harper came about.

Statements made by the officials in charge of the case indicate that Oswald is not far away and that he is perfectly willing now to surrender and take his chances with the courts.

That he was ever in Lower California or anywhere else outside the State is denied.

THEY ALL LIKED IT.

El Monte Audience Pleased With Performance of High School Play. Old-Timer's Funeral.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

EL MONTE, March 27.—The "Merchant of Venice Up-to-date" was given by the senior class of the High School in the school auditorium last night. It was mirth-provoking from beginning to end. The school hits were happily made and pleased the audience. All the parts were well taken. Harold Cogswell, as Shylock, succeeded admirably in winning the execration of the audience. The pranks of Shylock's servant, Launcelot Gobbo, were well performed, as were the parts of Antonio and Jessica, taken by Walter Robinson and Hildreth Mayes. Miss Edith Garver, as Portia, and Catherine Enell, as Nerissa, are worthy of special mention. Herbert Forst, as Bassanio, was a favorite.

The funeral service for William Bell was held Tuesday forenoon at the residence of his son, Thomas Bell. Mr. Bell was an old pioneer resident of this section, having come here in 1858 from Pennsylvania. He was 67 years old, and leaves three sons, Thomas, Charles and John, and two daughters, Mrs. George Wandling and Mrs. D. Baker.

Assemblyman Cogswell returned yesterday from Sacramento.

Miss Margaret Eddlemen of Glendale and Misses Vera and Mamie Nichols and Ross Nichols of Pasadena were guests of the Cogswell young people yesterday. They came over to attend the senior class play last evening.

A musical programme was rendered at the grammar school yesterday afternoon. The children acquitted themselves creditably. Numbers worthy of mention were solos by Louis Gidley, Ruth Reese and Harold McCoy, and the chorus, "My Own United States," by the sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

Miss Minnie Pallette of Riverside, a student at U.S.C., was here last Sunday as the guest of Miss Mabel Farrington.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.,

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take one triangule after supper tonight. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for all stomach misery, because it will take hold of your food and digest it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Actual, prompt relief for all your stomach misery is at your Pharmacist, waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure a case of Dyspepsia or Indigestion.

COLONIST RUSH.

brought to California 39,000 colonists in 1905, 33,000 in 1906, 48,000 in 1907 and 23,500 in 1908. The high-water mark of the company, reached in 1907, is expected to be exceeded during the present year by a considerable margin.

N. R. Martin of the Southern Pacific stated yesterday that the reservations for colonists during this month and April, when the low rates are in force, are greater than ever known.

"Advices from our agents in the East are," said he, "that more people are moving Westward on account of the low colonist rate than ever before. We had expected a heavy traffic on account of rather dull travel during the last year, and also on account of the rather hard winter in the East, and we were prepared. We expect that before the 'colonist year' is over we will have handled a great many more people than during former years."

MANY EXTRA SECTIONS.

T. C. Peck of the Salt Lake Railroad said yesterday that the colonist travel is unusually satisfactory, and that a great many people were going into the Northwest as colonists. He stated that the recent government reclamation projects in Idaho and Utah are attracting a large number, and that the western part of Arizona, where there are also large government irrigation projects, is drawing heavily from the East.

It is stated by the railroad officials that in the first few days of April an unusual sight may be seen at the local stations, for then a dozen specials laden with colonists are due to arrive.

The Southern Pacific will have two extra sections of the Sunset Express added to the regular trains, and the Santa Fé will add three sections to the Overland, while the Salt Lake is expecting to have at least one extra section to its transcontinental train.

The "Force" of Herpicide.

Even the first application of Newbro's Herpicide (THE ORIGINAL REMEDY THAT "KILLS THE DANDRUFF GERM") shows the hair-saving and satisfying "force" that is in it. This "force" is the sum of two characteristics that are united in no other hair remedy.

Herpicide has the ABILITY to destroy the dandruff microbe, and the QUALITY that delights those who wish a dainty hair dressing. It holds the secret of popularity and pleases every one who is discriminating enough to have a preference. It is not sticky. It will not stain the hair.

The curative effect of Herpicide is sometimes little short of marvelous, for after the dandruff germ is destroyed, and kept out of the scalp, the hair is bound to grow as nature intended. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

Send 10 cents in stamps to the HERPICIDE COMPANY, Dept. 12, Detroit, Mich., for sample and booklet.

One dollar bottles guaranteed. At all Drug Stores. When you call for Herpicide, do not accept a substitute. Applications at prominent Barber Shops.

Danderine

EVERYBODY CAN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR NOW, and they don't have to wait weeks and months for results either. You will notice marked improvement after the very first application.

Danderine is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the scalp and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities. It is pleasant and easy to use—simply apply it to the scalp and hair once a day until the hair begins to grow, then two or three times a week till desired results are obtained.

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from California writes in substance as follows:
I have been using your wonderful hair tonic for several months and at last I am now blessed with a wonderful suit of hair that measures over 48 inches in length; the braid is over 8 inches around.

Another from New Jersey:
After using sixth bottle I am happy to say that I have as nice a head of hair as anyone in New Jersey.

This Great Hair-Growing Remedy can now be had at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Free To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

WORLD MUSIC CENTER SOON.

William Shakespeare

Los Angeles is to be one of the world centers of music soon.

No less a personage than William Shakespeare, the noted London singing teacher, vouches for it. Mr. Shakespeare, with his charming little wife, will leave for San Francisco on Tuesday, after a stay of nearly three months here; he has been studying conditions.

"Already you have the nucleus for a great musical center in Los Angeles," said he yesterday, as he sat entertaining his guest in the cosy music room of his temporary home on Elden avenue.

MELODIOUS.

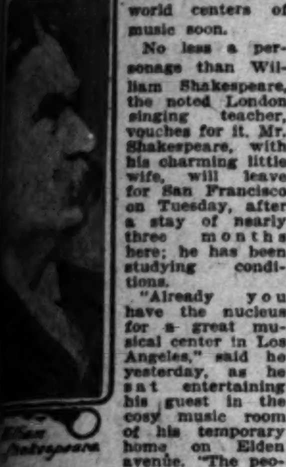
WORLD MUSIC CENTER SOON.

What an Authority Predicts for Los Angeles.

William Shakespeare Finds the Nucleus Here.

British Master Delighted, Sorry to Leave.

BY KATHERINE T. VON BLON.



William Shakespeare

Los Angeles is to be one of the world centers of music soon.

No less a personage than William Shakespeare, the noted London singing teacher, vouches for it. Mr. Shakespeare, with his charming little wife, will leave for San Francisco on Tuesday, after a stay of nearly three months here; he has been studying conditions.

"Already you have the nucleus for a great musical center in Los Angeles," said he yesterday, as he sat entertaining his guest in the cosy music room of his temporary home on Elden avenue. "The people are wonderfully intelligent here, musically, and you have many fine organizations. There is your Symphony Orchestra, and it is a good one, too. Hamilton has done splendidly, and all he needs is a millionaire behind him to help the undertaking financially. You have many excellent singers and instrumentalists who make this their home.

"There is Herr Becker; he has done great work here in educating the people to appreciate the classics, and there are many others who are assisting in the advancement.

"Mr. Edson, your president of the Club, is promoting the musical and so is Mr. Koepfli, another of the men who are helping Los Angeles toward a big future. You will soon have your opera, too, for all these musicians are directing their efforts to that end."

OUR LOVELY VOICES.

...'s encouragement for the Los Angeles maid, for Mr. Shakespeare is much impressed with the loveliness of Southern California voices.

"I have heard more beautiful voices here than in any other place in the world," he said, "and it's the climate that does it. The climate does more than make voices, for it preserves them, and that is the great thing."

Shakespeare's interviewer ventured to inquire if he thinks America is more on interpretation than Europe.

INTERPRETATION-MAD.

"The whole world is interpretation-mad," said he. "Interpretation is simply one's own conception, expressed. Most people try to interpret before they know enough to express it. They must learn their music first, then the interpretation comes. It is from within, and each one must sing it as he feels it."

Then this great and simple man sat at the piano and played a Chopin valse as some poseur might, with all the airs and graces of a long-haired pedant. Then he turned to his amused guest. "That is what you may consider 'interpretation,'" said he. "They've seen some one else do it, and it's simply Herod out-Heroded."

But with a graceful turn he faced the beloved instrument again and played the same valse with such exquisite feeling and delicacy that his hearer was enraptured. "That is as Chopin himself played it," he said, as he bent toward his visitor again.

Mr. Shakespeare related how Chopin used to say, "Why do they play my nocturnes so fast?" I did not write it that way." Chopin did not like it.

"That is because they try to put so-called 'interpretation' in it, and consequently they lose all sense of tempo," explained the charming singing master, who is also a master of the piano.

HEARS NATURE'S VOICE.

This cultured and brilliant man is loth to leave this land of flowers, for, like every Britisher, he hears the voice of nature calling him, and loves the out-of-doors.

"I have the fever," he said. "California fever, that is. That is what Richard Mansfield said to me: 'Go West and you'll get the fever'—and now I have it."

Mr. Shakespeare is in love with the climate and the people, and in fact, everything here, and said if he wasn't needed in London he'd be perfectly content to stay right in Los Angeles.

"Why, it would sound like fulsome flattery if I said what I really feel about this place," said he. "I've never met so many charming people. They are so genuine and sweet and hospitable. The country is beautiful, and your climate marvelous. It has done Mrs. Shakespeare much good. We are coming back in two years. If we could we'd come back next year, but I'm afraid that's impossible."

"I've had a delightful little vacation, indeed," and he laughed.

"Yes, he's been as busy as ever," broke in Mrs. Shakespeare. "From 8:30 until 5 o'clock, he's at the piano."

SHE'S NOT THE ORCHESTRA.

But a few moments before this pretty little lady in gray, with her delightful English intonation, had remarked to the guest how her master husband was so buried in his music as to forget all else.

"He dreams of it, and in his sleep is mumbling over his vowels and consonants," she said. Then, with quiet humor, she told of how, when he had led the orchestra in his own symphony, he would direct it again in his sleep. Sometimes he would tap rather hard, in his enthusiasm as leader.

"Yes, I received many a tap meant for that orchestra. But when there were too many, I remonstrated. 'William, I'M not the orchestra,'" and she laughed softly at the recollection.

It is a source of regret to the many Los Angeles people who have had the privilege of meeting this noted teacher and his wife that they must go away. Their departure is a distinct loss to musical circles.

"JUST COMMON SENSE."

Though Mr. Shakespeare is known as one of the world's greatest teachers, he's extremely modest and says there's no Shakespeare method. "Why, it's just common sense, that's all," declared he. "I'M learning all the time myself, and the coat I wore ten years ago won't fit me, I have grown so much bigger."

A friend recently congratulated him on his pupil, Mr. Bispham. "Ah, he said, "but Mr. Baspham is a wonderful man, a wonderful man." So although he has brought out some of the greatest voices, he is most shy about taking upon himself credit for their successes. Since his visit here there is a host of teachers of vocal art, who've been studying with him, and now these are all "exponents" of his system. The town will soon be overrun with them. It took Mr. Shakespeare years and years of study to gain his knowledge, yet here are they who acquire all this in the magical time of three months, with a few lessons.

Mr. Shakespeare, who is a composer, and a gifted one, too, has lately turned his attention to preparing a book of musical exercises for children. This very delightful study is to educate young children properly in vocal art, and he has intrusted his first copy with Mrs. Jones-Simmons, who studied with him abroad.

THE SIMPLE MAN.

William Shakespeare, like all the great, is simple and friendly. Yet he is most versatile. At the age of 12 years he was the organist in St. Andrew's Church at Croydon, and before that sang in the choir. At 13 he entered in the study of composition and counterpoinnt under Bernard Moligue in the London Academy of Music, and four years later he won the King's scholarship at the Royal Academy of Music. A year later he won a silver medal there. During these student days his compositions included overtures, the first movement of a symphony, a piano sonata and capricio. All were said to show a Mendelssohn-Schuman trend and were well received at the academy, and in 1871 he won the Mendelssohn scholarship. His predecessors in this, the blue ribbon of the English musicians, were Sir Arthur Sullivan and Dr. Swinnerton Heap. He then went to Leipzig, with a reputation as a composer. Gounod wrote of his concerto in C that it was "tres remarkable." He conducted his symphony in C minor in Leipzig. He later studied voice, and at the academy where he was studying, the Mendelssohn committee sent him to study under the great Lamperti, the teacher of Albani and Campanini. He took three years of him, and then went back for ten years and took six months of each year with him. He meanwhile composed several string quartettes and overtures. He made his début as a singer in 1875 and was counted among England's finest vocalists. Yet with all these talents, he chose to be an imparter of knowledge, and as such he has gained fame.

Mr. and Mrs. Shakespeare will remain a week or so in San Francisco and then go on to Washington, where they are to meet and be entertained by the Presdent and Mrs. Taft. Mrs. Taft, who is very musical herself, will doubtless enjoy the delightfully quaint master and his lovely little wife.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Friday Morning.

An attractive programme has been issued by the Friday Morning Club for April, as follows:

On April 2, Edward A. Dockson will reply to the interrogative "What has the recent Legislature done," in an address before the club women and their guests, and Lillian Harris, will tell on the same day of "A Woman's Experience at Sacramento."

April 9, Blanche E. Levielle will occupy the programme with "Original Translations from Theophile Gautier," Ignaz Haroldi is scheduled for a violin recital April 16.

"Italian Villas and Gardens" will be the subject of a lecture, handsomely illustrated with stereopticon views by Frank H. Latimore on April 23.

A play entitled "Cross Purposes," from the pen of George MacDonald, is the offering for April 30, and the children of the Adams Heights school will present "Fairy Tales."

On Thursday, April 1, at 3 in the afternoon plays will be given by Mrs. George A. Dobinson and Mr. Norman Hackett, to which club members only will be admitted.

An exhibition of water colors by Marion Kavanaugh Watchel will take place from March 30 to April 5, and there will be a book exhibit of old and new books at the clubhouse Tuesday, April 20.

College Women.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall, honorary president of the International Council of Women, will address the Woman's College Club at its luncheon on Saturday, April 3, which will be given at the Hayward Hotel at noon.

Following the luncheon a reception will be tendered the honor guest, and an honorary membership will be conferred upon Mrs. Sewall. This privilege has been granted by the executive board of the club to college women of national reputation who are entertained by the club as special guests. Mrs. Sewall, who is a post graduate of the Northwestern University, will be the first guest of the club thus honored.

Guest of U.D.C.

Mrs. Martha Gilord of Alabama, a noted writer, philanthropist and prominent club woman, will be the guest of the Robert E. Lee Chapter U.D.C., on Thursday, April 1. Mrs. Gilord is a guest at Hotel Bonnie Brier, Hollywood.

Cosmos Club.

Next Wednesday will be social day at Cosmos Club. Members will meet at Ebell Clubhouse in the afternoon, and Mrs. A. M. Parker will give an interesting account of her travels through Europe; there will also be a short musical programme in which Mrs. Ralph Barney and Miss Augusta Lamb will have a part. The social hour, which will be the feature of the afternoon will then follow.

Last Wednesday Prof. B. F. Baumgart delivered the last of his series of delightful lectures before the club, his subject being Venice, which was beautifully illustrated with stereopticon views.

SAVED BY MARRIAGE.

Patrolman Weds Girl He's Accused of Assaulting and Escapes Trial in Superior Court.

Rather than face in the Superior Court a charge of having criminally abused Mabel E. Frock, Hans Bergh, a patrolman, married the young girl yesterday. This practically stays criminal proceedings, as a wife cannot be compelled to testify against her husband, and Mrs. Bergh is the only witness to the acts alleged in the complaint.

"The matter will have to be dropped, I suppose," said Humane Officer Reynolds, who has been pushing the case, "but I am sorry that Bergh is to get off."

The policeman was arrested seven weeks ago by Sergt. Grogan after Reynolds had sworn out the warrant in Justice Austin's court. The prisoner was taken to Central Station and in the presence of other officers his star, gun, handcuffs and club were taken from him. He remained in jail over night, but friends came to his rescue the following morning and secured his release on $2000 bail. His preliminary examination was conducted behind closed doors, and at its conclusion he was bound over to the Superior Court. The case was soon to have come up for hearing.

At the marriage license office Bergh gave his age as 28 and his birthplace as Denmark. The girl said she was just 16 years old and a native of Missouri. She had the consent of her parents to the wedding, which was performed at their home.

In the complaint against Bergh he was accused of having induced Miss Frock to go to his room and remain there for three days and nights.

The bridegroom has been called the best dressed man in the police department. He is handsome and has a large number of friends. About two years ago his former wife secured a decree of divorce on the ground of cruelty.

CITY CLUB TICKET.

At the meeting of the City Club yesterday a resolution indorsing the campaign of the Chamber of Commerce for a new union station was adopted. The Nominating Committee reported the following as the regular ticket at the annual election to be held next month: President, John D. Works; first vice-president, Frank G. Finlayson; second vice-president, S. C. Graham; treasurer, Stoddard Jess; secretary, F. G. Henderson; members of the board of governors, Dr. Sherwin Gibbons and Gilbert S. Wright.

Sinaloa Lands

The Awakening of Mexico--
A Land Pregnant With Opportunity

Millions of acres of Virgin Lands lying on the extreme West Coast of our Sister Republic—heretofore practically inaccessible, are to be opened for settlement. American push, American railroads and American gold will work wonders, as they did in the days of the Argonauts, when California was the Mecca toward which all eyes were turned.

Not in the past thirty years has there been a proposition of such magnitude, so fraught with opportunities for money making, as the development of Sinaloa.

"Sinaloa--The California of Mexico"
Lands From $1.00 to $25.00 An Acre

The Sinaloa Lands were withdrawn from the market two years ago—and have not since, until now, been offered for sale.

This announcement will be of interest to the many hundreds of correspondents who have written asking for information during this period—and the general public as well!

The initial prices at which the land will be sold are from $1.00 to $25.00 an acre.

Mexico can no longer be called "The Land of Tomorrow"—it is the land of TODAY, beckoning to the sons of men to come—and help develop her wonderful resources.

Sinaloa is aptly termed "The California of Mexico," a soubriquet well earned, on account of its salubrious climate.

From the standpoint of health, Sinaloa compares favorably with any section of the United States.

Sinaloa is well watered; annual rainfall averages 30 in., 10 Rivers cross the State, and a large Irrigation Canal is now in course of construction, which will cover our Colony Lands.

State of Sinaloa

The State of Sinaloa is nearer to Los Angeles than is Seattle or St. Louis.

Kansas City is 500 miles nearer Sinaloa than it is to San Francisco.

Sinaloa will have the first port of entry, of importance, north of the Panama Canal.

Products of Sinaloa

Sugar Cane, Tropical Fruits, Corn, Beans, Sisal Fibre, Timber, Horses and Cattle are among the leading products of Sinaloa, while in mineral resources it is one of the richest of the Mexican States.

Terms

Sinaloa Lands Will Be Sold in Tracts to Suit, on Reasonable Terms of Payment.

DR. TOM GICK HIN

The Celebrated Chinese Physician is Doing Wonders With His Herbal Remedies.
Read the Following Testimonial and Be Convinced:

LOS ANGELES, CAL., March 19, 1909.

Following a run-down condition of my system due to my early abuse and dissipation. I suffered intensely with kidney and stomach troubles for over six years. My stomach was so weak that I could not eat solid food and sometimes unable to retain anything. I was constipated, had night sweats and gas was constantly forming in my stomach, causing me intense pain.

I suffered intensely from my kidneys. I was unable to sleep and always very nervous, and also troubled with palpitation of the heart. During all that time I was under the care of many physicians, but failed to find relief, and finally my case was given up as hopeless. At last I decided to try Chinese medicines. I went to Dr. Tom Gick Hin and took some of his herbal remedies, and was helped from the start. I took his remedies for about two months and am glad to say that I am all well. I never felt so good since my boyhood and have already gained ten pounds.

Gowns and Garments That Proclaim the Easter Season Modish Millinery Exhaling the Air of Spring

Hale's Supremacy Ably Demonstrated—Hale's Fair Prices For Good Goods Amply Exemplified—A Union of Those Two Irreconcilable Opposites, Style and Economy

$17.50 Pattern Hats $10.00

Direct copies of Paris pattern hats, cannibal turbans and other queer shapes. Wide brim, mushroom shapes, with bulky dome crowns; high square crown with long brims; Milans, French chip; Neapolitan; Hemp; Yeddo Arabian hair; rough silk and other braids, also pressed Leghorn shapes. Trimmings of flowers, foliage, fruits, plumage, cabachons and metallic ornaments. $17.50 pattern hats on sale at $10.00.

The Easter season demands new raiment. Conventionality demands infinitely more—stylish new raiment. The finances of many families demand economy, so the women of the household stand between love and duty—for who can blend those two incompatible negatives, style and economy?

Hale's new store bridges the chasm and places the woman, who through thrift or necessity, seeks to economize on stylish raiment, on the same plane regarding style, exclusiveness and limitless assortments as her more fortunate sister of unlimited means, who never counts the cost. For Hale's styles are as exclusive and authoritative as those of any shop in town where prices double and triple Hale's, and the assortments are as broad, comprehensive and satisfying as any in California.

$12.00 Pattern Hats $7.50

POOR SHOWING AT STANFORD.

U.S.C. Unable to Live Up to Former Contests.

Miller Runs Another Mile in Sensational Time.

Southern Team Takes Three First Places.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The athletes from the University of Southern California failed to live up to expectations in their meet with the Cardinals this morning and were defeated by the score of 92½ to 29½, a showing not quite up to that made in Los Angeles on the 16th.

Though the southerners had rather poor luck in having the star men show surprising reversals of form, the result must be attributed to splendid work on the part of the Stanford athletes.

Miller ran the half in only one second slower time than his record of last Saturday, covering the two laps in 1m. 59 1-5s. while Hemphill and Johnson shut out Gower, the U.S.C. entry for a place.

Hemphill of Stanford negotiated a beautiful race in the mile and ran Hall off his feet in the last lap while Fletcher forced the Methodist runner to third. The time of 4m. 35 4-5s. in this race was too fast for Hall and he was too ill to enter the two mile, thus giving Stanford three places without a contest.

Martin did not run up to form in the hundred, taking third in a 10 3-5s. race, though he pulled a close second in the 220-yard dash in 23 1-5s.

The Southerners came to the fore in the low hurdles when Lennox won from Captain Horton by a splendid spurt over the last barrier in 26 1-5s.

In the 120-yard hurdles Stanford turned the tables when Morris and Peaslee came in ahead of Lennox in 16 4-5s. Burek, who on form should have taken points for U.S.C., but was indisposed and not in condition to run his usual race.

LONG STRIDE WINS.

Reed ran a great race for U.S.C. in the quarter but Miller's long stride wore the plucky little southerner out on the back stretch so that both Miller and Wyman pulled away on the straightaway, leaving Reed a bad third.

The high jump was another victory for Southern California, though the Cardinal jumpers followed close. Murray secured first by a leap of 5ft. 9in., clearing the bar in beautiful form, but failed when the bar was raised another inch. Poor of Stanford, took second

NEXT YEAR'S POLO GAMES.

Coronado Contests This Year Were so Successful That Larger Plans Are Made.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 27.—Although the business of the tournament just closed is only fairly wound up, the Coronado Polo and Pony Racing Association already is beginning active preparations for next year's event on a bigger scale than ever.

Assurance is given that three English teams will cross the water for the purpose of attempting to wrest the championship from Burlingame. The Ranelaghs will come, while Richard Tobin has the promise that a famous team captained by DeCrepigny will also come. Frank Mackey said before he left that he will bring a third team of English players who will be even better in their work than the members of the Ranelaghs.

With three English teams practicing throughout the coming summer in anticipation of the event next year, the California players expect a hard contest next March.

The Bryn Mawr team will also return from Philadelphia, and the members of this aggregation expect to interest some of the polo enthusiasts of New York City to send a team.

It is possible that George Jay Gould and his son, Kingdon, will be appealed to in support of a New York team.

FOR THE COAST.

CHAMPIONSHIPS IN ELKS' WEEK

Middle of July Set for Big Athletic Contests.

Entries Confined to Those With Good Marks.

Ascot Park Probably to Be Scene of Games.

July 13 and 14 are the dates that have been set for the 1909 championships of the Pacific Athletic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union that are to be held in this city under the auspices of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and as a part of the programme of the Elks' Grand Lodge Reunion. The contests probably will be held at Ascot Park or Fiesta Stadium.

George W. Braden, who is managing the championships for the Elks, has made full arrangements for the meet. Track and field events, a regulation Marathon race, and wrestling in which athletes of California, Arizona, Nevada, Montana, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands will be eligible, are to be held for the individual championships of the Pacific Coast.

The track and field events are to begin at 2:30 o'clock, Tuesday, July 13, and the Marathon Race and wrestling bouts will be held on the following day. Championship medals of gold, silver and bronze will be awarded respectively to the first, second and third place winners in the following events: 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard dash, 880-yard run, mile run, two-mile run, 120-yard high hurdle race, 220-yard low hurdle race, sixteen-pound shot put; sixteen-pound hammer throw, discus throw, running high jump, running broad jump, and pole vault. The first six men to finish in the Marathon race will receive two gold, two silver, and two bronze medals, respectively.

Wrestling bouts are to be held in the 115, 125, 135, 145, 158 and 165-pound divisions, and the first and second men in each class will be awarded gold and silver medals, respectively.

REQUIRE CERTIFICATES.

On account of the infeasibility of holding preliminary trials, and to limit the competitions to high class athletes, every person desiring to enter the championships will be required to present a certificate signed by three reputable citizens showing that he has equaled or surpassed the following performances in the events in which he wishes to compete: 100-yard dash, 10 3-5s.; 200-yard dash, 24s.; 440-yard dash, 54s.; 880-yard run, 2m. 6s.; mile run, 4m. 56s.; two-mile run, 10m. 40s.; 120-yard hurdle race, 17s.; 220-yard hurdle race, 27s.; sixteen-pound shot put, 37ft. 6in.; hammer throw, 120ft.; high jump, 5ft. 6in.; broad jump, 20 feet; 6in.; pole vault, 10ft.; discus throw, 100ft.

All contestants must be registered in the Pacific Athletic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. Traveling and hotel expenses will be allowed to a limited number of high-class athletes, among whom will be representatives of Stanford, California, the Olympic Club and the Amateur Academic League of San Francisco. The medals will be awarded at a banquet to be tendered the place winners, Wednesday night, July 14.

The entry list will be closed at 6 o'clock, Saturday night, July 3.

WRESTLING EVENTS.

The wrestling championships will be under the direction of Alfred Treloar of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, who will register the contestants.

As the championships are to be held

PLUCKY WOMAN AUTOIST.

Mrs. I. L. Sherman of Ashtabula, O., Is to Drive Motor Car to Los Angeles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. I. L. Sherman of Ashtabula is to leave Cleveland for Los Angeles about the last week in May on one of the most remarkable automobile trips ever undertaken by a woman.

She will drive her own car going and returning. She will be her own mechanic. Her only companions are to be three women, who have not yet been chosen. She plans to be in Los Angeles for the Elks' Carnival.

"I know the route to Kansas City, and from there to Denver I will attempt to make the run with the New York to San Francisco racers," said Mrs. Sherman today.

Mrs. Sherman's husband is secretary of the Ashtabula Automobile Club.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Play was resumed today on the remaining eight boards in the international chess match for the Newnes trophy. The result of the game on the fifth board put Great Britain in the lead, Howell, America, resigning after forty-six moves to J. H. Blake, Great Britain. Score: Great Britain, 3½; America, 2½.

BATTLE ROYAL.

STEARNS-LOCO AUTO RACE ON.

Big Cars Ready for Match at Ascot Today.

Barney Oldfield Would Like to Drive the Loco.

Elks Patrol Will Be Feature of Motor Contest.

The Stearns-Locomobile 150-mile automobile track race is to be held at Ascot Park this afternoon.

Though the rains of the last week have interfered with the practice stunts at Ascot, both of the racers were on the course late yesterday afternoon and will be ready for the starter's gun this afternoon.

A large crowd is expected. Eddie Maier and H. Harrington of the Elks' committee are prepared to receive 10,000 spectators.

That the race will be fast is evidenced by the performance of the Stearns for fifteen miles on the soft track yesterday. The machine bounced over the course at an average speed of 1m. 3 1-5s. for each mile of the fifteen. The winning car will probably not be driven as fast as the Stearns was sent yesterday.

LOCO FAVORED.

The Locomobile has been tried over the course and looks fit. It is equipped like the Loco "40" which Robertson drove at Philadelphia, and is doped to win. The betting favors the Locomobile, several wagers having been laid at odds of 7½ to 10.

There seems to be no legitimate reason for such odds, as the cars are evenly matched. Perhaps the Loco has the better driver, but the Stearns is the faster car, it is believed.

Several of these moot questions will be settled this afternoon and as each driver promises to make no excuses should he lose the race the battle will be for blood. The better man should win as both machines have been tuned to the minute.

The course will not be easy to drive. It will be almost impossible to hug the pole all the way. The driver who wins must send his car more than the scheduled 150 miles in order to get the handsome $500 cup which the Elks have hung up as the trophy.

RIVALRY KEEN.

There is no keener rivalry between any two cars in this city than that existing between the Stearns and the Locomobile. Ever since the agencies were located in Los Angeles there has been talk of a match race. Money has been posted by R. J. Leavitt and by Huntley L. Gordon on several occasions, and both dealers have been anxious to get their machines together in a big speed trial. The anxious moment will come tomorrow afternoon when John G. Mott will send the cars away. Charles B. Hopper, secretary of the Automobile Club of Southern California, will be referee.

OLDFIELD ANXIOUS.

Barney Oldfield would like to drive the Locomobile. Should there be any difficulty today regarding drivers Barney may take the wheel of the Loco. He is anxious to try his skill against Soules, as the latter has been called a better track general than the veteran Oldfield.

There seems little likelihood, however, that the original programme will be changed. Murray Page should have no trouble in satisfying the committee as to his amateur standing and Bert Latham has already qualified.

Page is not as well known in Los Bert Latham and the Stearns Racer Taking the First Turn at Ascot Park.

The car is rounding the curve in a cloud of dust, which was a serious obstacle until the recent rains made the track soggy and prevented further practice stunts of both the Stearns and Loco. Latham is taking the turn wide open and Huntley L. Gordon clinging to the side of the car.

POMPANO ARE RUNNING WELL.

ANGLERS MAKE GOOD HAULS IN THE PAST WEEK.

Fish Start Earlier This Year Than Formerly and Fair Catches of the Toothsome Surf Have Been Made at the Various Beaches—Bass and Smelt Plentiful.

Surf and pompano have afforded the beach fishermen the principal diversion during the last week, and reports from the various resorts along the west coast indicate the returns have been quite satisfactory. The run of pompano has been earlier this year than for several seasons, and the comparatively small number of anglers on hand to enjoy the sport brought home some nice strings of the toothsome fish.

T. L. McClish, K. Norton and Fred Packard visited Port Los Angeles early in the week and succeeded in catching a string of twenty-two pompano and fourteen smelts between them. In the afternoon on the return trip to Santa Monica they cast their lines from the beach opposite the cañon and hooked five good-sized surf.

Bass and halibut formed occasional catches made at the long wharf earlier in the week. Four sheepshead, two sculpin and a three-pound bass were caught Tuesday by Mark McFarland. On Wednesday a good-sized halibut was taken from the end of the wharf by one of the beach regulars.

Bass and smelt were caught in numbers at Balboa, the bass being taken in the bay, and the smelt from the pier. Mackerel were numerous on the outside, and the boatmen reaped some good hauls.

BASKETBALL.

LONG BEACH GIRLS BEAT BAKERSFIELD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONG BEACH, March 27.—The local High School girls defeated Bakersfield High in a fast game of basketball on the High School court this afternoon, by a score of 18 to 5.

At the beginning of the game the Long Beach students felt that they would have a hard struggle as Miss Grenville, forward for the visitors, threw two free goals with ease. The ball did not touch the sides of the ring and it looked as though she would be a star at basket throwing. The visitors were very nervous and played the most of the game in a thoughtless manner. Many tries for baskets were made by the Bakersfield girls, but most of them were wild and did not go near the basket.

Two field goals and a free basket by Miss Kingcade and two field goals by Miss Tinklepaugh were thrown for the home team in the first half. Most of the work in this half was done by the Long Beach forwards and the Bakersfield guards. These girls did excellent playing and several hard struggles took place under the Long Beach goal.

The only field goal made for the visitors was thrown in the second half by Miss Grenville. She made a free try but just as she started to throw the ball some of the local rooters yelled, confusing her so that she missed the basket, but when the ball bounced back she recovered it and threw a field goal. She also made a free goal in the second half.

Miss Kingcade was the star player for Long Beach in the last half and threw two field and three free baskets. Miss Tinklepaugh made one field goal. The guarding of Miss Conder and Miss Taylor for the home team was also good.

Nearly 500 persons witnessed the contest and several rooters from the northern city accompanied their team here. Two fifteen-minute halves were played instead of the usual ten-minute thirds as the Bakersfield girls are accustomed to playing halves.

The line-up:

Bakersfield.		Long Beach.
Grenville	forward	Kingcade
Hare		Tinklepaugh
Harris	center	Robinson
Forker		Dayman
Slater	guard	Conder
Bender		Taylor

Field goals, Grenville 1, Kingcade 4, Tinklepaugh 3; free goals, Grenville 3, Kingcade 4; referee, Gainer of Bakersfield; umpire, Miss Upton of Long Beach; timers, Burcham and Baker; scorers, Miss Taylor and Stroud.

STEELHEAD TROUT FISHING IN APRIL.

"Trout season opens May 1, steelhead April 1." The foregoing telegram was received by Treasurer Ed Tufts of the Los Angeles Fish and Game Protective Association, from the San Francisco office of the California Fish and Game Commission. The report received Friday from Sacramento stating Gov. Gillett had signed a bill opening the trout-fishing season April 1 instead of May 1, indicated only steelhead trout.

GOING TO COURT OF MONTEZUMAS.

MISSES SUTTON AND BROWNE AND SINSABAUGH GO.

Southern States Champions to Be Chief Contenders of California Stars in Mexico City Early in April. Home Players Said to Be in Excellent Condition.

Miss May and Miss Florence Sutton, Nat Browne and Simpson Sinsabaugh are to represent the Southern California Tennis Association in the coming tournament at the City of Mexico, which is scheduled to be held April 2, 3 and 5.

The local players left for the Mexican capital Friday morning and they will have nearly a week in which to acclimate themselves to the rarefied atmosphere of the southern metropolis. The City of Mexico has an elevation of between 5000 and 6000 feet, and the sudden change from the sea coast level to the mountainous altitude is very likely seriously to affect the visitors in the course of strenuous play.

The Mexican tourney is said to be particularly attractive this year through the fact that players of class are entered from many States of the Union in addition to the presence of the best racqueters of Mexico. The Southern States especially have contributed a number of star tennis devotees, who are reputed particularly strong with the racquet, and who will make a strong bid for the tourney championships.

A. D. Duncan, who played in the southern contests last year, is very enthusiastic over the sport in the Mexican city. The facilities for play are excellent, the climate is bracing though not severe, and the entertainment afforded to the guests is all that could be desired.

Duncan believes the local players will be able to win a majority of the events. The Sutton sisters are conceded both the ladies' singles and doubles contests. As usual the only thing the opponents of the redoubtable Miss May are expected to do is to play the champion an "interesting match."

Sinsabaugh and Browne, the Southern California doubles champions, are said to have a good chance to annex the men's doubles event, although the visiting players from the Southern and Eastern States are thought to be too strong for the local boys in the singles contests.

COMMITTEE ACTS.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES FOR COMING SEASON.

NEW YORK, March 27.—An important change in the football rules was made by the Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, which completed its session here today, in the reduction of points for a goal from the field from four to three.

The object of the change, it was said, was to prevent two goals from the field counting more than a hard-won touchdown and goal.

Members of the committee say the changes will reduce the importance of a team's star field goal kickers and make it harder for a mediocre team with a good kicker to beat out a better all-around team without a star kicker.

Another change of importance was designed to prevent confusion in inflicting penalties when two penalties had been incurred by one team for the same play by giving the offended team the option of saying which penalty should be imposed.

WINS FIGHT.

AUTO CONQUERS MUD AND SLUSH.

CREW OF TWO IN POPE-HARTFORD HAVE THRILLING RIDE.

Alkali Bogs, Shifting, Quaking Adobe and Rain-soaked Roads no Obstacle to Powerful Motor Car During Journey to Owens River Aqueduct Camps.

C. H. Hudson, superintendent of a section of the Owens River Aqueduct construction, with C. P. Davidson had a thrilling experience the early part of last week during a run to Siding 18 in Joe Desmond's big Pope-Hartford roadster. The men returned Friday morning covered with mud and slush, but with the engine of the car working as nicely as when the machine left this city Monday at noon.

Rain during almost every hour the men were on the way put the roads in fearful shape. It was a constant battle with the deep mud and bad roads. Davidson drove. Rain commenced to fall only a short time after the two voyagers left this city. It was not necessary to call for assistance at any time during the run. It was a demonstration of what a good motor car, well operated, will accomplish, even in the face of severe obstacles.

Looking like a desert mud plow the car rolled into Los Angeles in the early hours of Friday morning with the battle against the elements won. The treacherous roads of the desert were a severe test as at times the car was hub-deep in the alkali bog. A shovel and a pick, with a long plank, were a part of the useful equipment of the car.

On the rear deck were suit cases, extra clothing, a camp outfit, and cooking utensils. It was necessary to change clothing two or three times a day during the run in order to keep dry.

The long six-by-six plank, with two small blocks and a rope, were used to lift the car from the bogs into which the wheels dropped as the engine shoved the machine forward. Wherever it was possible to secure traction the Pope-Hartford continued on its way. It was necessarw to use chains to aid, and brush was often scattered in the road.

The story of the trip, as told by Davidson, gives an excellent idea of the condition of the roads in the vicinity of Palmdale, Mojave and Randsburg at this time of the year.

MUD AND SLUSH.

"I left Monday noon in a heavy rain," said Davidson in telling of the trip. "I knew I had a fight ahead, but I shot the Pope-Hartford along the San Fernando road. In a short time I was chugging along the approach to the steepest hill in Southern California. As I rounded the turn at the old hut I saw another car trying to back up the hill. I made the grade on the "low."

"The other car succeded in backing over, and the two machines, with one other we soon met, kept well together a greater part of the trip to Mojave.

"At Acton, instead of rain we ran into a hailstorm, and there was six inches of snow on the ground. This snow, well mixed with the mud, did not make traveling any easier. We met one of the Mojave-Independence auto stages, which had been in Los Angeles for repairs. The night was passed at Acton, and next morning the three cars started for Palmdale. Except for the slippery, muddy road traveling was not difficult.

"Just out of Palmdale we stuck for the first time. I had turned off for Del Sur, when suddenly I felt the car sinking. We went down to the running boards in soft mud. We had to dig ourselves out.

"From Palmdale to Del Sur there is really no road, nothing more or less than one long lake. At this time the three cars were together, and I was elected to take the lead. At times we would find the road, but we still had the adobe mud to fight.

"My Hartford was doing itself proud, but suddenly looking back I saw in the distance the other two cars were also stuck in the mud. I went back and the seven men in the party worked from 8 o'clock until 2:30 with little success. We dug away the mud, jacked up the wheels and put down sage brush. But we couldn't get the machines out, and were forced to go on to Del Sur and get horses.

"Between Del Sur and Willow Springs we found a succession of lakes, mud holes and washouts. It was imposisble to follow the road, and we were forced to take to the brush.

"From Mojave we drove on to Siding 18. From there we went thirty-five miles across the desert to Randsburg. The run back to Mojave we made at night. The roads from Mojave in are in wretched shape."

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

W. K. Cowan has sold the following Rambler cars; A. M. Goodhue of Long Beach, a seven-passenger car; Mrs. H. Ferris of Oxnard, a seven-passenger touring car. A five-passenger touring car was delivered to H. O'Reilly of Pasadena.

Mel G. Johnson, manager of the local branch of the Buick Motor Car Company, claims to have sold ninety-three Buicks since the first of this year.

William R. Johnson, representing the Stromberg carbureter, arrived from San Francisco on Tuesday, and returned Thursday night.

Every autoist has the road race fever, and every motor car owner thinks he could drive his high-powered car to victory in the July 4 race if he had half a chance.

The Los Angeles Railway Company is planning to move crowds quickly to Ascot Park this afternoon. If you drive an automobile you must get through the big gate before 1:15 o'clock.

One of the particular jobs at Ascot Park this afternoon will be keeping the score. The scorers are H. M. Mayberry, O. Z. Salling, Charles Covell, Tracy Q. Hull, J. F. Henry and George M. Wallace.

"Grand Avenue Bill" Ruess will be announcer today.

The judges for the Stearns-Loco race are R. R. Brassy, Dick Ferris and W. E. Bush.

A Baker Electric was also delivered to Earle C. Anthony, manager of the Western Motor Car Company. This car was purchased by Mr. Anthony at the New York show. After investigating the different lines, Mr. Anthony decided on a Baker. The car is very beautifully finished in light maroon and the upholstery is an imported broadcloth of light elephant gray shade, making a very pleasing combination.

The Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Car Company reports the sale of a six-cylinder Premier to J. Benson Wrenn, manager of the Traders Oil Company of Bakersfield.

W. F. McGuire, general manager of a large bicycle manufactury in Toledo, is in this city.

Norman W. Church has returned from San Francisco.

W. K. Cowan has sold a Rambler auto fire truck to the city of San Diego.

Jack Lankershim and Henry T. Hazard are expected from San Francisco today in time for the Loco-Stearns match race. They are on their way in Lankershim's big Stearns.

There will be a meeting of the Dealers' Association Tuesday night.

The Elmore Motor Car Company reports the following sales: Model 44, seven passenger to George L. Hazzard of Whittier; Model 33 to G. R. Minnick.

D. H. Hart of the Rosslyn Hotel purchased about a month ago a Baker Victoria, which has just been delivered. This car was presented to Mrs. Hart as a birthday present. The car is very beautifully finished in dark maroon, and has imported broadcloth upholstery.

The Elmore Motor Car Company has a shipment of Baker Electrics on the way, and when they arrive will have a complete stock of all models, including a two and four-passenger coupé.

Charles G. Andrews, vice-president of the Wright & Callender Co., has just returned from Santa Barbara, after spending a few days in the Channel City. Mr. Andrews drives a seven-passenger Elmore.

The Woolwine Motor Car Company have delivered the following cars: R. E. Ibbittson, seven-passenger Marmon touring car; Dr. West Hughes, five-passenger Marmon; J. M. Russell, five-passenger, and W. H. Smith, a four-passenger Marmon. A shipment of Marmon "Thirty-twos" was received yesterday.

STERNS LOCO RACE.

Angeles as Latham, as he only appeared here once. He won the twenty-four-hour race and at that time looked like one of the best amateurs in the country. One of the wagers of $750 to $1000, with the Loco on the big end, was placed yesterday because of the ability of Page to send the Loco to victory in former events.

There is no driver who has mastered the turns of Ascot like Barney Oldfield. Even Soules cannot send a Stearns over the course at such a terrific clip for a short distance. With Barney at the Loco wheel and Soules at the Stearns a battle royal would be witnessed.

LATHAM CONFIDENT.

Latham is confident that he can win. In spite of the fact that others have tried to impress upon him that Page is a better driver he has lost none of his nerve. He is level-headed and daring, but will not take an unnecessary chance. He feels that this is his most important race.

Oldfield will drive a five-mile exhibition with his "Big Ben" as one of the preliminaries to the main event. He will follow Paul Derkum, who will ride a mile exhibition on a motorcycle.

There will be a five-mile novelty race with the following cars entered. Oldsmobile, entered by the H. O. Harrison Company; Premier, the Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Car Company; Cadillac, Lee Motor Car Company, and Elmore, John Luckenbach.

The Elks Lodge with the White Squadron drill corps, will attend in a body.

RAMBLER RECORD RUNS.

The Rambler roadster, which L. T. Harvey drove over the Century course in San Francisco last week has a remarkable record. This car on June 11, 1908, began its record-breaking stunts, and from that time until last week kept smashing marks from San Francisco to San Diego. Harvey is well known in Los Angeles.

His first record was from San Francisco to San Luis Obispo. He made the distance, 246 miles, in 7h. 47m.

On September 17 he drove from San Francisco to Los Angeles, 486 miles, in 19h. 6m. The record, held by the White Steamer, from city to city is 17h. 17m.

On September 26, Harvey made the round trip to San Diego and return by way of the valley route of 331 miles in 11h. 31m., and on December 12 made the same run in 10h. 32m., the record.

On January 3 of this year he made the round trip record from San Francisco to Del Monte, and won the 200-mile "Mud Plug" event on February 7, making a perfect score.

On March 15 he drove the Rambler around San Francisco Bay, 100 miles, in 2h. 23m., the record.

REDLANDS HILL CLIMB.

The Mile High Hill Clumb Association is planning special features for the races Saturday afternoon at Redlands. A number of entries from Los Angeles are assured, as local dealers are taking keen interest in the proposed event. A number of dealers will drive out Saturday morning in time for the start, which will be at 1:30 o'clock.

the motor car enters the garage the exact time of arrival is stamped on a card. A second stamp is made when the car is taken out. These cards are mailed to the owners. The motorist knows just how many times his car has been out.

The Thomas garage has a frontage of seventy-five feet on Olive street and is 150 feet in depth. It is one of the handsomest places of its kind in Los Angeles. Rene Brassy has secured a ten years' lease on the property.

The ladies parlor is one of the interesting features. Fitted with the latest furnishings, the cosy parlor is wonderfully complete. Even the electric curling iron has not been forgotten.

The show room and offices are finished in hard wood. There is also a men's reception-room and private offices for the salesmen and managers. The front show room will never contain more than one or two cars.

The garage is light and well ventilated. It has a turntable in the center, and the driveway allows three cars to be driven in at the same time. There are individual lockers behind each car stall.

The finish of the large garage will appeal to the motorist who likes completeness. The Thomas garage is strictly down-to-date and there are accommodations for scores of machines.

PACKARD TEST IN DEEP SNOW.

STYLISH MOTORS MUST MAKE GOOD ON ROUGH ROADS.

Twelve High-Priced Machines Buck S fts on Special Test and Are n Sent Over Frozen Roads to Prove Their Stability—Shipped to Los Angeles.

There is perhaps no severer test that can be given a motor car than a plunge through several miles of foot-deep snow. The Packard Motor Car Company has adopted this means of testing its big machines, and under the direction of Chief Tester W. J. Birmingham the cars were sent through the heavy snow of the roads in the vicinity of Detroit recently on a novel demonstration.

Twelve high-priced Packards, just out of the factory, were placed in Birmingham's charge. The worst roads that could be found near Detroit were chosen for the test, and the cars were taken twenty miles for the preliminary run through the snow.

Bucking the drifts at from twenty to forty miles an hour, the Packards were put through their stunts, while the men at the wheels listened to the hum of the engines and strove to find possible flaws. The dozen motor cars behaved splendidly, and were then taken for a series of daily excursions over the roads and through the snows.

Before the finished Packard product was ready for delivery it had to undergo a series of tests, each harder than that previous. Then when the road work had been completed the engines were disassembled and carefully examined. If the examination is satisfactory, the car goes to the finishers. If not, it is sent back to the shops.

In order to insure the stability of the Packards careful tab is kept on each machine. The cars have an individuality, and must pass muster singly. Each machine has its own life, and care is taken in the construction.

One of the last shipments sent this year to the Western Motor Car Company in this city was put through the same rigid test, and though Packard buyers in Los Angeles were clamoring for their cars, the factory took its time in perfecting the machines. Through the same painstaking round of departments the cars were taken until at last in their Packard blue they were ready for shipment.

Every precaution is taken until the car is in the hands of the buyer. They are shipped many times by express to anxious motorists, who are waiting to try the machines over the roads. Before the customer has a chance to hear the motor turn over, however, the factory men know almost to a certainty that the car will do all that the agent has claimed it will.

OFFER CARD WHEN ARRESTED.

Members of Automobile Club of Southern California Would Avoid Night in Prison Cell.

Members of the Automobile Club of Southern California who are arrested for speeding will not be obliged to pass a night in the "bull-pen," if the plan of the club passes muster with the Police Commission. Charles B. Hopper is perfecting a plan whereby a member, when arrested, can tender his membership card in lieu of bail. The arresting officer will take up the card as surety for the driver's appearance the following morning in Police Court, and the club will guarantee bail for the offender.

The plan has been worked successfully in other cities. The club promises to do all in its power to check speeding. When a member is convicted of flagrant abuse of the speed laws the club will retain his card. There are 900 members in Southern California.

The club has decided to post the coast road to San Diego. The work has been begun from the San Diego end, and the signs will be placed through San Diego county first.

An effort on the part of the club to secure better roads in the lower counties resulted in the delaying of the road sign work. San Diego has recently prepared to issue bonds for road improvements, and one of the first highways to be cared for will be the road along the coast to Oceanside.

With the shorter road placarded, autoists will enjoy the drive along the ocean front to the southern city. The inland route has the helpful signs, and this will mean that the round-trip route, over which the Chanslor-Lyon trophy cup time dashes have been held, will be posted for the entire distance.

BRIGHT SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

About twenty entries have been secured for a Denver to the City of Mexico endurance run, which is being promoted by Denver motorists, for September.

A motor car equipped with flanged wheels is now used regularly for inspection work on the Sierra Railway, in California.

If the motor stage line recently inaugurated between Philadelphia and New York proves successful, a line will be started between Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

A number of prominent French motorists are planning the organization of the Highway League to collect subscriptions enabling it to make trials of various methods of road-making.

Europe is beginning to turn to the moderate-powered, low-priced machine, but the trend in favor of the small car, however, is not so pronounced as on this side of the Atlantic.

It is estimated that the value of automobile products of Detroit for the year 1909 will be $50,000,000, making it the automobile manufacturing center of the world.

Special features of the automobile opening in Indianapolis this week (March 23-28) were an illuminated night parade, a novelty race and contests for garage employés.

The present speed limit, of twenty miles an hour in the open country will remain in force in New Jersey, according to all present indications, the Legislature having voted down a thirty-mile limit.

The Automobile Club of Hartford, Ct., is making plans for the establishment of a permanent clubhouse, discussing it at a largely attended meeting of the club held recently.

OUTDOOR CIRCUS.

PLANS FOR AUTOFEST FAST TAKING FORM.

THERE is every likelihood that the Dealers Association will decide to hold the automobile circus soon after the July 4 road race. The committee, consisting of R. S. Conwell, Norman W. Church, and Leon T. Shettler, will meet this week to discuss the details. It is possible that Mr. Conwell will be asked to handle the affair.

There is much work to be done before the autofest plans will be in working order. Details that are mutitudinous are necessary before the machinery of the proposed big show can be set in motion. The motor car fiesta should be one of the greatest drawing cards ever pulled off by the association.

Under tents at Ascot Park a show of large proportions will be kept going either seven or fourteen days, and the crowd will be treated to a novel exhibition of what the autmoibile can do. One of the proposed features is an auto quadrille. Eight cars, or if possible twice the number, will be put through their paces by skilled drivers, and to the music of a band the machines will waltz single, in pairs in fours, and in special figures.

Never before has anything like an automobile circus been attempted. There will be big, little, light and heavy cars and the public will be able to see what a machine can do when it is necessary to get out of difficulties.

The novice will be treated to a wonderful automobile demonstration. It will be possible to get a motor car education at the open-air show. Held at a time of the year when weather conditions lend themselves to open-air fetes the Ascot Park auto circus should draw crowds from all over Southern California.

It is more than likely that the autofest will be held during the Elks carnival in this city, or at least immediately after and while the crowds of tourists are still in Los Angeles. The automobile dealers and their friends are planning to make the affair a great success, and at the same time to make it a money-making venture.

There will be unexcelled opportunities to show cars during the automobile circus. Ascot Park track has been put into shape for the Elks' race and can be used for demonstrations. There will be rough places and inclines over which the cars can be sent to prove their staying powers.

DEALERS MUST CHOOSE COURSE

San Fernando and Santa Monica Willing.

Autoists Take Keen Interest in Big Road Race.

Twenty Entries at Least for Motor Classic.

Divided on the question of an automobile course for the great road race on July 4, the committee of the Dealers' Association, consisting of Leon T. Shettler, William R. Ruess and Ralph Hamlin, will present two reports to the Automobile Dealers' Association meeting Tuesday night. The autoists must decide whether to hold the race near San Fernando or on the Santa Monica-Soldiers' Home roads. Both places offer special advantages and the residents of both communities are anxious for the race.

The majority of the committee favor the San Fernando course.

On Friday the committee was driven over the favored course and these roads seem to lend themselves specially to the needs of the committee which is striving to pick out roads where there will be few obstacles. At San Fernando there is a splendid stretch of country over which the machines can be speeded. Along the highway near Roscoe a grand stand and plenty of parking space can be secured.

Ralph Hamlin favors the Santa Monica course and he has been working hard to bring the other members of the committee to his way of thinking. Shettler and Ruess like the San Fernando course. This seems to leave Hamlin out in the cold as far as the choosing of the Santa Monica course is concerned. The people of Santa Monica and vicinity are willing to do anything within reason to bring the race to their section of the county.

SANTA MONICA WILLING.

The expense of fitting up the Santa Monica course would be only half as great as that of getting the San Fernando course into shape. For about $3000 the Santa Monica roads could be moulded into condition for a race such as the committee has decided to hold. This expense will be largely borne by the Santa Monica people who will put almost every foot into shape for fast driving, provided the race is held over their course. There will be only one dangerous turn on the Santa Monica course, and that will be on the bluffs overlooking the ocean. The Santa Monica course will be the most spectacular.

With all corners of the county pulling for such a race, and with the sentiment in favor of the auto stronger than it has ever been, the committee will probably be given wider choice if it is possible to wait at least a few weeks before deciding. The time, however, is growing short, as it will require at least a month to get the roads into shape.

There is not a dealer in town who is not anxious to enter one or more cars in the big race. Everybody has gone race mad and as a result an entry list of twenty is assured and there may be several more added.

BIG NEW RAMBLER.

W. K. Cowan of the Rambler agency has just received the big forty-five-horse-power Rambler which he will enter in the July road race. L. T. Harvey of San Francisco will be brought here to drive the machine. This is the largest Rambler the factory has ever shipped to this city. It can make sixty-five miles an hour on the road.

The National may be entered in the big run. L. H. Johnson, the local agent, has just received his big touring car and a handsome six-cylinder roadster. This type of car did great things in the Savannah race and kept going when every other American-made machine was out of the running.

Don Lee wants to enter a Cadillac. He is prepared to send the car into either the light or the heavy car race. He will start one or two of the light fast cars and will depend upon them to keep plugging into an important place. There are several others who feel as Lee does.

One of the possible restrictions for the big race is that each car entered must make sixty miles or more an hour on the road in order to qualify. This will mean that the race will be the fastest ever held in the West.

Should the dealers decide on the San Fernando stretch citizens of Burbank and Lankershim will get out with teams and begin road building at once. The course will be leveled and oiled and made fast. It will be put into shape for five successive years of racing.

INTO BALDY'S SNOWS.

Bert Blanchard of Pomona Runs to Near the Summit of Mountain in Two-Cylinder Reo.

There is more snow at Bayham's camp than there has been at any other time this year. In fact the snow is deeper now than it has been for several years. From the edge of Hogsback to the summit of the mountain the whiteness spreads for six miles in a great white carpet.

Bert Blanchard of Pomona made the journey into San Antonio Cañon Wednesday in a two-cylinder Reo. The roads were in good condition, and he found no difficulty in making the ascent. There was plenty of snow after reaching Hogsback, and the little car plunged through the drifts without hesitating.

Within twenty or thirty yards of the camp it was impossible to get traction because of the depth of the snow, and a trail had to be dug to allow the car to proceed. The road begins to get dangerous after leaving Bayham's camp, and it is impossible to make more than a mile or two, even if shovels and picks are carried to make a trail.

Great drifts of snow in the ravines along the mountainside add to the rare beauty of the trip up the cañon. The road has not been washed out anywhere this side of Bayham's camp, according to Blanchard, but beyond the camp the mountain stream has washed out all semblance of the road.

Autoists from Redlands, Riverside and San Bernardino have been making the short run the past week into the cañon to the snows. The snow line is only seventeen and a half miles from Pomona.

Non-Stop Run.

Word has been received from Boston that the four-cylinder Maxwell automobile with which it is proposed to lower the world's non-stop record by driving 10,000 miles, has so far traveled a total distance of 1750 miles. The motor of the car is still running and, barring accidents, the drivers expect to set a new world's mark.

YOU'RE missing something if you don't look up the Rebus Contest on Page 18, Section III. $800 in cash and prizes absolutely

SLUGGER FAVORED.

DATE CHANGED FOR SMALL PUGS.

WEBSTER AND HEFRON TO MEET ONE WEEK EARLIER.

Goldfield Scrapper Desires to Go Back to Desert Town to Clash With Freddie Weeks—Return Bout for Flynn and Papke Improbable—Picato and Wolgast Ready.

It was announced yesterday that the date for the Hefron-Webster bout at the Pacific Athletic Club had been advanced from April 13 to April 6, in order to accommodate Hefron, who desires to be in Goldfield on April 12, to arrange a match there with Freddie Weeks. From this, Hefron figures on beating Webster easily and in all probability will be made a slight favorite over Danny.

The chances for a return fight between Flynn and Papke have gone to the bad apparently, for Flynn declares he will not make weight for any more pugs. He has given away weight in all of his scraps and says he will fight at catchweights hereafter. Since Papke fought Flynn before at catchweights, there is little reason why he should not do it again, if he has the real class and has not gone back, as many sports think.

Picato and Webster, who are to meet before the Pacific Club at Naud Junction on Tuesday night, will do their last hard work today and each one has prepared something extra in the way of programme for the occasion. Both boys are practically ready for the mill and will do nothing tomorrow except a little road work. The boys who are to furnish the preliminary part of the card are said to be ready and from all reports the fight bugs may expect something good from the Kutchos-Cleveland and Corbett-Dalton scraps.

CLUB NOT SOLD.

DEAL STILL UNDER WAY.

The statements in a twilight sheet concerning the sale of the Jeffries Athletic Club to one Hawkins, as forecasted in The Times several days ago, do not appear to be true. The news was published in The Times that negotiations were under way for the purchase of the club by Hawkins, but that it might take some days to complete the deal, if it was put through.

Jack Kipper, the only director of the club who could be reached last night, stated emphatically that no sale to Hawkins had been made and that Manager Baron Long had decided that he would not go east for thirty days.

REFUSE TO FINISH.

NO MONEY IN SIGHT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 27.—Local fight followers are disgusted at the fight put up by Harry Wuest Thursday night. Although he was not even scratched or was not all in by any means, Wuest's seconds threw a towel into the ring at the end of the fourth round of what was scheduled to have been a 20-round bout with Jack Burns.

While Burns showed that he was the cleverer boxer of the two neither displayed much class on account of the small attendance. Wuest's seconds would not allow the fight to go on for the small amount of money in sight and the referee gave Burns the decision. Neither boxer received a hard blow.

Sam Jeffries, manager for Burns, will take his protégé to Los Angeles Sunday. He is seeking a match with Jim Flynn and has $500 to wager on the result.

Williams Loses on Foul.

SACRAMENTO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank Mantell was given the decision over Kid Williams on a foul in the thirteenth round in a 20-round fight before the Buffalo Athletic Club, last night. Williams had the better of the fight in the first rounds but weakened toward the end. He fouled Mantell several times. The foul upon which he lost the fight was in the thirteenth round, when, after the gong had sounded, he swung a blow to Mantell's head after the latter had turned his back. Mantell said in a signed statement that he had never been in such a dirty fight. Solomon Levinson of San Francisco refereed the fight.

VERNON GOES TONIGHT.

Happy Hogan, manager of the Vernon team, will leave tonight at 11:30 o'clock with his team of players for Sacramento, where the Vernons and the Senators will open the season on Tuesday. The following fifteen men will make the trip:

Kinkel and Hogan, catchers; Shafer, Coy, Hitt, Harkins, Hensling and Newlin, pitchers; Brashear, first base; Graham and Haley, second base; Mott, third base; Eagan, shortstop; Martinke, left field; Goodman, center field; Stovall, right field. Hogan wired Mertes yesterday to join the team at Sacramento, and he will be signed if terms can be agreed upon.

Hogan made a bet yesterday that the Vernon team would take the first series it played with the Los Angeles team, or four out of seven games. It is now up to Dillon to prove which manager has the best team.

Final Games Today.

Weather permitting, the Sox will play their final two games today in this end of the State, when they meet the Vernons at the Vernon grounds this morning and the Los Angeles team at the Chutes this afternoon. The big leaguers are in fine shape now and are really ready to begin the season in the big bush.

A Revelation In Service Comfort Style

We Could Save $60,000 This Year On Axles—Alone—But We Won't

THE VELIE AUTOMOBILE is made to sell at a profit, of course. But it is made to make good, too—this year and through the years to come. So we cut off some of the possible profit to add to the make-good worth of the car.

Take the Velie axles for example. We could save $60.00 per car on axles alone, and build the Velie with axles that other manufacturers consider good enough for their cars. On our 1909 output of one thousand cars this would mean a saving of $60,000.00 to us. But we don't want that kind of profit. We build the Velie with the same high grade axles that are used in cars selling at double the Velie price. The Velie car owner gets the benefit and we get the credit for honest construction. That's worth more to us and our agents than the $60,000.00 added profit would be.

It's the same way all through the Velie. In every detail of material, design and construction the Velie represents the very best automobile worth possible for a moderate price.

The Velie 30 is built in many styles—touring car, all types of roadsters, and baby tonneau. Equipment includes magneto, storage battery, speedometer, odometer, foot accelerator, robe rail, two gas lamps, generator, three oil lamps, horn, muffler cut-out, and complete tool kit.

We guarantee these cars ABSOLUTELY for one year, and at the end of the year will thoroughly overhaul them—free of charge.

Specific Reasons Why The Tourist Is the Best Value Car You Can Buy

The Tourist is made right here in Los Angeles in a factory that ranks with the biggest and best automobile factories in this country. Every Tourist part is made by specialists—and the Tourist factory is equipped with every modern facility to reduce factory cost to a basis that puts Tourists beyond competition.

The Tourist pays freight on raw materials only. Every purchaser of an Eastern car must pay the freight on that car. The difference is astounding. The freight charges on the raw material for a type "H" Tourist, which weighs 2800 pounds, are approximately $25.00—while the freight charges on the same car if shipped as finished product from the East, would be about $150.00. This item alone represents $125.00 you save on a Tourist.

Tourists are sold only on the Coast, and therefore have no national advertising and selling expense—an expense which Eastern makers must bear, and of which you must pay your pro rata part when you buy an Eastern car.

New Tourist parts may be secured right here at home without delay or cost of expressage—while express charges on automobile parts from the East are often actually greater than the cost of the parts themselves. This is another vital point in favor of buying a Tourist—another definite reason why the Tourist is the best value car you can buy.

Gentlemen: We have recently tried the "Morgan" Auxiliary Gas which Messrs. Hoyt & Moses of this city are your western agents, and we report very satisfactory results from its use.

It gives us considerably more power without any change in the adjust carburetor, and also saves about 20% in gasoline over the old method, or use of your "Mixer."

These tests were made over the same road, by the same driver, and same conditions, without any change of adjustments in carburetor, with the "Mixer" in the inlet pipe. We think it a splendid thing, and we are installing them in our motors.

Very truly yours,

CLEAN-CUT WORK.

s clean-cut bit of handicraft, ider, every part of which has constructed by the students of ytechnic High School, members school aëro club, which is aux- to the Aëro Club of California. Two runners, two feet apart, about an inch square and ten feet long, form the base of the machine, curving upward at the forward, while almost at the nethermost extremity is reared the small platform upon which the aviator will sit. On each side project the two planes, or wings, twenty feet long and two feet wide, one six feet above and parallel to the other, giving the machine a spread of twenty-two feet. At the forward end of the runners is another double-deck arrangement of planes so controlled by a lever from the car that they may be tilted on a knuckle device in any direction, regulating the fore and aft stability; and immediately behind these planes the rudder will be located. The superficial area of these planes will be about 200 square feet.

"The boys are not ready to give out anything concerning the device designed to assure lateral stability," explained Prof. Twining, yesterday. "This is altogether a new departure in aëroplane construction and we are not sure how it will work out. We prefer to wait a little before saying anything about it, but, as far as the general ensemble of the machine is concerned, there is no doubt that it will work, for it follows closely the lines laid down by Wright, Lillienthal and Chanute. Only in this machine the planes will not be warped as in the Wright machine, to secure lateral stability."

The aluminum joints which hold together the woodwork were cast in the school foundry by the students. The slender rods of oak and spruce were finished in the school wood-working shop. Piano wire is used for the trussing, being drawn taut by means of buckles secured from bicycle spokes to which the piano wire ends have been welded firmly by the young mechanics. The total weight of the aëroplane will be about sixty pounds.

NO MOTIVE POWER.

The aëroplane will carry no motor, being designed solely as a glider.

"We have not yet decided how we will give it a start," said Prof. Twining. "It may be that we will place the machine on an automobile to give it its impetus, stopping the auto suddenly so that the aroplane may glide off, after which it will sail as far as it can. Or we may put it on a smooth runway, well greased with soap or some other lubricant, and give it a good boost by means of a rope that would detach itself from the forward bar of the car when the machine had gone far enough. These, however, are only details which the boys will decide upon for themselves, just as they have decided other points. I am a member of the club, but I have taken no part in the construction of the machine."

"Who will make a flight, professor?" he was asked.

The professor's eyes twinkled merrily, as though he would enjoy nothing better himself.

"I don't know," he laughed. "Of course, the first few tests will not be made with anybody aboard the machine. We will go slowly, you understand, putting on weights until we get to the weight of a man. You will observe that this is a man-carrying aëroplane. When it has been satisfactorily demonstrated that the aëroplane is all right in all its parts, then somebody will make a flight.

"Yes, we are sure to have everything in readiness to give a public demonstration during the aëro exhibition."

The Aëro Club of the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School has aroused considerable enthusiasm among the students and new members are going in right along. The full membership of the organization up to date, is: W. S. Eaton, president; Frank Rickershauser, L. Bussert, H. LaV. Twining, Sidney Twining, H. C. Rice, T. Hutton, Myron Rodda, Paul Radir, F. Conger, W. H. Cooper, Ted Layne, J. Bangerter, M. Turner, W. Daniels, Francis Harriman, E. Mitchell, R. Ainslee, and Park S. Hyde.

BIRD FLIGHT.

AERO CLUB DISCUSSION.

Bird flight and soaring will be demonstrated and its practicability discussed at a social meeting of the Aëro Club of California in the Chamber of Commerce Hall Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

There has been considerable activity among the membership of late, interest in the work being at a high pitch as a result of the rapid approach of the big public exhibitions which are to be given at the new Fiesta stadium and it is expected that the meeting Tuesday evening will be largely attended.

Furthermore, the construction of the machine will be such that we may dispense with any platform or specially prepared landing either in alighting or starting, which is a point not yet reached by the Zeppelin balloon.

"Our gas bags will be built on frames of suitable wood, well trussed with wire, and even if one of them should lose all of its gas, the machine is so designed that it could not fall, but must come down as easily as a big parachute. The main points of the design, however, are that it will give a compact, solid airship, presenting but little lateral resistance, which may be anchored close to the ground, without any baskets, bags and things of that sort in the way; and, most important, the machine can be launched at an angle from the ground without outside aid, just as it can alight. The Zeppelin airship, you know, requires several assistants on the ground when it alights.

"I have not given up my aëronef, for this is an entirely different type, and I hope to make both a success for different uses."

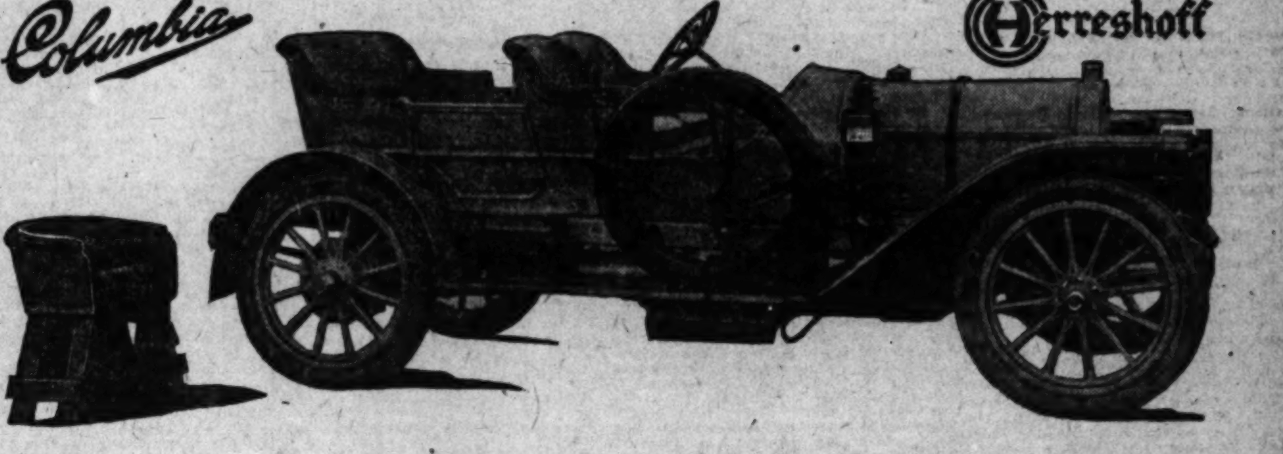
Columbia

Herreshoff



Yes, This Is the Famous "Columbia" [Roadster Type]

With Extra Rumble Seat, Furnished Without Extra Charge as Part of the Equipment.

You had better get your eye trained so that you can tell a "Columbia," no matter whether you meet one, or whether one is passing you, or whether it has passed you. In either case you will have the same desire to own one. As it approaches, you will notice the trim lines, steadiness of motion. Passing you, you will have the same thought, but this time you will have to think faster, for you must remember the driver of a "Columbia" can always get by if he wants to. You may not like his dust, but you will simply have to "grin and bear it." His car will pick up quicker than yours, and will attain a speed of from sixty to sixty-five miles per hour without a struggle. Then after it has passed, your admiration increases; you have noticed the ease and quietness of the performance—a very slight purr, and a cloud of dust—that's all.

You wonder why and how these things are accomplished; you see the indication of great power. This is attained by the harmony of design and construction. No use putting in a motor weighing a ton to get results. It sounds big to say fifty or sixty horse power, but do you stop to consider that a motor designed to produce these results (as usually figured on the relation of bore and stroke) means an increase in weight which more than counteracts your so-called increase in power? What does bore and stroke count for, if you are not able to properly transmit the power to the rear wheels? Results are what we are all striving for. Results count.

Notice the low, rakish design. You can readily see how it would "hang to the road." See the long, low spring suspension, insuring ease and comfort. And then think how many troubles are eliminated by the famous "make-and-break" system used in the "Columbia." It does away with coils, timer, battery and spark plugs. Think of it. Figure what percentage of your troubles lie in these very vital points, and how many people know how to overcome "ignition trouble?". Did you ever see the size of a spark that comes from a "make-and-break" system? If so, you know one of the secrets as to why we secure so much speed, and why we get so many miles out of each gallon of gasoline.

Come in and see the cars as soon as they arrive. Two carloads now en route, arrival about April fifth, meaning practically immediate delivery. No better value ever offered than is shown in this famous "Columbia" line, at Twenty-seven hundred and fifty dollars, here. Investigate now. Full particulars at our temporary office, 311 West Second st.

Watch for announcement next Sunday regarding wonderful "Herreshoff," at Eighteen hundred here.

SURPRISING.

PICKS OF BOOKS GET THE COIN.

NAGS TOUTED BY PRICE MAKER FINISH IN FRONT.

Beast Called Mary Davis Captures the "Feature" Event in Easy Fashion, the One the "Talent" Gambled on Being Sixth—Inflection and Pio Pico Surprise Sports.

The majority of the nags that the bookmakers' price man picked out, won yesterday at the Arcadia track, but some of these beats were held at such figures in the gambling that the suckers could not bet on them.

The "feature" event of the card was the fourth race at one mile and this was won by a nag called Mary Davis, by five lengths. Rose Queen, the one that was put up for the suckers to bet on, ran a bad sixth, as might have been expected.

The principal surprises of the day were furnished by Inflection running second in the second race and Pio Pico finishing third in the seventh race. Whip Top was "put over" again in the third race. Results:

Seven furlongs: Guy Fisher, 103 (Wilson,) won; Donald McDonald, 102 (Kennedy,) second; J. H. Reed, 103 (McGee,) third; time 1:26 2-5. Gerrymander and Patron also ran. Scratched—Indictment.

Four and one-half furlongs: Angerona, 107 (Russell,) won; Inflection, 105 (Musgrove,) second; Ollie James, 104 (Kennedy,) third; time 0:42 2-5. Placide, Virgie Casse, McLeod, Severa, La Severena also ran. Scratched—Sir Ashton.

Seven furlongs: WhipTop, 103 (McCahey,) won; Spohn, 105 (Kennedy,) second; Ben Stone, 106 (McGee,) third; time 1:27. The Thorn, Prince of Castile, Itan also ran. Scratched—Snowball.

One mile: Mary Davis, 110 (Rettig,) won; Sorrowful, 110 (McGee,) second; Chilla, 110 (Butwell,) third; time 1:40 1-5. Jane Laurel, Rose Queen, Fair Annie, Miss Naomi, Bell of Brass, Meddling Hannah, Achieve also ran. Scratched—Pills.

One mile: Financier, 105 (Musgrave,) won; Verme, 106 (McCahey,) second; Josie, 104 (Wilson,) third; time 1:41 1-5. Sing Spring, Pickaway, Bucket Brigade, Capt. Burnett also ran. Scratched—Catalina, Lucky Lad, St. Elmwood, Buchanan, Sibari, Agnes Virginia.

One and three-sixteenths miles: Beauciere, 112, (McGee,) won; Raleigh, 100 (Kain,) second; Oberon, 108 (Brooks,) third; time 2:01 3-5. Harry Rogers and Baron Esher also ran.

Five and one-half furlongs: Enfed, 104 (Kennedy,) won; Col. Bob, 113 (Musgrove,) second; Pio Pico, 107 (Wrispen,) third; time 2:01 2-5. Waldorf, Aunt Aggie and Mark Anthony II also ran. Scratched—Harrigan.

BIG BELL STAKES.

TURRET RINGS IN FIRST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, March 27.—Turret, a son of Cunard, proved a surprise by winning the Bell stakes at Emeryville today. Donau and Sureget, of the Gerst stable, were most fancied, with Flying Squirrel and the MacManus pair, Rocky O'Brien and Medallion, next in demand.

Flying Squirrel and Rocky O'Brien made most of the running, and fifty yards from the wire it appeared as if the last-named colt would win, but he faltered, when Howard hit him with the whip.

The lightly-weighted Turret came with a rush and won from Flying Squirrel, which beat Rocky O'Brien a neck. The race was worth $3460 to the winner.

The track was still somewhat heavy. Results:

Six furlongs, selling: Old Settler, 103 (McBride,) won; Minot, 108 (McIntyre,) second; Cadichon, 108 (Tapiin,) third; time, 1:17 1-5. Taunt, Deneen, Aftermath, Burnell, Boas, Mabel Hollander and Balreed also ran.

One and one-eighth, purse: Elevation, 107 (Borel,) won; Lady Alicia, 104 (Kirschbaum,) second; Rubric, 109 (Sandy,) third; time, 1:59. Joe Nealon, Cloverland, Flavigny and Fancy also ran.

Mile and seventy yards, Montgomery Handicap: High Private, 116 (Lee,) won; The Peer, 92 (Pross,) second; Don Enrique, 104 (Taplin,) third; time, 1:47 4-5. Firestone and A. Muskoday also ran.

Four and one-half furlongs: Bell Stakes, value to winner, $3460: Turret, 107, (Scoville,) won; Flying Squirrel, 118 (Preston,) second; Rocky O'Brien, 101 (Howard,) third; time, 0:56 3-5. Coppertown, Medallion, Starblue, Donovan, Elfinbeau, Old Mexico, Donau, Sylvia Dunbar and Sureget also ran.

Six furlongs: Aimee, 102 (Rice,) won; Green Goods, 101 (Coburn,) second; Adriuche, 105 (Howard,) third; time, 1:16 2-5. J. C. Core, Dargin, Bucolic, Banonica, Kokomo, Security, May Amelia and Forerunner also ran.

Five and one-half furlongs, Doswell Handicap: Bubbling Water, 94 (Deverich,) won; Booger Red, 114 (Scoville,) second; Fanatic, 97 (Ross,) third; time, 1:08. Smiley Corbett also ran.

Coach Cromwell is planning to hold a short spring practice for the members of the football squad. Cromwell will in all probability have full charge of the 'varsity eleven next year, and he plans to have the men well drilled in the rudiments of the game before the opening of the fall practice season so as to allow the men full opportunity to perfect team plays at one inch lower and Waring, Stanford, tied with Earl for third.

POOR SHOWING.

The broad was also a surprise in favor of Stanford as Stolz captured first, which had been conceded to the visitors. Earl and Goodsell jumped in poor form, tying for second.

In the weights a paltry third was the best the Methodists could secure, Burek taking one point in the hammer at 115 feet, while Trotter annexed one in the shot at 42ft. 5in.

Crawford, Stanford, won both weight events and set good marks in each, tossing the shot 43ft. 10½in. and dropping the hammer out 142 feet. Horton took both seconds, putting the shot 43ft. 6¼in.

The pole vault was clearly a walkover for U.S.C., as Richardson captured the event at 11ft. with Waring, Stanford, second, at 10ft. 6in.

The relay was expected to be a close contest throughout, but Stolz, a new man at 352 yards, gave Stanford a lead in the first lap, which was never cut down and Wyman romped home a winner by twenty-five yards, though Lennox strugled hard on the last lap and materially lessened the Stanford advantage.

Summary:

Mile run: Won by Hemphill (S.,) Fletcher (S.) second, Hall (U.S.C.) third; time 4m. 35 4-5s.

The 100-yard dash: Won by Holman (S.) Gardner (S.) second, Martin (U.S.C.) third; time 10 3-5s.

The 120-yard hurdles: Won by Morris (S.,) Peaslee (S.) and Lennox (U.S.C.) tied for second; time 16 4-5s.

The 440-yard dash: Miller (S.) and Wyman (S.) tied for first; Read (U.S.C.) third; time 52 3-5s.

High jump: Won by Murray (U.S.C.,) 5ft. 9in.; Poore (S.,) second, 5ft. 8in.; Waring (S.,) and Earl (U.S.C.,) tied for third, 5ft. 7in.

The 220-yard hurdles: Won by Lennox (U.S.C.,) Horton (S.) second, Morris (S.) third; time 26 1-5s.

The 220-yard dash: Won by Smitherum (S.,) Martin (U.S.C.) second, Holman (S.) third; time 23 1-5s.

Half-mile run: Won by Miller (S.,) Hemphill (S.) second, Johnston (S.) third; time 59 2-5s.

Two-mile run: Won by Worthington (S.,) Adams (S.) second, Sweet (S.) third; time 10m. 18s.

Relay race—Won by Stanford—Stolz, Peaslee, Coonan, Rawles, Wyman.

Shot-put: Won by Crawford (S.,) 43ft. 10½in.; Horton (S.,) second, 43ft. 6¼in.; Trotter (U.S.C.,) third, 42ft. 5in.

Broad jump: Won by Stolz (S.,) 21ft. 10in.; Earl (U.S.C.,) and Goodsell (U.S.C.,) tied for second, 20ft. 6in.

Hammer throw: Won by Crawford (S.,) 143ft.; Horton (S.,) second; Burek (U.S.C.,) third.

Pole vault: Won by Richardson (U.S.C.,) 11ft.; Waring (S.,) second, 10ft. 6in.; Cooks (S.,) third, 10ft.

CALIFORNIA WINS.

STANFORD FRESHMEN LOSE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The California freshmen triumphed over the Cardinal first year men today by the score of 79 to 43 in a meet full of good performances and though the score is one-sided, the Stanford babies put up a good fight in every point though outnumbered three to one by their opponents from across the bay.

Two freshman records were broken and both by a good margin. W. H. Newman (S.) of San Diego, ran the star race of the day in the two-mile, covering the eight laps in 10m. 14s. and clipping fourteen seconds from the former record.

Capt. Gabbert of California increased the hammer-throw record by 1 ft. 8 in. with a toss of 141 ft. 1 in. Tom Coleman of Los Angeles was the heaviest point winner for Stanford, capturing first place in both sprints.

The summary follows:

Mile run—Won by McPherson (C.;) F. Johnson (S.,) second; Levy (S.,) third; time 4m. 48s.

The 120-yard high hurdles: Won by Wallace (C.;) Hyde (C.,) second; Doran (S.,) third; time 17s.

The 100-yard dash—Won by Coleman (S.;) Allen (C.,) second; Argabrite (S.,) third; time 10 2-5s.

The 440-yard dash—Won by Butler (C.;) Chase (C.,) second; Watts (C.,) third; time 51 4-5s.

Two-mile run—Won by Newman (C.;) Martin (C.,) second; Myer (C.,) third; time 10m. 11s.

The 220-yard dash—Won by Coleman (S.;) Allen (C.,) second; Riley (C.,) third; time 23 1-5s.

The 880-yard run—Won by Saxon (C.;) Berry (C.,) second; Brown (S.,) third; time 2m. 4 3-5s.

Hammer throw—Won by Gabbert (C.;) Wooley (S.,) second; Sturtevant (C.,) third; distance 141 ft. 1 in.

High jump—Won by Taylor (C.;) Doran (C.,) second; Wing (C.,) and Van Dyke (S.,) tie for third; height 5 ft. 6 7-8 in.

Shot put—Won by Wooley (S.;) Scott (C.,) second; Hanold (C.,) third; distance 38 ft. 1 in.

Broad jump—Won by Hanold (C.;) Rathbow (C.,) second; Anell (S.,) third; distance 21 ft. 1¾in.

Pole vault—Win by Peakes (C.;) McGee (C.,) second; Evans (C.,) and Hunt (C.,) tie for third; height 10 ft. 1 in.

The 220-yard hurdles—Wallace (C.,) won; Whitney (S.,) second; Arrelis and Hyde (C.,) tie for third; time 27 2-5s.

Mile relay—Won by California (Rathbone, Newsome, Watts, Butler;) time 3m. 34 4-5s.

The Madison Square Garden show in New York netted a rebate of $40,000 for its promoters and exhibitors. This is an increase of nearly 40 per cent. over last year's show, and of nearly 100 per cent. over the show of 1907

GOLF TOURNEY ON FOR WOMEN.

ANNUAL CHAMPIONSHIP IN APRIL AT LOCAL CLUB.

Eight Contestants Are to Qualify from the Medal Play Round—Consolation Event Will Be Given If There Are Required Entries—Men to Play Bogey Saturday.

The next event of importance in golfing circles will be the women's championship tournament of Southern California, which will be held under the auspices of the Southern California Golf Association on the links of the Los Angeles Country Club, commencing Wednesday, April 7, and continuing for four days, or until Saturday, April 10, when the final of the championship will be played.

Play will begin Wednesday, April 7, at 1 o'clock, with a qualifying round of eighteen holes, medal play. Eight players are to qualify for the succeeding match play, and these will continue until a winner is determined. She will be the champion woman golfer of this end of the State for the ensuing year, and will be given a gold medal. The trophy representing the championship will be held by the club from which she shall have entered. The runner-up will receive a silver medal, and bronze medals will be given the defeated players in the semifinals.

CONSOLATION EVENT.

Providing there are eight or more entries, the association will give two trophies to be competed for at handicap medal play to those who do not reach the semi-finals. This event will be played Friday, April 9, at 1 o'clock at the Los Angeles Country Club links.

Contestants are to enter with Alexander MacKeigan, the secretary-treasurer of the Southern California Golf Association, at No. 353 South Hill street, before 4 o'clock Tuesday, April 6, or entry can be made through the different clubs of the association, which will notify the secretary of such entry. It is important that all entries be in by April 6, so that the drawing, which will be by lot, can be made before the tournament opens.

EVENT FOR MEN.

On Saturday, April 3, at 1 o'clock the supplementary event for men will be held on the links of the Los Angeles Country Club, and will be at eighteen holes handicap match play against bogey.

Four trophies will be given for best gross score, first, second and third net scores. This event is open to all players who are members of any of the twelve golf clubs comprising the Southern California Golf Association.

MARATHON AT PORTLAND.

PORTLAND (Or.) March 27.—A. J. Burn of Calgary won Portland's first Marathon race last night in 3h. 4m. 4 4-5s. Norwood Nash of the Lincoln High School of this city was second in 3h. 11m. 25s. Fred Walby of the Portland Y.M.C.A. was third, in 3h. 18m. 40s. Martini Sisto, who had the reputation of having beaten Dorando Pietri some years ago, ran fourth.

CHAMPIONSHIPS.

as a feature of the Elks Reunion, it is expected that the largest crowd that ever attended an athletic carnival in this city will be present on the two big days of sports. The Fiesta Stadium is to have seats for 12,000 persons, with provisions on the saucer track for many thousands and the grand stand at Ascot Park accommodates 10,000 persons with standing room about the field for other thousands.

Braden has received assurances that many of the best athletes in the north will compete in the meet, and nearly all the best track and field men in the south have signified their intention of entering the competitions.

Fred Thomson and Owen Bird, the crack track men of Occidental College, will continue training in preparation for the meet, and Merriman and Sloane of Pomona, and Lennox, Burek, and other crack athletes of U.S.C., will keep in condition for the carnival.

Braden is to visit San Bernardino, Redlands, Riverside, San Diego and the towns in Ventura and Santa Barbara counties for the purpose of stimulating interest in the meet. Entries are expected from Oregon and Washington, and Braden is willing to pay the expenses of athletes whose past performances stamp them as first class men.

MORE RELAY RACES.

A relay carnival to include one-half, one, two and five-mile events is being arranged between Los Angeles High School and Polytechnic High School. Coach Noble of Los Angeles High and Prof. Skinner and Student Manager Chamberlin of Polytechnic have agreed to hold the carnival, and the details are to be arranged this week. April 17 probably is the date on which the contests will be held.

The relay carnival will be similar to those held at the northern universities, and will be the first that has ever been held in the South.

Ten men will compete in the five-mile event, and in the shorter events the teams will include four runners. Coach Noble says that none of his men will compete in more than one race, and Polytechnic probably will adhere to the same plan.

On account of the abundance of good quarter and half-mile men at both of the big high schools, fast teams undoubtedly will be formed for each event, and the races will be close. In the two and five-mile races each competitor will run a half-mile, and in the other events the runners each will cover a quarter of a mile.

Santa Ana High Wins.

SANTA ANA, March 27.—Santa Ana High School track team this afternoon defeated the Occidental "preps" by a score of 74 to 41. Tedford of Santa Ana won the 100-yard dash in 10 2-5s.

Several prominent athletes of the university are endeavoring to promote college interest in rowing. There is an abundance of desirable material in the university from which to select a crew, and the sport would open up further athletic relations with the northern universities.

The inner harbor of San Pedro Bay offers excellent facilities for rowing, and the Vermont-avenue line of the Suburban Railroad affords easy access to the beach point. If rates can be secured from the railroad, negotiations will be opened with a San Diego firm with a view of securing a four-oared shell.

ELECTRIC CARRIAGES

Within thirty days after it is first delivered to your door the new Waverley will secure such a firm hold on the family affections that you simply cannot get along without it.

It immediately becomes a domestic institution contributing to the happiness of every member of the household—bringing father, mother and children closer and closer together.

In sunshine or rain, in heat or in sold, this is the Waverley program:

After breakfast—down to the office with the head of the house.

Then back home for the children, and off to school.

Next—pressed into service on the morning shopping tour.

After lunch—ready for the social round.

At night—in commission as late as you like.

Fifty to sixty miles on one charge at a lower cost per mile than any other car in the world, gasoline or electric; more mileage if needed—greater than any other electric car affords—that's the Waverley.

Can you think of any other modern convenience which gives such royal return in service rendered for the money invested?

You can charge the new Waverley at your own home, and operate it yourself.

It will be a source of continued delight all the year round at a most moderate expense.

Write or 'phone me for a catalogue. Let me show you the demonstrator.

TEN-INNING TIE.

CUB SAINTS-COMPTON.

The St. Vincent's High School and Compton High School played a ten-inning game yesterday morning to a tie, 2 to 2. The Compton boys had to leave because many of the players had to be at the Suburban track meet.

The game was hotly contested from the first. The Cub Saints led out in the first inning by securing a run through an error on Harsnape and a hit by Murray. The Compton boys tied the score in the third and in the fourth took the lead. The score was again tied in the seventh by the Cub Saints.

CRITICAL ERRORS HELP.

The baseball team of Whittier High School defeated Santa Monica High School nine at Santa Monica yesterday afternoon by the score of 13 to 4. The visitors secured seventeen hits off the beach twirler, and the pitcher's weakness coupled with fielders' errors at critical moments cost the home team the game.

BANKERS COMPETE.

GAME WON IN FIRST.

The Clerks of the First National Bank were defeated by the clerks of the National Bank of California on the St. Vincent's diamond, by a one-sided score, 10 to 4. The First Nationals were unable to hang on to the ball and made repeated errors. But this may be excused by the fact that they were trying a few new men.

In the first inning the money handlers from the National Bank of California made five runs on a two-bagger and four errors. After that inning the First Nationals played a little better ball and their opponents were only able to score in the latter part of the game.

Whitner of the First Nationals was the heavy hitter of the day, getting a three-bagger and two singles out of four times to the bat.

SOX DEFEAT SEALS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Comiskey's White Sox won their first game from the Seals today by a score of 3 to 1. San Francisco played a rattling good game in the field, but they could hit neither Lang, who started for the Chicagoans, nor Altrock, who finished.

All of the Chicago runs came off Eastley, who pitched the first five innings. Browning, who filled in the tag end of the game, was in good form and let the Sox down with two hits.

Although the visitors picked two hits off Eastley in the first inning, Zeider was caught off second and the side retired without a run. In the second, with one out, Dalton singled to left, took second on a scratch hit by Payne, went to third on McArdle's wild throw and came home when Lange hit a long sacrifice fly into left.

The Sox made it two more in the third. With two out, Beall hit a hard one through Mohler, and Bader walked. Purtell hit a double to center that scored both men.

Browning started proceedings for the Seals in the sixth with a double to left and came in on Jimmy Williams's hit to the right-field fence.

Mundorff's work at third was the feature of the afternoon. He fielded sensationally all the way, but toward the close got a couple of line drives that were corkers. One of them he turned into a double, and he deserved all the applause that was coming to him. The score:

JAPANESE TEAM.

TO PLAY BALL HERE.

A Japanese baseball team recruited from the best nines of the schools and universities of Japan, is due to appear in Los Angeles and vicinity in a series of games, beginning April 17.

The players are all full-blooded Japanese, and have been coached to the American game in their native environment. They do their coaching and conversing in Japanese.

The Japs have made a hit wherever they have performed, and their class is said to be of a high order. While the American fleet was anchored off Tokio the teams of the squadron played a series of games with the Japanese aggregation, but were unable to trim the brown men decisively.

Full arrangements for the local appearance of the Japs have not been completed. The Coast League teams will play at Chutes Park continuously, and games if played in the city will have to be pulled off at either Athletic Park or at the grounds at Thirty-eighth and Santa Fé. Games outside the city will probably be arranged with Santa Monica, Santa Ana, San Pedro, Long Beach, Rivera, Downey, Orange and other teams.

CHANCE FORTIFIES.

GETS NEW CATCHER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) March 27.—Fred W. Leise, drafted by the Chicago National Club from the Madison club of the Wisconsin State League, has been traded to the St. Paul club of the American Association for Tom Needham, catcher, formerly of New York and Boston. Chicago gave a cash consideration with Leise.

The trade is taken to mean that Manager Chance of Chicago has decided to let his famous backstop, John C. Kling, stay away if he wishes to, and also that all negotiations for the return of Marshall from the Brooklyn club will be called off, as Needham will give the champions their third experienced catcher.

SPOKANE SHOWS CLASS.

GOVERNOR MAY PERFORM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) March 27.—Joseph Cohn, owner of the Spokane ball team in the Pacific Northwest League, has invited acting Gov. M. E. Hay to pitch the first ball in the opening game in this city, April 17.

The Chamber of Commerce will be asked to petition Mayor Moore to declare that afternoon a half holiday and special invitations will be sent to all the members of the City Council and all the local ministers to be present at this game.

OUTLAW SEASON OPENS.

OAKLAND, March 27.—The baseball season of the California State League was opened this afternoon by an automobile parade through the principal streets of the city. Mayor Mott, Frank Herman, president of the league, and city and baseball officials took part in the parade.

PLAY AT EL PASO.

MISS SUTTON IN FORM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before the members of the El Paso Country Club, this afternoon, Miss May Sutton, world's champion woman tennis player from Los Angeles, played an exhibition game on the new courts, which were formally opened today.

In doubles, Miss Sutton and Mr. Sinsabaugh played against her sister, Florence, and Nat Browne. The party, en route to Mexico City for a tournament there, was conveyed to club in autos, after a ride about they city, and were guests at a banquet late this afternoon. They were also guests at a reception and dance at the clubhouse tonight. They leave here Sunday morning for Mexico City.

Connecticut motorists are coöperating with the New London, Ct., business men's association in pushing a bill in the Legislature for a bridge over the Connecticut River between old Lyme and Saybrook.

STUDEBAKER Model "D" TOURING CAR

DO YOU want an automobile that embodies all the latest and most approved in design; an automobile whose makers have spared no expense to make it the most luxurious and easy riding car that skilled workmen can produce from the very finest material; an automobile that is rapidly replacing the finest and most expensive imported cars on the market today?

¶ Nothing on the market today in the shape of an automobile surpasses the Studebaker car. In every feature it is representative of the most perfected American design. The make-and-break system of ignition, for instance, as applied in the Studebaker, has killed the argument of every salesman who has jump-spark ignition to offer. It accomplishes all that is asked of it and so much more that the man who has longest owned a Studebaker becomes the most enthusiastic talker in its behalf.

¶ Few persons appreciate the fact that efficiency is the only logical basis for comparison of an automobile. Ask any Studebaker owner; he'll tell you in a word that it's due to the higher efficiency of the Studebaker that he is the owner of one.

¶ We have just received three carloads of Studebaker, Models "C" and "D," and these cars are now on exhibition in our salesroom. Your inspection is invited of the several types we have to show you. Demonstration at your own convenience.

TRACK MEET TO GLENDALE

Suburban League Youngsters Far in the Lead.

Smaller High Schools of County Compete.

Harvey of Pomona the Best General Performer.

Glendale, 44; Azusa, 27; Monrovia, 23; Bonita, 14; Compton, 1; Burbank, 6; El Monte, 1; San Pedro, 0.

Glendale High School won the second annual track and field meet of the Suburban High School League at Occidental College yesterday afternoon, rolling up seventeen points more than its nearest rival, the Citrus Union School of Azusa, and taking six firsts and tying for another in the fourteen events. The Glendale boys won the first annual meet last year, and they will retain the championship banner.

The meet was the leading athletic attraction of the school year for the smaller high schools of Los Angeles county and about 500 out-of-town students were in the bleachers. Each faction rooted earnestly for victory, and the athletes, spurred on by the cheers of their supporters, fought hard for the honor of their respective schools.

The track was muddy in spots and the time in the track events was not very fast. Nearly all of the seventy-five entries reported for the events, and with the exception of two or three protests that were not allowed, the races and field contests were run off without delay and without squabbles.

Although no interscholastic records were broken, the meet brought to light several young athletes that promise to advance to the front ranks in local high school and college sports. Stine of Glendale Hgih School won the 50 and 100-yard dashes in 5 3-5s. and 10 3-5s., respectively, running in good form and scoring clean victories. He also ran the last lap of the relay race, which his team won, and took second place in the 220-yard hurdle race.

BEST PERFORMER.

Harvey of Monrovia High School was the best individual performer, scoring seventeen of the twenty-three points that Monrovia secured. He took first place in the broad jump and shot put, second in the high jump and 50-yard dash, and third in the 100-yard dash. Harvey took first place in the shot put by throwing the weight 44 ft. 2 in. in his last trial and beating J. Durkee of Bonita by one inch.

Yankee of Compton High School took first place in the mile run, covering the distance in 4m. 52 3-5s., one of the best performances of the meet. The 440-yard dash was won in the fast time of 53 4-5s. by Gillette of Bonita High School, despite the poor condition of the track.

The time in both hurdle races was slow, but the boys jumped over the sticks instead of running through them in the usual high school manner. Taylor of Glendale, who won the 120-yard hurdle event, only knocked down two hurdles and no contestant ran through more than three or four.

The 50-yard dash was run in two trial heats and a final. Mr. Krew of Compton High School protested the decision of the judges in the final heat on the ground that Garrison of Compton should have been given a place. The finish was very close, but there was no valid reason for questioning the decision of the judges. In the final heat, Stine of Glendale clipped 1-5s. off his time of 5 4-5s. in his trial heat.

Eleven men started in the mile run. Yankee of Compton, who won, lay back until the beginning of the second lap, when he took the lead and was never passed. The half-mile run was won by Walton of Glendale, who let the other men set a slow pace for three-quarters of the distance and then shot ahead and ran away from the bunch.

RUNNERS JOSTLED.

There was considerable jostling in the 440-yard dash, in which ten runners started. Gillette of Bonita pulled out of a bad pocket and took first honors, and Craig of Burbank, who was a member of the Los Angeles High School track team last year, finished second.

Jackson of Azusa, the only colored entry in the meet, won the 220-yard dash, with Craig again in second place. Gillette of Bonita won the fastest of the three trial heats, equaling the time of 24s., made by the colored boy in the finals, but he was unable to break into the points. Jackson also took second place in the 100-yard dash.

Burbank did not enter a team in the half-mile relay race, and El Monte dropped out at the last moment. Instead of following the original plan of running two heats, the six teams were matched in one contest. The teams drawing positions close to the pole had an advantage over their opponents, and in the excitement and confusion there was considerable jostling that escaped the notice of the officials, and probably figured in the results. Glendale took first place with Compton a close second.

TIE FOR FIRST.

In the pole vault, Walton of Glendale and Boyd of Monrovia tied for first place at 10 feet. The points of first and second place were divided between the men, and Boyd won the gold metal for first place by a flip of a coin. Whitted of Azusa easily took first place in the high jump by leap-5f.. 5in. He appeared good for several inches higher in close competition.

Epecial interest was given to the weight events by the close finish in the shot put. J. Durkee of Bonita, with a put of 44ft. 1in., looked like a sure winner until near the end of the finals, when Harvey of Monrovia, in his last attempt, threw the weight 44ft. 2in., and annexed the gold medal.

Harvey leaped 20ft. 8½in. in the broad jump, which is a better performance than was made in the big county meet, and not inferior to some local college performances.

Glendale retained the championship banner, won last year, and also was given a silver cup for taking first place in the relay race. Gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded to the individual point winners. The trophies were presented in front of the bleachers after the meet.

The results:

BOW! WOW!

BIG DOG SHOW COMES IN MAY.

SOUTHWESTERN KENNEL CLUB TO MANAGE EXHIBIT.

Bench Show Committee Has Been Chosen and Plans Are Already Under Way—Coast Circuit Will Be Formed—Many Entries of Classy Animals in Sight.

After a long rest of months, the dog fanciers of this city and vicinity will soon have the opportunity of seeing a bunch of good dogs together in the spring show of the Southwestern Kennel Club, which will be held in this city in May. This decision was reached at a meeting of the club held the past week, and an extra effort will be made to have the show up to the standard of previous shows. No location has yet been selected.

A May date was chosen for the reason that Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will have shows in May or June, and it is intended to combine the four cities in a dog show circuit, in hopes that by following this plan a larger number of eastern owners and handlers may be induced to come to the Coast, who might not come for just one show or even three or four scattered through the year.

Sabine Rarebit, winner of A.F.T.C. grand challenge cup at Boston this year. Will be shown at Southwestern Kennel Club show in May. Owned by W. K. Peasley.

The Bench Show Committee consists of William Kennedy, James Ewins, Paul Peipers, W. K. Beasley, B. McDonald, E. Niccoll and W. J. Morris, and this committee has selected Peipers and Beasley to manage the show. It is intended to make it a four-point affair, if it is possible to do so, and this will be easy if the eastern owners and handlers come down from the north with their dogs, as expected. A prominent eastern judge will be engaged.

The collection of dogs should be a large one, for many are in sight that will be entered. Among the entrants will be Jim Ewins, George McLain, the Roy & Eicholz bulldogs, the Boston terriers of J. W. Brooks of this city, Freeman Ford of Pasadena and Miss Jennie Crocker of San Francisco, Maj. Phipps, English fox hounds; Arthur Letts of Hollywood, and the Val Verde Kennels of San Francisco, Scotch collies; Ed Maier and W. J. Morris, with pointers; Huddleston of Los Angeles, Halstead of Pasadena, and the Tallac & Humberstone Kennels of San Francisco, fox terriers. There will be the usual number of Dalmatians, setters, French bulls, toy dogs and St. Bernards, and with the possible entries the show should be up to expectations.

AUTOISTS TO FIGHT.

The Delaware Automobile Association has decided to fight the bill which passed the House of Representatives recently, taxing automobiles as personal property. The new automobile bill now before the Delaware Legislature fixes a term of imprisonment at the justices' discretion for a third violation of the law regulating speed, equipment, or operation of the car.

MANY MOTOR RUNS.

The Quaker City Motor Club of Philadelphia is to hold another reliability run some day during the latter part of next month. The spring endurance contest of the club will be held May 19 to 22, from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh and return. The annual Fairmount Park chassis race will be held on October 7, and the winter endurance run on December 29 and 30.

ROAD RIGHTS.

A peculiar precedent has been set by a Scottish court in relation to road laws. Two motors collided at the crossing of a main and a side road. The court held that the driver on the main road had the right of way, and the drivers on side roads must use precaution in crossing main roads.

In replacing the gland of a water circulating pump use plenty of graphite with the packing. The spindle is seldom sufficiently lubricated, and the graphite will go a long way toward remedying this.

Preparations for its annual orphans' day outing in August are already being made by the Automobile Club of Rochester. If a sufficient fund can be raised the little folks will be treated to a dinner and given a boat ride on the lake.

The three-day mechanical efficiency run, to be held by the New York Automobile Trade Association June 12 and 14, will take in the Catskill thence to Albany and the Berkshire and return. The run is the outgrowth of the highly successful two-day run around Long Island last September.

The Mayor of Brescia, Italy, has purchased an extensive piece of ground for the erection of a station for the departure and arrival of aëroplanes participating in the contest for a flight round Brescia.

THAT UNCLE, LIKE MOST GUESSERS, GUESSED WRONG, LIKE PROPHETS, WHO HAVE BEEN GUESSING THE END OF THE WORLD FOR YEARS, BUT THE WORLD, LIKE THE WHEELS IN THE PROPHETS' HEADS IS STILL GOING AROUND. THERE ARE MANY KINDS OF GUESSERS—THE FORTUNE TELLER, WHO GUESSES ANYTHING YOU WANT HIM TO GUESS—FOR A DOLLAR, THE "I TOLD YOU SO" GUESSER, WHO GUESSES IT ALL—AFTER ELECTION AND THE "SURE WINNER" GUESSER, WHO LOSES ALL HE HAS GUESSING. THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

1.—The Tiny Tads are paddling in their little Pelicanoe;
The sea is just as smooth as glass, the sky is clear and blue.

2.—But all at once a storm comes up, the bird begins to tip,
And suddenly he sinks right down and gives the Tads a dip.

3.—"Help, help, oh, help!" they loudly call, "for we have lost our boat,
And it's an aquaticklish job for us to keep afloat."

4.—Just then a Stormy Petrelephant is swiftly passing by;
He sees the struggling Tiny Tads, he hears their plaintive cry.

5.—He takes one of them in his trunk and one upon his head
And sets them down upon the shore, soaked through and almost dead.

6.—A fire quickly warms them up and then a Tad remarks,
"But for that Elephantastic bird we'd now be food for sharks."

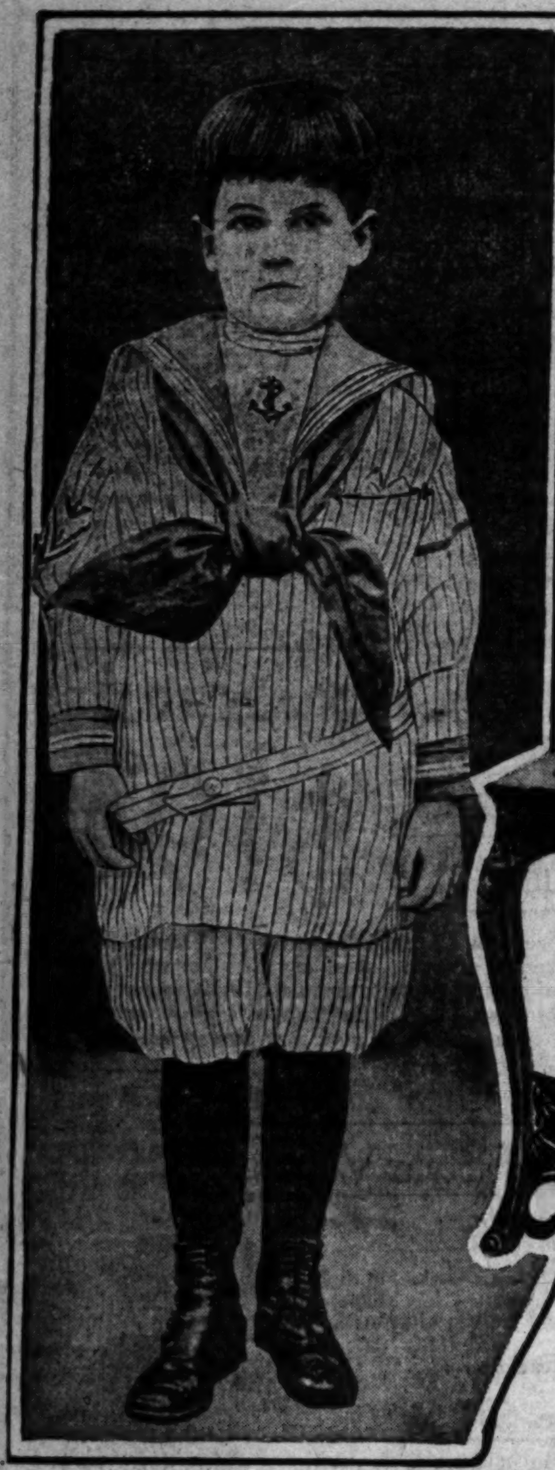
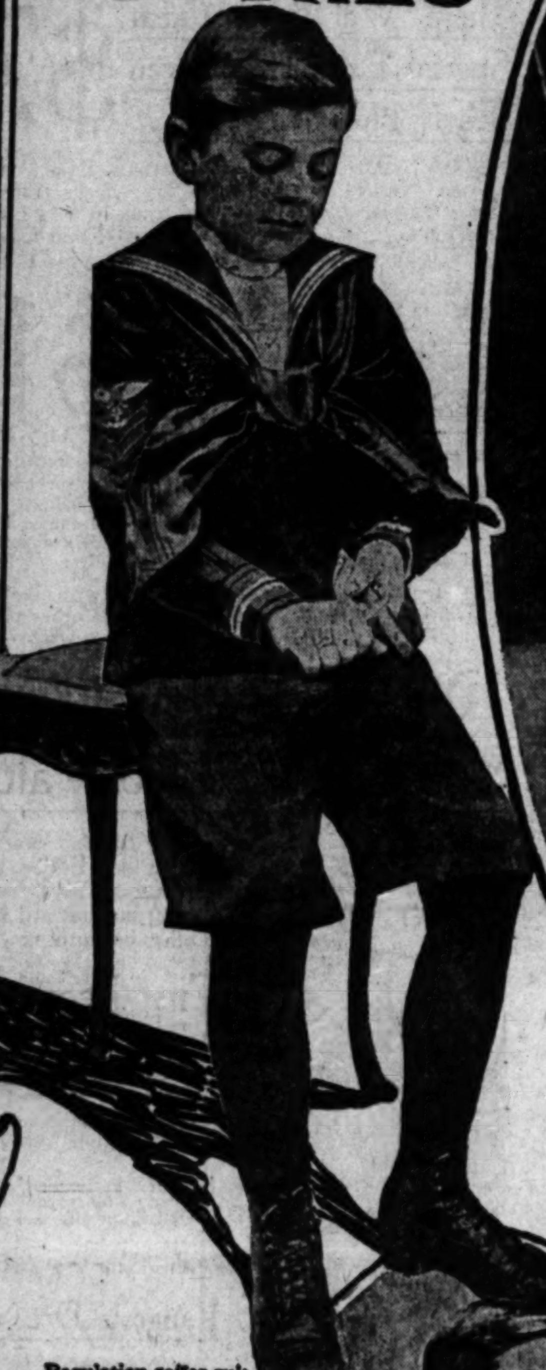
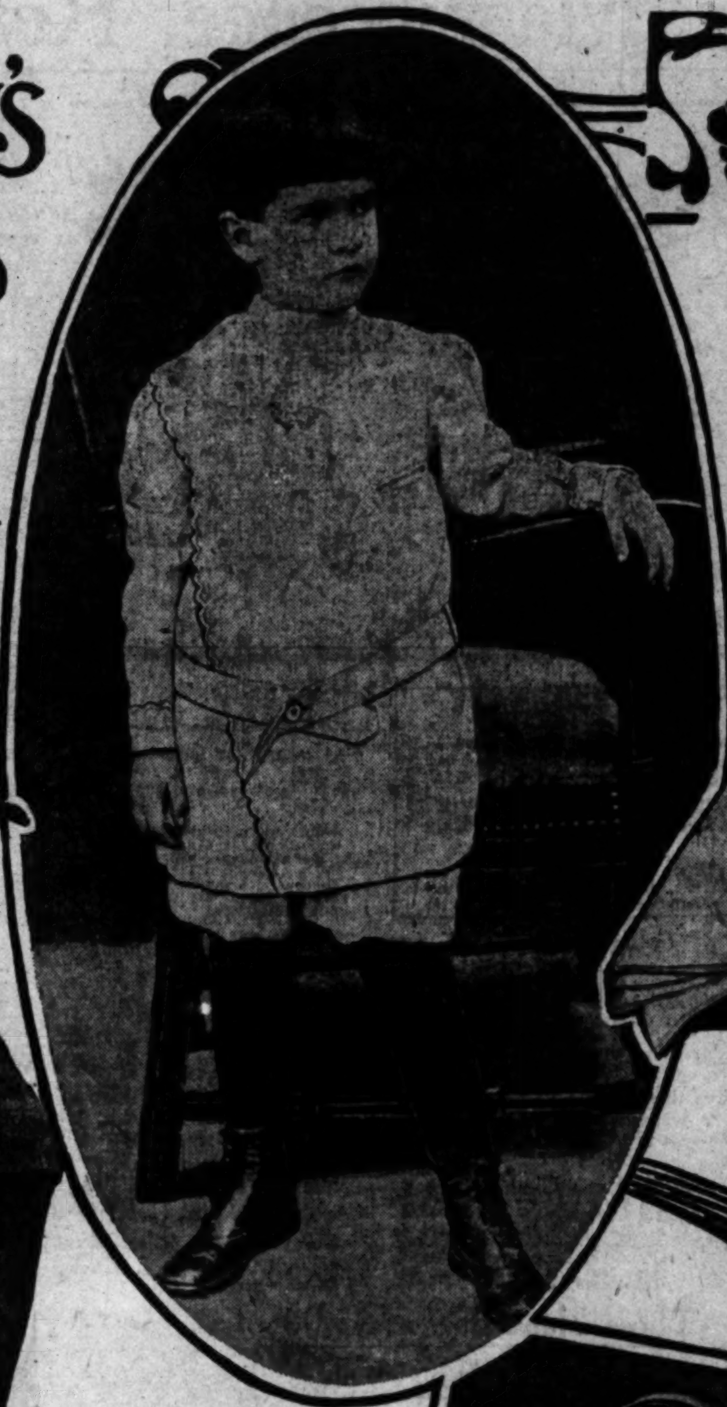
THE AMERICAN BOY'S CLOTHES



A sailor suit for a kindergartner.



Regulation sailor suit.



A Russian blouse of linen.

An adaptation of blouse.

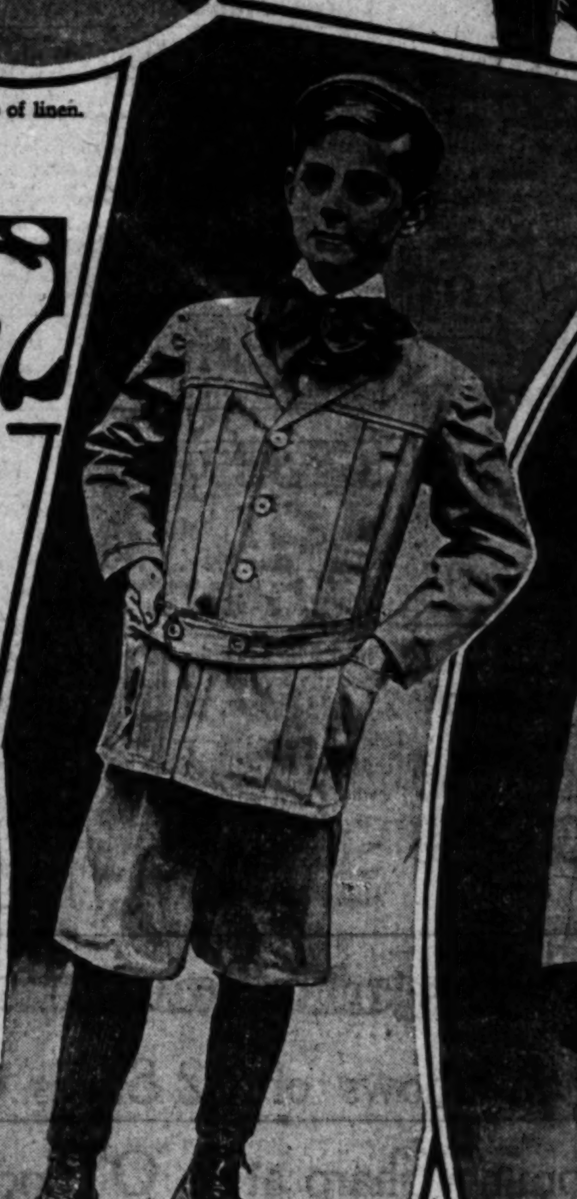
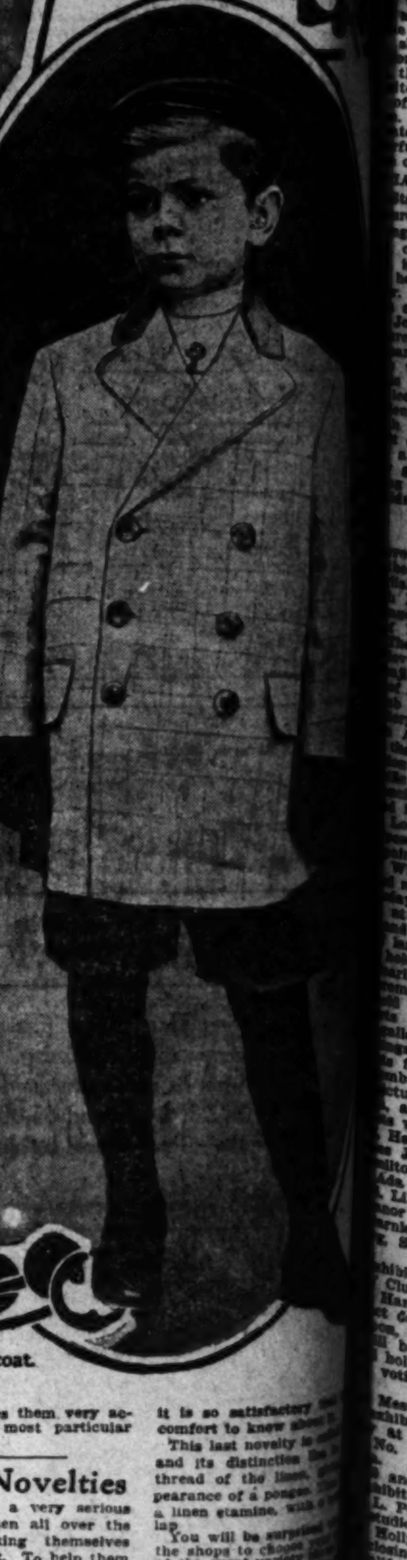
A pleated Norfolk.



A box-pleated Norfolk jacket with bloomers.



A spring overcoat.

IT IS well enough to say that women dress alike the world over. To a very large extent this is true, for in even the out-of-the-way countries the Paris fashions penetrate. But it seems quite safe to say that the little boy of America has a fashion all his own. In France he wears more or less dressy garments, long hair and broad lace collars. In England he is often forced to don garments that resemble kilts, or else he is togged out in British adaptations of the latest French fashions. If he is of the peasantry, he wears a simple smock and is happy. But the boy in this country needs a certain style of garment that will be as little as possible in his way. Furthermore, he is not content to wear skirts or dresses, and at the age of 3 we usually see him discard them and adopt a more masculine style—the Russian blouse and tiny bloomers. This he wears until he reaches the age of 5 or 6, when he graduates into the regular sailor suit, which has become so universal during the last few years. When he has outgrown this he leaves this style of clothing and adopts the more mannish Norfolk jacket until the time comes for him to put on really grown-up clothes. But to take each subject in detail.

SUITS IN DETAIL

The very little boy wears a garment which reaches almost to his knees, which, as I have said, is called the Russian blouse. This is made sometimes quite plainly, with a box pleat down the front and a row of buttons on the right side. A loose belt girds the hips, but does not hold in the coat. The sleeves, of course, are quite plain, and the collar is merely a band which encircles the neck. The Russian blouse shown today, although it is not exactly like the one described, is on the same principle. Here the right side is fastened down with buttons, which are invisible under the edge of the material. This edge is scalloped with buttonhole stitching, which also trims the cuffs. An insignia is embroidered on the front of the blouse.

The next style after the Russian blouse is the Russian blouse sailor suit. In this the same bloomers are used and the blouse, instead of tucking up like blouses usually do, hangs straight down, giving the effect of a skirt. A belt, of course, goes round the hips, but not tightly. A mother is wise when she first makes these clothes if she will make them down to the knees; then when the second year is past she will turn up the edge and call it a regular sailor suit.

Just such a suit is shown made of red-and-white striped percale with a red galatea collar edged with white linen braid. The necktie is merely a handkerchief, folded so that the edge is on the bias, passed under the collar and tied in a knot in the middle of the front.

Sometimes a slightly older boy is dressed in a Russian blouse, but lacking the extremely plain appearance which characterizes the clothes of the younger child. The picture of the boy looking at the book shows a blouse of this kind, of unbleached linen with a double box pleat down the front and buttoned merely with three buttons on the right side. Such a suit is easy to wash.

The regulation sailor suit is of blue serge, and shows how the other suit will look when the blouse is turned up round the waist. As you see, the collar and tie are practically the same. The cut of the sailor suit is very interesting, for the whole jacket is made so that the sewing up of the under-arm seam will fasten the sleeve seams in place.

For the older boy we go to the Norfolk jacket. Sometimes this is made with a yoke, the material being pleated, and sometimes the coat part is made with merely a box pleat on either side. Both of these styles are shown, and when they are worn with collar and cuffs the effect is very neat.

Wide Materials

CHARMING sailor suits for youngsters are made from linen sheeting, either unbleached or white, and these come in great widths, two yards and a half being about the average. You may easily see to what advantage such materials may be cut and their wearing qualities are surprising.

For the older boy's Norfolk jackets, the best choice is loosely woven linen crash in the natural color. It is just the proper texture for their making. This is so heavy that it is almost like a cloth, but it is sufficiently porous to be cool and comfortable and to launder well.

In width these crashes are usually about twenty-seven inches wide, and the 30-cent quality is good enough for any suit.

Cotton Goods

THE cotton materials are more lovely than ever for this summer, and even the percales and ginghams have a beauty all their own that lifts them far above the materials of the same name that we have worn for these many years. Chambrays with little herringbone stripes woven in them are charming, too, and make the most fascinating Russian blouses for little children, while checked ginghams make the nicest morning gowns imaginable. Two-tone stripes are better style this year than the stripes of contrasting colors so popular last spring, and the improvement in the finished garment is very marked.

A new material for children's jumpers has just been introduced to the market, and this is called English kindergarten cloth. It is closely woven in stripes of light color, and it seems to be very durable and washable. Its width, too, recommends it very highly, for it is thirty inches, quite wide enough to accommodate any pattern. Its price is 25 cents.

Old-fashioned prints are being much used as trimming for other cotton fabrics, and they add a touch of quaintness which is very appealing. The half-grown girl will find that a white linen gown with a bit of the bright print introduced will have a style that is all its own.

Some of the prettiest gowns of the season are in one tone and piped with some brightly figured chintz at seams and around the line of the guimpe. These may be made in the modified princess style, and they are certainly as pretty as any frocks that we have ever had at our disposal.

Other very favorite materials are the mercerized vestings and linen-finished suitings. These are particularly adapted to the tailored gowns the business girl wears on summer days, and they also may be used for summer clothes for little boys. They make nice sailor suits, and while, of course, linen is a far better choice, the price of the mercerized materials makes them very acceptable even to the most particular mammas.

Two Linen Novelties

SUMMER suits are a very serious matter, and women all over the country are asking themselves what they intend to get. To help them in their dilemma the weavers have turned out an entirely new material, and it is so satisfactory [illegible] comfort to know about [illegible]

This last novelty is [illegible] and its distinction lies [illegible] thread of the linen, [illegible] pearance of a pongee. [illegible] a linen etamine, with [illegible] lap.

You will be surprised [illegible] the shops to choose [illegible] at the great variety [illegible] respect the season is [illegible] other.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

rosco announces that this will positively be the last week of "Arizona." He has no option in the matter, litigation in which the piece is involved forbidding its continuance at the local theater after next Saturday night. Last week's cast remains unchanged.

Early in the week lovers of good music feared that Mr. Hartman's extraordinary effort at the Grand Operahouse, "The Tales of Hoffman," was going by unappreciated. And the management, feeling rather discouraged about the outlook for a really good thing, decided to take it off at the end of the week. But with the Thursday performance business began to increase, and it has continued to increase, so that piece will enter its second week today. Miss Nielson, Mr. Walsh, Mr. Fogarty, Miss Rand, Mr. Arling, Mr. Hartman, Mr. De Leon and Muggins Davies remain the principal features of attraction. The large orchestra will be continued to the end of the run of this play.

George Broadhurst's new play, "The Dollar Mark," is fast passing into the state of solid and established success. Although W. A. Brady indicated a desire to have the piece withdrawn at the end of the week just closing, the strenuous demand for seats for another week made the management urge Mr. Brady by wire to grant a continuance. And Mr. Brady consented.

Accordingly, the fourth week will be inaugurated at the Belasco Theater tomorrow night, with Lewis Stone, David M. Hartford and Orra Gardner continuing their principal roles.

The Los Angeles Theater offers six acts, none of which ever has been seen locally, on its bill for the week beginning with a matinée performance tomorrow.

Frank Mayne and company will play, for the first time here, their slang farce in one act, "The Tipster." Mr. Mayne is an actor of known ability, and is said to be capably supported.

Another playlet on the programme, and one of more serious import, is "The Sexton's Dream," in which a surprising scenic effect is utilized to realize the dream before the audience.

Ralph Johnstone, cyclist, is a trick rider with several new feats awheel. "The Country Choir," a mixed quartette, costumed in the mode now fashionable in Posey county, Ind., will sing popular songs. Chefalo and Capretta are necromancers who materialize the common or garden variety of barnyard fowls seemingly from thin air, and who perform other deceptions. Art Adair, an eccentric musical comique, completes the list.

An excellent vaudeville programme has been arranged by Manager Pieper for the Grand-avenue Walker Theater this week. The bill will include Alice Lewis, in a return engagement of songs and imitations; George Gardner and company, in a farce entitled "Too Many Darlings;" Hazel Salmon, soubrette, in a singing and dancing act; DeVaull and Lotta, in a new sketch; Warren Ellsworth, character comedian; Ransdale and Bance, in "Spooneyville;" Joseph Manley, baritone, in popular songs, and new motion pictures.

"King Lorenzo," an abridged version of the celebrated "La Mascotte," will be the offering for the coming week at the Unique Theater. Director Blair has decided to present several of the high-class old operas in abridged form. This is the first. The originals will be followed as closely as possible.

Lillian Sutherland is cast as Bettina, Miss Atkins is Fiammetta, and Miss Parker is Beppo. Among the men, Morey Long will be Frederick, John J. Martin will be Lorenzo, Will Armstrong will be Rocco, and Juck Curtis will assume the parts of Dr. Bolus and Matteo.

"The Siamese Twins" will be Charles Alphin's offering at Fischer's Theater this week. The piece deals with the suit of an impecunious lover, who, in order to win favor with his prospective father-in-law, a doctor, bribes a Jew peddler and an Irish workman to impersonate the Siamese twins, that he may cut them apart. By this means he wins his heart's desire, but serious complications arise.

Ben Dillon and Max Bloom are the twins, Frank Vack is "Dr. Munion," Dot Raymond his daughter, and Tracy McDermott her adventurous lover.

The Mason Operahouse will be dark this week, but will open a week from tomorrow night for a six-day engagement of Lillian Russell, in the Broadhurst-Hobart play, "Wildfire."

IN THE SPOT-LIGHT.

Paragraphs of Interest Concerning the Doings of Actors, Actresses, Managers and Musicians.

"Paid in Full" is to be given a production in Holland during the month of May.

Amelia Bingham's new play will be called "Her Other Self." It is the work of Stanislaus Stange.

"The Fighing Hope," with Blanche Bates, will leave New York for a tour of the larger cities Easter Monday.

Le Bargy, the French actor, is to play the leading part in Rostand's "Chanticleer," which was designated for the late Coquelin.

Blanche Walsh reached New York last Wednesday on her way to her home in Massachusetts, where she will take a long rest, resuming her stage work in the fall.

Gertrude Hoffman has instructed her lawyers to file suit against Kansas City for $100,000, because of the trouble she was put to during her engagement in "The Mimic World."

Granville Bantock, who succeeded Sir Edward Elgar as professor of music at Birmingham University, was the conductor of a small traveling burlesque company sixteen years ago, at the munificent salary of $15 a week.

The Boston daily papers announce that Celestina Buoninsegna, the Italian dramatic soprano, has been engaged for the opening season for the Boston Opera Company.

Announcement comes from St. Louis that at the end of her professional engagement Mlle. Genee will become the bride of Frank S. N. Isitt, of London. Miss Genee is under contract for a starring tour under Klaw & Erlanger's management.

We have had With Her Face to the Floor, Her Face in the Moonlight, so we might just as well have With Her Face to the Wall. It is the title of a one-act play written by Channing Pollock and Fannie Ward will offer it in London this summer.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the eminent contralto, has been engaged by Oscar Hammerstein for the role of Clytemnestra, which she created in Dresden a few weeks ago, in the production of Richard Strauss's "Elektra," at the Manhattan next season. This work will probably be the first novelty to be staged at the Manhattan after the opening of the season in November.

Old timers were shocked a few weeks ago when Mme. Albani, after "a long and honorable career" on the opera, oratorio and concert stages, suddenly jumped into vaudeville. They predicted that the novelty, despite its material compensations, would soon pall on her and she would return to legitimate fields or venerable retirement. Not so; the Montreal-Albany prima donna finds music hall applause just as exhilarating as that of more sedate audiences.

Klaw and Erlanger have brought suit for libel against the New York Press, asking for damages to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars. The Press has been devoting considerable space of late to attacks upon managers who have failed to patronize its advertising columns, and subsequently its censure was quite severe. Marc Klaw, on behalf of the firm, intends to give the Press a chance to prove its statements.

It is said that Fritz Kreisler, the great violinist, longs for the time, which he himself puts at about three years ahead, when he will be able to retire from public life and settle down on a property of his own in the beautiful lake district of Italy. There he will live happily with his wife, farming his land and tending his crops, and, if he does play in public, it will be only pieces of his own choosing. Then the public will have to put up with what he likes, and if he cares to produce a concerto by Tom, Dick or Harry they need not come to hear it if they do not wish.

Charles Frohman announces that his principal production next season will be Henri Bernstein's "Israel," the cast of which is now completed so far as its principal members are concerned. Mr. Frohman will present "Israel" without a star. The three principal members of the company will be Miss Constance Collier, James O'Neill and Holbrook Blinn, playing, respectively, the mother, the father and the son, the chief characters in the play.

Once upon a time John Drew joined a troupe of "barnstormers" headed by his sister and her husband, Maurice Barrymore, the parents of Ethel Barrymore. The play they presented was "Diplomacy," and Mr. Drew was cast for Algie Fairfax, a harebrained English youngster. In the company, too, were Mr. and Mrs. Majeroni, clever Italian players, who played Baron Stein and the Countess Zicka, respectively. And now the son of these old-time associates of his, Mario Majeroni, is supporting Mr. Drew in "Jack Straw."

Marie Dressler has left London broken in health and in spirit, and with the aid of two nurses will endeavor to forget her troubles in Paris. Her losses are estimated at $50,000, of which $35,000 has disappeared, and debts to the extent of $15,000 remain. When Miss Dressler made up her mind to go abroad, she was prevailed upon—almost begged—to give up the project. "Big managers have tried it before." "Look at the fate of the Waldorf Theater. Remember what happened to others," they told her, but she heeded them not. It will take two or three seasons of hard work in New York for Miss Dressler to make up the losses.

PADEREWSKI PRIZE.

Award-Fund Founded by Distinguished Pole Again Feature of Interest in Musical Circles.

Until now the Paderewski prize fund for American composers has not been heard of since Arthur Shepherd carried off the prize with the "Overture Joyeuse," in December, 1905. The three prizes of $500 each, on the occasion of the first award, were carried off respectively by Horatio Parker, with a choral work for orchestra; Henry K. Hadley, with a symphony, and Arthur Bird, with a piece of chamber music. The interval since the last award has allowed the income of the fund to accumulate to the point where it is now possible to make the principal prize $1000.

In a copy of the Boston Symphony programme for March 13, John A. Loud, secretary of the funds, of No. 6 Newbury street, Boston, makes for the trustees the following announcement: "The following prizes are offered for the current year for the best compositions submitted by American composers:

One thousand dollars for a Symphony or Symphonic Poem for full orchestra.

Five hundred dollars for a concert piece for chorus and orchestra, with or without solo voice parts.

Five hundred dollars for a string quartette, or for a quintette or sextette for any combination of instruments. The term "American composers" is restricted to those born in the United States of America. The compositions offered for prizes are to be submitted on or before September 1, 1909, and will be passed upon by the judges appointed by the trustees, namely, Messrs. B. J. Lang, G. W. Chadwick and Horatio Parker. The decision of a majority of the board of judges is to be binding on all parties concerned. The compositions are to be sent anonymously, and the name of the composer is to be contained in a sealed envelope forwarded with the composition. Illegible manuscripts will not be considered. No composition shall be eligible for a prize which has been published, or which has been performed in public or in private.

Swapping Lumber.

During the last ten years the Dominican republic has exported cabinet, trim and construction woods (mahogany, lignum vitae, satinwood, etc.) to the value of considerably over a half million of dollars. On the other hand, it has imported during the same period practically all lumber used for building purposes, costing in round numbers about $2,000,000. This condition exists in spite of the fact that there are on the island great forests of excellent building woods.—[Exchange.

THE SPRING AND SUMMER RAIMENT OF THE WELL-DRESSED MAN

Dignified Fabrics in Lighter Colors Are to Be the Feature

FOR several seasons the well-dressed man has been facing sartorial surprises. He has appeared in almost the gaudy colors of the paradise bird, donning rainbow hues; he has stepped along the street in a suit covered with braids, buttons sewed on in strange places, the gimcrackery of his raiment rivaling that of women. He has gone from the peg-top trousers to the almost skin-fitting variety. And now, for the first time in years, a change, which will doubtless be grateful to all, has come.

Tailors have decreed that this spring and summer they will make the clothes to fit the man. And fashion has placed a temporary ban on gaudiness in apparel. During the coming season the well-dressed man's garments will be characterized by rare delicacy of coloring.

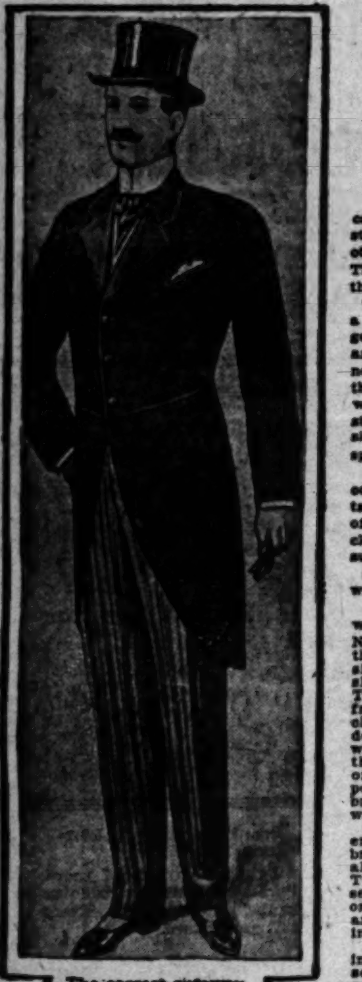
His entire outfit, in keeping with the scheme of harmony originated several seasons ago, will carry out the delicate color effect. New and delightful shades will make their appearance in suitings, shirtings, neckwear and hosiery. In but one respect will he depart from the subdued, and this will be in the gorgeous effects to be permitted in waistcoats. These will be marvels of brilliancy.

"What above all things will distinguish men's suits this spring?" was the question put to one of the leading tailors, or builders of suits, in the country the other day.

He thought a moment, then replied:

"Plainness, even severity, of design."

More and more each season has there



The correct cutaway.

been a departure, tailors declare, from the cut-and-dried and prearranged fashions. Formerly it was the custom, whether a man was tall or short, corpulent or slim, to make his garments after a certain set design. Now, however, the aim of the up-to-date tailor is to adapt one's garments to the individual. It is no longer the man for the clothes, but the clothes for the man.

If a man has narrow shoulders, the good tailor will try to bolster up the defects of nature and give him a shapely appearance. If he is short, the suit will be cut so as to make him look taller. The aim of the tailor will be to secure an artistic effect.

Dignity will be the keynote. There will be an utter absence of any freakish whimsicalities in dress. There will be no fancy braided cuffs. There will be no bizarre placing of buttons on the corners of coat flaps. Gingerbread effects will disappear.

In keeping with the plain design of suits, the colors will be delicate. Solid colors, tailors declare, will prevail. Gray will lead. Next, they are inclined to look for a run in browns. But the prevailing brown will be subdued and less reddish than many of the browns of previous seasons.

WOOLENS FAVORED

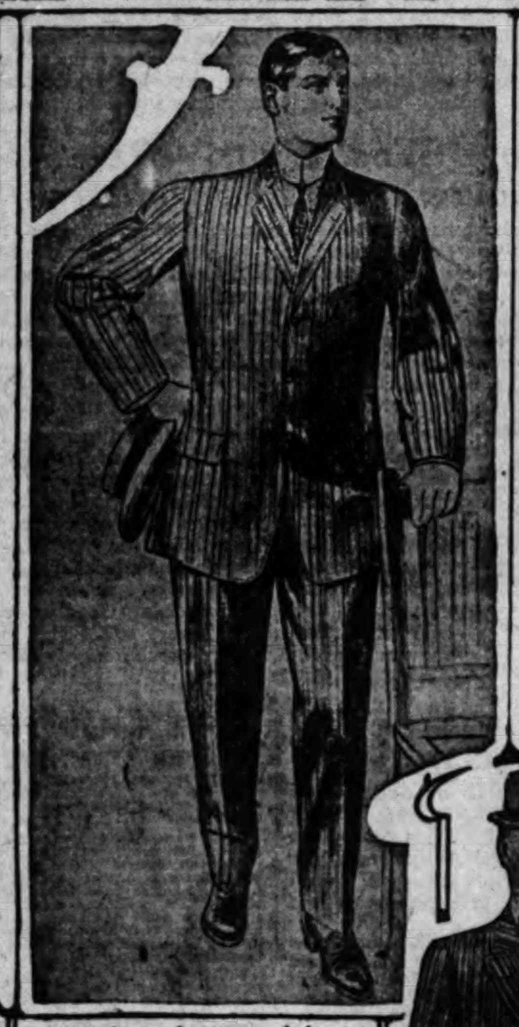
What sort of fabrics will lead? you ask. It is believed that woolens will go ahead of worsted materials. A rough and shaggy material is being used for early spring suitings to a great extent. Cheviots will be largely worn—and, remember, the proper cheviot, the cheviot par excellence for the season's fashions, will weigh sixteen ounces to the yard.

Of course, you wonder why woolens should go ahead of worsteds. Tailors declare that it is possible to achieve colors in wools which cannot be incorporated in cheviots. And the incorporation of colors, delicate and varying shades, has virtually become a work of art.

Then the design is important. Stripes will be less conspicuous; one might say the proper thing is more a subtle suggestion of stripes. There will be a broadening, too, of the lines. Indeed, in many fabrics the stripes will be sunk beneath the surface of the cloth, visible only when the material is rubbed or closely inspected.

Plaids will be worn to a considerable extent. So will checks. The well-dressed man will have suits of all designs.

A new material which tailors view with admiration is a fabric in a Celtic weave. It is of an exquisite and delicate gray, with a design of lighter gray stripes of varying widths. There is another new fabric of the color of plums. This comes in a worsted material, and the stripe is very fine, of a violet hue.



Single-breasted customs suit for general wear. Plainness of design a feature.

Then imagine a fabric in three shades, a plaid effect, of mingled bronze and golden browns. This is really beautiful and attractive, without making a great noise. Blue will find favor. Possibly the leading fabric in blue will be a worsted with a faint green plaid. A striking feature will be an overplaid of silk thread in a new shepherd plaid for sporty wear.

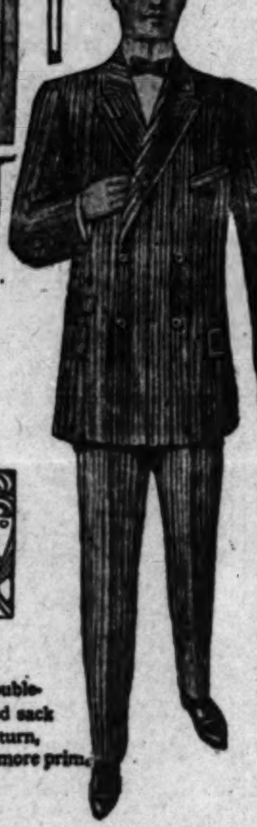
Generally, the effect will be of a single color. They will run as follows, though tailors are not infallible prognosticators of the male taste: Gray first, brown closely following, with olive, tan, blue, subdued greens, oak and sages.

So much for the colors. For business wear, as always, sack coats will lead.

Coats will be built to make the wearer look as athletic as possible. Not fitting as snugly as formerly, they will have a full-breast effect, shaped at the waist to fit the body slightly. The back will be straight. The coat will dip slightly to the front. The single-breasted sack will close with three buttons. The shoulders will be of normal width. Seams will be made plain, and the edges of the coat will be stitched to the depth of an eighth of an inch. The side pockets will close with flaps, the breast pocket will be welted and there will be a vent in the back.

Single-breasted sack coats will average thirty inches in length. Double-breasted coats, which will be worn also, will average a half-inch longer. These coats will be made with plain seams and edges, with the collar one and one-half inches at the notch and the lapel two and three-quarter inches wide.

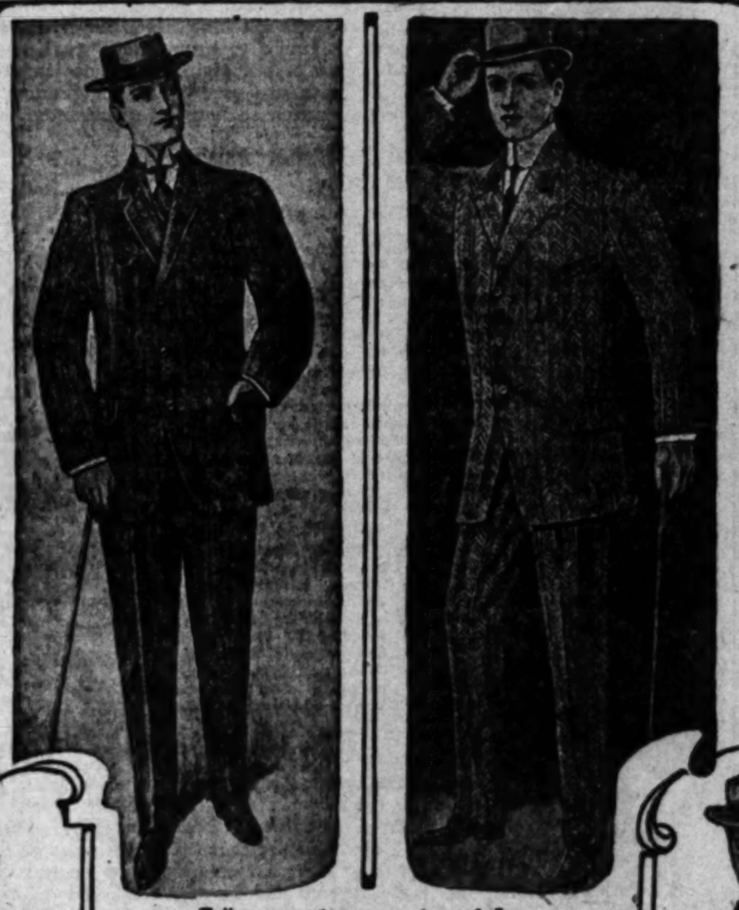
A new effect will be a coat closing with two buttons, with a long, soft roll collar. On this coat the seams and edges will be stitched, and two buttons will embellish the sleeves. Trousers, made to go with the coat, will be comfortably wide and enjoy a turn-up of two inches.



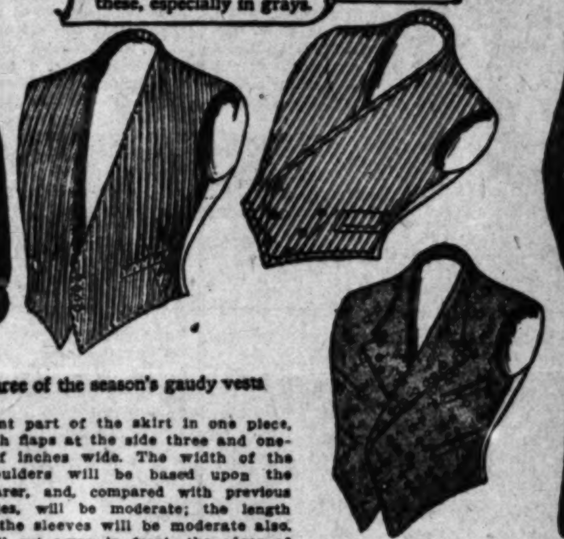
The double-breasted sack will return, a little more prim.

Most men, naturally, prefer the single-breasted sack coat for business wear. Others still cling to the business frock. This is a dressy and dignified garment, and while each season may alter it slightly, it is a perennial joy.

This spring and summer the most modish suit will be made of London striped fabrics; the waistcoat, of course, being made of fancy material. Cut to the average length of thirty-five inches, the coat will be marked by a long, soft roll collar. A new feature will be the cutting of the front part of the skirt in one piece, with flaps at the side three and one-half inches wide. The width of the shoulders will be based upon the wearer, and, compared with previous styles, will be moderate; the length of the sleeves will be moderate also. Well cut away in front, the edges of the coat will be single-stitched.

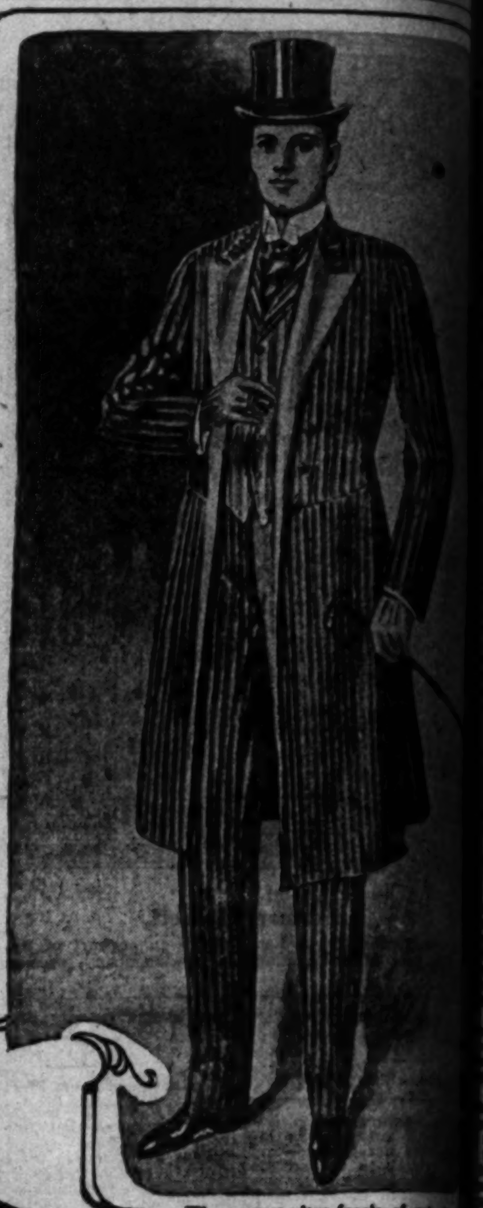


Tailors expect a great demand for these, especially in grays.



Three of the season's gaudy vests

Then there is the ultra frock coat. This will be double-breasted; the material will be striped undressed worsted; the coat, measuring forty-two inches for the average person, will be made with a soft roll collar, silk faced. It will close in front with six buttons. A striped woolen vest will be the proper thing to wear with this coat.



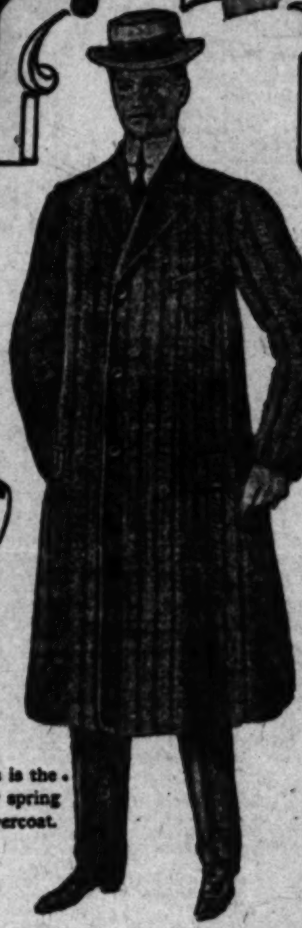
The newest ultra frock, of [illegible] dressed worsted.

Trousers of the same material as the coats will go with both frocks.

A cutaway, tailors believe, will find popular favor for semi-dress. This coat, which will give a dressy effect, at the same time will lack the stiff formality of the full-dress suit. The coat, which will be worn with trousers made of some soft, delicately fancy worsted fabric, will close with three buttons, with a low opening, exposing a fancy vest. The average length will be thirty-six and one-half inches. There will be an embellishment on the sleeves in the shape of a vent and three buttons.

In dress suits and tuxedos the standard styles will remain unchanged; there is nothing more heard of the dinner coat in colored fabrics or of the reported arrival of a dress suit in blue.

Possibly the only scream in hues this spring will be in vests. These will include every color of the rainbow—and, it might seem, colors the rainbow never boasted. Vests! Vests! Vests! Glittering, dazzling, coruscating vests! If there is any probability of the solid colors of suits becoming monotonous, vests will come as a relief.



This is the new spring overcoat.

From all countries the fabrics for these garments have come: from Scotland have arrived knitted effects, striking plaids in green and red and blue—marvelous combinations; from Ireland have come linens and cottons, for cool wear; from Germany and Austria, fabrics of various sorts, of glowing colors; from Japan have come dainty, shimmering silks, weird, oriental; from France, silks of many shades, delicately embroidered or covered with flowered designs.

There will be vests of white ecru for evening wear. There will be others of a very light green and gray with full dress. A striking feature in vests is made of fancy tanned leather, a novelty for ardent automobilists. Another vest

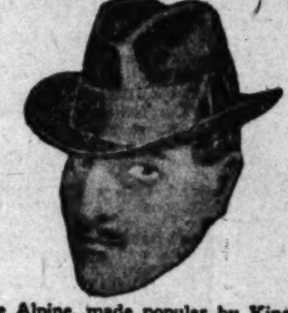
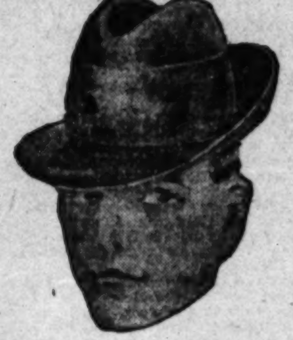
THE SEASON'S NEW THINGS IN HATS AND SHIRTS

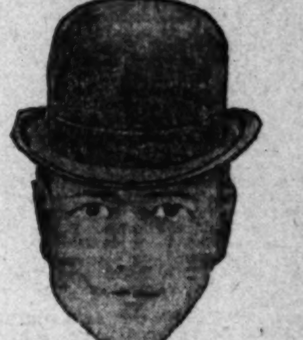
A Panama and a standard straw.



The Alpine, made popular by King Edward.

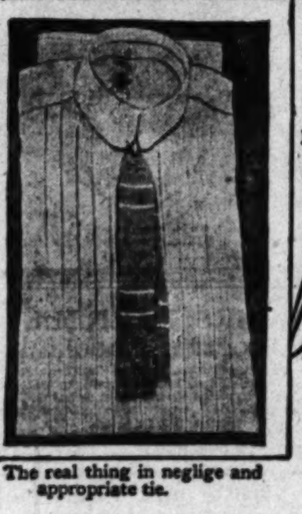


The Tyrolean is the newest sensation.



The correct derby hat.

The new imported collar for the dress shirt.



The real thing in neglige and appropriate tie.

Panel effects to be feature of shirts and ties.

PINK and blue, in shirting, in ties, in hosiery—this is what the sartorial authorities prophesy for men's spring and summer wear.

But remember, all colors are of extremely delicate hues—delicate pinks, delicate blues. Although rare and bright hues will prevail, they will be unusually light.

There will be new delights in hats, a startling innovation being a Tyrolean hat of velour in gray and bronze brown.

Some one has said that every man's necktie indicates his character. He claimed that in the selection of ties one stood the final test of good judgment and good taste. The man with good taste this spring and summer will have an infinite variety from which to select.

Never before have such delicate, such ethereal, such ravishing shades been achieved in scarfs.

An appropriate tie will be the four-in-hand which tapers at the ends. One of the best spring shapes will be tied so that the knot is one inch in length, the ends flowing to a width of three inches. Most ties will be narrow and straight. The knot will be drawn firm. This season, it is announced, will see the passing of heavy effects in ties, and English scarfs will not be favored.

Knitted scarfs, with stripes running biased, will be popular.

A fineness of texture will mark the material for ties. There will be silks, hard-twisted, some with backgrounds of solid colors and bias stripes. Others will be fancifully figured. Both figures and stripes in ties, however, will be of the same color, only of a lighter tone, as the background of the tie. Biased stripes, it is said, will lead over floral designs.

In Irish bengalines ties will come in fetching light shades of lavender, rose, grays and blues, a brown with silver tinge, a light green and a dull copper. Possibly, because of its stiff quality, bengaline will lead.

Having secured your ties, you will wish the proper thing in collars. This will be the turnover collar, two inches high in front and two and one-half in the back. For evening dress a new collar has been imported from London, which, it is believed, will take the popular fancy. This has a small round wing, an exceptionally striking and dressy, though modest, innovation. For ordinary wear, a thirty-three-inch tie will be the proper thing with a fifteen-inch collar.

Of course, the shirt will supplement the tie, or vice versa. Early in the season madras will lead; then will follow in popularity percales, wash silks, cheviots, pique and outing flannel. Silk shirts of solid shades, of light lavender, blue, green, with floral design in white, will be popular with men with more extensive purses.

Figured pique will be largely used, this material showing stripes one-half inch in width and one and one-quarter inches apart, with floral designs between the stripes. Wide stripes made of combined fine stripes of several shadings of one color will mark the madras and French percales. The colors will range in blue, tan, gray and green.

Shirts will be made neglige style. They can be made with pleats—two box pleats at the side and one down the center, through which the buttons will pass—or plain. Cuffs will be attached, invariably.

But Joy looked steadily at Hugo, wondering why he was silent.

"Will you come, Mr. Charters?"

"With pleasure," he said quietly.

XV.

As he spoke, he salved his conscience with the determination to tell the truth at the first convenient opportunity. The Vennables, in any case, had sought him, not he them. And it would have been almost impossible to have refused the rector's invitation. Tisdale added a few words as soon as the young men were alone.

"You will be doing a good deed," he said. "And, look here, talk to the dear old man about things outside the Forest. Fancy what it has been, buried alive in Hernshaw Magna for five and twenty years, with the Pundles and the Bungays and the Mottisfonts all around him. Personally, I'd sooner associate with publicans and sinners—and, breathe it not!—so would he."

"I'm in rather a hole," said Hugo. "Look here, Tisdale, my name is Hugo Reginald Charteris, and, if you can believe the half-penny papers, I'm one of the biggest blackguards in the kingdom!"

"Phew-w-w!"

"That's why I've kept out of the Rectory."

Tisdale's eyes were very wide open. Then he threw back his head and laughed.

"Scapegoat is the word, isn't it?"

"I've been a fool and a knave," said Hugo, slowly. "Two or three people have stripped the scales from my eyes, and you're one of them."

Then, very quietly, he added a few details. When he had finished, Tisdale understood that Hugo Charteris was bound to Angela Tempest; but whether or not the captive hugged his chains was an interesting problem which Tisdale felt unable to solve.

"I must tell the Vennables," said Hugo.

Tisdale screwed up his face, a grimace indicating not so much perplexity as a whimsical apprehension of two sides of a nice question.

"As to that," he said, presently, "you will, of course, do what you think proper, but, as Vennable's doctor, I absolutely forbid you to tell him till he is stronger."

"If he can play bridge——"

"My dear fellow, bridge amuses him. Your story will distress him. You underrate his kindness of heart. After all, why should you tell them?"

"It's a sort of instinct."

"I understand that. And I respect such instincts. But in this particular case the truth can do no good, and may do some harm. Look at it this way: For the last month you've been fighting this plague with us. We wanted you, black or white, badly. And we want you still. George Vennable wants you. Between ourselves, I'm worried about his heart. There is nearly always cardiac weakness after diphtheria. He must be kept quiet and amused. You can do it better than any man I know. Well, do it!"

"If I told Miss Vennable?"

"That's risky, too. You've seen enough of her to know that she's not a Pharisee, but I'm afraid she would judge you rather unmercifully. There was a case in this village——"

"I heard about that."

"And the word 'divorce' to a Mottisfont—oh, she's half Mottisfont, one must face that—is henbane. I don't suppose for an instant she read the full report of the trial——"

"Let us assume that she did, for the sake of argument. What then?"

Tisdale made a significant gesture. He was surprised that Charteris took things so coolly, almost with indifference. A phrase or two of McAllister's floated into his mind. The co-respondent throughout the trial had exhibited brutal indifference; a sort of animal impassivity really distressing to witness in a highly civilized Christian country. The learned judge, too, had been scathing on the same point.

"You mustn't try her too high. Why," he laughed, "it's rather difficult for me to reconcile what I know you are with what I believed you to be. They gibbetted you, didn't they?"

"Yes," said Hugo. "Haman hung no nearer heaven."

"And how can you explain things to her—eh?"

"I have no intention of explaining."

"If you don't, Charteris, I'm afraid that Joy Vennable will make it difficult for you to play bridge with her father. He's very sharp. There would be more or less of a scene, the one thing I'm anxious to avoid."

"I ought to have said 'No' at once."

"You said 'Yes—with pleasure!'"

"Then nothing is left but 'Important business in town!'"

"No, no; you take this too seriously." He looked keenly at Hugo. "Am I right in my conviction that this last month has been worth something to you?"

"It's been like bathing in Jordan."

"Jordan? I see. If you feel that way, I take it upon myself, as a physician, to tell you to keep on dipping—and mum's the word for the present."

Finally, Hugo was persuaded.

The first evening at the Rectory was very pleasant, so pleasant that Hugo was beguiled insensibly into pastures wherein he had not wandered for many months. He had the gift of being able to describe vividly places he had visited, and an eager light in the eyes of his listeners lured him on and on, from country to country, as if he were personally conducting a small and select party of tourists, who had never been out of England before. When he stopped, George Vennable supplied the spur of the right word. Joy said nothing, but she listened even as Desdemona listened to the adventurous Moor. Bridge was forgotten. George Vennable sat by the wood fire in his bedroom, for as yet he had not been allowed downstairs, and Joy sat on a low stool beside him, the ministering angel, within reach of anything that might be required. Hugo sat opposite, on the other side of the hearth rug. Once the parson stretched out a thin, white hand, which rested lightly upon Joy's head, and Joy took the hand and kissed it. That she did so in Hugo's presence was the measure of the stride he had taken in passing their threshold. George Vennable caught Hugo's eye.

"Etre aves ceux qu'on, cela suffit," he murmured.

"It does not quite suffice," said Joy, looking up into her father's face. "Unless we take it for granted that those whom we love, love us. And it would not suffice, unless those we loved were comfortable and happy. I was miserable when I was alone with you and your rising temperature."

And then George Vennable had smiled at Hugo, with a subtle derisiveness, as much as to say: "Joy, you see, loves me devotedly, and I, as you know, take all that she can give, and give little in return."

Hugo reflected that the parson might be Laodicean, and lamentably unparochial, and inordinately interested in lepidoptera and fungi, but with all his failings he was human.

As Hugo talked of Cashmir, where he happened to be wandering for the moment, he looked steadily at Joy. In the shaded light of the lamp, with the fitful glow from the fire playing upon her hair and face, she appeared a girl rather than a woman. Her attitude emphasized this. She was leaning against her father, her head upon the level of his knees. For the moment one could hardly conceive her to be self-reliant, authoritative—the "parson in petticoats!" The outward masculine signs of autocracy had vanished; the inward feminine graces shone with a soft radiance, with an irresistible appeal.

For the first time in their intercourse, Hugo saw clearly that, at core, she was quite other than what she had seemed. Hitherto, she had not chosen to reveal herself to him. Why should she? Now in the intimacy of such a scene as this, she cast aside her out-of-door garments, appearing as the complement, not the substitute, of man, dependent upon him, leaning against him, relaxed into a soft and alluring passivity. And in her eyes, no longer sparkling, but suffused with shadows, Hugo seemed to read a particular message for him, as if she wished him to understand that alone with those she loved she was always like this; a creature to be cherished tenderly and caressed, the eternal woman absorbing and radiating love, not happy nor content—as she had just borne witness—unless those she loved were happy and content also.

Presently, her father asked her to sing. Hugo felt rather uncomfortable, because there was no piano in the room. Surely she would not attempt a song without an accompaniment. Joy went out of the room and returned in a minute with a guitar.

"She sings dear little songs to me," said George Vennable.

Joy sat down in a shadowy corner and began one of Moore's melodies, set to old-fashioned music. Hugo, who had heard the greatest singers, knew at once that she had been well taught, and he perceived as quickly that her voice, lacking power and compass, possessed instead a most enchanting flexibility and sweetness. There were tones and fractions of tones, alluring gradations, due, possibly, to some remarkable conformation of the vocal chords, which brought tears to the eyes, the tears that never fall, but return to the heart. Hugo paid but little attention to the words of the song. In his ears were the soft soughing of trees, the lilt of running water, and now and again the clear trill of a bird.

Looking at the parson, he saw a strange rejuvenation; that unmistakable glow of youth so seldom seen upon the faces of those past middle age. The music transported the parson into some pays du tendre, where he had wandered happily long ago.

"Sing another," he murmured, as the last cadence rose and fell. She sang three more songs.

When she finished, Hugo knew that he had made the acquaintance of a third Joy. The echo of her voice awoke memories long dormant. In Mexico and Southern California he had listened to those pathetic, bewitching tones and semi-tones. And always they had seemed to reveal the past and illuminate it with a tender light of yesterday. The singers themselves had been of yesterday, the daughters of a primitive and patriarchal people. In their songs was embalmed the essence of pastoral lives, lives that could never be lived again in such countries as England.

"Thank you," said Hugo, in a low voice. "You have given me a very great pleasure."

'Balm for a tired heart," said the parson.

Joy laughed, and the spell was broken as she came out of the shadows.

"Who taught you?" Hugo asked.

"The most delightful old man, a Spaniard."

She plunged into a pathetic story of a foreigner stranded in Easthampton, unable—possibly for political reasons—to return to his native land, but always yearning for it, and expressing that yearning in his music.

"It must be terrible," she concluded, "to be obliged to live"—her voice sank—"and to die in a dull, dirty town when one has been born and brought up in the most lovely part of Aragon."

Hugo thought of Tisdale and Burgess. If she married one of them, her life would become urban, and must remain so. And with the wider knowledge which had come suddenly to him within the past two hours, he realized that she, being of Arcadia, a nymph of woods and streams, would never be able to adapt herself to the dun, formal streets and squares of a great city. He had been right when he divined that she would make a splendid helpmeet for a pioneer.

"Do you know," he said, with hesitation, "that when you were singing those songs I had the feeling that you didn't quite belong to this century?"

The parson laughed, rubbing together his thin hands.

"She doesn't," he said incisively. Then when Joy protested, he explained at length, in his easy, leisurely fashion.

"This is the age of compromise, and she abhors compromise. Black is black and white is white to her. Anything complex distresses her. She hates problems, don't you, my dear?"

"I have not the patience or the brains to solve them."

"Her brains are all right." He addressed himself to Charteris, conveying the idea that this intimate personal talk was perfectly natural and the seal, as it were, of a friendship just begun. "But she is half-Mottisfont."

"That is the half I hate."

"Oh, no, you don't. You hate the defects of the Mottisfontain qualities, not the qualities themselves, which are admirable." Again he turned to Hugo, speaking as if Joy were not present: "She makes a good many people in Hernshaw happy, and in particular one lazy old man, because she is happy herself, content with the simple pleasures of the passing hour, satisfied with small things because they belong to her. That is the true wisdom. She sings little songs to a guitar, but she will tell you that she has no ambition to sing big songs, to a big public, to the accompaniment of a grand piano."

"Not I," said Joy.

"I am different. I mean I was different. I wanted to sing the big song. But now," he laughed pleasantly, as if sensible of the vanity of human ambitions, "I am like her, she has taught me the great lesson; once I burned to discover a new continent, I found instead the Boletus Vennabilis."

At 10 o'clock this first never-to-be-forgotten evening drew to a close, but the parson, most hospitable of men, insisted upon refreshment being offered to his guest. Hugo followed Joy downstairs and into the dining-room. Upon the table were sandwiches and whisky and Apollinaris.

"I made the sandwiches," said Joy. "I shall be insulted if you don't eat some."

Then, very seriously, she thanked him for coming.

"You have done father so much good. Really, you seemed a sort of Aladdin. And on your magical carpet we have visited all the delightful places we shall never see."

"Never?"

"Father will never see them, at any rate." Her voice faltered, almost broke, but she continued vehemently: "You have no idea what he really is. I dare say you have misjudged him. Everybody does. He has had great disappointments. And, of course, he ought never to have come here."

"Whatever he lost by coming, he gained—you."

The slight pause before the pronoun made her glance at him with apprehension. If Joy had revealed herself as other than the Grand Vizier of her father, so also Hugo, in this seductive atmosphere of home, quite as unconsciously, let slip his mask of indifference and aloofness.

"Yes, he has me;" then she laughed nervously; "but I'm not so conceited as to flatter myself that I make up to him for what he lost."

"You do."

"No, no."

"Ask Esmé Burgess."

The sudden introduction of the young fellow's name had an effect. At once the talk ceased to be intimate. Burgess played gooseberry. They couldn't escape from him, or from what he had done, and was doing, and would be likely to do. He accompanied them to the hall door. But at the very last he vanished.

"You are coming tomorrow?"

"Yes," said Hugo.

For an instant, as her hand lay in his, as he felt the soft pressure of her fingers, so eloquent of the gratitude and liking that she could not translate into speech, he was tempted to fling prudence to the winds and say: "I am a leper, but you have touched me, and I am clean."

Instead, he said, with a curious chill in his voice: "Good-night, Miss Vennable."

Other evenings followed. The intimacy deepened and widened. Joy always greeted Hugo with a smile, and he never paused to reflect what its absence would have meant to him. Also, being confirmed in his belief that Joy would marry Burgess, he interpreted the smile as inspired by gratitude. He accepted it as backsheesh.

She proposed that they should play golf together. The epidemic had worn itself out; ten days had passed without a fresh case being reported; but Joy showed scars. Her color was less bright; shadows lay beneath her eyes. Tisdale had prescribed golf, as being preferable to quinine or iron.

She asked Hugo to play in the presence of the parson, who said briskly: "Yes, yes, the very thing! Give her a game tomorrow."

So it came about that they played regularly upon the days when Hugo was not shooting. The Misses Mottisfont were unaffectedly shocked. For three evenings in succession the Aunts discussed, from every point of view, the propriety of second marriages of which hitherto they had disapproved. Unquestionably, if poor George Vennable had remarried some sensible woman after dear Alicia's death, Joy would not be playing golf with a tall, handsome stranger of whom nobody, not even Col. Jalland, who went to town to have his hair cut, knew anything at all!

Hugo played golf, as has been said, like a professional; having, indeed, devoted as much time and ability to the ancient game as would have served to master a foreign language or higher mathematics. He was, therefore, able to coach Joy, who hitherto had coached others; and in golf, as in other matters, she found herself deferring to superior knowledge and experience. Add to this, her endless speculations concerning a man who with abilities far above the average was seemingly satisfied with a life without definite aims. Hugo, in Joy's mind, loomed larger and larger as a huge note of interrogation.

Each day, too, she became more conscious of his singular intermittences of silence. He seemed to shy away from certain subjects. She did not know what he believed or disbelieved, and this to any one with Mottisfont blood in their veins was exceedingly unsatisfactory. Joy and Sir Giles held the conviction in common that in politics and religion one's flag ought to be nailed to the mast. Sir Giles was fond of saying: "What is right is right, and what is wrong is wrong." No man, for instance, with any pretensions to being considered "sound," could uphold the passing of such an iniquitous measure as the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill. You might as well debate the propriety of Free Love or the nationalization of land.

However, Esmé Burgess served as a peg upon which to hang coversation. The young fellow was doing brilliantly. There could be no argument about that. The big papers reported his speeches in full. Everybody said that he had won the Norfolk bye-election off his own bat. The New Brooms—it was confidently predicted—were likely to make a clean sweep of it. The disaffected on both sides were asking questions and receiving staggering answers. "Down with expediency!" had been adopted as a sort of battle cry. In the New Year number of the Saxon, Burgess published a remarkable article setting forth in detail the lies told by both parties during the recent election. Nobody reading this paper could doubt that the truth was being presented by the Saxon, as a substitute for soft soap and bunkum.

"Burgess has come to stay," said Hugo.

"You really think so?"

"He will go very far."

In his mind was a vision of Burgess ascending triumphantly to the skies, scaling inaccessible peaks, and always carrying Joy with him. Well, if he could please her by predicting triumphs, by all means let him play the prophet.

They were now in mid-January, and the days had begun to lengthen. Hernshaw Magna and Parva displayed proudly a clean bill of health. Jordan Cottage was disinfected, swept and garnished. The modest sign, Apartments, gleamed once more above the porch. One day Hugo read a paragraph in the Morning Post. John Tempest had returned from India. John, of course, had gone down to the Abbey for the cream of the hunting. The big house would look rather empty without Angela and Poppet. Hugo had not received another letter from Angela, but he heard from the faithful Pixton of two visits to the flat and demands for information discreetly withheld. Pixton, indeed, was instructed to say that his master was in the wilds, and, therefore, presumably beyond the zone of letetrs and telegrams.

Angela, indeed, and all she represnted, seemed very remote. Hugo had become a boy again, and, like a boy, was able to banish from his mind disagreeable memories and associations. During this month, whenever he was alone, there came to him with extraordinary vividness certain scenes of his youth and childhood, when Cynthia had been his comrade and companion. Happy are they for whom such scenes have a definite message, for it means that youth is not dead in them. There had been endless expeditions in search of eggs of the rarer wild fowl which nested in the Suffolk marshes and fens. To secure the booty they had risked duckings innumerable and much floundering through mud. Always they had returned in the wildest spirits, laughing and singing and inordinately hungry. Edward spoke of those jaunts generically as "gallivanting," not being able to understand their overmastering desire to escape from the commonplace rut. In the summer, there were campings out, a tent pitched in a wood, gypsy stews, smoke from a pine-cone fire, blazing sunshine and drenching showers. Before Hugo went to Eton a favorite topic of conversation had been hidden treasures; chests full of doubloons and pieces of eight. In both lay a buccaneer strain.

This vabagond existence was renewed with a fuller intensity whenever Joy and Hugo plunged into the Forest of Ys. Hugo found himself talking to Joy as he had talked to Cynthia. He could not speak of the future, and it was so easy to recall the past, to compare notes and experiences common to each. Such prattle flowed on and on without any exasperating hesitations and silences. Nevertheless, silence lay between them like the sword of Sigurd, and Joy had an instinct that if it were touched, pain might be inflicted.

One day an incident occurred which increased the intimate nature of their relations. Hugo had walked up to the Rectory, as usual, for a game of bridge, but he found the parson pottering about his cabinets, engrossed in some new arrangement of the Cloudy Yellows. Hugo sat down to talk with Joy, when suddenly, to their horror, George Vennable fell forward on to the carpet and lay there insensible. Within a few minutes he was making light of what had happened, referring to it as an attack of giddiness; he had been too long upon his feet, had unwisely neglected to rest after eating his dinner, and so forth. But Hugo divined from Joy's face that she was very seriously alarmed. She insisted upon her father going to bed at once, and Hugo helped him upstairs and then bade him good-night. Joy, during a minute when she was alone with Hugo, whispered that she would send for Tisdale early the next morning.

Tisdale, it appeared afterward, frightened Joy badly. It is likely that he also regarded her as the strong, capable, self-possessed nurse, who had never lost hope when a terrible disease was raging. At any rate, he spoke plainly. He admitted that the lesion was serious and organic. At the end, he reminded her that threatened men live long, particularly those whose heads are stronger than their hearts.

"Your father is too sensible to run risks," he said, "but it would be unwise to tell him what I have told you. You must watch him very carefully."

With that, being in a hurry, he went his way. Joy was aware that for some time, ever since the epidemic came to an end, Frank Tisdale had seemed to avoid her. Without a word passing between them, each apprehended the feelings of the other. Joy did not want a lover, but she resented losing a friend. She had an enormous respect, admiration, and liking for Frank Tisdale, which, humanly speaking, would never develop into a warmer and more tender sentiment. Because of this she listened with apparent calmness to his diagnosis. But when he had gone, she felt desperate, and in such sore need of sympathy that she dashed off a note to Hugo entreating him to come at once to the Rectory.

([To Be Continued Next Sunday.]

INSURANCE WORLD.

A remarkable insurance bill has been introduced into the New York Legislature. Its enactment would restrict the business of soliciting or placing fire insurance exclusively to those not engaged in any other than the real estate or insurance business. It would shut out lawyers, bank cashiers and many others.

The Chicago Board of Underwriters has adopted a schedule on moving-picture film exchanges, adding 10 cents to the building charge where the films are in vaults in individual metal cans, 20 cents where they are in individual cans, but not in vaults, and doubling the charge when they are not in vaults and not in individual cans. The contents rate is to be a dollar above the building rate for the presence of a film exchange. The schedule takes effect May 1 and members are to be required to collect the additional premiums where the rate is increased.

An indictment has been returned against Judge Michael M. Donnelly of Napoleon, O., president of the Ohio German Fire Insurance Company, and judge of the Third Judicial District Circuit Court of Ohio, in which he is charged with perjury, embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretenses. The grand jury charges that the reports of the company were deliberately falsified in that unpaid losses to the amount of $300,000 were covered up and that the funds of the company were used by the president of the company for the payment of interest on personal loans.

The Railway Passengers' Assurance Company of London has announced its intention to extend its business to the United States. The company has a subscribed capital of £1,000,000, of which 200,000 has been paid up. The company has been in existence since 1849, and has branch offices in Canada and South Africa, which show good results.

Surety companies of St. Louis have experienced heavy losses recently due to breaches of trust on the part of those bonded. Where such losses have been made good by relatives the companies have refrained from prosecuting the defaulters and embezzlers. The guilty person cannot, however, ever obtain a position of responsibility, for the record stands against him with the surety companies, and bank officials instantly reject any application for employment if the bonding companies decline to sign his bond.

The Bankers' and Manufacturers' Guarantee Company of New York is a new one. It is proposed that the company when established shall write liability, steam boiler, personal accident, fidelity and preferred lines of surety.

THERE are other ways in which this store renders useful service to its customers besides merely selling clothes. If that were all we did—simply provide the goods and take your money for them—we wouldn't be different.

WE ARE DIFFERENT; and the difference is in the clothes we sell, and in the way we sell them; in the fact that we sell good clothes and nothing else; in the service we give; and in the fact that we don't consider a transaction with you finally closed until you are sure of your complete satisfaction. YOU may not yet realize it, but you'll know some day that these things count for a good deal more than mere bargain price considerations. The prices here are low enough. The important thing about the prices is that they're less important to both you and us than other things.

Come in and see the new Spring Suits and Overcoats made for us by five of the best wholesale tailors in America; the handsomest clothes you ever did see; the new ideas in cut and fashion, the new creations in weave and pattern, the variety and beauty of color.

$600 IN PRIZES and CASH

The Times Grand Rebus Gift Contest

Something That Should Interest Every Reader

SPECIAL—IN REPLYING TO INDIVIDUAL ADVERTISERS THE SAME RULES APPLY AS IN REGULAR CONTEST. THE NAMES OF ALL PRIZE WINNERS WILL BE ANNOUNCED IN THE TIMES, APRIL 4.

$600 IN PRIZES and CASH

RULES OF CONTEST

Solve all the following rebuses and you may win one of the prizes—all stand for name of city or State.

Herewith are presented several advertisements of responsible Los Angeles business houses. In each advertisement will be noticed an engraving and you are asked to state what city or State it represents. If you are successful in guessing the entire list and your answer is judged to be one of the neatest and most attractive, The Times will present you with a cash prize, according to the merit of the answer. All replies must be sent by mail. The prizes will be awarded according to the NEATNESS AND GENERAL ATTRACTIVENESS OF THE LIST.

How the prizes will be awarded: To the person sending in a complete correct list in the neatest and most attractive manner, $25 in cash will be given, or, if no complete correct list is received, then the prize money goes to the person having the most attractive list with the largest number of correct answers.

In a like manner a second prize of $10 will be given; to the third, $5, and to the next 10, $1 each.

In this contest you will observe that the prize money does not go to the "first" answer received, but will be given for the NEATEST AND MOST ATTRACTIVE LISTS. As the contest does not close until Friday noon, April 2, letters mailed as late as Thursday night will be duly considered, but it is advised to get your answer in as early as possible. This suggestion also applies to persons answering individual advertisers for their prizes.

The various firms represented offer prizes amounting to $600 in the aggregate for individual replies ADDRESSED DIRECT TO THEM regarding their one rebus. Their prizes without exception are worthy of your consideration and effort and should more than interest you.

IMPORTANT

In making out your list contesting for the prizes offered by The Times, please note:

The rebuses are numbered consecutively from 1 upward. In answering the question accompanying each, make out a list numbered as the rebuses are numbered, also giving name, business and business address of each advertiser, as, for instance:

NAME OF FIRM.

BUSINESS.

....

BUSINESS ADDRESS.

....

TOWN OR CITY.

....

And so on until the last number. Those you cannot answer leave blank.

1. Employees of The Times or their relatives are not eligible to enter this contest.
2. In making the list of answers write on one side of the paper only.
3. All answers to The Times in this contest must be sent by mail.
4. No answer accepted when sent by special messenger.
5. Be sure to keep a duplicate of the list of answers in order that you may compare it with the answers or solutions which will be published Sunday, April 4.

No guess will be received later than Friday noon, April 2.

All answers must be addressed to

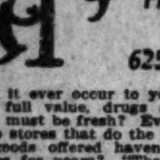
The Owl Drug Co.

Three Stores in Los Angeles



320 South Spring Street
Broadway and Fifth Street and 625 Broadway

Did it ever occur to you that to have their full value, drugs and drug store goods must be fresh? Ever consider that in the stores that do the largest business the goods offered haven't been on the shelves for years? "The Owl's" way of doing business is to sell goods of recognized quality at prices the public recognizes as low. The result is an immense volume of business—and goods that are always fresh. You benefit by this policy. So does "The Owl."

To the person sending us the name to our rebus, in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present their choice of any dress suit case in our stock, valued at $6.50. Address all replies to 320 South Spring st.

Good Bread Means Good Health

To make good bread you must see the best flour. We have told you in the past and proven it—we'll continue to tell you in the future that is the purest flour made. Now we want your opinion. To the person sending us the name to our rebus with the best and most logical reason not to exceed fifty words as to WHY CAPITOL FLOUR is the best flour made, we will present to the winning answer 100 lbs., to the second best answer 50 lbs., with our compliments.

Capitol Milling Co.

All replies must be mailed to "Dept. J."

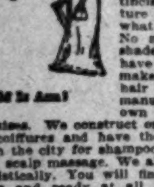
It's the Hair

—A Woman's Crowning Glory



How Old Is Ann?

that makes a woman attractive. Not only can we assist in making your hair lustrous and beautiful but we will also supply you with artificial hair, if nature has denied you what is your due. No matter what the shade may be, we have it, or will make up your own hair to order. We manufacture all our own hair goods on the premises. We construct original and beautifying coiffures and have the best appointed parlors in the city for shampooing, manicuring, face and scalp massage. We also cut children's hair artistically. You will find our assistants courteous and ready at all times to anticipate your every desire.

To the lady BRINGING TO OUR STORE the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present a handsome hair comb, valued a $5.00. To the second best answer, we will present a card for one-half dozen manicure treatments, with our compliments.

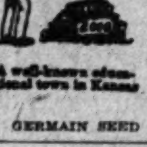
When Springtime Comes



A well-known educational town in Kansas

you naturally think of a garden. When you think of seeds, you naturally think of the Germain Seed and Plant Company, for we are the largest growers and distributors of seeds in Southern California.

OUR SWEET PEA OFFER

is bound to interest you, if you love this beautiful flower. We have six separate packets, containing six different varieties. Countless Spencer, Frank Dolby, Helen Pierce, Henry Eckford, Queen Alexandria and White Wonder. The regular price of these is 60 cents, but to introduce them, we offer the entire collections mailed anywhere for 25c, stamps or silver.

To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most artistic manner, we will present an assortment of 48 varieties of garden vegetable seeds with our book, "Practical Farming and Gardening," valued at $7.50, with our compliments.

GERMAIN SEED AND PLANT COMPANY, 326-330 SOUTH MAIN STREET.

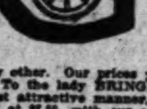
"A Fitting Gift"



In "creating" a gown, we insist that for its foundation it shall have a perfectly fitting corset, one that will give grace, elegance and comfort to the wearer. Handling nothing but the celebrated "La Frances" corset, we have made them the basis for many a perfect fitting gown. Our corsets being made to order, we can guarantee to fit you perfectly and give satisfaction. We have all the latest models, suitable for your figure, no matter what you may desire and there's a sense of pride and comfort in their wearing that won't permit your using any other. Our prices you will find unusually attractive.

To the lady BRINGING TO OUR SHOP the name to our rebus, in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present a pair of the famous La Frances corsets, valued at $7.50, with our compliments. No answer will be considered unless brought in by lady making same.

LA FRANCES CORSET SHOP, 439 SOUTH BROADWAY.

Ye Sign of Ye Orange Blossom

That little store that sets the fashion in confectionery and fixtures. The candy is "quality goods" always, and costs no more than other kinds—60 cents a pound. Do you know that we serve a dainty little luncheon in our cosy home-like ice cream parlor? Do you know that $1.35 will deliver a nice two-pound box of chocolates anywhere in the United States by express? And they are packed like eggs are shipped—guaranteed to arrive in fine condition.

Everyone has heard of the store, but have you visited it? To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most artistic manner, we will present a sweet-grass basket filled with $5.00 worth of Orange Blossom confections. Remember, they are Orange Blossom candies—that means a lot, you know.

YE SIGN OF YE ORANGE BLOSSOM,

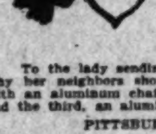
A Talk About Aluminum



If a woman could get but one meal at a friend's house whose kitchen was equipped with Aluminum ware, we wouldn't like to hear her expressions when she returned to her own old ware of iron pots and chipped agate ware.

Aluminum won't rust, get heated all over instantly, uses less grease and saves over 90 hours a year of your fuel bill. (That expense saved alone would equip an entire kitchen.) It's the most cleanly, healthful metal you can buy and its good for 20 years of hard wear, looking then just as bright as the day you bought it.

To the lady sending us the name to our rebus with five most convincing reasons why her neighbors should use Aluminum ware we will present the winning answer with an aluminum chafing dish. To the second best answer, a percolating coffee pot, and the third, an aluminum tea kettle.

PITTSBURG ALUMINUM CO., 206-207 West 6TH STREET.

If When Dining

you appreciate unexcelled service, pleasing environment, and finest cuisine—WE BID YOU WELCOME.

They say the Hotel Hayward Cafe is one of the prettiest in the city and we feel assured our cuisine fully warrants the praise given it. Our luncheon for shoppers and business men is supplied with the latest delicacies of the season, and our Sunday evening dinner is rapidly becoming the main feature of the day, with Los Angeles best society.

To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most artistic manner, we will present an evening dinner for four plates, with wine, and you can go as far as you like on the bill—we won't limit you.

Hotel Hayward Cafe

A Woman's Glory

is her hair—to some. In other people's opinion, it's her teeth. Nothing looks more beautiful, cleaner and fresher than a set of pearly teeth. Beautiful, clean teeth, well cared for, are a badge of gentility. They are necessary to every lady and gentleman. They say we have the finest appointed parlors and do more dental work than any other firm in the city. We're too busy to deny it, for after all, the test is the proof. We understand how to make the mouth beautiful, as thousands of people in Los Angeles can testify, and the cost is a moderate one, in comparison with the benefits. The examination costs you nothing.

To the two persons BRINGING TO OUR OFFICE the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present each a solid gold crown, valued at $5, with our compliments. Answers by mail will not be considered.

Painless Parker, 618-622 South Broadway

is what we are constantly in the market for. To tell you the truth, we have more applications for trained men and women than we have applicants to fill them. If you want a position that is worth your while, come to us, we have just the opening you want. If you are an employer and want trained help, advise us and we will send you a "business biography" of people whom we have thoroughly investigated, with their letters of reference and you can therefore know just whom you are selecting.

To the three persons bringing to our office the name to our rebus, with the largest number of business cards from various firms, exchanging therefor one of the cards of The House of Philbrook, we will present the one bringing the greatest number $5 in gold, the second and third with $3 and $2 respectively. Come to our office, get a bunch of our cards and see how many cards of different business houses you can bring back. The prize winners will be decided by Mr. Weart, Rebus Manager of The Times.

THE HOUSE OF PHILBROOK, 232-233-234 Security Building.

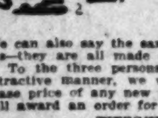
IN OUR NEW LOCATION WE HAVE THE HANDSOMEST MUSIC STORE IN LOS ANGELES.

A Firm's Word



in business, their integrity—is as good as an equal amount of capital. Therefore, when we tell you to buy one of our pianos, that they are incomparable in their beautiful sweet tone, lasting qualities and moderate prices—our word is as good as a guarantee.

In the Paul G. Mehlin Piano, you will find tone sweetness, tone power and tone durability predominating characteristics. We can also say the same of the Gabler, Krell, Hallet & Davis and Steger & Sons pianos—they are all made to give good music.

To the three persons sending us the name to our rebus, in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present an order good for $50 each, to apply on the purchase price of any new piano in our mammoth stock; to the next two best answers, we will award an order for $25, to apply in a like manner.

FITZGERALD MUSIC COMPANY, 523 S. BROADWAY.

If You Have Catarrh

have you ever gone to a specialist that treats of nothing else? We treat more patients for Catarrh than any two other physicians in the city. Why? Because we cure it to stay cured. We would like you to come to us, for we can demonstrate in a thorough and positive manner that our treatment is the right kind; that it reaches the cavities of the nose and throat; that it purifies the blood, eradicating the germs of catarrh from the stomach and bowels. In fact, it penetrates to every part of the body where catarrh germs can possibly locate and puts the system in such a healthy condition that with proper care, recurrence of the disease is impossible. Our treatment is pleasant and we feel assured you will find our prices right.

To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, together with the names of five persons they know to have catarrh, we will present Five Dollars in Gold, with our compliments.

PHYSICIANS' AND SURGEONS' ASSOCIATION.

For a Wedding Gift

nothing makes so acceptable a present as a dainty piece of cut glass, or a set of beautiful china, or articles of sterling silverware and gold.

Our china and glass room, filled with the very finest of Hawkes and other celebrated cut glass, is well worthy of your inspection. We have every article you can think of, cut in the most exquisite designs, and we feel assured our prices will merit your approval. In English and French china we carry many designs that are as exclusive as they are artistic. In fact, a visit to our cut-glass room is a half hour pleasantly and profitably spent.

To the lady sending us the name to our rebus, in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present the choice of two beautiful cut-glass berry bowls. One is valued at $9 and the other $11. One of these is a Hawkes bowl. The prize winner will be decided by Mr. Weart, "Rebus Manager" of The Times.

S. NORDLINGER & SONS, GOLD AND SILVERSMITHS, 322 SOUTH SPRING ST.

The Life of a Loved One may sometime depend upon the expediency you use in securing a doctor. We cannot impress that fact upon you too strongly, for it would not be the first time that a life has been saved by the quick, instantaneous service of the telephone. Without controversy and with pardonable pride, we say we have the best telephone system in Los Angeles. With the most prompt service, courteous employees, we aim to save you the many usual annoyances of a telephone call. The Home Automatic Telephone is acknowledged to be one the wonders of the world and one trial makes a permanent and satisfied subscriber.

To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will install one individual line telephone for a residence, and we will send a receipted bill for six months, with our compliments.

Home Telephone & Telegraph Company

When a Girl Marries

the first question asked is, "Did he have any money?" The question should be, "Did he give her a policy in a reliable Accident Company?" Every wife has a right to know that should anything happen to the husband, the wage-earner of the family, his loss of time was provided for by a policy in a reliable company of proven worth and strength. The Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. Accident Department writes one of the strongest accident and health policies in force today. And your policy increases 10 per cent. each year for five years. It also pays double the principal sum for injury received while passenger on a common carrier. It pays promptly upon proof of disability or illness—that's what it is noted for.

To the gentleman sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, with the names of two persons he knows to be interested in accident insurance, we will present a $5000 accident policy, paying $25 weekly indemnity, in the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., for six months.

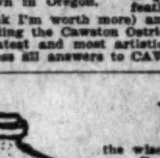
I'M JUST A BEAUTIFUL OSTRICH FEATHER—FREE



A Town in Oregon.

And some proud lady in this wonderful city is going to wear me. I was grown out at the Cawston Ostrich Farm, in South Pasadena. My ancestry dates back over 25 years, for I come of a proud race that is noted the world over for the life, strength, lustre and beauty of our feathers. I was grown in a beautiful, semi-tropical park, amid palms, and flowers, and trees, and before I was plucked, I was admired by thousands of Tourists, for they say my keepers, the Cawston Ostrich Farm, have the largest Ostrich Farm in the world, and while I was or rather had to be contented there until I was fully grown, I wanted to get out into the world and adorn some beautiful, modish hat, for some lady is going to be immensely proud of me. I have a sister feather also, (they say our value is $5.00 each, though I really think I'm worth more) and we are going to be given free, one each, to the two ladies sending the Cawston Ostrich Farm the answer to the rebus in this advertisement, in the neatest and most artistic manner. I wonder whose home I am going to?

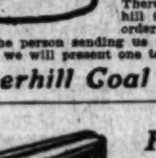
When Buying Coal



the wise householder wants the best he can get for the money. People who know, say that Alberhill Coal is the best coal on the market today. We prepare Alberhill Coal at the Alberhill mines. Screen it, and sack it ready for the consumer. There's more heat to it, therefore more value, than any other coal sold today at the price. It's free from clinkers, but not free from heat—that's the best part of it. It burns without soot or smoke and is consumed to a fine ash. There is no more lamp black on your stove when using Alberhill Coal than there is to a gas stove. If you give us a trial order, you'll have us fill your bins for the winter.

To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will present one ton of Alberhill Coal, valued at $8.50, with our compliments.

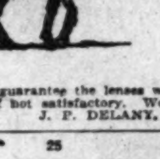
Seeing is Knowing



YOUR PRETTY EYES are a proud possession, and when clear, strong and bright, should be kept so. Don't you know that 90 per cent. of the headache troubling people, ESPECIALLY WOMEN, comes from inattention to the eyes. Let me examine your eyes, and if they need attention, will frankly tell you so. If they do, it will be to your interest to allow me to make your lenses, for they will be made correctly.

To the person sending us the name to our rebus in the neatest and most attractive manner, we will examine and fit with a pair of solid gold glasses, any choice, valued at $10, with our compliments.

We guarantee the lenses we fit as accurate, with privilege of exchanging within two years if not satisfactory. We've been doing this for 14 years.

Do You Hear Well?

Without question, the greatest scientific invention of today is the STOLZ ELECTROPHONE, an instrument invented solely for the relief of the deaf. The Stolz Electrophone is an electrically operated instrument constructed in exact accordance with nature's laws as to the transmission, multiplying and clarifying of sound waves. It is easily adjusted and worn without a particle of inconvenience. If you are deaf or partially deaf, you may make a month's trial of the Electrophone at home. This personal practical test proves that the device satisfies, with ease, every requirement of a perfect hearing device. For particulars regarding this home trial, call or write to our office. It makes no difference how long your deafness has existed, or how hard it is for you to hear, for the Electrophone WAS MADE TO GIVE YOU HEARING—perfect and to your every satisfaction. Let us whisper to you our offer, for a whisper is heard as distinctly with the Electrophone as this type is visible to your eye. To the two persons BRINGING TO OUR OFFICE the most attractive looking answer to our rebus, we will present each an order for $10, to apply on the purchase price of a Stolz Electrophone. UNCLE SAM'S ONLY WOMAN DEPUTY COLLECTOR.

Mrs. Jennie Mooney and Mrs. L. M. Petty.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Mrs. L. M. Petty, said to be the only woman deputy collector in the service of the United States, was a busy person on the French line pier when the passengers arrived from Europe. Mrs. Petty was receiving instructions in the duties she is to follow and went about her work in a business-like fashion. She is an official deputy collector for the post of Duluth, Minn.

"I know that I am the only woman employed in that capacity on the Great Lakes," said Mrs. Petty, "and I have been told there is no other woman in the United States who holds such a commission. To support my assertion, in case there was any doubt, I brought along my commission. What is my work? Well, I have charge of the office, and in my spare moments I perform all sorts of little duties—a sort of first aid to the injured work, you see."

Mrs. Jennie J. Mooney, matron in charge of the boarding division of the immigration service, explained the details of the custom examination here to Mrs. Petty, and the latter was much interested in conversing with the woman inspectors who were on the pier.

OVER THE SEA.

MR. J. M. BARRIE has received an honorary degree from Edinburgh University. He has already received a similar compliment from St. Andrew's University. In "An Edinburgh Eleven" the Scotch writer sketched half a dozen of the professors of that city.

The Prince of Wales is now an honorary fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons. The Princess of Wales and Lord Rosebery—another honorary fellow—saw him duly enrolled and in possession of his diploma.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

REV. JOHN J. PRESTON, rector of St. Lawrence's Catholic Church in Weehawken, N. Y., has been a frequent critic of the police for their failure to close the saloons on Sundays. One Friday night recently, when passing by a saloon he heard a fight going on, and failing to find a policeman he went into the saloon and commanded all hands to behave themselves like men and go home to their wives and families. The majority of the scrappers ran into the open air, fearing the priest would recognize them. William Walsh, a townsman who had filled up on booze, resented Father Preston's intrusion and loudly declared that he didn't care for all the priests in Christendom. He made other insulting remarks, and the clergyman stopped his flow of abuse by planting a good strong blow on Walsh's face. The man dropped where he had stood, and lost no time in sneaking away. The priest then went home to bed.

Judge George M. Dallas of the United States Circuit Court for the Third Judicial District has sent his resignation to President Taft. He was appointed to the Circuit Court bench in 1892, and has sat in all the important cases that have been handed down during the past fifteen years. His age is 70 years.

Dr. J. A. Throckmorton of Sidney, O., 60 years of age, was touched by President Roosevelt's horseback riding, and one day lately beat all records for long-distance riding, having covered 126 miles in 12 hours and 31 minutes. The ride was made from his home in Sidney to the town of Troy and return three times between 5 o'clock in the morning and 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, plus another minute. The distance between the two towns is 21 miles. He used four horses, changing mounts whenever he found his steed not equal to his own endurance. The only nourishment he took during the whole straining period was at the end of the eighty-fourth mile, when he gulped down a hurried bottle of ale and a raw egg, and was in the saddle again before he could wipe his mouth.

TITLED WOMAN IN CHORUS.

Baroness Irmgard H. von Papen-Koenig Studies Stage to Get Ideas for Germany.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Accompanied by her husband, who is an officer in the German army, the Baroness Irmgard H. von Papen-Koenig, a petite aristocrat of Berlin, is now in New York to study the chorus work of different productions in order to take back to her home city a fair understanding of how big ensembles and other stage details are created in America.

Titled "Chorus Girl."

Baroness von Papen-Koenig, who is studying in New York.

It is the desire of the Baroness to return to Germany shortly in order to enter the chorus of the Royal Opera.

The titled woman chatted interestingly yesterday of her aims and ambitions and her desire to absorb all the information possible about American chorus work and dancing.

Under a competent dancing master she is being instructed in steps that are not taught in Germany, and it is her intention to take a place in the chorus of some big musical production in order to learn intimately American stage ways.

Baron von Papen said that he had accompanied his wife to America to be with her and assist her in her work. He said she does not consider she is lowering her dignity any by being on the stage.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

Lace Making Plant.

Some eligible location in Rhode Island will soon have its industries increased by a lacemaking establishment from Calais, France. The firm of Caderas & Ozanne of Calais recently invested some money in a textile establishment at Pawtucket, R. I., the knowledge of which has caused a strenuous boycott and strike of workmen at Calais. So bitter is the feeling that the firm is being forced to establish its business in this county. The workman in France gets 20 cents a day; in America he must get at least $1. The American people, however, pay out $10,000,000 annually for lace, so an abundant market for the firm's product is assured.

Electrical Machinery.

The Westinghouse company is building for the Pennsylvania Railroad's terminal in New York City two steam turbines of 12,000 horse power, normal capacity. They will, however, be constructed so as to carry, when necessity demands it, an overload of 100 per cent., which means that one of these engines will be required to pull a load of 24,000 horse power.

Textile Manufacturing.

Among the important additions being made to the textile establishments of the country is the erection at Piqua, O., of the largest felt and blanket mill in the United States. The new concern will cover an entire city square, and will house a million-dollar business.

At La Grange, Ga., two immense cotton mills are to be at once erected at a cost of $850,000.

Maine is to have a new cotton mill at Old Town, for the erection of which it is planned to capitalize a company for $1,000,000. The mill will have 50,000 spindles and 1200 looms for the production of cotton cloth.

EDUCATORS, AUTHORS.

PROF. LIMAN NEWCOMB, professor emeritus of mathematics and astronomy at Johns Hopkins University, celebrated the seventy-fourth anniversary of his birthday a few days ago. Prof. Newcomb is one of the most widely-known figures in the scientific world. He is as well known abroad as he is in this country, and has been decorated by the most distinguished of the world's rulers, besides having had conferred on him honorary degrees from every scientific institution worth the mention, both here and abroad. He is just completing a monumental work on the motion of the moon upon which he has been engaged for a half century.

Prof. Abby Leach of Vassar College has been presented with a golden cup by the Mikado, in recognition of her services to the cause of education. Miss Leach was the first student at Radcliffe, when it was an annex of Harvard, and she has studied at Leipsic, besides taking her degree at Vassar. She is a member of the Fellowship Committee at the American school at Athens.

James Whitcomb Riley is evidently no believer in the greatness or enduring quality of modern literature. In a recent conversation he remarked that the chief difference between the old authors and those of today is that "they died and their works live; our works die and we live—as best we can."

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, professor of English literature in Princeton University, has finished his course of lectures at the Sarbonne, and is now lecturing in the universities in the French provinces. He has won the highest popularity with the Paris press by his lectures. On May 15 he will represent America at the University of Helsingfors, Finland.

Henry Suzzallo, formerly deputy superintendent of schools in San Francisco, and now a professor at Columbia University, has been appointed to the new chair of the philosophy of education, which has just been created in the teachers' college department of Columbia. This position will afford Prof. Suzzallo opportunity to give practical effect to his views about the waste of the present educational methods.

Prof. Albert A. Nitze, head of the Romanic language department at the University of California at Berkeley, has been appointed head of the department of Romanic languages and literature at the University of Chicago. Prof. Nitze, who is said to be one of the most eminent Romanic language scholars of the country, will enter upon his new duties next fall.

BITS OF VERSE.

Life's Mirror.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
Then give to the world the best you have
And the best will come back to you.

Give love and love to your life will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith and a score of heart will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

Give truth and your gift will be paid in kind,
And honor will honor meet,
And a smile that is sweet will surely find
A smile that is just as sweet.

For life is a mirror of king and slave,
'Tis just what we are and do;
Then give to the world the best you have
And the best will come back to you.

The Spell.

Gray wind-swept dunes and waste of shifting sand
With matted clumps of sedge along the shore,
A fishing boat turned endwise to the gale
With close-coiled nets, and labor-splintered oar;
The fierce wind's buffet, pitiless and chill,
To wake the stunted pines' rude minstrelsy;
And stretching far as weary eye can reach
The storm racked fury of the winter sea.

Yet even here, close-couched amid the stress,
Its tiny windows lashed with land-swept foam,
A fisher's shelter stands and mutely tells
The great transforming mystery of Love and Home.
—[Martha Haskell Clark, in Metropolitan Magazine.

Pervasion.

You are all vague and haunting things to me:
The shimmer of the moonlight on the mere
Is your strange being, and the brooding fear
Of the black midnight. Everywhere I see
A symbol of you; in the cedar tree
That dreams beside my window, in the clear
Eyes of the lonely stars, in the austere
And melancholy ocean's mystery.

Never the moon beholds my secret hours
But you behold me, never the gray dawn
Comes without word of you on its cool breath.
And will I find you in my coffin flowers,
When over Time's cold borders I am drawn
By the inexorable desires of Death?
—[Elsa Barker, in the Craftsman.

Heaven's so Near.

Heaven is so near, when we go to find it
We can't see clear for the glory behind it;
Its right at our feet, but we never mind it!

Heaven is so near, but we sigh and sigh for it,
We mourn and grieve and pray and cry for it,
When the thing to do is to toil and try for it!

Heaven is so near that we bump right in it
On every side and at every minute
That we live life right and deserve to win it!

Heaven is so near—like a soft wing pressing,
It floats everywhere with its tender blessing
Of bloom and bird and the wind's caressing!

Heaven is so near—its the morning beaming,
The dusk's still hour, with the starlight gleaming,
Loved lips at the gate and the dear night's dreaming!

Heaven is so near—why, we search all around us
Till it leans with its ear to our hearts to pound us,
And here in our own dear lanes it has found us!

FRESH LITERATURE—Reviews of the Latest Books.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

(BY A TIMES REVIEWER.)

President Eliot's Lectures.

UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION. By Charles W. Eliot. Houghton, Mifflin Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

It is well that President Eliot, in his last year as head of Harvard University, should publish in a single book the six N. W. Harris lectures of 1908 on "University Administration." The purpose of the foundation of these lectures, as expressed by the donor is "to stimulate scientific research of the highest type, and to bring the results of such research before the students and friends of Northwestern University, and through them to the world."

The important phases of college life and college government are here given and explained by perhaps the greatest authority on things collegiate in the world. In the first lecture, relating to trustees, President Eliot goes into great detail on this most important university organization. He takes up specifically the functions of the board of regents, discussing the university investments and expenditures, salaries and pensions, and the necessity of beautifying the grounds and buildings.

The second lecture is called "An Inspecting and Consenting Body—Alumni Influence." In this are taken up the jurisdiction of the board of overseers and the objects of the visiting committees. President Eliot discusses to some length the college organizations. First of importance are placed the classes; next the alumni organizations, for from these the colleges receive valuable advice and assistance. The local club, composed of graduates of a single institution who live in one place, are in President Eliot's favor, for they "can exert a strong influence in favor of the university with which its members were connected."

The third lecture deals with the faculty. "It is of the utmost importance that every faculty contain enough young men to bring forward in debate the views and feelings of recent college generations." The functions of the faculty, and their relation to the trustees considered.

The "elective system," lecture IV, in view of much adverse criticism from many scholars, is of unusual interest. Needless to say, President Eliot takes a strong stand for the system. He says, in part: "An elective system presupposes a well-ordered series of consecutive courses in each large subject of instruction, such as Latin, German, history or physics. The division of the courses of instruction into groups by subjects is natural and easily intelligible. Within these groups the series of subjects is natural and plain, except for the unexplained gaps which often occur in the series—gaps due to the inadequacy of the institution's resources." He goes on to point out the success derived through interest and the system's value for the unambitious. It mixes students of different ages and groups students by subject, and permits the student to concentrate his work upon the subjects in which his capacity is greatest. President Eliot answers fearlessly all the attacks on the system, and ends by saying: "The permanence of the elective system is assured by the demonstrated fact that it provides on a large scale an invaluable addition to human freedom, and provides this precious freedom for the most highly trained, and, therefore, the most productive and influential persons."

A lecture is devoted to the methods of instruction, in which the systems of lectures, recitations, laboratory work, and the case method are discussed, and the book closes with a lecture on "Social Organization—the President—General Administration."

David Starr Jordan, author of "Fish Stories, Alleged and Experienced."

History, Natural and Unnatural.

FISH STORIES, ALLEGED AND EXPERIENCED. By Charles Frederick Holder and David Starr Jordan. Henry Holt & Co., New York. (Price $1.75.)

There have been few books published this year as interesting as "Fish Stories, Alleged and Experienced," which appears in the list of American Nature Series. Dr. Jordan prefaces the weird and wondrous tales by a defense of the ethical charge that fish stories are unreliable and that anglers are all liars. The fisherman's prerogative to pervaricate has come to be an unwritten law, and so generous is the world in permitting this privilege that it is universally agreed—so thinks Dr. Jordan—that it is far better to misrepresent the magnitude of your trout catch than to make it. Inasmuch as trout lies at the bottom of the stream, and truth at the bottom of a well, it is fitting that men should lie about trout.

Thus paving the way, the authors launch forth with the stories; and let me say that they "go one better" any fish tale I have ever heard from the lips of the most mendacious. You, who will go fishing this summer, and, returning, relate of your hauls, will find many useful—I would say, indispensable—pointers in this book.

The famous fish stories of history are retold with all the glamor of yesterday's experience. The Jonah-and-the-whale event, and other scriptural sea experiences, Shakespearean tales, and the fishing experiences from the classics and mythologies, come in for consideration. All kinds of fish in all kinds of climes and countries receive their due of delightful misrepresentation. Sandwiched in are many tales of personal experiences of the authors and their friends.

I would not leave the impression that the stories are wholly fictional. In all of them there is valuable information about the different methods of angling, and, interspersed with all the over-weights and long measurements, there is a great deal of instructive natural history. The book is full of the atmosphere of outdoors, and the spirit of sport. As one reads the stories—be one fisherman or not—one's blood tingles with the excitement and exuberance that go with the bending of the rod and the twitching of the line.

A Literary Subterfuge.

DREAMING RIVER. By Barr Moses. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

I was told by the publishers that Moses—that is, Barr Moses—worked away at his writing for six years, and that during that whole time he earned but $181.10. Knowing the devices of publishers to advertise their wares, I attributed the statement to some over-zealous press agent. I did not believe that a man could work at a trade for six years and be compensated so meagerly. But I have just finished reading "Dreaming River," and I beg forgiveness for ever doubting the statement concerning Mr. Moses's perquisites. The rubber-stamp reviewers who ply their vapid trade of writing perfunctory book notices, will call "Dreaming River" a "charming little tale." But, gentle reader, (gentle, though you disagree with me,) my conscience directs me to warn you against this prairie idyl. The book is only a subterfuge for foisting on you a great deal of the author's poor poetry.

The book has but two characters, (thanks,) and the scene is laid in the wilderness, twenty miles from the nearest neighbor. Dorothy, a young girl of 16, is sent to Dreaming River by her dying father to seek shelter in a cousin's house. On her arrival the girl learns that the cousin is dead, and that his son Jaspar, a poet, lives by himself in a deserted town. Then begins the plot, which consists for the most part of the poet reading his effusions (as yet unpublished) to the girl, who has no redress and no means of escape. The pages of "Dreaming River" are made hideous by these poetic efforts. Poem on poem, rhapsody on rhapsody (one has nearly three hundred lines)—and when you think you are through, lo, more quotations. One might struggle through this and come forth sane, but this is not all. The verses are interspersed with tedious analyses, criticisms and appreciations on their merits and demerits.

Ho, ho, ho, hum.

Muzzled History.

THE GORGEOUS BORGIA. By Justin Huntley McCarthy. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Mr. McCarthy has chosen the wrong age in which to write "The Gorgeous Borgia;" rather, the wrong age has chosen Mr. McCarthy. This is an age of ladies and gentlemen, and only gentlemanly and ladylike novels are accepted for publication. We may write on any subject we choose so long as we are well bred—which means so long as we are stupid and innocuous. We may write of murder, but let us be sure to end with a jail. We may write of intrigue, but we must finish with grief and disconsolation. We may write of love, but it is necessary to be careful and evasive. Sin is permissable in fiction provided a large, imposing moral is appended. And we may write of Caesar Borgia, the younger son of Pope Alexander VI, but the truth must always be avoided and the facts skipped whenever they would have a tendency to offend our delicate sensibilities.

This is what Mr. McCarthy has done. He has written of Caesar Borgia in a most ladylike manner, and has omitted facts whenever he thought it advisable for the purpose of insinuating his book into universal tolerance. So well and completely has he expurgated and rehashed the events of Borgia's life that his book is prudishly tame. The most immoral could find no fault with it.

As a historical portrayal of Borgia it is worth little more than the rhyme of Simple Simon. And only as a historical characterization is there any excuse, so far as I can see, for the book to be in existence, for there is practically no plot, and the literary workmanship is inferior (even for Mr. McCarthy.) There are over-much description and a short weight of opulence. It ignores history and ends with a burst of the author's own imagination. It is filled to the brim with the most trustworthy misinformation. For the life of me I cannot see why it was written.

THE GLORY OF THE CONQUERED. By Susan Glaspell. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

Technically "The Glory of the Conquered" is rather fine. It has in a greater or lesser degree all the ingredients for noteworthy novel writing. There are emotion, imagination, beauty, and atmosphere in the book. So really good is the craftsmanship, so mature, so self-sure, that at once the question arises: who is Susan Glaspell?

The contents of the book are disappointing, though, and, I should say, beneath the consideration of so skilled an artisan as the author who signs herself Susan Glaspell. The story is really a bore, and were it poorly written, I should attribute it to Anne Warner. The book, except at the beginning, is one large weep, and borders throughout on preachment. The utter irretrievable self-sacrifice of the heroine is abnormally noble in print and would be rather tiresome in real life. The ethics of the book are the ultra-moral kind, unnatural and overdrawn. We can't believe the woman was a great artist or she wouldn't have lapsed into the diseased sentimentality which booted no one anything in the end. This sentimentality is called "a great love." Of course it isn't. It is merely Puritanism, plus over-wrought emotionalism.

The woman is a famous artist, whose work is filled with passionate exuberance, and to whom her creative ability means almost the joy of living. Her husband is a cancer specialist, and is experimenting for a cancer cure. One day he poisons his eyes and goes blind. The wife then throws her tubes and brushes to the four winds, and, without letting her husband know, begins the study of medicine, so that she can be the eyes for him to go on with his work. When she has attained that place in her therapeutical preparation which would enable her husband to proceed, by her aid, in his experiments, the blind man dies, learning, only at the last moment, of her secrifice. Now, isn't that a sorry plot for a good writer to waste time and labor on?

Fruit Growers' Guide.

CALIFORNIA FRUITS AND HOW TO GROW THEM. By Prof. E. J. Wickson. The Kruckeberg Press, Los Angeles. (Price $3.)

The fourth enlarged and revised edition of this book has just come from the Kruckeberg Press. The book is an indispensable manual of fruit culture in California, and covers its subject thoroughly and comprehensively. No one in any way interested in commercial fruit culture can afford to be without the book. It is amply illustrated.

Amateurish Melodrama.

LOADED DICE. By Ellery H. Clark. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis (Price $1.50.)

If Mr. Clark should be remade along entirely different lines, there would be a mere possibility that he would be able to write novels. As he is now constituted, I emphatically discourage his ambition as a writer. He holds the world's championship for some kind of athletic prowess. This should suffice. (By the way, the publishers make a great point of Mr. Clark's athletic fame as an advertisement for his book. Ergo: "James Jeffries gives lessons in fancy needlework. Mr. Jeffries is the champion heavyweight pugilist.")

The plot of "Loaded Dice" is gory and preposterous. Gordon (the hero) believes that death is the end of all things, and lives his life accordingly. He murders four people who interfere with his operations, and, from a small stockbroker, he expands into a wealthy capitalist. Later, he is elected Governor, and eventually is shot in the back. Obviously the book is a muck-raking tract, and names and business firms in the story are easily recognizable. The characters are wooden, and the incidents inexpensive. They are the stock situations of all sensational melodramatists. Mr. Clark's style is like a locomotive whistle when some one is on the track.

Back to the cinder path and the spiked shoe, Ellery; the novel is not for thee.

The Usual Intrigue.

THE PASSER-BY. By Prince Pierre Troubatzkoy. Doubleday, Page & Co. (Price $1.50.)

There appears another star in the fictional heavens, but, being something of a literary astronomer, I predict its disappearance ere long. There are already so many stars beaming upon us that this new sputtering bit of blue light will attract no attention. The star's name is Prince Pierre Troubatzkoy, and it singeth tamely of intrigue and "high society." You see by the theme of its song it is a very unoriginal little twinkler.

An inconsequent lady with esthetic sensibilities (seven parts nerves, three parts peevishness) is married to a rich gentleman who has no nerves. Desiring one who is "temperamental," the lady selects a male despot with a simulated artistic conscience. She is saved from disaster by a third "party," who personifies honor and all the orthodox virtues. Then, fearing lest his own passion for the lady be discovered, he goes—ah, he goes away. The wealth of the aforementioned untemperamental husband vanishes, and—do you mean to tell me you do not know the ending? Why, husband and wife are reunited, of course, silly.

LITERARY SHOP TALK.

I have received a letter (a written complaint would be more nearly accurate) by one who has signed him-or-herself "Anon." (It is the short for A Nonenity, is it not? . . . . More than likely!) He has lodged a complaint—nay, several complaints, against me. The letter is as follows: I have omitted nothing.

"Literary Editor Times—Sir: For several months I have followed closely your book reviews. Evidently you bank much on your quasi-wit. You would sacrifice any opinion of yours for the sake of making a joke, I think. You handle the most serious matters and publications lightly. To you, because a novel is a novel it is therefore poor. Will you not be serious? ANON."

When first I read this I came near flinging it into the scrap-basket. The hopelessness of showing Anon the absurdity of his errors for a moment overwhelmed me. Then I paused. He might have in him, I thought, the potentialities. I would try. Anyway, my reply would make good reading.

Anon has read me for several months and arrives at the conclusion that I bank much on my wit, which means I try to be witty. I admit I try to be witty. I take a pride in being witty. "Quasi-wit" merely means that Anon is unable to appreciate my wit. He even thinks I would sacrifice my opinion to joke-making. How absurd! And not only absurd but inconsistent. Absurd—because he does not know what my opinion of a book is except what he reads of a Sunday; inconsistent—because he says he has read my reviews for several months. And any-one who had read my reviews at all would know that I could be clever whenever I wished.

Now, dear reader (for all readers are dear, whether they think me clever or not,) I come to the most hopeless passage in the letter—that one about handling the most serious things lightly. After Wilde and Shaw and Chesterton have explained so lucidly and succinctly the fallacy of treating serious things seriously, it seems superfluous for me to add anything. Need I tell Anon that one never takes serious things seriously; that it is only the light things over which one pulls a long face? Anon is not observing. What are the subjects of all the jokes of our humorists? Light things? Never! They are such opaquely serious things as mothers-in-law, matrimony and going to jail. Those two men yonder—for what have they got their noses together and their eyes set in febrile earnestness? Are they arguing over the final analysis of matter or the plausibility of the metempsychosis? No, they are discussing the outcome of a polo match. And those women with serious brows and tense expressions—about what are they arguing so earnestly? I cannot hear them, but I'll warrant it is either lace insertions or the best way to make sponge cake. Serious things are all there are to joke about. Light things are not susceptible to humor; they are already frivolous. Therefore we treat them with deadly seriousness. It is no fun to joke about a clown; but it is delightful to poke fun at that blue pillar of seriousness, the policeman.

As for Anon's accusation that because a novel is a novel, I therefore deem it poor, it is in a large measure correct; and if Anon would spend thirty days at my desk dipping into the fiction as it comes to me hot from the press, he would realize that I had not gone far astray. So utterly inconsequent and vapid are the modern novels as a whole, that only an indefatigable seeker with unlimited patience could ever find one which he could, with a clean conscience recommend.

"Houses of Glass," the paper book issued by Duffield, is interesting in view of the book-selling situation in England and America. For some years publishers and book-sellers have been trying to help the book-selling fraternity out of a perilous situation in the book trade. The attempt has been made to prevent the price of books from being cut below a certain figure, in order, in other words, to protect the book-sellers from being put out of business by a certain class of department stores. If a department store, for instance, sells a novel at 79 cents for advertising purposes, it is sold at a loss, and the book-seller, being the smaller capitalist of the two, cannot afford to enter into the warfare of cutting the price still further. The public, meanwhile, is interested in the situation even if it does not realize the fact; because a good book store is the logical distributing center of new publications. If books are not to be purchased entirely by mail, a point to which the public has not yet been educated, the existence of the book-seller must be maintained.

In furtherance of these general ends some publishers have cut the price of new fiction down to $1.20 net, with limited discounts to the trade, but in the main the orthodox price has remained $1.50. Readers generally do not realize that most of this price is due to the fact of there being a showy cloth cover on their novels. The cover costs usually from 10 to 15 cents, and, according to European ideas, serves no real purpose, as the book is later bound up in leather or vellum if the purchaser's interest in it has been permanent. In "Houses of Glass" Messrs. Duffield & Co. have reduced the price of the book three times the amount of the omitted cover. It will be interesting to note whether the public takes kindly to this effort to give them a little lesson in economy.

NEWS AND NOTES OF FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

"The Plotting of Frances Ware," by James Locke, author of "The Stem of the Crimson Dahlia," will soon be published by Moffatt, Yard & Co. It is an international tale with an American heroine. The story begins in the desert of Afghanistan, moves on to Paris, and reaches its culmination in Warsaw.

Charles H. Sternberg's "Life of a Fossil Hunter" seems to have made an instantaneous hit, as Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. are already having to reprint it in less than a month from its appearance. This volume, in the American Nature Series, is more lively than might be supposed, adventures with Indians being among its features, and it is not devoid of humor.

Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons will publish this week a book by F. G. Aflalo, giving an account of fishing and other days in California and Canada, under the title of "Sunset Playgrounds." The author's recent visit to the famous and beautiful Catalina Island—the Mecca of sea anglers—is described, and there are lively accounts of glorious sport with the great Pacific game fishes, and trout of American and Canadian lakes and streams, while the book also provides bright and amusing criticisms of American and Canadian life and ways.

Moffat, Yard & Co. report the third edition of Sir Oliver Lodge's "Science and Immortality" in press.

The Macmillan Company's list for this week includes another volume in the series of Stories from American History, "The Story of the Great Lakes," by Prof. Edward Channing and Miss Marian F. Lansing; the fourth volume of Bailey's "Cyclopedia of Agriculture;" "Modern Thought and the Crisis in Belief," by Prof. Robert M. Wenley; "Walt Whitman," by Prof. George Rice Carpenter, in the English Men of Letters series, and Prof. Allan Marquand's "Greek Architecture."

A book which will attract world-wide attention, Dr. Hugo Munsterberg's "Psychotherapy," will be published by Moffat, Yard & Co. as soon as the printers and binders can produce it. The manuscript was completed at the end of February and was ready for the machines the first week in March. It treats the subject from the most modern point of view, dealing with the whole subject for the benefit of the unscientific as well as the professional reader.

The announcement by Henry Holt & Co. of "The Bob's Cave Boys," a sequel to "The Boys of Bob's Hill," by Charles Pierce Burton, is now followed by the one that they are having to print the earlier book for the sixth time. The same house announce a fourth printing of "The Girls of Gardenville," by Mrs. Carroll Watson Rankin, of "Dandelion Cottage" fame.

Messrs. Duffield & Co. announce second editions of W. Somerset Maugham's novel, "The Magician," and of "Christopher Hibbault, Roadmaker," by Marguerite Bryant; also of Miss Theodora Perb's Scottish novel, "The Sword of Dundee."

Moffat, Yard & Co. will publish at once Ida M. Tarbell's new book, entitled "Father Abraham." It is a new "He Knew Lincoln" book, and will appear uniform with that classic. There will be a frontispiece in colors by Blendon Campbell, and five tint illustrations. It is a story of unusual power.

About the first of April "The Chippendales," a new novel by Robert Grant, is due for appearance from the press of Charles Scribner's Sons. Eight years ago "Unleavened Bread" was issued, and four years ago appeared "The Undercurrent," but other than these no books have come from the pen of Mr. Grant. The new book is a story of the conflict of the new and the old in society and business in Boston.

This month Longman, Greene & Co. will publish a book by J. W. Mackail, M.A., LL.D., professor of poetry in the University of Oxford. The book will be called "The Springs of Hellicon," and it will trace the progress of English poetry from Chaucer to Milton. The volume consists of the lectures which were given in the years 1906-7-8 from the chair of poetry at Oxford. They have been revised and expanded somewhat for the present publication.

The Rev. Charles Wagner, author of "The Simple Life," will publish through the firm of Funk & Wagnalls Company, a new book. It is the first work from his pen since he established in Paris an institution for religious culture, which he named "The Home of the Soul." He uses this name as the title for his book.

The final volume of Signor Ferrero's "The Greatness and Decline of Rome" has just been issued by the Putnam's. The title of this fifth volume is "The Republic of Augustus." Due to the fact that the first two volumes of this work have been exhausted, a new edition of them has gone to press and will be ready some time in April.

It heart to find themselves and sympathy with others the needs and desires, joys . So as you read, please of that picture we have all seen so long pointing directly at us from every wall and fence, "This means you."

Next month is our "joy" month, according to Marguerite Winnefred's programme for the Would Bes, and I am going to be so jolly—so jolly you won't know me.

But now, back to the thought which started this letter, for "the first shall be last," you know, even in thoughts, the dear "shut-ins" who have sent such pathetically grateful little notes, with such glimpses of suffering between the lines. How my heart goes out to you all, and it seems impossible to say here much that I would like to. That dear old couple with such heavy burdens of pain and privation, it must almost seem as if there were nothing you could be thankful for, let me tell you an incident in my own life.

My nine-year-old boy and I had both been ill nine long weeks. We had been in California but a short time, and were therefore strangers in a strange land. The boy was beginning to walk about the room a little, but I was still unable to sit up more than an hour or so at a time. Thanksgiving Day came, the nurse had gone to her own family festival for the day; we were alone and trying to be cheerful, but the tears would come, till at last my boy threw his arms about me, saying, "But, oh, mamma, dear, we have each other." He is not with me now, but I am grateful for the remembrance of that day.

That other dear invalid. How can one find words to tell you of the tender sympathy we send to you. How gladly would we sit beside you and try to share with you some of the beautiful things in the great world it has been our joy to have seen in the days that are past. How we live them over again, as now in the hours of aloneness that must come to a shut-in—we climb the mountain heights, or sail the stormy seas, or revel in nature's wonders in the heart of the northern forests. Would we could picture them all to you, for only in getting out of our own small worlds and realizing the largeness, the lovingness of the great heart of it all, will come peace or content in just being. If the rocks and the mountains in their quiet grandeur, the murmuring trees, the laughing waters, breathe out such glad content, why not we, who wait the unfolding of greater visions of splendor than can be seen with these earthly eyes? Will it give you any pleasure to know that we would share it all with you?—our life that has been, or the hope of what is to be, to help fill the life so shut in, so cut off from almost all that seems worth while?

Dear girls, all who are burdened or "troubled about many things," know that in these lines there is a word for each of you. A word of courage, a word of hope for the freshening vigor just springing up within you, as at the glad Easter time, nature's springtime, the tide of new life flows through body, heart and soul.

To Go Back East.

S. H., who became interested in the Each and All Society here will soon return East. Here is her letter:

"I have been a member of your most worthy society for about a year, although on account of being a semi-invalid I could attend only three meetings. From the interest exhibited on the page each Sunday I feel certain there is a great future for the society. I will leave for my eastern home in about four weeks and would be glad to exchange letters or cards with some of the girls of Each and All. I will send some interesting views of my home city.

"Wishing you all the greatest success, I hope I may hear from some of you in regard to exchanging cards."

Here is a fine opportunity for those interested in postal card collecting.

A Collect for Club Women.

The following prayer, delivered at the opening of a women's club meeting at Saginaw, Mich., has considerable value. We commend it to our readers:

Keep us, O God, from pettiness; let us be lage in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking.

May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face, without self-pity and without prejudice.

May we be never hasty in judgment and always generous.

Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straightforward and unafraid.

Let us take time for all things; make us grow calm, serene, gentle.

Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences; that in the big things of life we are as one.

And may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all, and O Lord, let us not forget to be kind.—[Delineator.

Interested in Society.

Mrs. M. W. S. of Los Angeles is interested in the work of Each and All Society and will help spread it. She writes:

"I am greatly interested in the work done through your columns and I should like to have a part in it. I accept your pledge and shall endeavor to live up to it.

"Please send me the address of the shut-in of Stillwater, Minn., and a list of your other shut-in members with their particular wants.

"I often have pictures, music, cooking recipes, ideas for fancy work, children's stories, etc., which I would be glad to pass on to others."

We are glad to add your name to our long list of Each and All members. The addresses you request will be forwarded to you.

A Cheerful Shut-in.

"Bluebelle," a little shut-in girl, sends the following letter to the department:

"I have been an Each and All member for quite a while, and think our society a very noble one. What could be more pretty or uplifting than our pledge and motto? I am a member of the Would-Be Author Chapter. I would like to become an author. I try now to write stories but I do not know much about writing or how to send articles to a magazine. I am imaginative and while I am in the mood sometimes, write quite a bit. I have a lot of time to study, as I am an invalid and not able to do any work. I thought if I could write a few short stories I might make a little something. We Would-Be Authors should help each other and maybe after awhile we may become real authors. Is there not some one to help me? If there is I will try to repay it in any way I can.

"My parents are anxious to have me go and stay with a sister at the seashore, and there I hope to regain my health. I have been sick for almost three years, so I will indeed be happy if I can be well and strong again. I am only 17, and it is hard to be sick when so young, but I will not complain for I hope to be well soon.

"I have had the distinction of being the youngest Would-Be Author, so you 'Would-Be Authors' boost your baby sister.

"As all the E. and A. girls are adopting names instead of their initials, I have taken the name of 'Bluebell.' I have inclosed a stamped envelope in which please send me G. L.'s address, and also a list of shut-in members, so may send them each an Easter card.

"I am trying to write a story now and if I get it finished I would like to send it to some magazine, although there is not much hope of its being accepted. But there is nothing like trying. BLUEBELL."

Dear little cheery Bluebell, just get that trip to the beach, and set yourself to getting well and strong again. Don't even think or worry about writing stories just yet. That will come later. That is a dear unselfish thought to want to send Easter cards to our Shut-in members. These addresses have been forwarded to you.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE:

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

The acceptance of this pledge and sending of name and address to the Each and All department of The Times entitles any girl to the privileges of this society. There are no dues of any kind whatsoever. The official pin of The Times Each and All Society, represents the California poppy. Any chapter may be joined by sending stamped envelope with letter in order to put the applicant in communication with the chairman of the chapter.

A LOYAL MEMBER.

Expresses Herself in Regard to Humane Education—It Should Begin With Grandfathers.

The following letter is from an Each and All girl, who asks to be identified as, "A Loyal Member," and, judging from her sentiments here expressed, she is worthy of the name:

"I am usually one of the silent members, but that letter from that place way down East somewhere called Dott made me want to speak up. I loye animals myself, and have lived in the country, where I could have both a dog and a horse, and nobody on the place was allowed to abuse them, either; but when it comes to making all this fuss about educating the children to be kind to animals, I say begin with their grandfathers, and then you won't have so much trouble with them.

"When a boy is taught, as most of them are, to 'stand up for his rights and fight anything that he can lick,' and to show his 'superior strength and manliness' by sheer brute force, he soon ceases to have much consideration for anybody or anything, and seems to think it shows smartness to tease and annoy and make fun of everybody, whether it be his little sister, some red-headed youngster, or tottering old man on the street, and if he can accidentally run against another boy and knock him into the ditch or a mud puddle and spoil his nice clothes, that's fun, and he is in his element. If he were taught to be polite and kind and helpful to people, you wouldn't find him stoning the cat or kicking the dog.

"This being humane is all right, but it seems to me the Animal Aid folks begin in the wrong place. It does not strike me that our society needs education in that line, for even Hope Russell said she had a dog, and loved him, too. She seems to me to love everybody, and I guess that was the reason she tried to find some excuse for the man who poisoned the dog. I believe we would 'progress a whole lot faster if we would stick to the main idea, which was, I supposed, to learn the very best way to live right ad help other people all we can, a sort of mutual-aid society. And when you join such a society you don't want it turned into an animal protection society, any more than when you form a tennis club you expect the members to play croquet all the time.

"Now, please, do not think me quarrelsome. I do not like to hear my friends talked about, even if I do not think just the way they do. So, please put this in, and say it is from a loyal member of Each and All, who tries to live up to the pledge and really means this for the good of everybody."

Is Anxious to Write.

"Maria Patricia," a young girl, who must spend most of her time in a big department store, asks permission to adopt the Each and All pledge.

"I have been interested in the Each and All department for some time, and to my delight have become acquainted with one of the members of the Would-be Author's Chapter.

"How I would love to become a writer, but, dear editor, I am just a poor shop girl, and have to work hard each day. I only hope that I will have more time to devote to writing. I would also like to correspond with some of the girls who are interested in the Would-be Authors.

"I will take the pledge of the society and hope to live up to it. There is nothing sweeter to me than charity and love for our neighbor—'Love thy neighbor as thyself.'

"Not one, but Each and All—
And His blessing He will give to those who heed his call."

Welcome into the ranks of the Each and All girls, I am sure you can live up to the Each and All society pledge if you earnestly wish to do so. Marguerite Winnifred, chairman of our Would-be Authors Chapter, will be able and glad to help you if you will identify yourself with her branch of the society.

Asks to Be Enrolled.

Miss B. D. of Los Angeles desires to be enrolled as an Each and All girl.

"Will you please enroll me as a member of the Each and All Society. I will try faithfully to live up to its pledge, which I think is very beautiful. It makes you feel stronger and more capable every time you read it.

"Will you please send me the name of the paralytic girl you spoke of some time ago, who wished reading matter. I have some I would like to give, and would also like to go and see her. Will you please tell me where I could secure the society pin?"

The Each and All girls are happy to welcome you as one of their band. The address of the paralyzed girl has been forwarded to you. The cost of the Each and All pin is 50 cents.

Will Help.

Mrs. M. Z. W., a Pomona member, will help young verse writers of her town. She writes:

"If there is a would-be author of verse in Pomona of whom you are aware, kindly send me her address, as I think I can help her if she has real talent for verse writing."

The address of the above mentioned writer will be furnished upon request.

A Kindly Act.

Mrs. M. B. of San Diego has been deeply interested in the letter of our Union City member. She writes as follows:

"I hope you will not think it too much trouble to look back to last week's page and send me the address of 'Persistent Peggy' of El Cajon, San Diego county. I am sorry the sheet was mislaid. I am much interested in the Union City sister, and the linen shower, and I wish to know if some of the Los Angeles girls would line a patchwork spread. I have a pretty all-wool one, but I have no time to line and tie it. I will send it if some one will manage the rest. I would like to suggest to the girls that a little substantial assistance would be very helpful to our Union City girl at the present time, when the poor husband is struggling with poverty, and that terrible anxiety which comes to us all at such times. Will not all join and try to keep the husband home a little longer? I inclose a dollar bill, feeling certain that other mites will be added to this to help our sister over a rough spot."

The editor of this department takes it upon her own responsibility to say that members of the Invalid Cheer Chapter will be delighted to line and tie the quilt mentioned, and this may then be disposed of and the proceeds forwarded to Union City, or, if it is desired, the quilt will be sent directly to her. The dollar has already been forwarded to her. The addresses you requested shall receive attention.

INTERESTED IN CHICKS.

An Each and All Member Relates Her Experiences and Grows Poetic.

An Each and All girl, whose initials are (Mrs.) W. C. S., is interested in chickens, and tells how she saved one:

"About two weeks ago I read the pretty chicken story by Marguerite Winnifred. I am doing a little in the hatching line just now, and thought I would jot down a little of my experience. One often hears the expression, 'Buff Orpington hens make such good mothers.' We borrowed one that wanted to sit, and after twenty-two days' constant attendance, she came off with seven chicks. Three more were almost out of the shell, but cold and lifeless; four more remained another day under her; three were cold when removed, and the fourth barely warm enough to be noticed. She lacked animal heat to hatch them. I improvised an incubator, started my Puritan oil stove—has but one wick—kept only a tiny bit of flame at one end; put on the stove a small granite stewpan with warm water in it, placed a teacup in the pan, a bowl upon the cup, and warm cotton batting in the bowl. While holding the egg in my hand, I heard a faint peep. The shell was partly off, but the thick membrane had not been punctured. I wrapped the egg in cloth wrung out of warm water, then made a tiny incision in the membrane. The peeping became louder, and a slight motion was heard within. Covering the dish I left it for the night, but was up several times to look after the stove.

"Early this morning I helped him out of his shell, and he is a lively little chick-a-biddy—and tonight I think he will do to put under the hen with the others.

"I think I hear some one say: 'What a world of bother to save one little chicky!' I count the wee chickens a close second to the birds, and as I cannot create life, the next best thing I think is to save it.

"I send you some machine poetry about the biddies:

"Pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete,
Was ever sound so sweet
To the patient mother hen
On her nest in darkened pen?

"Pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete,
Waiting her downy brood to greet,
Fluffing out her feathery breast,
Clucking: 'I'll do my level best.'

"Pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete,
Seven tiny chickies on their feet;
Pr-r-, pr-r-r, softly soothing sound,
Biddy's lullaby the world around.

"Pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete, pete-a-pete,
In and out go twinkling feet,
Scratching, scratching, in the sand;
What a wondrous fairyland.

"Our pledge makes me think of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's poem upon the two kinds of people upon earth, those who lift and those who lean, and I want to be among the lifters."

Your effort to save the little life was well worth while, and you must feel a satisfaction in the result.

SEVEN YEARS OF ROOSEVELT.

Time Will Tell Whether He Did All Things Wisely or Too Well.

"In seven years we shall know better whether Theodore Roosevelt has done things for us or has done things to us," writes Lindsay Denison in the March Circle magazine. "(It is possible he has done both.) But at any rate the final ledger balances will be in positive form.

"We shall have, for instance, the Panama Canal.

"It may read that we ought to have a sea-level canal instead of a lock canal; it may read that the canal has cost half a billion dollars, when it ought to have cost only a third as much.

"The point is that there will be a canal.

"In the relations of the government and great corporations we shall have something which may read: President Roosevelt perverted the spirit of the Constitution to meet his own prejudices; it may read that he fed the clamor of the people for a blood or money sacrifice by forcing the operation of a law which he himself had admitted to be sometimes inequitable—the Sherman law; it may read that many industrious and honest men in banks, stores, factories, and ditches, suffered want and saw their wives and children hunger and die when possibly (but not probably) the ideals of national life for which he was striving might have been brought about automatically and gently with the passing of the years of himself and his successors—just as President McKinley intended to eliminate the spoilsmen in the government departments quietly and without disturbing the nation by self-doubts.

"The point is that it has been proved that there is not a corporation in the United States which has any certainty that it can violate the law of the United States with impunity; that there is always hanging over such a corporation the threat that a President may be elected who will so execute the real will of the nation that nothing can stand between them and a calling to account.

"In the history of Mr. Roosevelt's personal attitude toward his office (after all the jokesmiths have finished talking about his homilies on everything from the married relation to the life of the farmer and from high finance to birds' eggs) it may be written that he has overborne his wisest advisers and has leaned too much on the reflex commendation of his every thought which must come to a strong man from a clique of self-selected personal admirers.

"The point is that we have had a working and a human President and not a mechanic who has watched and oiled a machine for the mere honor of holding the office."

Beautiful Dreamy-eyed Little Senoritas, in character costumes worn at the "Baile Infantil," which plays an important part in the annual carnival held at Culiacan, Mexico.

THE "BAILE INFANTIL."

st Interesting Feature of the Annual Carnival at Culiacan, Mexico.

the many interesting features of carnival in Culiacan, Mex., the charming is the "Baile Infantil," 's ball, which usually takes on Monday afternoon, the sec- y of the carnival.

Plaza de Armas, the most cen- the plazas, is the scene of this festivity, one whole side be- ed off for the exclusive use of tots. Carnival flags wave pillar and post, and thous- of bright-colored "serpentinas" the trees, giving them the of Christmas trees deco- with baby ribbon. In a conspic- place are elaborate thrones for and queen of the carnival, this afternoon they preside over youthful subjects only, and nonce, all the grown-up car- world is "not worth a row of as 1 o'clock the advance of the audience begins to look of vantage in the streets the plaza, while dozens of homes are in a perfect flutter of preparation, as little boys are being changed to grand "milords" and sportive clowns, and little girls to picturesque gypsy maids and dainty fairies. And soon they begin to appear at the plaza, attended by mother, grandmother and nurse, while a bevy of "sisters and cousins and aunts by the dozens," fill up all available places.

The grotesque carnival band marches round and round the plaza playing "Los Papaquies," the distinctive carnival music, which is heard at no other time of the year. And then, as their majesties, the king and queen, appear, the orchestra, which is stationed near the throne, begins the music of the "Baile." And still the little ones come, like brilliant birds from all directions, and join the motley throng which parades back and forth in front of the king and queen, the boys as proud as peacocks, and every bit as gay; the girls a trifle shy, and wondering about the effect they make in their gaudy little gowns; while fond parents and relatives almost forget to breathe in their enjoyment of the gay pageant before them.

And now their majesties descend from their thrones and lead the grand march, the diminutive ladies and gentlemen falling in line behind them, two by two, trying to make their active little feet keep time to the seemingly slow music of the orchestra. Here a gorgeous purple and gold butterfly with most magnificent wings, is marching beside the king's jester, all tinkling bells from pointed cap to pointed shoes. And there my lady "White Rose," in an accordion-plaited gown of snowy silk with a shower of white roses falling all over her hair and gown, walks, arm in arm, with the representative of "The Firmament." The blue satin gown, blue stockings and slippers of this ambitious little lady are literally covered with tiny spangles, moons and stars, and over all is a mist in the form of an overdress of chiffon fastened at neck and shoulders with moons and stars, while from her head floats a filmy cloud, held in place by the same mystic symbols. And here comes a merry, black-eyed gypsy, in red satin skirt and black velvet jacket, with necklaces and bracelets enough to satisfy any girlish heart. She shakes her tambourine at her admiring friends, and holds tightly by the hand a timid and bashful "Pierrot." And just see this dainty pink fairy, all smiles and dimples, and this cunning "Uncle Sam" clown, arrayed in stars and stripes.

Now a shout is heard down at the end of the line, and the eyes that immediately turn in that direction open to their widest extent at the sight which they behold: a veritable Baby Brobdignag among the Lilliputians. At least five-feet-eight in his stocking feet, and arrayed in the dainty costume of a two-year-old child, he certainly is enough to make anybody stare. With dress, stockings and slippers of baby blue, and a white ruffled bonnet with long blue strings, he is too sweetly pretty for anything, until he faces the audience, and then the effect of his fierce black mustache beggars description. But he falls right in line, holding by the hand a pretty little "Colombina," and apparently oblivious of the mirth he is exciting.

And now, the grand march being ended, the king and queen once more ascend their thrones, to be further regaled by some pretty Spanish dances, rendered by two beautiful little girls in "Chula" costume. Then, the dancing is supposed to go merrily on, participated in by all. But, dear me! underneath all those grand costumes are beating real childish hearts, with a natural passion for play, so while the orchestra discourses alluring waltzes, catchy two-steps and dreamy Spanish dances, the play spirit takes things in his own hand, and the fun becomes fast and furious. Henri IV, resplendent in red velvet, tags a staid-looking person in a plain black evening suit, and then it is a question which flies faster, the lace ruffles of the French king or the swallow tails of the modern gentleman. There stands "Music," in a carefully-made gown of white satin adorned with musical characters of various kinds. But her musical instruments have been cast aside, and every time the aforementioned gentlemen fly past her, she showers them with "confetti," laughing merrily to see them duck. The Grecian Priestess, in a long, graceful robe of white and gold, which seems made especially for a slow promenade, is literally galloping after "Santa Claus," because the old fellow is boyish enough to jerk her pretty curls. And everybody is throwing "confetti" at everybody else, until the ground has disappeared under the soft thick vari-colored carpet, and the little feet go scuffling, scuffling through it.

And now the committee has a heroic task to perform, for the hour is late and this jolly chaos must be reduced to order. But in a remarkably short time they are once more marching past the king and queen, smiling contentedly as their gracious majesties present each child with an imported toy. And see! Baby Brobdignag has received a tiny tin wagon, and is trundling it after him, with the help of a foot or two of cord!

Well, well, well! the audience has laughed until its sides ache, and gazed until its eyes are tired, and now will go home to talk it all over. For never can more keen enjoyment be crowded into a given space of time than during the few short hours of the "Baile Infantil" of the carnival at Culiacan.

MARIQUITA.

Marjorie Thomas,

ebrated her seventh birthday anniversary with a party on St. Patrick's Day.

A Jolly Birthday Party.

Thirty enthusiastic little friends aided Marjorie Thomas in celebrating her seventh birthday anniversary, which occurred on St. Patrick's day. In honor of the day the green Isle of Erin and the exploits of its patron saint were made the theme of the celebration.

One of the very jolly games which were played and which caused the wildest merriment from the children was the efforts of little guests, when blindfolded, to put a pipe into the Irishman's mouth. Then there was a snake hunt. The little people all went scurrying about the gardens on a still hunt for the snakes which St. Patrick [illegible] from the Emerald Isle, for those who hunted out the most snakes received a prize, as well as the clever youngsters who put the pipe in the old man's mouth.

Quaint and tiny Irish dolls were given to the little guests in honor and remembrance of Marjorie's seventh birthday party.

Marjorie is the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Thomas of Budlong avenue, and is pictured here with her dollies and holding her own flag in one hand, and the pretty emblem of Ireland in the other.

Josephine's Party.

In honor of the tenth birthday anniversary of her little daughter, Josephine, Mrs. H. D. Spellman of No. 1489 East Twenty-first street entertained during the week with a delightful children's party. The home was prettily decorated for the party with great quantities of carnations and pink roses, and a profusion of trailing smilax. A lovely feast was spread for the children, a big birthday cake being the center of attraction. Music, songs and games made the party a happy one. The little guests were Doris Southwell, Eva Head, Nita Wright, Gladys James, Evalee Ester, Evalee Estes, Helen Day, Pearl Lydon, Corinne Heckman, Lydia Schlitzkey, Archie Tucker, Grace Brandon, Mabel Johnson and Frances Cummings.

Fun from the Tots.

"Mamma," said little Fred, "this catechism is awfully hard. Can't you get me a kittychism?"—[Chicago News.

First Urchin: What's all this rag chewin' 'bout wipin' out the color line in the schools?

Second Urchin (disgustedly:) Shucks! Any guy orter know that! The school board is goin' to make us wash beneath our collars and behind our ears.—[Judge.

A public school teacher was explaining the meaning of the word "glutton."

"Now, Tommy," she asked, "what would you call a man who is constantly overeating?"

"Oh," said Tommy, whose father was a sea captain, "he's what you call a stowaway, I guess!"—[Philadelphia Press.

"Mamma," said five-year-old Laura, "may I ask just one more question?"

"I suppose so," answered her mother, wearily.

"Well," continued Laura, "when a hole comes in a stocking what becomes of the piece of stocking that was there before the hole came?"

Mother: Were you taught to be polite in school, Tommie?

Tommie: Yes, mamma, but I was taught so many things that I can't remember 'em all.

Donald had returned from a visit to the country, and was full of reminiscences of persons and things that had interested him. "I met a boy, mamma," he said, "that had the queerest name I ever heard. He said his folks found it in the Old Testament. It was—it was—let me see—yes, it was Father William, or William Father; I've forgotten just now which. But it was one or the other."

"But, Donald," said his mother "there is no such name as Father William or William Father in the Old Testament."

"Are you sure, mamma?"

"I certainly am, dear. I have read it through several times. William is a comparatively modern name. It isn't anywhere in the Bible."

"Well, but—oh, I remember now!" exclaimed Donald. "It was Bildad!"—[Youth's Companion.

BELASCO THEATER— EVERY NIGHT THIS WEEK AT 8:15. MATS. TODAY, THURS. & SAT'Y.

FOURTH WEEK OF UNINTERRUPTED SUCCESS

Another week of George Broadhurst's great play will commence tomorrow night. This additional week is given so that the thousands of disappointed theater-goers will have an opportunity to see the greatest play that has been produced in years.

THE DOLLAR MARK

Over 45,000 delighted play-goers have already witnessed this big American play. Every one has united in declaring it to be the greatest hit that has ever been known in this or any other city.

Read This Enthusiastic Praise:

It is a better play than "The Man of the Hour."—The Times.
The best play of the times.—The Examiner.
A smashing good show.—The Herald.
So human that it ought to get the money.—The Express.
From beginning to end there were storms of applause.—The Record.
An unmistakable success.—The News.

When every newspaper in Los Angeles praises THE DOLLAR MARK like this and when over 45,000 people endorse this opinion that "THE DOLLAR MARK" is the greatest play of the times, there must be something to it. THERE NEVER WAS A PLAY THAT COULD FOOL 45,000 PEOPLE AND KEEP A THEATER LIKE THE BELASCO CROWDED FOR FOUR SMASHING BIG WEEKS.

This is the last time you will ever have a chance to see "THE DOLLAR MARK" at the Belasco scale of popular prices. Wm. A. Brady will produce the play at the Savoy Theater in September and it will be next to Los Angeles as a syndicate two-dollar attraction—and even at that it will be worth the money, but given as it is at the Belasco and with the Belasco regular prices prevailing, "THE DOLLAR MARK" is just the biggest theatrical bargain that was ever offered to the theater-goers of any city.

POSITIVELY THE LAST WEEK OF THIS BIG HIT

PRICES—Every night—25c to 75c. Matinees today, Thursday and Sunday, 25c to 50c.

NEXT WEEK—First appearance of MISS FLORENCE REED, the Belasco company's new leading lady in Jerome K. Jerome's comedy success, "MISS HOBBS." Seat on sale tomorrow morning.

GRAND OPERAHOUSE— HOME OF MUSIC AND GAYETY. EVERY NIGHT THIS WEEK.

Second Big Week Starts This Afternoon

The biggest musical success that has ever been known in Los Angeles is the great production of Offenbach's famous opera,

THE TALES OF HOFFMAN

This is the biggest success that has ever come to the Ferris Hartman Company and the Grand Opera House has been too small to accommodate the crowds that have demanded seats to see this beautiful opera—So many people have been disappointed that it is necessary to continue it

FOR ANOTHER WEEK, COMMENCING TODAY

Every musical critic in this city has rapturously applauded this charming operatic production—its triumph is as overwhelming as it is complete—in nothing that the Hartman company has ever been seen have the resources of this brilliant organization so well displayed as in this fascinating opera, "THE TALES OF HOFFMAN."

Regular Grand Opera House prices for this great opera. Every night, 15c, 25c, 35c, 50c and 75c. Matinees TODAY and Saturday, 15c, 25c, 35c and 50c. PROFESSIONAL MATINEE TUESDAY, 25c and 50c. Every professional actor and actress in the city cordially invited to see this remarkable operatic production.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

By Julian Johnson.

Have you seen Grisella Kingsland as the Venetian gondolier in "The Tales of Hoffman?" If you haven't you've missed something, for Grisella as a gondolier is a poem.

Just how many knots an hour she could get out of a gondola I don't know; in fact, I'm not sure that that's what the stage manager designed her for, after all—maybe she's supposedly a noble youth of ancient days, or the page of an eminent cardinal. Yet, though nobody told me that Grisella is a gondolier, we'll accept the surmise and let it pass.

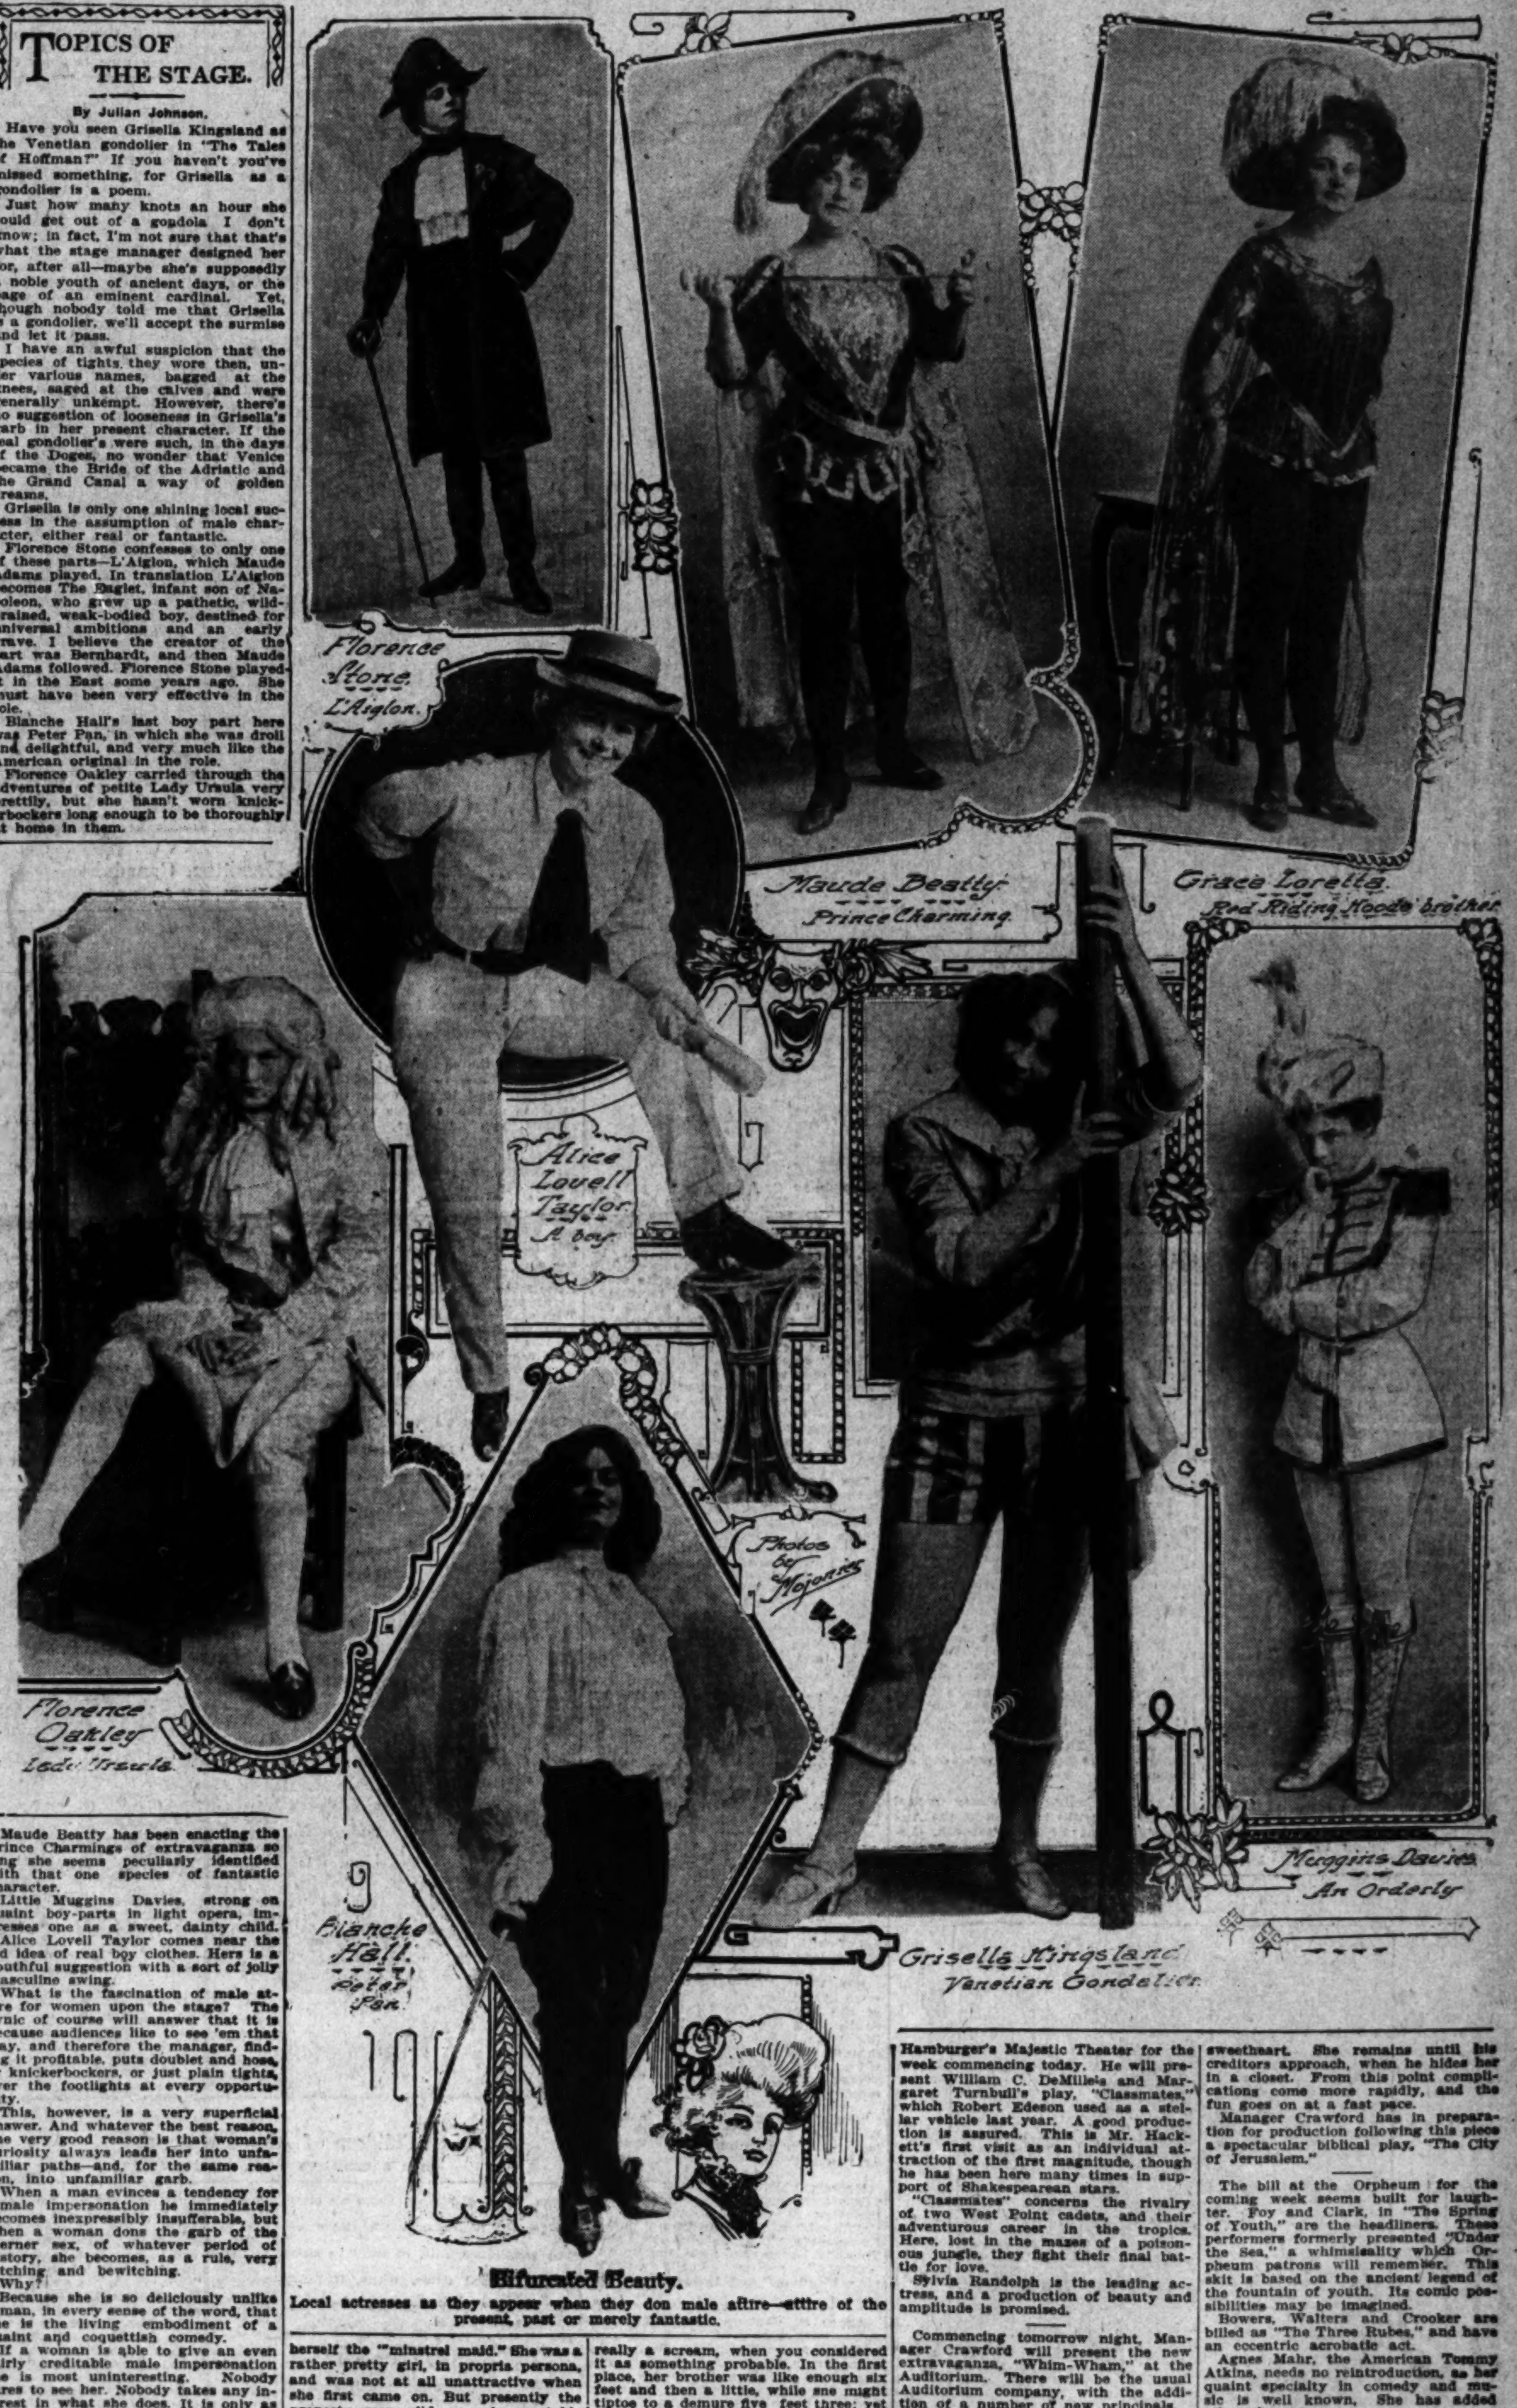
I have an awful suspicion that the species of tights they wore then, under various names, bagged at the knees, saged at the calves and were generally unkempt. However, there's no suggestion of looseness in Grisella's garb in her present character. If the real gondolier's were such, in the days of the Doges, no wonder that Venice became the Bride of the Adriatic and the Grand Canal a way of golden dreams.

Grisella is only one shining local success in the assumption of male character, either real or fantastic.

Florence Stone confesses to only one of these parts—L'Aiglon, which Maude Adams played. In translation L'Aiglon becomes The Eaglet, infant son of Napoleon, who grew up a pathetic, wild-brained, weak-bodied boy, destined for universal ambitions and an early grave. I believe the creator of the part was Bernhardt, and then Maude Adams followed. Florence Stone played it in the East some years ago. She must have been very effective in the role.

Blanche Hall's last boy part here was Peter Pan, in which she was droll and delightful, and very much like the American original in the role.

Florence Oakley carried through the adventures of petite Lady Ursula very prettily, but she hasn't worn knickerbockers long enough to be thoroughly at home in them.



Bifurcated Beauty.

Local actresses as they appear when they don male attire—attire of the present, past or merely fantastic.

Maude Beatty has been enacting the Prince Charmings of extravaganza so long she seems peculiarly identified with that one species of fantastic character.

Little Muggins Davies, strong on quaint boy-parts in light opera, impresses one as a sweet, dainty child.

Alice Lovell Taylor comes near the old idea of real boy clothes. Hers is a youthful suggestion with a sort of jolly masculine swing.

What is the fascination of male attire for women upon the stage? The cynic of course will answer that it is because audiences like to see 'em that way, and therefore the manager, finding it profitable, puts doublet and hose, or knickerbockers, or just plain tights, over the footlights at every opportunity.

This, however, is a very superficial answer. And whatever the best reason, one very good reason is that woman's curiosity always leads her into unfamiliar paths—and, for the same reason, into unfamiliar garb.

When a man evinces a tendency for female impersonation he immediately becomes inexpressibly insufferable, but when a woman dons the garb of the sterner sex, of whatever period of history, she becomes, as a rule, very fetching and bewitching.

Why?

Because she is so deliciously unlike a man, in every sense of the word, that she is the living embodiment of a quaint and coquettish comedy.

If a woman is able to give an even fairly creditable male impersonation she is most uninteresting. Nobody cares to see her. Nobody takes any interest in what she does. It is only as long as she remains a woman in freakish mode that she is likable.

There was a day when the real male impersonator, wearing straight-line pants, a tall hat, a monocle and a pathetically attempted tough look, was all the go. She came on the stage driving a coffin nail, sang alleged songs in a raucous female baritone, and hammered out some hard old jokes. Audiences were then in the silly stage of not knowing any better, and they laughed—or at least enough of them laughed to keep her going.

She faded, however, and audiences seem to be coming to the blessed realization that the best thing a woman can do is to—just be a woman.

A little while ago there was a girl at the Orpheum here who termed herself the "minstrel maid." She was a rather pretty girl, in propria persona, and was not at all unattractive when she first came on. But presently the property man slid a make-up table out to her, and she disappeared under a black deluge of burnt cork. Then she slipped her skirts off, revealing a minstrel man's rig underneath. To match all this she delivered herself of some raw and dreary end man's jokes—and she was rotten. Rotten! All the men in the house were glad when the poor thing disappeared

So, the more unlike a man a woman is in man's get-up, the better she is. If she is just a little bit like a man she is only fair; if she is not at all like him she is good; if she is at the very opposite pole of any real masculine simulation—she is great.

The old-fashioned play that presupposed the heroine donning her brother's clothes and licking the villain was really a scream, when you considered it as something probable. In the first place, her brother was like enough six feet and then a little, while she might tiptoe to a demure five feet three; yet when she entered, these vast garments fitted her faultlessly and without wrinkle. The difference of an octave and a half in voice was also unnoticed by the dramatist, and was supposedly unnoticed by the audience. Also, brother might be bristling from three days' shavelessness, yet sister's damask cheek was one and the same—for these purposes. The final touches of walking or speaking or wielding a weapon—though they roused hilarity enough in front—were supposed to fall as unheeded hints before the heedless strutters on the stage.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Norman Hackett, who is well known here, both socially and professionally, will appear with his own company at Hamburger's Majestic Theater for the week commencing today. He will present William C. DeMille's and Margaret Turnbull's play, "Classmates," which Robert Edeson used as a stellar vehicle last year. A good production is assured. This is Mr. Hackett's first visit as an individual attraction of the first magnitude, though he has been here many times in support of Shakespearean stars.

"Classmates" concerns the rivalry of two West Point cadets, and their adventurous career in the tropics. Here, lost in the mazes of a poisonous jungle, they fight their final battle for love.

Sylvia Randolph is the leading actress, and a production of beauty and amplitude is promised.

Commencing tomorrow night, Manager Crawford will present the new extravaganza, "Whim-Wham," at the Auditorium. There will be the usual Auditorium company, with the addition of a number of new principals.

The story of the play concerns a proud but impecunious young author, Jack Herrington,, who has written a book and a play which have been on a dozen round trips to publishers and managers. He is at last reduced to his final resources, but, feeling the necessity of keeping up appearances, he is living in a handsome suite of apartments, only one room of which he has been able to furnish. He is in debt for everything the room contains, and at the opening of the play is threatened with abrupt foreclosure. In a fit of desperation he determines to produce his play himself, and, upon advertising for singers and actors, has applications by the score. In the middle of his dealings with them he is interrupted by the arrival of his sweetheart. She remains until his creditors approach, when he hides her in a closet. From this point complications come more rapidly, and the fun goes on at a fast pace.

Manager Crawford has in preparation for production following this piece a spectacular biblical play, "The City of Jerusalem."

The bill at the Orpheum for the coming week seems built for laughter. Foy and Clark, in "The Spring of Youth," are the headliners. These performers formerly presented "Under the Sea," a whimsicality which Orpheum patrons will remember. This skit is based on the ancient legend of the fountain of youth. Its comic possibilities may be imagined.

Bowers, Walters and Crooker are billed as "The Three Rubes," and have an eccentric acrobatic act.

Agnes Mahr, the American Tommy Atkins, needs no reintroduction, as her quaint specialty in comedy and music is well known. She has added other characters.

Jack Connelly and Margaret Webb have a comedy specialty declared to have a novel and exciting finish.

Holding over are Frank Nelson and his company, Jwan Tschernoff's dog and pony circus, Goldsmith and Hoppe and Nonette.

"Arizona" will enter upon its second and last week at the Burbank Theater this afternoon. The play attracted large audiences through all of last week, and the many requests made for a continuance of its run finally induced Manager Morosco to postpone his announced musical comedy production until April 4. MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

By Julian Johnson.

According to arrangements just completed, the Ben Greet-Modest Altschuler company will appear at the Auditorium, instead of Shrine Temple, during the week of April 19. This is much better, as the Auditorium's magnificent stage, fine seating facilities and general theatric advantages are much more suited to the representation of a play, and the music of an orchestra, than the wide, unrelieved reaches of the great hall on Jefferson street.

Mr. Greet is well known upon the Pacific Coast, where he virtually made his first large impression on American audiences several years ago. Since that time he has extended his work, and has given pastoral and other productions in many notable places, among these being the White House lawn, under the Roosevelt auspices.

He has a larger company on this occasion, and from reports along the line has been doing excellent work.

Mr. Altschuler heads the Russian symphony orchestra of fifty men. They, too, have a unique position in the artistic world, and occupy a distinct place in the musical life of New York, where their director is credited with many excellent performances.

It is the wish of the writer that a larger space might be given to the orchestral side of the visit. Mr. Altschuler has been given a couple of afternoons for symphony performances, an afternoon for a children's concert, and that practically ends it.

Personally, I had rather hear a little less Shakespeare and a little more good orchestral music, delivered by a band in the inspiring situation of constantly playing together. The astute Messrs. Behymer and Snow, however, gauge the general public taste with the steady finger of experience and not by the uncertain wand of personal preference—and they are probably right.

Much incidental music will, of course, be given in all the productions.

The programme as it stands at present is as follows: Monday evening, April 19, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with all of the Mendelssohn incidental music; Tuesday evening, "Romeo and Juliet," with Gounod and Tschaikowsky music; Wednesday afternoon, a repetition of "Romeo and Juliet;" Wednesday evening, "The Tempest," Sir Arthur Sullivan and Tschaikowsky music; Thursday evening, "Everyman," in which Los Angeles best knows Mr. Greet, with a male chorus and several other musical features; Friday, Shakespeare's birthday, will be celebrated by a matinée of "As You Like It," with "A Midsummer Night's Dream" repetition in the evening. The Saturday night performance has not yet been decided upon.

The concluding symphony recital for the year will be given at the Auditorium next Friday afternoon. According to custom, a comprehensive Wagnerian programme will be offered by Mr. Hamilton, and there will be no soloist.

This programme should excite much anticipatory interest, as it represents the best of Wagner in a period extending from "Rienzi" to the close of the Nibelung's Ring.

The list of numbers follows: The "Rienzi" overture, the "Flying Dutchman" overture, the "Tannhauser" overture, the better part of the "Meistersinger" third act, the entrance of the gods from "Das Rheingold," the wood song from "Siegfried," the Rhine journey from "Gotterdammerung," and the "Huldigungsmarsch."

The second recital in Miss Bessie Fuhrer's chamber music series will be given on Wednesday afternoon, at Symphony Hall. The programme includes two movements from the Dvorak American quartette; the Mendelssohn quartette, Op. 12; a Gluck Gavotte, Dunkler's "Au gord de la Mer," and the Paderewski Minuet.

The membership of this quartette includes Miss Bessie Fuhrer, first violin and director; Miss Lucy Fuhrer, 'cello; Miss Nora Dickinson, second violin, and Miss Frances Aylsworth, viola.

"The Seven Last Words of Christ," by Dubois, will be given this evening by the choir of St. Agnes's Church, Adams street and Vermont avenue. It is a musical work both highly meritorious and instructive. It is distinctively in the modern style, and on this occasion will have orchestral accompaniment. The director will be W. J. Lambert.

Mrs. Philip Zobelein and Miss Bessie Herbert Bartlett will give a musicale at Vista del Mar, Hollywood, on Thursday afternoon. Music will be furnished by the Philomel quartette and LeRoy Jepson, tenor. Miss Bartlett will read "A Chain of Sonnets," with incidental music by Abbie N. Jamison.

Mrs. W. G. Provines and Mrs. Frederick A. Miller will give a musicale at the home of the former, No. 1036 South Hope street, on Saturday evening. The principal part of the programme will be given by John C. Provines, basso, assisted by several musicians and Mrs. Miller, in an original monologue.

"Paris, the Historic City," is B. R. Baumgardt's illustrated lecture subject for this evening's travelogue, in Symphony Hall.

Moore's Fidelia Band, at Eastlake this afternoon, will give a programme, including Waldteufel's "Dreams of Childhood," a selection from "Lucia," Engleman's "The Melody of Love," Tobani's Hungarian Fantasie, Suppe's "Isabella" overture, Voelker's "Cupid's Pleading," and Moses's "Old Heidelberg."

Agnes B. Graham of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts will give a complimentary silver medal piano recital in Symphony Hall, Blanchard building, on Friday evening. She will be assisted by Hazel Deering, violinist, and Vreda Ellmore, reader.

The last Lott-Krauss concert for the year will be given on Thursday evening, April 15, at Simpson Auditorium. As a feature there will be a group of five small pieces for string quintette by Dalhousie Young, Mr. Young himself playing the extra violin needed. Mr. Lott, as usual, will add an interesting group of songs to the instrumental programme.

Miss Bessie Fuhrer,

head of the chamber-music organization bearing her name, which is now giving a series of recitals. This is the second quartette exclusively of women to be formed in this country.

Mrs. Sovereign, proprietor of the Hotel Mirami, Catalina Island, after testing many other high grade standard makes, purchased one of the Frank B. Long makes, (the Frances A. Ward piano) for exclusive use in her hotel. Score again for "the unequaled in tone."

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Why Is Art?

[The following letter and poem explain themselves. It is perhaps needless to say that I do not quite fully indorse the contents of either the missive or the verses. However, both give a somewhat different point of view from my own, and may be of help to the lover of art in his long search for truth.]

Mr. Antony E. Anderson, Idealist, Charitable Art Critic and Writer of Delightful Verse—Dear Sir: Inclosed find some original lines inspired by a visit to some art galleries, where I was deluded into going by your very interesting, but—well, rather roseate, account of the exhibits. If the verses "are not suited to the needs of your columns," and if you think they are as crass as the crudities they protest against, you might try them, as a counter-irritant, on the offenders who inspired them, and see if they will not forsake their perverse and artificial ways. For, verily, in the kindgom of art the palette knife has usurped the brush, becoming a guillotine to sacrifice beauty to specious effect. Very sincerely yours, Lannie Haynes Martin.

None loves the man whom men cannot approach,
Who stands afar off, fearful, possibly,
To show his crass and glaring crudities,
Who needs must have (to shine) a focussed light,
And not the clear, broad, common light of day.

The music that we love is smooth and soft—
The listening ear instinctively bends near
To catch the vibrant viol's melody.
From blasts of blatant brass we stand afar,
As from a noisome, pestilential smell.

The semblance, fair, of trees in cloud are seen,
And columned cities, white, if fancy choose;
Cloud-pictures, though, we never call mirage,
Nor think the shadowed fields have reproduced
A perfect counterpart of tree and rock.

Then why these dim, deceptive daubs called art?
Which must be viewed afar, their meaning guessed—
Or have they meaning or intent, forsooth?
They do but wrap another question mark
Round mystic nature's interrogative.

And Art, methought, interpretive was born—
To set forth Nature's hidden mystery,
Turn hymns of Pan to exoteric song,
And ope the eyes of all the blind to see
In triune Nature, Wisdom, Beauty, Truth.

A Worker in Artistic Jewelry.

The exhibition of original designs in artistic jewelry which May Mott-Smith Cunningham of San Francisco has been holding in the Gould gallery for the past few weeks closes with the end of the month. The lover of beauty, who has not already seen these exquisite chains, brooches, rings and stickpins, should not let pass an opportunity for a rare pleasure.

Fortunately, the time is gone, even for us moderns, when only the painter of easel pictures is found worthy of the title of "artist." We have learned that every useful object which is wrought sincerely, "not from a vain or shallow thought," and which has beauty as well as utility, is really a work of art. More, we know that utility and beauty may be made one—that they are inseparable in the daily life of the man whose eyes have been opened. For him, the useful and the beautiful are at perfect accord in his home, his garden, his very clothes.

All honor, then, to the countless workers in the art crafts—those indefatigable artists, who, while they paint no easel pictures for our delight, yet express their conviction of the truth of beauty with hammer and chisel and graver, giving us the ineffable satisfaction of absolute fitness in our surroundings. Only the presumptuous Philistine, knowing very little of art and caring less, would deny that these wonder workers are artists.

The Florentines of the Renaissance, consummate artists every one, did not disdain to spend days of concentrated effort over the setting of a jewel, carving, as it were, the perfect and only frame for the perfect gem. They knew, we may be sure, that a tint or a curve marked the step from the artisan to the artist.

Five or six years ago, May Mott-Smith Cunningham, trained in Boston and Paris for a painter, designed a few rings for herself. Her friends saw them, liked them, and asked her to make rings for them. She consented, though she did not promise to please them, as she had had no training in design. But she did please them, and their satisfaction emboldened her to open a studio for the design and execution of articles of jewelry. These were the small beginnings of Mrs. Cunningham's later conspicuous success as a designer in jewelry. She was the pioneer, as it were, of the art in the West. She has had many followers since then, some good, some bad, and many hopelessly mediocre.

Born in Honolulu where her father was stationed in the government's employ, Mrs. Cunningham is the most cosmopolitan of artists. She studied painting in Boston with her brother, Harold Mott-Smith; modeling in Paris under Spicer Simpson, to learn the value of surfaces in her designs, and she has lived in Washington and San Francisco. She has exhibited her artistic jewelry in Boston, Detroit, Indianapolis, Minneapolis and Pasadena, and at the fair in St. Louis, where she showed twelve large pieces and sold four. She maintains a permanent exhibition of her work at Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. She also exhibited her work in the Paris Salon of 1906.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

THE largest social function in a than ordinarily gay week the reception given Thursday and evening by Dr. Mrs. Robert J. Burdette home, Sunnycrest, on Orange Grove avenue. Several Los Angeles and Pasadena friends were present between 3 and 5 in the afternoon and 8 and 10 in the evening, and the event celebrated the tenth anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Burdette's wedding day.

Another large affair of the past week was the bridge party given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. J. B. Stubbs of Cleveland at Hotel Green. In the Turkish room tables were arranged for eighty players, and all the appointments were elaborate. Mrs. Stubbs received in the Moorish room, where quantities of fragrant flowers were massed in decoration. Orchids, lilies, iris and sweet peas were arranged in baskets and jardinieres, while potted plants gave a touch of green to the effective grouping. Mrs. Stubbs was assisted by Mrs. E. Edwards and Miss Greenwood. The prizes were won by Mmes. Arthur H. Woodward, Woodcock, Robert Kinnan and Henry Vilas. After the games a collation was served in the Colonial dining-room, where each table was decorated with a basket of white daisies tied with blue satin ribbons. The room itself was artistically festooned with asparagus ferns and from the chandelier fell showers of feathery green.

Mrs. Henry Forbes of Wheeling, Va., was the hostess at a delightful progressive eucher party at Hotel Green, Wednesday evening. The Moorish room in the west building was the scene of the festivity, and thirteen tables were arranged. Mrs. Forbes was assisted by Mrs. G. P. Douglas. The prizes were won by Mrs. George Beach, Mr. Mitchell, Mrs. E. Woodcock, Mr. Strong, Mrs. George G. Green, Misses Eaton and Ducey.

One of the smaller functions especially enjoyable was the card party given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Groenendyke at their Oak Knoll home, complimentary to Mrs. Clinton P. Morehous, who celebrated her birthday anniversary on that day. Tables were arranged for five hundred, and those present were old friends of Col. and Mrs. Morehous. Prizes were awarded and after the game a supper was served at the card tables.

Miss Helen Sickler of North Euclid avenue entertained the Fortnightly Bridge Club Tuesday afternoon, and among those present were Mmes. Neal K. Traylor, Thomas Nelmes, Fred Nash, Charles Woodbury, Leroy Henderson, Wallace Woodworth, Herbert Holt, A. T. Newcomb, Misses Earley, Alice Earley, Lowry, McHenry, Fitzgerald, and Stratton.

Dr. Garret Newkirk of Altadena gave a stag luncheon Monday at Hotel Green in honor of John Burroughs. Covers were laid for Dr. James B. Scherer, John Willis Baer, Francis F. Brown, Dr. Robert J. Burdette and A. C. Vroman.

Miss Louise Barber of Oakland avenue entertained Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Katherine Ellis Clark, whose marriage with Beverly Price Lientz of Los Angeles will occur on Wednesday, March 31. The entertainment was an old-fashioned quilting party, and the guests occupied themselves over the quilting frames for awhile, and then enjoyed games which were followed by refreshments. An interesting feature was the announcement of the engagement of Miss Content Clark, sister of the guest of honor, and Alexander James Brown of Pasadena. This marriage will take place soon after Easter.

Mrs. Frank Manning was the hostess Wednesday afternoon at a thimble party given at her home on Hudson avenue, and the company was made up of old friends from Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Those present were Mmes. Lon F. Chapin, Elmer Forrest, E. F. Huntington, Walter Bradley, Gus Nelson, G. H. Furlough, L. J. Vanderwerken, S. B. Wagner, A. S. Wold, C. D. Manning, B. L. Richards, Charles Shade, S. S. Wold, R. J. Roach, A. L. Waddell, I. Drysart and Miss Christian.

Mrs. Walter Bradley gave a charming Easter party at her home on Worcester avenue Tuesday, where the guests were entertained with making Easter bonnets of tissue paper, a prize being given for the most gorgeous millinery creation. This was won by Miss Tarbell. Supper was served in the dining-room, where all the appointments and accessories were suggestive of Easter. Miss Florence Chambers gave several piano selections, and Frank Sweeley readings. Those present were Mmes. Charles Slade, Charles Bradley, J. H. Harrison, B. W. Marks, Lon F. Chapin, Will Marks, Albert Wold, G. H. Furlough, Drysart, Huntington, J. C. Roach, Edwin Bradley, Elmer Forrest, Orlando Keck, J. M. Tyler, Misses Drysart, Chapin, Alice Chapin, Rank, Parker, Christian, Miller, Tarbell and Bradley.

Mrs. Lawrence Newman of Waverly Drive entertained Friday afternoon with a bridge party complimentary to Mrs. Edward Libby of Toledo, O., who is a guest at the Raymond, and Miss Wilson, who is her house guest. The rooms where the card tables were placed were adorned with garden flowers and the affair was characterised by informal simplicity. There were thirty present.

Mrs. Torrey Everett of St. John avenue was the hostess Thursday at a small luncheon, which was given in honor of four of the young society women who recently danced in the minuet at the Shakespeare Clubhouse at the benefit of the Young Women's League. The guests of honor were Mmes. Clayton H. Garvey, W. S. McCay, B. M. Wotkyns, Jr., and Miss Margaret Sherk.

Mrs. Urcelia Hines of Ford place gave two pleasant card parties last week, the first a bridge party Thursday afternoon, when forty friends were entertained, and the second Friday afternoon, when an equal number were entertained at 500.

Mrs. Clarence S. Blood of South Catalina avenue gave a delightful afternoon tea Friday complimentary to Mrs. Washington Yale, and between 3 and 5 more than seventy guests were received.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Triplet of South Marengo avenue gave a musical on Wednesday evening in honor of old friends from Alliance, Neb. Among those who assisted with the programme were Mrs. Fleming, Misses Roberta Miles, Olive Sosey and Burlingame. E. G. Morris gave several readings. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Nutt, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Dellwood, Mr. and Mrs. F. Preston, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Morris, Mr. and Mrs W. H. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Ellenor, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, Dr. and Mrs. G. M. Smith, Mmes. Winship, G. M. Burlingame, Fleming, Hill, Misses Burlingame, Post, Miles, Jetes, Dellwood, Sosey, Messrs. Owen and Roy Dellwood, Ward, Norton, Claud McDonald, Fred Smith and Elton Fleming.

Mrs. Helen Belford and Mrs. Edwin D. Neff of Altadena have issued invitations for a large bridge party to be given at the Annandale Country Club Monday afternoon, the 29th inst.

Mrs. Colin Stewart and Miss Thomas have issued invitations for a bridge party to be given at Hotel Maryland, Friday afternoon, April 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Mothershead of Indianapolis have come to Pasadena to reside. Mrs. Mothershead was formerly Miss Ethel Warner of St. John avenue, and one of the popular society girls of Pasadena.

One of the prettiest luncheons of the week was that given Thursday by Mrs. Phillip L. Auten at her home on North Madison avenue. Purple and white iris adorned the table, and a corsage bouquet of Parma violets was laid at each plate. Covers were laid for Mmes. John Gilbert Blue, Henry B. Stehman, W. G. Jerrems, James Malcolm McLeod, E. S. McKittrick, W. D. Turner, George Wilson, C. W. Leffingwell, Melville Stone, Carrie Hill and Graham.

Mrs. Grosvenor Wotkyns, who has been in Mexico since the birth of her young son, has joined her husband, and they are occupying a house on Huntington Terrace. Mrs. Wotkyns was formerly Miss Willmina Eliot of South Orange Grove avenue.

South Pasadena.

MRS. JOHN SHENK, JR., entertained the Tuesday Afternoon Whist Club at the San Gabriel Country Club. The guest of honor was her cousin, Mrs. E. L. Geer of Spokane. Tables were arranged for thirty-two players and the color scheme was green and pink. Quantities of bamboo and pepper boughs were used, and apple and peach blossoms, pink sweet peas and pink peonies were used. Prizes were awarded to Miss Vera Anderson and Miss Mamie Luce, and Mrs. E. L. Geer received the guest prize. Refreshments were served. Besides the regular club members, the following were presnt: Mrs. E. L. Geer of Spokane, Miss Jessie Squires, Batavia, N. Y.; Miss Helen Hobert, Minneapolis, Minn.; Mmes. Grace Read, Ella Baker and John Fargo of San Gabriel, Jeane Bean, Arthur Bean, George Wallace and Norbert Murray

Concerning Noses.

BY FITZ HUGH ARNOLD.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

For hundreds of years poets, lovers and litterateurs have sung the praises of the human countenance. Solomon well-nigh exhausted thought in depicting the charms of his beloved. His followers have searched the universe for comparison and description. The eyes have been likened to stars, and even to the sun, and the man with the "eagle eye" is a frequent contributor to biography and fiction; the shell-like ears and the swan-like neck have had their praises sung; lips likened to rubies and teeth to pearls, but how few have said a word in praise of the nose It is true King Solomon in his song compared the nose of his ideal love to the "tower of Lebanon which looks toward Damascus." And Edward Rostand, half laughingly, half in earnest, makes Cyrano de Bergerac say of his most apparent possession:

"'Tis well known a big nose is indicative
Of a soul affable, kind and courteous."

Martial's caustic wit exploits his hero's prominent feature with the couplet:

"Silly has a nose, I don't deny it,
But if he has aught else, I fail to spy it."

The beauty of the face depends on the nose, and no nose, however ugly, but has its point of beauty. "What is home without a mother?" reads the old motto that used to hang upon the wall; and we might ask with no less pertinence, "What is a face without a nose?" The loveliest features lose their charm if offset by an ugly nose. And yet, universal inspection leads one to conclude that every nose is fitted to the face it adorns, very much as every back is fitted to its burden. A physiognomist has declared that "the noble human nose is enthroned like a queen on the face, and rules the realm of the physiognomy as does no other feature." And it is this very importance that makes the nose an object worthy of study. Lavater was an enthusiast on the subject. He called it "the distinguishing mark of the human face, the symbol of taste and feeling." In his notes on physiognomy he exclaims: "Oh, ye princes, when ye chose your minister first look to their noses. Gather about your throne those whose noses are strong in the upper part."

It is a matter of history that Napoleon I chose for his generals those officers who had aquiline noses, because he thought such had more courage and resoluteness. But while the prominent nose may indicate daring, it does not necessarily indicate judgment or perseverance. The prominent chin is the feature most indicative of unwavering determination. The remark that has come to be a mot, expressing one's faculty to "see beyond one's nose," is rather more pertinent than one might suppose.

There is a story told of the eminent Charles Darwin that he was almost rejected from the tour around the world in the Beagle, because to Capt. Fitzroy the nose of the young naturalist seemed not to indicate enough energy for exploring. Darwin, however, proved his ability for the work, and in his books on the descent of man he repeats again and again that the nose of man is one of the most essential marks of difference between him and his "four-handed ancestor." Stopping to consider, it will be remembered that no beast has a nose proper, only some analogous structure, flat and little separated, that rests on the upper jaw. It will be noticed that even on the face of the most man-like ape the nose almost entirely lacks projection.

"Notes on Noses," a witty treatise, contains an earnest plea for the discernment of character, by reference to the most prominent feature, and claims that there is, in fact, more in a nose than most people are aware. "Besides," it says, "being an ornament to the face, a breathing apparatus, or a convenient handle by which to grasp an impudent fellow, it is an important index to the owner's character."

It is not contended that the nose makes the man, as a phrenologist claims for his bumps, but that man's nature being what it is, the form of the nose is its inseparable concomitant. The permanence and immobility of the nose forbids hypocrisy to mold it to artificial feeling. The nose cannot counterfeit a smile, or feign not to recognize an old friend. In the science dignified by the name, nasology, the story told by noses is clear and simple, when once the key to the science is mastered.

Physiognomy outlines the following characteristics of the various shapes of noses: The small flat nose, found mostly among women and called the soubrette nose, when concurring with an otherwise agreeable and fortunate build of features indicates a certain gracious and cheerful naiveté, combined with an inconsiderate curiosity. Such a nose is seldom possessed by a man but, when it is, signifies an individuality characterized by weakness and lack of sagacity. A nose that is thick and flat is an unfavorable feature with both men and women, indicating that the character is predominated by material and sensual instincts. A turned-up nose with wide nostrils bespeaks a vain, puffed-up disposition. Especially wide nostrils are a sign of strength, courage and pride; small nostrils, of weakness and timidity. Noses large in every respect are found mostly among men and are masculine attributes, proclaiming the energetic character of the stronger sex. Among women a large, strongly molded nose is rare, and when it does occur it indicates a virago of a hard and unlovely disposition. In the principal types of the larger noses, Carus tells us that the nose long drawn out generally is symbolic of the intelligent, investigating, and productive nature of a fine spirit. On the other hand, there is the strongly bowed eagle, or hawk nose, which, as a rule, is combined with a small development of the fore part of the head and a correspondingly greater development of the back part of the head, is the accompaniment rather of a strong will energy than of a strong preponderance in the understanding faculties of the mind. It is, however, a good, useful, practical nose, very able to carry its owner successfully through the world in a moneyed sense.

The hawk nose is not all Hebrew; it is equally the possession of the Syrian, Arab, and Phoenician of old—all shrewd, money-getting races. Vespasian possessed it, and when young retrieved his fortune by horse-dealing, a profession notorious for its unscrupulous practice. The spur nose, with the wings of the nose very much drawn up and the eyes standing as near together as possible belongs to this classification. The alcohol nose—red and swollen—speaks for itself. And yet even this nose possesses a virtue: It imparts to the whole countenance the glow of a comfortable bodily condition and happy humor. Witness Falstaff. Did not these characteristics mark him as one of Shakespeare's most jovial characters? Exactly the opposite is indicated by the slender pointed nose. A certain arresting and ossification of all fresh life, a dry sagacity and a denial of every warm dictate of the soul characterize this form of nose. Very often it is found with a pointed chin, and this combination is explained by the German maxim,

"A pointed nose, with a pointed chin,
There lives a very Satan within."

They lead; they're 'way ahead. They're ahead in beauty and elegance. They're ahead in the date of their arrival. They're ahead in price, and the reason for all this is the enormous buying power of the Hamburger organization. We have the greatest output in these various lines on the entire Pacific Coast, and no one can contract for such quantities or under such favorable conditions as we can. That is our only secret; in fact, it's no longer a secret. It's acknowledged by the general public.

$65.00 SUITS AND COSTUMES $45

A magnificent array in all the new colors and delicate shades. Smart coat styles, plain tailored and trimmed effects. Made up in finest serges, satin finished wool materials and mirages. Costumes of the newest weaves in Shantung, pongees, messalines, satins and foulards. Charming designs in exclusive models, all elaborately trimmed with fine laces and novelty braids to match. A real treat for all visitors in this panoramic display of style and color.

Exquisite examples here of the fashion designer's art

$35.00 WHITE SERGE SUITS $25

Hamburger's Stylish and Popular 1909
Millinery

Our buyer has just returned from the East. He comes back more confident than ever that the styles and designs adopted by us for the season are the correct ones. We work very thoroughly on millinery designs. It's not simply a question of following the general lines of Paris models but a study in adapting before adopting. Hamburger's millinery has earned by conscientious working the place at the head of the line which it now occupies without question or challenge. Combined with this you'll find our prices lower than the styles indicate.

$40 and $50 French and American Pattern Hats at $25

Most beautiful pattern hats from select French and American designers. Styles adapted for suits, dress and evening wear, every one of them strictly exclusive. Only 25 hats in this lot. Priced specially for Monday.

CONCERNING NOSES.

Then, there is the national nose: The nose of the Jew, the Greek, the Roman, the Russian, the Chinese and the Japanese, and the flat nose of the negro. And there are family noses. Who has not heard of an Orleans, a Hapsburg, a Hohenzollern, or a Stuart nose? Added to this classification of Roman, Greek, Hawk, Selestial and turn-up, all old acquaintances, there is the sixth and most important, the cogitative. The Roman denotes decision, energy and absence of refinement; the Greek, refinement of character and love of literature. When Greek, Roman and cogitative noses are blended, the form indicates the most useful and intellectual of characters. It is also the most beautiful. Alexander the Great, Cardinals Woolsey and Richelieu, Lorenzo de Medici and Napoleon I are relied on as instances of greatness which is shown by this type of nose.

It is asserted that characters of eminent men can be tested by the rigid and unbending lines of nasology; while actions, and axioms whose moral value has long been doubtful, may be solved by the nasal development of their authors. Owners of the snub nose and celestial will find little comfort in the dicta of nasology. They indicate natural weakness, mean and disagreeable dispositions, but the celestial finds a crumb of comfort in the fact that by virtue of its greater length it is not without some share of small shrewdness and fox-like common sense; that it can, in fact, be more impudent than the snub. The cogitative nose can be consciously developed, and can be appreciated by the eye from more points than one. It is a wide-nostriled nose. It demands scrutiny from in front as well as profile, being a good all-round nose. It expands with expanding thought. This is a good point for the beauty doctors, but is there not danger that the cogitative nose, with the excessive thought development of its owner, may in time come to cover the whole face? To have a cogitative nose, therefore, cultivate your mind. Reading will not do it; reflection is the master sculptor.

"No one can help his nose," bewails someone over an ugly one; but this is not true. The Hottentot mother commences at birth to press the nose of her infant, that it may be flat and wide to correspond to her idea of beauty. The modern nurse smoths and molds the baby's nose, that it may take on lines of loveliness. And then, there is the beauty doctor, and sometimes just the nose specialist, who can turn into a thing of beauty even a matured ugly nose. Dr. Maximillan Bresgen, of Germany, a noted physician, is authority for the following:

"It is beyond dispute that during half of an individual's life the nose is capable of receiving a more noble form. The training of the individual, the culture of his intellect and character have a very considerable influence not only on the expression of the face in general, but also on the form of the nose."

Dr. Rossbach, another noted German specialist, in a lecture on the diseases of the nose says:

"Spiritual occurrences in a person's experience, such as the awakening of the slumbering emotions, gradually give the nose a nobler modeling. Flat and upturned noses take on a more expressionless form with years, when their possessors are not often too busy in thought or moved by emotion. This being true, a judgment as to the spiritual activity of the inmost soul certainly may be based to this degree on one's external appearance. A finely chiseled, noble nose may be one's birthright inherited from ancestors, and the possessor may, by his strength of intellect as well as by his emotions, develop it to a still better shape. But a nose coarse by inheritance also may be ennobled by intellectual endeavors continued through a generation. The intellectually active city dwellers are distinguishable by their fine features, and especially by their noble noses, from the coarser-featured peasants."

However tragic may be the usual fate of the human nose, it has remained for Rostand to give it supreme place in the realm of comedy. In the play of "Cyrano de Bergerac" he describes the nose of the hero thus:

Ah, my good Lords, what a nose is his!
When one sees it, one i. fain to cry aloud
'Nay, 'tis to much! he plays a joke on us.'
Then one laughs and says:
'He'll anon take it off.'
But no, Monsieur de Bergerac always keeps it on.
'Aye, and cleaves in two any man that dares remark on it.'"

EDUCATIONAL DRIFT.

An observatory devoted to the study of seismic disturbances is to be established at Washington in connection with Georgetown University. Its establishment will be in line with a policy recently decided upon by the Jesuit order, which plans to carry on the study of earthquakes at all of their educational institutions throughout the world. Each will be equipped with special instruments for recording disturbances in the earth's surface, and there will be a constant interchange of observations and deductions, which should be of exceptional value to science. The plan was suggested by the Rev. F. L. Oderbach, S. J., of Cleveland, who has invented an electric seismograph. Observatories will be located in this country at Brooklyn, Worcester, Buffalo, Denver, Spokane, Cleveland and Georgetown.

Girls from abroad who wish to study in this country have ample opportunities. In Bryn Mawr college, for example, ten scholarships are offered to the foreigner—five to English, Irish, or Scotch women, and five to German women. These scholarships are intended for the graduate worker. It is necessary that the applicant shall already have done work equivalent to that which is sufficient for a bachelor's degree in an American college. The scholarship awarded covers the fees for board, residence, and tuition at Bryn Mawr for one academic year. With almost every month comes fresh proof that the scholarly woman has come to stay. For many years this country has helped clothe and feed human bodies in the Old World. More and more our nation is able to offer sustenance for European minds as well.

In order to enjoy the benefits of the pension system which Mr. Carnegie has so generously endowed it is necessary for an educational institution to maintain a certain standard of instruction and scholarship. This has been a sufficient inducement for several colleges already to advance their curriculums and others are preparing to do so. Other institutions have abandoned their sectarian connections for the same purpose, and now Dr. Pritchett and his associates of the Carnegie trustees are using their influence to secure uniform requirements for admission to college and graduation, an advance in the standards of professional schools and a more generous support for institutions of higher education. They are also encouraging colleges and universities to adopt and maintain retired lists for professors, and are agitating a general system of insurance for the teachers of the public schools.

Society.

Miss Sue Shenk of Los Angeles and Mrs. Ernest Sutton of South Pasadena.

Another affair Tuesday was the luncheon given by Mrs. Charles C. Jinson, No. 1412 Hope street. Peach blossoms were used as decorations and the place cards were water-color sketches by the hostess. Covers were laid for Mrs. Raymond Moore, Mrs. Ernest Sutton and Miss Florence Gifford.

Mrs. Charles Hill of Electric avenue gave a luncheon and whist party at her home Wednesday. Potted plants, cut flowers and ferns were used to ornament the rooms, while jonquils and violets formed the centerpiece for the tables, which were arranged for twenty-four.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moore of Hotel Capitola Wednesday evening entertained for dinner informally. Her friends were Samuel Jones and George Wright of Philadelphia and Charles Stiles of Camden, N. J.

Mrs. H. Lester Goldman of Hope street entertained the S. S. Club for luncheon Wednesday. A cut-glass bowl filled with violets formed the centerpiece of the table, and the place cards were hand-painted sprays of the same flower. Smilax and jonquils were used to ornament the living-room. The afternoon was spent in sewing. Those present were Mmes. Harry E. Thomas, George W. Lawyer, L. E. Patterson, G. G. Sanford, T. C. Horton, N. C. Harter, W. L. Jacobs, Charles Meckus, C. R. Knox, E. B. Kuykendall, W. B. Taylor, Clara Bonnell and Miss Irma McClure.

The largest function of last week was the reception given by Mrs. E. L. B. Godfrey, No. 1119 Brent street, Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Godfrey was assisted in receiving by her niece, Mrs. Marcus L. Godfrey of Los Angeles. Miss Blossom Ballbach of Camden, N. J., and Miss Margaret Wheeler of Pasadena presided over the chocolate and tea urns. Unbonneted ladies assisting were the Misses Florence Gifford and Bertha Moore. About sixty guests were entertained between the hours of 3 and 5. California poppies and smilax were used, the color scheme being green and gold.

A pleasant surprise party was arranged by the friends of Rochford Cox of Meridian avenue, Friday evening. Games were played, music enjoyed and refreshments served. Those present were the Misses Sarah Tritt, Marie Tadlock, Leal Pierce, Clara Ratcliffe, Katy Pahnke, Bertie Peters, Eva Ratcliffe, Hazel Hall, Ada Farrell, Elva Finch and Helen Reehl, and Messrs. Carlton Tadlock, Raymond Perkins, James Manwarring, D. Cox, Fred Bamborough, George Howard, Harold Horton, Bryson Cox, John Pahnke, Gale Cox and Dallas Spears.

Mrs. Allie S. Coles of No. 1119 Fremont avenue entertained with a dinner party Friday evening. Her home was decorated with an arrangement of flowers and ferns, a shower bouquet of pink carnations forming the centerpiece for the table. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lawyer, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lawyer of Alhambra, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Lawyer, Miss Cora Hoagland and H. J. Vatcher, Jr.

Miss Catherine Cook of Huntington Drive and Pine street gave the members of her sorority a chafing-dish party Friday evening. Five hundred was played.

Miss N. M. Hitchcock of No. 1504 Monterey Road entertained the former students of St. Mary's College of Knoxville, Ill., Saturday at an all-day reunion. She served luncheon. A feature of the day was an address by Dr. Leffingwell, the former rector of St. Mary's College, but now a resident of San Rafael Heights. The affair was voted one of the most enjoyable reunions ever held.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Huntington of Fairview avenue gave an informal dinner party Sunday in honor of State Senator Burns of Platteville, Wis., who is touring California.

Fifteen of the South Pasadena members of the Vermont Society of Southern California attended the annual banquet of the society given at Hotel Guiranalda in Pasadena recently. A paper was read by Mrs. John Goodrich on "The Tercentenary Celebration of the Discovery of Lake Champlain," and a humorous reading given by Mrs. L. Sanderson, "How Rubenstein Played."

A number of artists exhibited their work at Masonic Hall Saturday evening. There was a large attendance at the reception given by the Rembrandt Art Club. Such well-known artists as Franz R. Bischoff, W. L. Judson, R. Hamilton Mohler, Eugene C. Frank and many others have representative work on exhibition. In connection with this the fine arts commissioner has honored Franz Bischoff, Eugene C. Frank and R. Hamilton Mohler by selecting pictures by them to be exhibited at the Alaska-Yukon Exposition which will be held in Seattle this summer.

NEW

Hat Shapes Direct From Paris

The women of Los Angeles who appreciate real exclusiveness in millinery will surely be delighted with these charming French shapes which the Marvel has just imported direct from the noted French fashion center.

They are the most exclusively classy novelties ever shown in this city—and there are only one or two of a kind.

These shapes will not be duplicated in Los Angeles. The quantity is limited and the women who are fortunate enough to get them will have the most distinctive hats that will be seen in Los Angeles this season.

We have all the correct and fashionable trimmings, appropriate for these hats—and we have the millinery artists who are capable of carrying out your individual ideas in trimming.

Fate of Old Friends.

Arch Cook, the district passenger agent of the Southern road, is from Danville. This fact leaked out when he told another story recently.

An old inhabitant who had been absent from Danville for fourteen years returned on a visit and was inquiring after some of his old friends.

"How is old Bill Jones?"

"Poor old Bill's dead. Yes, he drank himself to death. We buried him right over there."

"Is that a fact? And how about George Jones?"

"Old George went the same route a couple of years ago. Drank himself to death. We buried him right over there."

"Well, well! Does old Bill Smoots still talk politics?"

"I hardly think so. Old Bill died about a year ago. He drank himself to death."

"Guess you buried him right over there with the rest?"

"No, we just poured him back into the barrel."—[Louisville Times.

Roman Waterworks Still in Use.

The town committee of Szamosvar has decided to utilize the remains of the thousand year old water mains and reservoirs which have remained since the Roman occupation. The water mains were discovered by Professor Ornstein, an archaeologist, who states that the great reservoir and the extensive canals served as the water supply of a large late Roman military camp—Congricastrum. The great reservoir lies on a high hill near the town. The dirt which has collected in the basin and mains during many centuries has been removed, and now it is almost incredible that they should be a thousand years old. The medical officer of the town has declared the water basin and the mains to be fit for use.—[Budapest Correspondence of London.

HOW I MADE MY HAIR GROW

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy, so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious, and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures I finally found a simple prescription which I used with most remarkable results, and I can unhesitatingly state that it is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair, and for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in first-class condition; it also makes the hair much easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months, and during that time it not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all his gray hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows:

Bay rum, 6 ozs.; Menthol crystals, one-half drachm; Lavona de Composee, 2 ozs.; To-Kalon perfume, 1 to 2 teaspoonfuls.

Apply night and morning; rub thoroughly into the scalp.

Go to your druggist and ask for an eight-ounce bottle containing six ounces of bay rum; also one-half drachm of Menthol crystals, and for a two-ounce bottle of Lavona de Composee. Mix the ingredients yourself in your own home. Add the Menthol crystals to the bay rum and then pour Lavona de Composee, and add the To-Kalon perfume. Let it stand for one-half hour and it is ready for use.

Genuine Individuality of Style In Our Suits For Misses and Women

THE genuine style individuality which characterizes our Tailored Suits is an advantage that patrons of our Women's Department quickly appreciate. Examination will show you that while our Suits conform to authoritative fashions, yet they embody exclusive ideas—in fabric, in coloring, in cut or in trim, or what not—that give them real distinction, place them far above the Women's Wear you ordinarily see.

The past week has brought us further new models. We announce for tomorrow an exhibit that is truly remarkable in its variety, and in the exclusive character of the suits that make it up. Values are remarkable, likewise. When you compare our suits with those offered elsewhere at similar prices, you will yourself say, "Values are remarkable."

English Piccadilly and other Tailored Suits $20, $22.50, $25, $27.50, $30, $35, $40, $45, $50, and upward.

Kind Hearts.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

DeWolf Hopper and his theatrical company gave a special performance at Cleveland last week for the benefit of the little boys and girls at the Jewish Orphan Asylum. Never before probably have these little folks been so much entertained, and as Hopper liberated the fun in his heart the children went wild and fairly doubled up with enjoyment. It is one of Hopper's characteristics that into every city he goes he seeks out some institution filled either with sick people or little children, and for these shut-ins gives his choicest programme, thus leaving behind him a trail of happiness and feeling that life is worth living though beset with many obstacles.

While at New Haven last week President Taft made happy a watchman in the railroad shops who, twenty years ago, had been a favorite coachman for the Taft family in Cleveland.

"Hello, Jack," the President cried as he grabbed Shea's right hand in his two fists and shook it heartily.

"Hello, Bill," exclaimed Shea, climbing upon the steps; "had I ought to call you that now? I called you Bill as a boy, and then I called you judge and now it's President."

"Call me anything you like, Jack," smiled Taft.

"Well, Jack, I'm mighty glad to have seen you," concluded Taft, as he shook his hand again.

A society to be known as the Children's Aid Society of the Juvenile Court, has been organized at New Orleans for the protection and care of children. It is proposed to follow closely the proceedings of juvenile court trials and render whatever aid lies in their power, where it appears that children are surrounded by immoral influences.

A curious reform has been started in London in the interest of the hackney horses. During the recent Hackney Horse Show an exhibit was made of the horseshoes the animals have been compelled to wear. One pair of shoes was shown, each of which weighed just four pounds, the object of which had been to compel the horse to step with a peculiar lifting action. The result of the exhibit has been the forbidding by the Hackney Society of the use of shoes heavier than two pounds, with one and one-half for ponies.

George A. Morrison, a New York Alderman from the Brooklyn district, was absent form the city during the month of February. When the pay checks were passed around he tried to turn his mack to the paymaster on the ground that he had performed no service, and hence should receive no pay. There was no manner, however, that the paymaster could accept the returned check, and the City Treasurer was in the same dilemma. Mr. Morrison, therefore, decided to devote the month's salary to charitable purposes, and so handed it to one of the charitable boards of the city.

TRANSPLANTED TRIBES.

Tragedies That Have Resulted from National Experiments of Population.

A commencement has just been made in a most remarkable and long-talked-of enterprise. This is nothing less than the transplanting of the Lapps from Lapland, where they are a dying race, to Labrador, where it is hoped that they will flourish and increase.

Whether these hopes will be justified or not remains to be seen. Similar experiments in the past have seldom been wholly successful, and some have resulted disastrously.

The Doukhobors, for instance, who, in 1899, were transported, to the number of eight or nine thousand, from their homes in Southern Russia to the Canadian Northwest, were for a time in dire straits. They also behaved erratically, marching naked through snow, and abandoning their flocks and herds to the wolves. They are now, however, reported to be settling down and doing better.

On the other hand, the attempt made, some eighty years ago, to transplant the Roskolnikis of the Don country to a new home that was supposed to have been found for them in Eastern Turkestan, resulted in one of the most ghastly tragedies recorded in the annals of history. The huge caravan lost its way in the terrible Desert of Gobi, and was never heard of again, the probability being that hunger and thirst, combined with the attacks of nomad robbers, were responsible for the deaths of the entire party.

Equally dreadful was the fate that befell the 10,000 Jutlanders transplanted to the east coast of Greenland by Queen Margaret of Sweden. At first they flourished exceedingly. Villages were founded, churches and schools were built, and a bishop was appointed.

Then, one year, the ice pack broke loose from the remote northern seas, and came to a standstill along the coast opposite the settlement in a belt fifty miles broad.

All communication with the open sea was thus cut off. The settlers were unable to obtain supplies, and in the end they perished down to the very last man.—[Pearson's Weekly.

Microbes Survive Cold.

We are accustomed to think of severe and continuous cold as being an enemy to life of every sort, but data furnished to the Pasteur Institute in Paris by Dr. Charcot, the Antarctic explorer, proves conclusively that the intense cold of the south polar regions still allows various forms of microscopic life to flourish. On examining the intestines of animals twenty-four different kinds of microbes were found, and of these fifteen were varieties already known in Europe. Even the microbes found in soil taken from the Antarctic continent where the foot of man had never trod were found to be identical with those of the inhabited world.—[London Globe.

The Flutes of Spring.

The flutes of spring are all in tune
And playing everywhere.
Oh, crystal-clear and ripple-toned
They sound along the air.

The long arpeggios of the sun
Sweep over hill and plain,
And in the misty valleys sound
The runs and trills of rain.

Wild melodies of strolling winds
Go swift across the sky,
The young-leafed wood is loud with calls,
Where nesting robins fly.

Some spirit roams upon the earth,
New-born, wing-sandalled, free,
And for him, where he strays, the flutes
Pour out their melody.

Then listen to the tune of them
That play at April's birth,
Whose call is to the waking heart
From the deep soul of earth.
—[Ethel B. Howard in Scribner's Magazine.

Corset Demonstration

That Will Prove the Merits of W. B. Corsets

Monday we start a week of corset fitting by one of the W. B. Corset manufacturers' New York demonstrators, a woman who has made a life study of corseting. She can tell you in a moment just what you want to know about your individual corset needs. In speaking of La Premiere W. B. Nuform and Reduso Corsets, she says: "A corset improperly made throws the strain of service in the wrong places, and not only distorts the corset, but the figure as well, producing injury and discomfort."

W. B. Corsets are durable for they are scientifically and anatomically correct. They softly embrace the figure, forming smooth, curving lines, without imparting that feeling of binding, so prevalent in ordinary corsets.

Don't miss this opportunity to get the services of the expert, absolutely free.

The most rigorous theologian will frankly admit this, the sociologist and the psychologist acknowledge it frankly. It is for the best interests of the home to have men, women and children busy, amused and happy. This is but one phase of patriotic societies, but certainly one which makes all the others worth while.

"If you seek practical results of purposes which animate all patriots whether they be men or women, or whether they serve in time of war in front of the cannon or in the time of peace by striving to realize the highest ideals of liberty, one has but to observe conditions as they were twenty-five years ago, before the wave of forming patriotic societies swept over the country. Take the study of history alone, and its logical results, of marking historical spots and doing honor to the dead and forgotten heroes and of illuminating mooted points in the development of the nation. Every serious worker in that most fascinating domain of science, historical research, gives cheerful testimony to the debt which the American nation owes to women in patriotic societies. Then in another sense it binds all portions of the country with a common purpose, honoring the founders of the nation and the brave men who faced every trial and hardship and danger which defenders must always endure. Love of the flag, teaching alien children devotion to the flag may also be cited among the useful things which the Daughters have accomplished."

Memorial Hall is now the campaign cry among the Daughters. It is conceded that a necessary qualification for the President-General is in addition to the general knowledge of the business of the society a special familiarity with the plans and progress of the work which is to crown the first quarter of a century of the foundation. Mrs. Scott is possessed of this practical knowledge, so her friends claim since she has been from the beginning of the project a member of the Site and Building Committee and has been indefatigable in her attendance of all the meetings for the past eight years.

The Illinois Daughters and the citizens of Illinois generally take great pride in the restoration of old Fort Massac with its charming environment beautified and enlarged and the inspiring monument of George Rogers looking down over the valley of the Ohio. It was Mrs. Matthew T. Scott who conceived the idea of this restoration and who did yeoman work in securing the necessary funds for it from the Illinois Legislature. Having accomplished this gigantic task, Mrs. Scott with unflagging zeal superintended the plans and their execution, and as a climax she presided over the ceremonies of the unveiling of the Rogers statue with grace and ability. Her address that day delivered before one of the most distinguished audiences in Illinois in recent years, was eloquent and convincing. Should the Daughters select Mrs. Scott to succeed Mrs. Donald McLean, they will have one who can rank with the New York woman in force and virility of public speaking.

Another achievement of Mrs. Scott's in which her champions take equal pride is the foundation of the Matthew T. Scott, Jr., Institute of Kentucky, a memorial to her husband and confined as a trust to a synod of that State for the Christian education of both sexes.

Mrs. Scott is an active worker in the Presbyterian church of Illinois, and her exertions for it have been universal as her own work for patriotic and philanthropic purposes. She also takes a cordial interest in all clubs which have a worthy end and is at present the administrative head of the large and successful Woman's Club of Bloomington.

From a genealogical standpoint, Mrs. Scott would be an entertaining theme for study, even without her delightful personality and her splendid mental equipment. For she comes of illustrious lines on both sides of her family and even a recital of the names of her immediate ancestors calls for attention. On her father's side she comes from the same common ancestor as the Father of the Country, Augustine Warner, great grandfather of George Washington. Mildred Warner married Lawrence Washington, and has gone on history as the grandmother of the First Citizen and Patriot of the Great Republic of the West. Mildred Washington, daughter of Mildred Warner married three times, and by her third husband, Col. Henry Willis, was the mother of Ann Willis, who married Duff Green, Mrs. Scott's grandfather. Equally interesting as the Washington side are the Greens first in Virginia and later in Kentucky.

Mrs. Scott resides in a handsome home in Bloomington, Ill., and is held in the highest esteem there by her friends and neighbors.

She has two daughters, Mrs. Charles G. Bromwell, who has been so pleasantly identified with Washington society since her début in Mrs. Adlai Stevenson's home in the early days of the second Cleveland term. She is the namesake of her distinguished aunt and as Miss Letitia Green Scott, she was a reigning belle. The second daughter, Mrs. Julia Scott Vrooman spends nearly all her time in Europe. Col. and Mrs. Bromwell have two children and these are the only grandchildren which Mrs. Scott boasts. They both bear names which are especially dear to her, the boy a handsome manly youth of 12, is Matthew Scott Bromwell, and the girl, Mildred Warner Washington Bromwell. Mrs. Scott consented to appear before the D.A.R. as a candidate for the honor of president-general only after the most serious consideration of all that the honor meant. That she entered heart and soul into the campaign means much for those who are championing her cause. Her name has never been associated with failure in the many projects with which she has been identified. Mrs. Scott spent part of January in Washington, and she will return here about April 1.

Three Days of Marvelous Merchandising

There's a great motive power back of this business driving it onward—forward. Sales records must be eclipsed, service improved, merchandise must move quickly.

After months of vigorous selling merchandise that has been most popular will reach the stage called "broken lines." It's better to dispose of the short ends and have new bright merchandise to take their place, hence this clearance.

It's not a half-hearted movement, but a vital occasion that is of the utmost importance to every department. We have gone through the entire store and collected a series of bargains that will crowd this store from basement to roof.

There's to be three days of this merchandising—3 days that will mean big profit to you if you watch our ads carefully and take advantage of the savings that we offer.

$3.95 to $6.00 Dress Waists

A great clearance price for fine dress and street waists; a gathering that includes linen, silk messaline, clever net waists, dainty lingerie; the ones, twos and threes of a kind; taken from our regular $3.95, $5 and $6 lines; not every size, but if you wear a 34, 36, 38 or 40, you will find a value here that will surprise you. Second Floor. While they last.

STEINWAY

A Steinway is like the classical masterpieces of music

Other pianos resemble the merely melodic compositions—a temporary diversion.

A Steinway, like the classics of music, is constantly revealing some new delight, leading to some new thought, affording some new interpretation, holding up some new standard; inexhaustible in musical possibilities, irreproachable in effect. No composition reveals all the possibilities of the Steinway piano; no pianist can exhaust its possibilities. It is a mine of music.

Every Steinway has this pre-eminent characteristic. There is no element of chance in buying a Steinway—every one is the result of 56 years of cumulative success in making the world's best piano. Every one is a masterpiece—no need of choice, save to please the fancy in casing.

Steinway Miniature Grand, the smallest real grand, the supreme small grand, $850. Steinway Vertegrand, superior to the grands of other makers, $575.

Prices $575 to $1650

We are sole Steinway representatives for this locality. Prices $575 to $1650. Grands, Vertegrands and Uprights—exact eastern prices with bare cost of freight and handling added. We make the same proportionate easy terms on Steinways as on other goods.

COME IN!

BAY CITIES GETTING TOGETHER TOWARD GREATER LOS ANGELES.

Movement for Consolidation of Santa Monica and Ocean Park, Strongly Backed, the Preliminary Step.

AFTER consolidation with Los Angeles of San Pedro and Wilmington, the maritime gateways, will doubtless come the union with the metropolis of the bay cities farther north than the port—Ocean Park, Santa Monica and Venice. As a preliminary step toward the greater city a movement for consolidation among themselves of Santa Monica and Ocean Park is under way. If this is carried through it will simplify the ultimate merger with Los Angeles; and the movement is so logical and so strongly backed by solid men that its success looks assured. Leading beach residents are its proponents.

E. J. Vawter, Jr., president First National Bank Ocean Park.

The campaign for the consolidation of Ocean Park and Santa Monica was formally launched at a mass-meeting held night before last at the City Hall Santa Monica. Although diverse opinions were presented, it was evident that the majority of those present heartily favor a Greater Santa Monica for the present. It was asserted by leaders of the movement that the main objections could be settled after the alliance had been formed. These seemed to be that the larger city would have to assume the burden of desired improvements in Ocean Park; that the latter section would not have due representation, and that old differences could never be settled.

Most of the objections were easily brushed aside at the preliminary meeting. Other conferences will be held before petitions for consolidation are put in circulation. By the time the new bill making consolidation possible becomes effective, friends of the merger are confident the project can be carried in both cities.

A. F. Webster, president of the things that had been troubling some of the taxpayers.

He showed that Ocean Park can have almost immediate representation in the new City Council, if consolidation carries, by the passage of an ordinance uniting Ocean Park territory to the First and Seventh Wards. This would give it two councilmen, he stated, and furthermore he asserted that the new board, elected in December, would have no inclination to disregard the wishes of the southern portion of the city.

Attorney Taft believes in a united Santa Monica Bay district, and he predicts a population of 50,000 within a few years, if past quarrels are settled and the hatchet is buried once for all.

Mass meetings are to be held at Ocean Park, Venice and Santa Monica during the next few weeks, to arouse the voters and to sweep aside the opposition.

Many of the most progressive citizens of the three sections are in favor of union with Los Angeles, but most of them state that the beach merger must be accomplished before the other can be successfully taken up; it is a preliminary step.

Leading Proponents of a Greater Santa Monica, which contemplates a merger of the bay cities as a preliminary step toward future consolidation with Greater Los Angeles.

Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce stated at the mass meeting that naturally there are differences of opinion, and he urged all opposed to the merger to present their views.

One of the speakers—Mayor Eakins of Ocean Park—referred to possible consolidation with Los Angeles. He is opposed to the union of the two beach towns unless it is for the purpose of joining this city later.

The question of the future location of the Postoffice is what is bothering many, and this will probably be a bone of contention for some time. Several of the speakers, however, asserted that the location is not the important thing, but a free delivery all along the ocean front.

Henry Goetz, president of the Santa Monica Board of Trade, stirred up some of the old grievances and hinted that as long as Ocean Park has become a municipality, it should stay so and settle its own problems without help from the parent city.

FOR UNITED FRONT.

The initial movement for a united beach front, has probably found one of its strongest supporters in Fred H. Taft, formerly City Attorney of Santa Monica, and one of its prominent citizens. At the meeting he clearly outlined the charter provisions of Santa Monica, and laid at rest many of the Commerce has been making a strong fight for the merger. The organization is composed of leading business and professional men of both cities. It has worked for the development of the entire ocean front and believes in sinking personal and selfish ambitions for the good of the community. The latest booklet issued by the chamber gives descriptions of Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice, the tiny corner of Ocean Park that is ruled by Abbot Kinney. He is understood to bitterly oppose the proposed merger, on the alleged ground that his power would be gone if one city government were organized, composed of the leading business men of the entire bay section.

As a counter move Kinney and his followers are preparing a petition for the annexation of Venice to Los Angeles. A committee has already been appointed to gather facts and report at a meeting to be called at an early date. This scheme probably cannot be realized, as Venice is merely a section of Ocean Park and under its city government, although the "Doge of Venice" supposedly has great influence with the Board of Trustees by virtue of his victory at the last municipal election.

It is asserted that Kinney and Roy Jones of Santa Monica are the strong-

PEACE?

WIDOW MAY NOT CONTEST WILL.

FIGHT OVER BALDWIN'S ESTATE POSSIBLY AVERTED.

Negotiations Looking to Amicable Settlement of Differences Are in Progress in San Francisco—Result to Be Known at Hearing on Probate Petition, Wednesday.

Negotiations looking to an amicable settlement of the threatened Baldwin will contest have progressed so successfully that it is believed that when the matter of probating the instrument comes up in Judge Rives' court Wednesday there will be no opposition on the part of Mrs. Baldwin.

When announcement was made from San Francisco that Mrs. Baldwin would begin a contest, and that Attorney Garrett McEnery of that city and former Gov. Gage, W. I. Foley and Gibson, Trask, Dunn & Crutchen of Los Angeles had been retained by her, efforts were at once made to ward off what might prove to be expensive and extended litigation. To give the parties time to confer, a postponement was had for two weeks.

Under the terms of the will, Mrs. Baldwin was given a one-third interest in what is known as the Baldwin Annex in San Francisco, her share being valued at $180,000. Under the agreement proposed, she will be substantially remembered, in addition to what "Lucky" gave her in his last testament. The negotiations are being carried on in San Francisco. The outcome will be known at the hearing on the petition for probate.

H. A. Unruh is now acting as special executor, and if the will is accepted, the appointment will be made permanent.

NO MOTORCYCLE RACES.

The motorcycle races scheduled for this afternoon at the Prince Coliseum have been postponed until April 25. The counter attraction at Ascot Park partly determined the change in date and the condition of the board oval will not permit safe racing. The recent rain warped many of the boards and the management has decided to defer the scheduled meet until the track is thoroughly repaired.

GOVERNOR FRIENDLY.

Chief Executive Almost Certain to Sign Bill Making Appropriation for Exposition Building.

Philip A. Stanton, Speaker of the Assembly, who returned yesterday from Sacramento, where he distinguished himself as a conservative in all matters of legislation, and who, through his position of eminence was able to accomplish much for this section, said on his arrival that Gov. Gillet undoubtedly would sign the bill appropriating $250,000 for a State exposition building in Agricultural Park.

Senators Thompson and Hurd, who helped materially in getting the bill through the upper house after the word had gone out that it could not pass, bring the same encouraging assurance that the Governor will sign the measure, unless it should appear at the last moment that the condition of the State funds will not permit.

If the bill finally is signed, much of the credit must go to former Councilman W. M. Bowen, who conceived the project and carried on the campaign for its consummation.

IN LIMBO.

FETTER TAKEN, OSWALD NEXT.

Tenderloin Tool in Custody, Chief Soon Will Be.

Officers Say Neither Went Across the Line.

Needed Links in Grand Jury Investigation.

William Lawrence Fetter, confidential agent of Nick Oswald in his Tenderloin transactions, was arrested late yesterday afternoon by Chief Detective S. L. Browne of the District Attorney's department of the criminal investigation. Shortly afterward he was arraigned before Township Justice Stephens, who released him under a bond of $1000, furnished by the American Bonding Company of Baltimore, through its attorney, F. J. Hughes of this city.

William L. Fetter,

confidential agent of Nick Oswald, who was arrested yesterday on charge of criminal conspiracy in conection with transactions in red-light district.

Feter—who has been known heretofore as Vetter, also as William Lawrence—left the justice court immediately afterward in company with a number of friends, to appear tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the court of Justice Stephens to answer to a charge of criminal conspiracy in avoiding a service issued by the grand jury.

It is promised by the officers in charge of the case that Nick Oswald will be in custody today or tomorrow.

As a result of the arrest of Fetter, and the prospective apprehension of Oswald, it is said that the special grand jury will be enabled to proceed at once with its work, though the general supposition has been that it would have to wait another week at least before resuming its duties, which came to a temporary halt with the arrest of Sam Schenck, former Police Commissioner, on a bribery charge.

BOUND FOR PASADENA.

Fetter was taken into custody at Sixth and Main streets about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Detective Browne and Deputy District Attorney Paul McCormick. Fetter was about to board a car for Pasadena, presumably to join Oswald, who, despite all assertions to the contrary, has been in hiding, it is said, within fifty miles of Los Angeles.

Through some source that they would not disclose, Browne and McCormick were informed of the whereabouts of Fetter. That they were not misinformed was proved by their return to Browne's office with the prisoner.

For about an hour Fetter was put through an examination in the offices of Detective Browne. What he disclosed to McCormick and the chief detective was not made known. When these officials were through with him they escorted him to the Justice Court, where his bond was accepted and he was turned loose.

Fetter would make no statement. He was very mysterious as to his movements since leaving Los Angeles with Oswald two weeks or more ago. He tried to make it appear that he and his companion—Oswald—had been at Tia Juana, and even far beyond that in Lower California, but his tongue was loose, and he might as well have said that they had been in the farthest wilds of Africa.

It is stated positively by the officers

RIGHT DIRECTION.

RUSH HITHER AT HOT PACE.

EIGHTY THOUSAND COLONISTS SEASON'S OUTLOOK.

Influx a Record-Breaker, Says the Traffic Handlers of the Railroads. Low Rates and East's Hard Winter Factors in Bringing Them Here. High Daily Average.

The heaviest rush of colonists to California in the history of the lines entering this State is under way, according to some of the railroad managers.

A grand total of more than 60,000 colonists have arrived, are on the road or have arranged for transportation.

The rates went into force the 1st inst., and for the first three days of this month an average of 200 per day arrived or were en route on one railroad alone of the three entering Los Angeles.

The average per day for all railroads in former years was 387. This is expected to be almost doubled before the season closes.

The fact that the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition is to be opened this summer in the Northwest has attracted many colonists there, but in spite of this fact the influx to Southern California appears greater than in any former year.

The Southern Pacific Company's passenger men state that they expect to average over 678 colonists daily for the sixty days in which the low rates are effective.

The Santa Fé, which in former years has brought the largest number into Southern California, reports that while the trend Northwest is strong, the number coming to Southern California will exceed by many thousands those of other years.

LOW RATE BRINGS RESULTS.

This spring the same colonist rates effective in 1907 prevail. This means a reduction of 10 per cent. from the rates of the spring and fall of 1908, when the colonist traffic was exceedingly light. This fact, coupled with the extremely hard winter in the Eastern and Middle Western States, is, in the opinion of railroad officials, the cause of the present and expected big rush of colonists.

SUCCULENCY.

BY HUNDREDS OF TRAINLOADS WE SHIP VEGETABLES EAST.

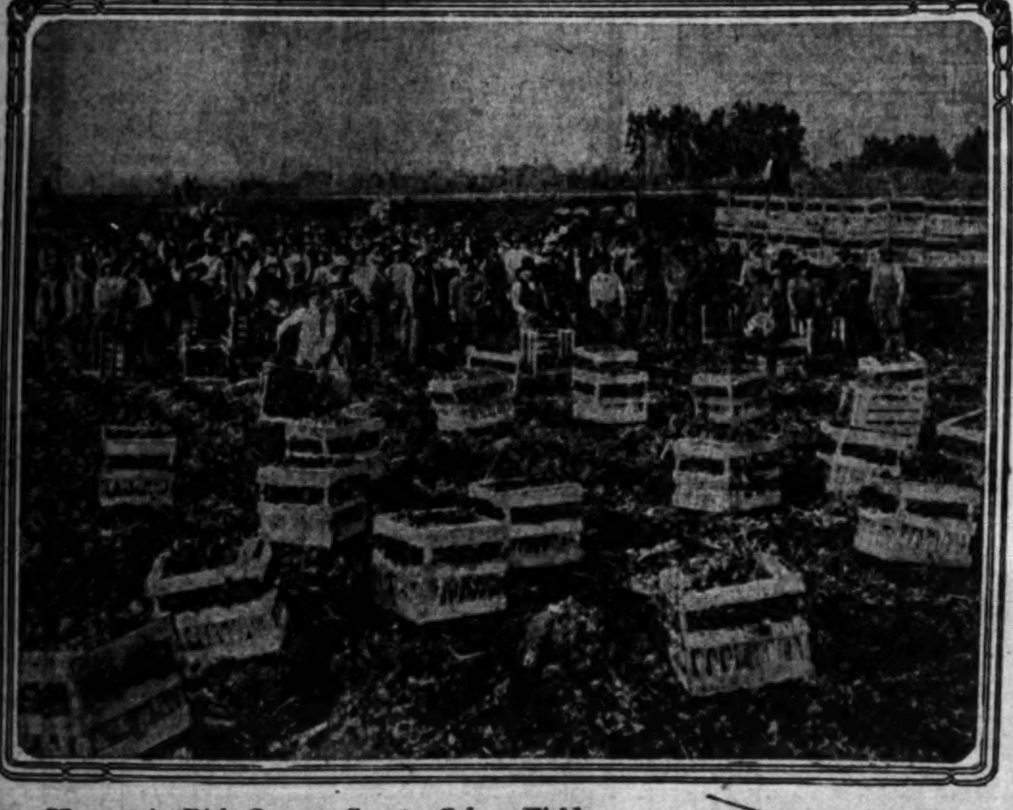
Asparagus, Celery, Cabbage, Cauliflower, Tomatoes and Early Potatoes Make Up an Immense Quantity.

BY G. W. BURTON.

SHIPPING of Southern California vegetables to the markets of the consuming East is nearly at its height, and the enormous quantity of products forwarded shows the importance of this industry. The California Vegetable Union, which has been operating six years, handles ninety per cent. of the business, and it amounts to hundreds of trainloads of twenty cars each. An important change took place yesterday in the organization, when Mr. Curtis, general manager, sold his interest to President Cronemiller and retired.

The corporation is the selling agent for the Celery Growers' Association of Orange county, the El Monte Celery Association, Whittier Vegetable Association, and La Habra Vegetable Association, Cudahy Cauliflower Association, Rowland Tomato Association, and Fullerton Tomato Association, also the Norwalk Vegetable Association and the Coachella and Thermal Union Association.

The selling agent has handled this winter season about 1500 carloads of asparagus sold in eastern markets, 300 carloads of cauliflower, cabbage from 1500 to 2000 acres, 200 or 300 carloads of early potatoes, and a quantity of onions and tomatoes not yet possible to estimate.



Harvest in Rich Orange County Celery Fields.

Gathering the great crop for shipment by trainloads to the winter markets of the East, where there is enormous consumption of the succulent delicacy.

It is more than twenty years since the growing of winter vegetables in California for the eastern markets was first looked upon seriously. Somewhat later efforts began to be made to ship string beans, green peas and cauliflower. The shipping of cabbage had been carried on without much serious difficulty, but the earliest endeavors to ship peas and beans in crate, even using refrigerator cars, were for a time so unsuccessful that some of the shippers despaired of ever finding a way to send them across the continent, a twelve or fifteen-day journey, without the stuff mildewing.

Something like a dozen years ago D. E. Smeltzer began growing celery on a large scale in the peatlands in Orange county. The company organized by Mr. Smeltzer continued in the business for half a dozen years, when the Earl Fruit Company was sold out to Armour & Co. Then W. F. Cronemiller and E. A. Curtis organized a company to take over the Smeltzer business, the vegetable business of the Earl Fruit Company, and also the same portion of the business of the Fay Fruit Company. This corporation has been operative scenes. W. F. Cronemiller is president; Thomas O'Neill, vice-president; E. A. Curtis, general manager; F. P. Fay, treasurer, and B. P. Hoar, secretary. Yesterday, however, Mr. Curtis sold his interest to Mr. Cronemiller and severed all connection with the corporation and its business. The interest was one-quarter, giving Cronemiller control of a full half-interest in the concern. This change in the management of the business is purely personal, and will affect in no respect its conduct. There is no selection as yet of a successor to Mr. Curtis as general manager.

The corporation handles 90 per cent. of all the vegetables of various kinds shipped from Southern California to eastern markets at all times of the year. In a paragraph above there are set out the names of the various associations of growers whose produce the California Vegetable Union handles. For the most part it is merely selling agent, receiving a percentage on all the sales it makes.

The present year is not a large one in the shipping of California vegetables East for various reasons. All told, it will amount to somewhere between 2500 and 3000 carloads. The celery is about all shipped, amounting to nearly half of the total tonnage. Cauliflower is also about all gone, cabbage just coming in, and onions and tomatoes off in the distance.

FROM THE CELERY FIELDS.

The bulk of the celery crop comes from the rich peatlands down in Orange county. The acreage in this vegetable this year amounted to about 2500 acres, and the tonnage was about 1500 cars of about fifteen tons each. Each car carries from 1000 to 1200 bunches of celery, and the prices realized were from 20 to 40 cents a dozen heads.

The acreage this year was short by about 150 acres. This was owing to poor results in the previous year. The crop of 1907-8 was greatly damaged by blight, a new trouble in an aggravated form. The growers set about overcoming this, and have entirely succeeded, but discouragement cut the crop short as indicated above. The crop this year was of excellent quality, the best ever harvested.

There are about 200 growers engaged in this industry, and probably 1000 persons find employment in cultivating the ground, putting in the crop and cultivating it until it is ready to pick, and then in picking, packing and shipping.

The crop is about all harvested and shipped out and the selling agents and growers preparing to wind up the year's business, which excepting the short crop has been a very successful year.

The cauliflower crop is also all gone. The last of this vegetable was shipped some weeks ago. If the celery goes mostly to the credit of Orange county, the country immediately around Los Angeles claims most of the cauliflower crop.

The supply of this vegetable for the season just closed amounted to about 300 carloads of fifteen tons each. It brought from 25 to 40 cents a dozen. The season was not considered an entirely successful one, as our cauliflower met with sharp competition from shipments sent in from Florida. This is the first season that State has entered into competition with us in this crop, and her competition was of so effective a nature that our goods sold at a rather low price.

CABBAGE AND POTATOES.

The Vegetable Union is now preparing to ship the cabbage crop with freedom. This grows mostly around Fullerton, Whittier and La Habra, with smaller quantities in other localities. The acreage in tre crops now amounts to between 1500 and 2000 acres. The crop is not very heavy, and estimates differ as to how much the tonnage will be. It ought to run close to 1000 carloads, but it will be a good deal short of that.

The market has just opened and at unusually high prices because of a scarcity of supply. As the crop comes in more freely the price is expected to go more or less down.

Later on we shall be shipping early potatoes all over the East. Usually we send out in four or five weeks of the early summer from 200 to 300 fifteen-ton carloads, but it is impossible at this early stage to prophesy as to the output this year. Another crop that will come in by and by is that of onions. Shipments of this vegetable do not amount to so much as any of the others. Then in the summer proper will come a very considerable crop of tomatoes grown for the eastern market, but that is more a matter of conjecture than any of the others.

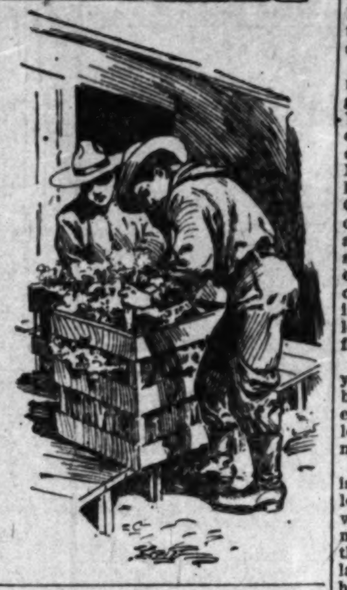
IN THE EARLY VALLEYS.

Down in the Coachella and Imperial valleys, experiments have been going on for the past few years in the growing of very early vegetables for eastern shipment. Tomatoes and cabbage have been tried by a number of farmers in those sections. The soil is so exceedingly rank and the temperature so high that there is more or less of experiment in the attempts up to this time. The great trouble is with the insect pests. Vegetation flourishes beyond all experience in those rich lands and warm temperatures. The same influences that cause the vegetable to grow apace aid in the multiplication of the predatory insects which feed upon the vegetables. This is not a new thing in Southern California, but an exaggerated case of what we have experienced for years. Human ingenuity and the high intelligence of California farmers have brought to naught the various scales which prey upon orange trees and other fruit-bearing trees. No doubt a way of combating the cabbage lice and other insects which multiply in the mild winter climate in Imperial Valley will be found.

GREAT INDUSTRY.

This little sketch shows how important the industry of growing vegetables for the eastern market is here in Southern California. The California Vegetable Union ships about 4000 carloads of the various vegetables a year. A carload of celery of fifteen tons carries 1000 to 1200 bunches. Thus it appears that good celery brings nearly $500 a carload. The total number of people interested in the production of these 4000 carloads would come to about 500, and probably first and last 2500 persons earn a living in the industry. Of course it is impossible to sum up the total receipts for the 4000 carloads. If they all brought as much as fine celery, the income would be $200,000 a year, but of course we cannot make an average of the finest product.

In a few years the Panama Canal will be complete and no doubt soon thereafter we shall be opening up markets all over Northern Europe for the vegetable and fruit crops of Southern California.



WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 26.—John L. Sullivan, British Ambassador Bryce and Liliuokalani, former Queen of Hawaii, were all here at the same time, but not together. There was no interchange of courtesies by the celebrities, and it is doubtful whether John L. would be at home if Bryce called. The lady came and went quietly, and made no effort to tell the representative of the tight little island in the Atlantic about her troubles in the sun-kissed Pacific.

James Bryce had many good things to say of California. What is more, he means what he says. He believes that we are, geographically, a country unto ourselves, but that patriotism links us indissolubly to the rest of the republic. He modestly says that he did not write the American Commonwealth, inasmuch as he simply acted as clerk in writing down our answers in a connected form. Altogether, he is a lovable man, and we wish that he will come again and stay longer.

In sporting parlance one must hand it to Miss Helen Gladys Emery. All the king's horses and all the king's men, with the exclusion league to boot, cannot prevent her from marrying Gunjiro Aoki. She loves him, and she'll wed him, whether he is a Jap or a gibbering baboon. Mrs. John A. Emery, her mother, is game too, and shows where the girl gets her spunk. A lady of Corte Madera, where the Emerys were hosted, objects to Mrs. Emery calling her "the scum of the earth," and it is but fair to her that "buttinsky" should be substituted for "scum."

Woe is us! Prof. Jaffa of the University of California is after us. At a liberal salary from the State he is high priest of dietetics, and what he says goes. Not long since he recommended the peanut as a staple article of food. Peddlers and small boys worshipped him for this, so cheered by their approval he now recommends that bran be put in our bread. This is no joke, and all disposed to treat it flippantly are informed that the bakers of the State will adopt his suggestion.

A court has allowed the receiver and lawyers of the California Safe Deposit about $45,000 for one year's services. Depositors hoping to get a small percentage of their money back think that this is crowding the mourners and a bad case of take it or leave it.

Municipal government in a cosmopolitan city like this is kaleidoscopic to an interesting degree. A devoted band of anarchists has defied Assessor Dodge and a number of muscular squatters refuse to vacate city streets seized just after the fire. Under pressure of the press, 700 policemen, at a monthly wage of $120, are trying to earn it by enforcing some of the many ordinances which have been flagrantly violated for years. Building contractors are forced to allow others the use of small portions of the streets and sidewalks, and drivers of teams are fined for leaving them unhitched.

Criminal procedure has been tortuous enough in the past, but now a new element enters to aid the wrongdoer. A theosophist shot his wife, and his defense is that he was in such a subconscious state of mind that he did not know what he was doing, and he will be much obliged to any one who will tell him why he did it.

It is all very well to tell people to throw away the hammer and not knock others; but Walter G. Mills, a machinist, believes in the judicious use of the hammer. He found Hans Murch, another machinist, in a room with Mrs. Mills, and he beat them both into unconsciousness with his favorite hammer.

Beautiful Berkeley, facing the Golden Gate and nestling peacefully at the foot of Grizzly Peak, while Strawberry Creek turbulently seeks the ocean through cultured backyards, is in the calcium light. Two old men died there from starvation, and a carpenter has been arrested there for kissing every girl he met, irrespective of age or pulchritude.

Thunder and lightning hit us the other night, but it takes more than that to scare us after our little shake three years ago. After all, we are better off than Kermit Roosevelt, who had Marathon work to do as a side partner of the strenuous Theodore, caged up in an ocean steamer.

All of us sports were pained to hear that "Jimmy" Coffroth, prize-fight promoter, had chewed up "Buck" Geggus, an old favorite of the diamond. The report from the receiving hospital was that Geggus would die from blood-poisoning, due to Coffroth's fatal bite. Geggus is still alive and unscarred, and he'll have a baseball bat handy when he next meets his mayhem foe.

PLUTO.

Why Is Fat?

Is it because one is born with the tendency? Or is it one of "life's trials," or is it due to just plain, hearty appetite? The doctors say not any one of these phrases the question correctly. They say fat IS because the fat person's digestive organs are defective. Such organs, it seems, don't change the fatty foods eaten by stout persons into heat and energy, as they should. Instead the food fats pass on into the system unconsumed. Hence fat layers accumulate under the skin in quiet spots, such as the chin, abdomen, shoulder blades, etc.

Let that digestive defect be corrected and the formerly fat person goes back to his or her original shape. You can prove this on yourself. Seventy-five cents will secure from your druggist one of the large cases of Marmola Prescription Tablets recently licensed for sale by the Marmola Company of Detroit, Mich. Take one of these tablets after each meal and at bedtime and the demonstration starts right there. Very soon you will experience a new sense of digestive comfort and a delightful feeling of increased energy which should be followed in due season by a gradual, uniform decrease of your fat.

During the demonstration period you eat and drink as formerly, remember. The tablets need no help from either dieting or exercising, nevertheless the daily loss should approximate ten to sixteen ounces a day.

Now, WHY is it you get thin? Why is it the fat just seems to slip away, leaving your flesh smooth, firm and wrinkleless? Simply because Marmola corrects that digestive defect, thereby stopping further fat accumulation and enabling the body forces to harmlessly dissolve what has already gathered.

HANDS OUT LEMON FACTS.

HEAR A LECTURE BY FEDERAL EXPERT.

in Charge of Department griculture's Fruit Transpor- and Storage Investigations, Culture in Italy, Particularly the Verdel System.

Powell of Washington, D. charge of the fruit transportation and storage investigations of the of Agriculture, yesterday delivered a lecture before the Growers' Club of Southern in the assembly room of Chamber of Commerce. His sub- "Lemon Culture in Italy," illustrated his talk with lan- from photographs which he took while in the foreign coun- a representative pomologist the United States. Verdel system of lemon culture explained in detail. "The Ver- " said Mr. Powell, "are the best-known and finest lem- in the world. The Italians developed this system to a re- degree. Verdel stands not variety of lemon trees, but for lemons grown on any trees after have been treated according to of the system. blossoms at the first part of the year are not prolific or other climatic conditions are unfavorable and the crop seems destined to be small, the Verdel system is brought into use. The ground around the trees is removed, and the roots are allowed to remain exposed for a period of forty to sixty days, when a strong fertilizer, usually sulphate of ammonia, is placed on the roots and the soil laid over this. Irrigation must then follow constantly, the ground being kept moist all the time until the blossoms are brought forth.

"This insures a good second crop of lemons, the Verdels. The period of picking in Italy is about six months, during which time the fruit is plucked about every six weeks. The Italians have no systematized packing-houses, and each grower usually packs his own stock. The first-class fruit is all packed for export trade. The work is done chiefly by women.

"The second, or by-product lemons, are utilized in the manufacture of citrate of lime, from which citric acid is later manufactured. The presses and other machinery used in the manufacture of the citrate are nearly all hand or mule power. The finest oil of lemon or orange is made in Sicily. The best is all produced in a primitive way, by hand, and the oil is collected in sponges, dropped, when these are fully saturated, on water and then blown off the water into any ordinary receptacle."

After his lecture and during its course, Mr. Powell was frequently called on by the lemon growers to further explain his points. There were 200 lemon growers in attendance.

BABY LIONS ON SHOW.

The baby lions in the Eastlake zoo will be on exhibition today from 9 to 12, and 2 to 5. The cubs have gained five pounds each since birth, and now weigh nearly six pounds, says Keeper Rice.

A Woman About Town.

BY FELICIA.

Hail, the conquering hero comes! In fact he came yesterday, my old friend, Phil Stanton, member of the California Legislature, late Speaker of the Assembly, eligible bachelor—and admired of women, though he has never been betrayed into a long conversation with one of the gentler sex, as far as I can learn.

Laden with laurels, he declares he is going to retire from politics. Now, is he going to retire from the matrimonial market as well? This is what a number of shy maids who have cast glances in his direction would like to learn. They would not dream of asking him outright. He might reply with the same inscrutable smile with which he met the arguments of that pretty suffragette, Mrs. Lillian Coffin, who has been making things lively at Sacramento.

Down at Bay City, Phil Stanton has a home which looks like a shrine for the gifts of his women friends. These gifts range all the way from sofa pillows to burnt-wood taborets, and all are equally honored and cherished. It is hard to select a preferred creditor, but the secret has been fathomed. I know the name of his best girl, and I am going to tell it. This is how I found it out:

On his forty-first birthday anniversary, not his fiftieth, as an unwise contemporary stated it, recently celebrated at Sacramento, the newspaper men decided to do him honor. He had choked off the long-winded ones, and confined spread-eagle members to facts. He had made their work less complicated and the press men were duly grateful. They sent flowers to express their sentiments.

The posies were in order awaiting the coming of the Speaker. Each bore a card with the name of the sender. At the psychological moment a page appeared bearing a glorious basket of blush roses. It was an anonymous offering, a real gage d'amour, and its arrival precipitated a riot.

"Ha, old boy, found out at last!" shouted one of the men. "His best girl, I'll bet a hat!" said another. "His best girl" was the unanimous verdict, and they spoke more wisely than they knew. The basket was from his best girl, the only girl in the world to Philip Stanton—his mother, who has faithfully accompanied him on every legislative mission, and who sent the birthday roses to her boy of 41.

One of the cleverest hostesses in Los Angeles, Mrs. Willitts J. Hole, unconsciously caused flutter among her women guests last week on the occasion of the dinner given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Hollingsworth, who are soon to go abroad—and it all came about through having a Quaker husband.

Wondrously good to look upon, Mrs. Hole stood ready to receive her dinner guests with her most winning smile. The first to arrive was a lovely little lady whose gown was made with a round neck, very smart, and chic. Conscious of her pretty clothes she entered like a happy little breeze that had blown in, but suddenly her face fell when she beheld her hostess, and she hastily retreated upstairs to lay off her wraps—and did not come down.

The next guest to arrive was pretty Miss Annie Marie Nellis, and she appeared to experience the same sensation when her hostess greeted her with warm cordiality. She also hastened upstairs and did not come down. Laying aside her wraps her dinner gown was revealed in all its delicate beauty, and her white shoulders rose out of it, but her face was unhappy. She consulted with the other ladies in the room, and the cause of dismay was soon made known. Mrs. Hole's gown was built up high at the throat.

A low chorus of wails was heard. Why a high-necked gown? Had there been some fickle change in Dame Fashion's fancy. Were decollete gowns no longer de rigeus? Oh dear, oh dear. One lady made a hasty rearrangement of filmy laces, and pinned on a bunch of violets, then smiled a superior smile at the unhappy ones.

A caucus was held. Had they committed a faux pas past forgiveness in coming with shoulders bared. What could be done? Their hostess was waiting below and there was no time to run home and change, a shower threatened.

Presently Mrs. Erasmus Wilson entered and took the center of the stage. Her gown was decollete and her manner assured. She heard the cause of complaint.

"Why, don't you know, Mr. Hole is a Quaker, and Mrs. Hole never wears a low-necked gown just to please him. My dear ladies, there has been no change of fashion, it is only the fashion of the Quakers."

Dear me, how relieved they felt. Soft silks and satins froufroued on the steps and smiles and laughter chased away dismay. I should not wonder, however, if those clever women planned a campaign to change Quaker fashions.

A certain clever Missourian was telling me the other day that the Middle West is growing impatient with California for taking away its best speakers and ministers.

"Why, even Matt Hughes," he said, "who can keep me awake for a whole hour at a time, has deserted Kansas City for Pasadena."

Now, I have never heard Mr. Hughes preach, but I think Missouri has a right to complain, for this noted minister of the gospel hath a keen and ready wit as I learned a few days ago.

"I am so glad to hear, Mr. Hughes," I said, "that you are to be the principal speaker at the Woman's Parliament, this spring; we are looking forward to it with great pleasure."

"Tell me about the Woman's Parliament," he relied, "I should like to know more about it, what are its purposes and what has it done?"

"Well, the parliament has done many beautiful things in the past, Mr. Hughes," I replied, "but I am distressed to say I hear that it is either dead or dying at present."

"Isn't it usual to call in a minister at such a time?" replied the grave Mr. Hughes with a twinkle in his eye.

I do not wish to be irreverent, but I believe that the witty Missourian may even raise the dead in this case, if he consents to give his time to it.

A new cure has been found for spring fever, and mañana laziness which attacks painters and writers, but which spurs poets to superhuman efforts. The cure which has just proven so successful was originated by Mrs. Richard Barry, that slender sylph of a southern girl who lured a fleet correspondent away from the American armada last spring and married him in San Francisco.

Since his marriage Mr. Barry has been engaged in writing a book which deals with naval life and adventure, the atmosphere of which was absorbed aboard the U.S.S. Kansas on the way from Hampton Roads around the Horn.

The publishers have been waiting for the book for some time. It has been all but finished, but alas, the mañana complaint of early spring attacked the author, and operations came to a standstill. The writer preferred to loiter like a schoolboy. He preferred to invite his soul amid the tender green woods of the Monrovia hills, to visit congenial souls near by, anything rather than weave the final fate of hero and heroine.

Finally the vivid piece of femininity that he so gallantly annexed last spring, began to act as a gentle prod to labor. He would not be prodded, and drastic measures were resorted to for the good of the book.

This is a true tale. The bride of nearly a year snipped the buttons off the coat and waistcoat of her lord and master and locked him out on an unfeeling veranda with the cruel mandate: "Finish your book."

And he finished it, for the wanderlust is a useless passion with the buttons taken off one's coat; and it is not meet to live one's whole life on a veranda.

METHODIST MISSION.

The new Methodist Mission, at No. 255 East Fifth street, which opened on last Tuesday, has drawn large crowds every night. Rev. George E. Foster, the superintendent, will preach tonight, and on Tuesday night, marking the close of the first week in the mission's history, Dr. Matt Hughes of Pasadena, will be the speaker. Dr. Hughes is one of the strong and eloquent preachers of the Methodist church.

IMPERIAL EXCURSION.

The bookings for the Chamber of Commerce excursion to Imperial, Yuma and Laguna Dam, have surpassed all expectations, reservations yesterday nearing the completion of the sixth car. The excursion will start at 8:30 Monday evening over the Southern Pacific Railway, and passage may be secured up to the last moment, providing rooms remain in the sixth car. The fare is $27.50 for the round trip, the special returning on Thursday.

From fields of green and hills of glory.

Gen. Castro needn't think he will do anything new when he spits on America. It is done every day.

Speaking of building up for the purpose of tear-down again, there's the Calhoun jury in San Francisco.

Paderewski has a glass arm and it puts him to the bad the same as though he were a baseball pitcher.

Among the leading industries of Los Angeles the business of serving on election boards may be mentioned.

There is a hole in the check book of E. Toopious and cracks in the recall fad that you could shove Sequoias through.

It is a matter of only two weeks until the arrival of Easter. Pungle up, papa, and don't make a fuss over the feathers.

Henry Watterson declares that the tariff fight must be started all over again from the beginning. The Lord save us!

If Jeffries declines to meet Jack Johnson, the colored champion might be able to get a match with Mme. Eames.

Let the country at large adopt the New Mexico idea of dealing with kidnaping and the business will soon be on the punk.

Mayor Rose of Milwaukee believes in saloons, therein differing from a great many men who are in the saloon business.

Those other towns that have been thinking to adopt the recall have not yet come to any definite conclusions in the affirmative.

It isn't everybody that would be willing to pay an "artistic debt" with real money as Mary Garden has done, we'll tell you that.

However, we advise Castro that when he spits on America he will avoid the sidewalks. In most towns there are ordinances against it.

The recallers—and especially the arch-recaller—must find it pretty expensive business trying to run a town against the wishes of the people.

We are not surprised that there have been blows over the tariff discussion in Congress. Wherever there is so much wind blows are inevitable.

"Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien's last fight is one of the few creditable encounters he has engaged in. He was knocked out, but he didn't lie down.

It seems that Mr. Harriman was just looking over California for the purpose of picking out the nicest spot on which to locate his future home.

Congressman Byrd of Mississippi seems to be one, all right, only he spells his name as awkwardly as the Mr. Fish who spelled his name "P-s-y-c-h-e."

This society fellow Biddle of Philadelphia, who acts as bottle-holder at prize fights, is, no doubt, the pride of all the ladies, who just dote on dare-devils.

Those girls in Massachusetts who contracted blood poisoning from wearing green stockings on St. Patrick's Day were not Irish girls, and we'll bet on it.

Just imagine a little dinky country like Servia putting nearly a half million armed men in the field. Why, that's more people than live in one ward in Seattle.

It is very well for the philosophers to tell us to make light of things, but the man who burns his money will live to bitterly regret his reckless and thoughtless action.

A Chinaman has won an oratorical contest in an eastern college. In future he will probably be known as the William J. Bryan of Hongkong or something like that.

The men who did the work for the recall were paid off in the coin of the realm yesterday. In other words the so-called "victory" was won by an army of mercenaries.

We hope for the best and wish him well, but we fear that the new Mayor of Los Angeles will not be able to do much more than to give an imitation of a fish out of water.

As far as we can understand the situation, the Austro-Prussian combination has the game cinched so that the rest of Europe stands to lose whether it plays on the black or the red.

Why do not the lawyers in the Calhoun trial go out into the highways and byways, secure twelve imbeciles who were born with water on the brain, put them in the box and quit this eternal fiddling?

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" isn't the play it used to be. The actors who take the parts of the cakes of ice do not seem to put the same enthusiasm into their work that characterized their predecessors of a generation past.

The people of a portion of the State of Washington saw a double moon the other night. It is perhaps needless to say that the prohibition movement has not yet reached that part of our neighboring commonwealth.

No day has yet passed without a mention of Col. Roosevelt in the newspapers since he left the White House. The new-style linotype machines will have an arrangement by which his whole name can be set up at one touch of a key

NEARLY A ROUT.

The active managers, trained political bell wethers, who led the recall forces in the Mayoralty election of Friday were as confident of an overwhelming victory as was ever any political organization it has been our lot to come into contact with or have knowledge of. They vociferously and proudly proclaimed, as late as election day, that their vote would be three to one, if not five to one. Nobody who has mastered the first letter of the political alphabet will deny that the unexpected and cowardly collapse of Harper in the midst of the fight most disastrously affected the opposition to the recall and left what seemed a clear field open to the recallers. Then the pretensions of the managers of the recall campaign became louder and much more arrogant.

It must be conceded that they had about as well built, well greased and well operated a political machine as ever worked in a campaign. They were not simply earnest; they were zealots. They had the backing of every influence in the city that they can ever hope for. They were furnished with abundance of money and spent the largest amount of cash ever spilled in any local campaign in the State of California near or remote. They had hired-paid workers all over the city. They had an army of volunteers, many of them zealous to the point of absolute crankiness.

If these class politicians had everything they can ever hope to array on their side in their ranks, they also had the easiest battle, apparently, that a political party ever faced, or they are likely to face again. The Republican organization declined to have any part in the campaign, refusing to take the suggestion of The Times to put up a strong, well-equipped member of the party as candidate for Mayor. The Democratic party was in utter rout following the "fall down" on the part of their logical candidate, A. C. Harper. The opposition had no money, no management, no head, no workers. It was a scattered crowd without a general to face the organized, thoroughly officered army on the recall side.

Surely the contrasted conditions in the two camps furnished abundant and apparently solid ground on which to build the hopes and prognostications that Mr. Alexander would land in the Mayor's chair by a surprising, phenomenal, astonishing, sensational majority. His was an army with all the equipment and paraphernalia of war, under their own generals, facing disorganized, discouraged, routed forces.

That was the way the campaign stood on Friday morning when at sunrise the polls opened in the various precincts of the city. The streets in the business center and out through the residence districts were a-roar from sunrise until sundown with buzz-wagons bearing the Alexander standard and operated by men determined to get out every recall vote in the city of Los Angeles. They worked like beavers. They missed no voter who could be in any way, by any means, brought to the polls to cast a vote for the recall nominee.

On the other side was the quiet of a graveyard. The organization workers, managers, captains and generals, Democratic and Republican, were nowhere in sight, were all at their various vocations, attending to their business and letting the election go as it would by default. There was no worker urging any voter to vote for Wheeler at any precinct. During the campaign the press of the city was either on the side of the recallers with a zeal that was virulent or was indifferent to the fate of any candidate after Harper had resigned.

So went the ante-election campaign, so went election day, and the sun set and the polls closed and the precinct officers began to count the vote.

And lo, then, what a surprise for all! It depended upon which side of the city you were in whether one candidate or the other led. Wheeler was an unknown quantity to 90 per cent. of the voters of the city, an obscure man, loaded down with the weight of socialistic taint in the principles for which he stands. But as ballot after ballot was counted it was nose to nose, nip and tuck between George Alexander and F. C. Wheeler. When the totals were added, lo, of 27,000 voters who took the trouble to express their desires at all at the polls, barely over 14,000 were for the recall and almost 13,000 against it. Alexander lost five out of nine wards. Consternation reigned in the recall camp from moment to moment during the counting of the vote. There was a sigh of relief instead of a shout of triumph when the last precinct had been heard from and it was found that the recall candidate had won by a nose.

If the Democratic push, the Republican organization, or any powerful influence, up to the large mass of intelligent, clean citizens who abhor the recall on fundamental principles, had cared to lift a hand, the result would have been turned the other way—Mr. Alexander left a private citizen and the Socialist Wheeler landed in the Mayor's chair. It became generally known on the street as early as 10 o'clock on Friday morning that up along Angeleno Heights and other parts of the city, as well as in the Seventh and Eighth wards, the Wheeler vote was tremendous and the chances of Wheeler's election exceedingly strong. The only thing that saved the day for the recallers was the utter indifference of the two regular political organizations and the abstention from voting on the part of the great mass of the citizens, which made it possible for the recall cause to win even by the narrow margin recorded.

Victory? It is a defeat. Of the total vote of the city, the recall clique's cause, with all the vast expenditure of money and energy under the thoroughly organized political machine, drew to that side one voter out of every five. If the disorganized elements on the other side had had but one skilled leader, or even a few earnest workers, the virtual defeat which the recall cause has experienced would have been turned into a rout.

There can be but one interpretation of the actual result. It was an outspoken declaration of the people of Los Angeles of their lack of confidence in the arch-pretenders and self-seeking bosses who promoted and conducted the recall campaign. The great body of the people, the great number of the average citizens, would have none of them. Thousands went to the extreme of voting for a Socialist candidate, whose notions they abhorred, in order to express their even greater abhorrence of the hypocrisy and sham of the recall engineers. The people have expressed their sentiments. They have rendered their verdict. To all intents and purposes, they have hammered the life out of the recall bosses and suppressed them as unnecessary and offensive noises in local politics. The ghosts will be laid in December.

Unrecorded.

I, boastful science, of thy gains
Come now to ask my part;
Answer me now, for all my pains,
The longing of my heart.
For those upon the ocean's breast,
Far off from either shore,
Thou markest on an air-wave's crest
If gold be less or more.

Thou who hast spanned the trackless deep
Without a wire or line,
Across the space of one night's sleep,
Come, give to me a sign
From her who into silence fared
With her small hand in mine.

Back, through vibrating waves of thought,
My longing beats her wings;
Baffled and faint, with failure fraught,
No sign nor record brings.
All I have learned, all I have taught,
They seem such useless things!

CHANGE OF VENUE BILL.

One of the just measures, conceived in the interest of fair play, enacted by the Legislature just adjourned, is the change of venue law, providing that a party to any action, civil or criminal, may obtain a change of judges (to another department or to another county if there be no other department) by filing an affidavit that he believes he cannot have a fair and impartial trial before the judge to whom the case has been assigned or is pending. Two changes are made in the old law: one, withdrawing from a judge of the Superior Court the power to himself pass upon his own alleged bias or prejudice; the second withholding from a judge declared to be biased the power to appoint another judge in his place. The new law applies to the Superior Court a rule previously prevailing with respect to justices of the peace.

Numerous States in the Union have already made provisions such as these and they have worked in the interest of equity and a proper administration of justice. In several instances these provisions have prevented capitalistic or political powers from carrying out their schemes through the pulling of strings attached to judges whom they could influence. The Montana statute ordains that five judges may be challenged in turn, the law having been passed in response to a popular demand because of a belief that Heinze, the copper king, could control a majority of the judges of Montana.

It goes without saying that each party to an action—plaintiff, defendant, prosecution or defense—is entitled to a hearing before an impartial judge. Under the old system in California this desideratum has not always been obtainable for the reason that some judges have not been sufficiently sensitive and high-minded to decline to sit in a case wherein their impartiality was questioned. Again and again has a judge declined to grant a change of venue when asked to do so by a party to an action alleging that said judge was biased and prejudiced. One would suppose that any judge suspected of bias would be willing to withdraw from the trial of a cause; but the record shows that many a judge insists on sitting in spite of a complaint of grievous partiality preferred against him. It has been shown that a judge, who is in fact biased and prejudiced and who is devoid of the finer sensibilities, almost invariably denies a motion to transfer a case to another court.

The new law is appropriately called the "fair trial law.". It is in fact fair to both sides of any conceivable case. It is in unison with the American sense of justice. Its value has been demonstrated. It insures an impartial hearing in court—and that is a thing to which every American citizen, high or low, white, black or brown, rich or poor, dressed in purple and fine linen, or clad in homespun, is entitled. It is a right that should be jealously safeguarded.

DISHONEST PROMOTION.

It seems to be well-nigh impossible for some over-zealous promoters to tell the truth. Even though the truth is good enough, they must stretch it. Some lie deliberately; others content themselves with telling half the truth and suppressing half, so that the hearer or reader gets an entirely incorrect impression. Guilty of these practices are not a few whose standing in the community ought to be a guarantee against such action. They may defend it as necessary, saying that if they told the truth people would not believe it. Persons of that kind are usually rather undesirable clients.

A common method of misrepresentation is for a company with ten to forty acres, of more or less value—perhaps owned, but more often leased on a big royalty—to publish a prospectus filled with glowing stories of the wonderful dividends paid by the Union Oil Company, but without a word as to the relative assets of that big corporation and those of the puny thing which issues the prospectus. The ignorant sucker reads how the Union has paid more millions that he has ever had thousands, perhaps, and he does not get the least hint of the fact that it has land holdings amounting to 235,000 acres or 11,750 times as many as the twenty held by the concern in which he is asked to invest his money, or that the Union has three refineries and the other has none; that the Union has a big fleet of ocean-going tank steamers, barges and river boats of all kinds, wharves and docks not only all over the Pacific Coast of the United States, but in Central and South America and the Hawaiian Islands, and that the dishonest little concern that wants his money has not a ship, a wharf or anything else; that the Union has hundreds of contracts and every facility for marketing, while the little one is wholly dependent upon others to sell a quart of its oil, should it ever have any; in a word, that the Union has everything that the other lacks. The statement as to dividends is generally literally true; nevertheless, the practice is thoroughly dishonest and condemned by all right-minded men in the oil business.

Another practice, becoming popular with a certain class of promoters in the last few months, is that of announcing that the Union paid a dividend of 180 per cent., more or less, in a year. This is simply done in bad faith. It is true that last year the Union paid monthly about this amount, but not in cash. It increased its stock from $10,000,000 to $50,000,000. A special dividend was declared, the company gave its note for the amount and the stockholders immediately paid the amount back for shares of the new stock. The promoter's victim knows nothing of this.

It is not uncommon for a promoter, whose company has not a well nor even a rig, to get pictures of wells of another's property and represent them as his own. Some time ago one of these gentry issued a prospectus in which he showed a picture supposed to be that of a steamship coming up Kern River to load at his property. Kern River is absolutely unnavigable.

Frequently an oil or mining company of shady character seeks to deceive people by taking a name giving the impression that it is connected with some concern whose success and prosperity are well known.

When we consider the ease with which victims can be found for any kind of swindle it seems surprising that crooked promoters go to the trouble of getting any property at all. A case is pending in the Los Angeles courts in which a man claims he was swindled out of $70,000, and his friends out of more money, by a story of a mine of the location of which he had not the remotest idea beyond that it was supposed to be somewhere in a State of the Mexican republic, and whose very existence is alleged to be doubtful.

UNHAPPY EUROPE.

Tennyson knew the conditions of his time and region when he spoke of "nations snarling at each other's heels." That is the perennial condition in Europe. It would look as if the prophecy in the Scriptures as to "wars and rumors of wars" must have had direct reference to Europe for the last 2000 years.

As we cannot understand the animus that provokes this feeling and creates these conditions, neither can Europeans understand our attitude on the western continent, nation toward nation. The latest illustration of this comes in a dispatch from London on Wednesday of this week. England is in a ferment. Why? Because Germany is building up a navy whose purpose is to protect the German merchant marine from aggression on the part of England. The stew in England arises from a fear that if the German navy ever becomes strong enough to cope with that of Great Britain it will be used to destroy the navy under the flag that for "a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze." This uneasiness in England is not a sudden spurt of feeling, not a thing of a day, and therefore not one that will soon pass. The English have been watching the construction of German ships for at least five years with the uneasiness that now is becoming acute. Several times we have been informed that relations were greatly strained between the two great powers and that war might turn out to be imminent. At last the anxiety in England has reached such a point that the theaters are being used to stir up the masses of the people to a general feeling of misgiving and readiness to vote funds and furnish men to destroy the growing German navy. The press in England and in Germany has been used for years to embitter the one people against the other, and thus prepare for a fray regarded as inevitable.

At last the English have become frank. This dispatch of Wednesday morning outlines the situation without any attempt at diplomatic concealment. It is put out in terms so plain that all must understand. Germany is building ships of greater effective power for war, and more of them, than England. The new navy of the continental power is growing more nearly a match for that of the island kingdom. The deduction coolly reached in England is that it is England's duty forthwith to provoke a conflict with her rival, the purpose of which is distinctly stated to be the destruction of the new Teutonic navy.

English statesmen seek to justify their intended attack upon the German navy by quoting the Monroe doctrine covering our dealings with foreign powers. This straining of logic could only happen when prejudice and passion blind reason. Reference is made by the English press to our objecting to Germany's securing a coaling station in the West Indies. It is contended that if we have a right to object to this action on the part of Germany, then England has an equal right to object to Germany building ships. It is seldom that a national policy is expressed in such icy terms. The English statesmen, as reported by the English press, hold that if we had a right to object to a German coaling station in the West Indies, while the German Empire has a right to build all the ships the people will provide money for, yet England has a right to provoke an awful war to destroy these ships which Germany is accorded the right to construct.

But let us take a case here in the West really parallel with the situation existing betw many and England. The United States strongest navy of any power with larg on the Pacific Ocean. Japan is to us a allel to Germany's relative position to The new empire in the Far East is same strenuous efforts to create a navy ours that Germany is to build one equal land's. It would be just as reasonable United States to warn Japan that she her rivalry in naval power with us or sequences in an immediate war whose pur be to destroy her navy root and branch, England to pursue an identical policy to her rival on the other side of the North have no such feeling of misgiving as regard With clear reason we recognize the right power to build as many ships as she can. are afraid of Japan, we clearly recognize is only one course for us to pursue, build ships faster than Japan, and, wh may cost, to keep ahead of our rival in and thus protect ourselves against any aggression on the part of that rival.

As to the Monroe doctrine and our obj Germany procuring a naval station off coasts, there is no parallel between that England's with regard to the German claim a peaceful hegemony among the the New World, and speaking for them 100 years ago that any attempt of any nation to enlarge its holdings on this interfere with the autonomy of any nation continent or in any way to embroil itself domestic affairs, would be looked upon as hostility to the United States. President when he made this doctrine, had in mind long conditions prevailing in Europe, continued down without interruption tion to our day. He had in mind Wash wise advice to the nation just born, phrase that we should avoid "all entangl ances." Washington and Monroe had thought, to safeguard the western conti the awful feuds, prejudices and warlike of the Old World.

The only just course for the British the German Empire is for each power building all the ships they can get struct, and thus in peaceful rivalry against the possibility of a war with the as we are doing in relation to Japan, hope Japan is doing in reference to many has a right, as the English say, many ships as possible, to have as large it can afford. England has for a long claimed as her policy the maintenance equal to those of any other two world. Lately this has been amended is made that England's safety consists a navy as big as any three combined world. That is a matter for the Engl for themselves. If the people are taxed for such an enormous naval one can object. If Germany desires a ment sufficient to protect her growing merce, that is a matter for the Germ for themselves. But the awful conting pressed by this cold-blooded declar British that it is their right to dest provocation, the navy on which the G so set their hearts, is an incompreh policy.

Play.

the place to perform noble directly in front of the grand has been well illustrated by the of the "late unpleasantness"— by the oratorical crusades Mr. Woolwine and other emi- of their attack must have demonstrated to Capt. Fredericks, the District Attorney, that it is much better to be a good showman than a good District Attorney.

Fredericks began his graft prosecution about the time that Tommy Woolwine was reciting Spartacus to the gladiators at the old High School on Friday afternoon.

But unfortunately for Fredericks, "reform" was not then fashionable and besides, he wasn't a good advertiser.

When the District Attorney came into office this county was infested with blind pigs, gambling houses, tough road houses and other "dens of iniquity." They have all gone now and very little has ever been said about it.

Fredericks's system was illustrated in the case of the slot machines. He sent for the owners of the machines to come to his office and quietly notified them that they must get out, and gave them a couple of months in which to close up their affairs.

Then the fight began. Places were raided; property was confiscated and owners were subjected to crushing fines. The programme was repeated with blind pigs; then with road houses. Without any particular burst of virtue and without any whistles blowing, these dumps, although fortified by as strong political influence as any of the protected "joints" in the city, were forced to quit. The financial risk of running dives became too great.

In the case of the fight against the illegal rabbit coursing, the District Attorney made no arrests even. One day, just as the rabbits were about to be turned out, Frank Goings, the manager and a well-known political boss, received a note from the District Attorney.

The note said briefly: "Do not start the dogs." That was all. But the brevity was convincing. Goings crumpled up the note in his pocket and waved his hand to the dog men: "It's all off," he said. "Take your dogs home."

The dogs never ran again in this county.

If Mr. Woolwine had been able to restrain his emotional nature, what happened in the county would undoubtedly have happened in the city. Capt. Fredericks's authority had only been extended to the city prosecutor's office for a short time when Mr. Woolwine broke loose.

Tommy Woolwine speaks dandy pieces, but his recent philippics against the District Attorney seem too heavily freighted with emotion.

HOROSCOPE.

BY COZETTE.

Let rancor not or strife becloud the hour.
In the calm spirit dwells the day's true power.

The moon is in the first quarter and runs farthest north on this eighty-seventh day. Neptune is in conjunction. Cancer is the Zodiacal sign.

Mercury is in trine and benefic aspect with the moon. Mars and Uranus are in opposition and evil.

Mars threatens unreasonable antagonisms, quarrels springing from unexpected and subtle causes and conflict over matters but half understood.

Argue not with friends or relatives over trivial points. It is better to forego the desire to convince, than to arouse combativeness in this period.

Avoid especially arguments about things spiritual or metaphysical.

There is an exceedingly propitious sign over fishes and things of the water for today and tomorrow.

This should prove an excellent day to write letters to friends or relatives. The influences are all favorable for cultivating the pleasures of social intercourse, comradeship and domestic life.

A day when poetry, music and art should soothe the weary mind.

Women with this birthdate will probably be inclined during the twelvemonth to dominate those about them. Let them use generosity as well as commanding personality and the issue will be beneficial.

Men with this birthdate will be in danger of overestimating their ability to control and guide a great undertaking. Their executive talent may be extraordinary, but they will still be the gainers if they heed advice and counsel from their assistants and partners.

The aspect over children born this day is for fighting power and love of work that often leads people under this sign to ruin their nerves and constitution. Plenty of open-air exercise and a wise distribution of work, and play are indicated.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Mayor Stephens must act on the light and telephone rate ordinance Monday and Tuesday, but he gives no intimation as to what he will do.

The committee of local bankers which has investigated the assets of the Consolidated Bank of Los Angeles reported yesterday to the court that it will not undertake to pay off the claims. A receiver will be appointed for the bank by Judge James tomorrow morning.

J. Frank Ware, well-known real estate man, was fined $500 yesterday by Judge Davis for an assault upon Albert Ellis, September 14, last.

AT THE CITY HALL.

AWAIT VERDICT ON MEASURES.

LIGHT AND 'PHONE RATES IN HANDS OF THE MAYOR.

Period in Which He Must Pass on Them Will Expire on the Eve of His Vacating the Office—No Inkling as to What He Will Do With Regard to Signing It.

Mayor Stephens will probably pass judgment on the ordinance fixing rates for electric current for light and power Monday. The ordinance reached him last Friday. On the following day the ordinance fixing telephone rates at a parity also reached him. Thus the ten-day period for the light ordinance expires Monday, and the same period on the telephone ordinance Tuesday. As there is little probability of his turning the office to Mayor-elect Alexander before Wednesday the ordinances will be acted on by him on the last days. These interested are much concerned as to what his decision will be.

Mayor Stephens said yesterday that he has given both large consideration, but has not yet made up his mind what he would do. Being Mayor for two weeks is not as happy a lot as it might be for two months. He came into the office unprepared to pass on these questions, and the process of law will require him to pass on them just on the eve of his retirement. But he says he will do whatever be believes is right without regard to the brevity of his term.

The light ordinance fixes the rate for the year , beginning July 1 at 9 cents per kilowatt hour. Three members of the Council, cicluding Wallace, voted to reduce it to 8, and thus broke the "gentleman's agreement" made in Mayor Harper's office two years ago. Four members voted against the parity of telephone rates, which meant an increase for the Home Telephone Company. In case of a veto on the light ordinance there are enough members to overrule the veto. But as to the telephone ordinance there is not enough to pass it over a veto. The Mayor has not indicated his state of mind one way or the other, but has been counseled by both sides.

The Mayor is getting his affairs ready to turn over his office to Mayor-elect Alexander at any moment. He said yesterday that if the Council completes its canvass Tuesday, he will be ready then. But this is unlikely, as there are always irregularities which must be corrected by summoning the election officers, and this will undoubtedly require a session Wednesday to complete the canvass.

NEWELL'S COUSIN.
MAYOR CHANGES MIND.

If Health Commissioner Newell had not, in his anxiety for the appointment of Virgil Franklin as assistant restaurant inspector, told the other members at a special meeting yesterday that Franklin is his cousin, Mayor Stephens would have voted for Franklin.

Franklin and W. M. Kerr were reported by the Civil Service Commission as the eligibles for this appointment, B. H. McGinley having resigned the office, March 19. Franklin had the highest rating.

"Frankly, Mr. Newell," said Mayor Stephens, "if you had not said that he was your cousin, I would have voted for him, but I do not believe it proper now."

It was stated that Franklin now has a lucrative aqueduct position, but Newell wanted him to have the tender of the inspectorship. The commission decided to postpone action two weeks.

Mayor's Pen Task.

Twenty-eight hundred aqueduct bonds will bear the signature of W. D. Stephens, as Mayor of Los Angeles. They have been excuted by him and the City Clerk, and are ready for delivery. They are all in the denomination of $1000, Class "F," and were authorized by the Council during the past two weeks. There are 4572 bonds yet to be signed, and they will probably bear the signature of Mayor-elect Alexander. Mayor Stephens confessed that writing his signature in duplicate, without variations, 2800 times, is a hard day's work as Mayor any old time.

TAKES IT AS A JOKE.

Collector of Customs, Charged With Speed-Ordinance Violation, Says He Has an Alibi.

On a charge of violating the traffic ordinance, Conrey W. Pendleton, collector of customs, was in Justice Chambers' Police Court, yesterday morning, upon complaint of Frank Abbott, crossing officer at Third and Broadway.

Abbott appeared in court yesterday morning and when the case was called he stated that he had told a man to be in court, and that the man had promised to come on time. He did not know the man's name, but had his automobile number.

The number corresponded to the tag on a machine owned by Pendleton, and the collector of customs was there. He took the affair as a joke and stated that he had a strong alibi in that he had been playing dominoes in the California Club at the time he was supposed to be violating the traffic ordinance on Third street. He was released on his own recognizance to appear for trial next Thursday.

BURBANK'S FLOWER CREATIONS.

Through the Santa Rosa Chamber of Commerce, the Owl Drug Company of this city has closed a contract with Luther Burbank, the famous plant wizard, for the exclusive sale, in Los Angeles and Pasadena, of the seeds of twelve varieties of his greatest flower creations. It is understood that each package of seeds will bear the autograph seal of Mr. Burbank, as a guarantee of genuineness.

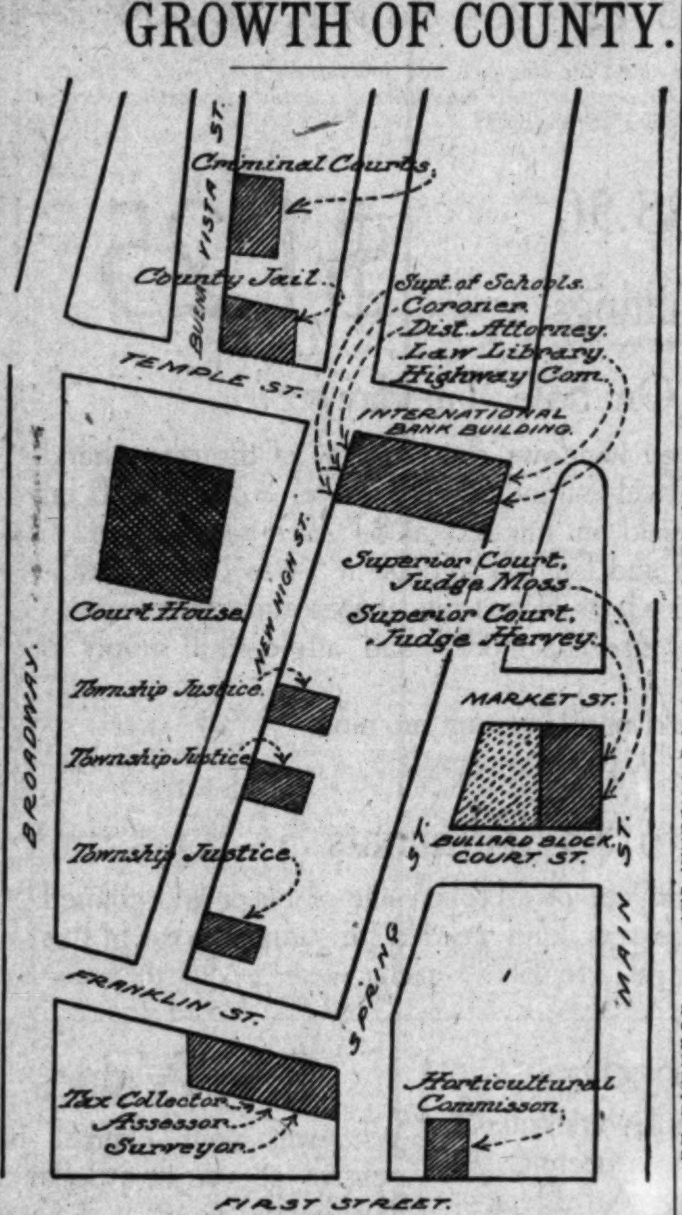
COSTLY EXPANSION.

RENTS SHOW GREAT GROWTH OF COUNTY.



Los Angeles County as an Office Renter.

The diagram illustrates how the officials are scattered, because of expanding business, outside the county's legal home, the Courthouse.

BECAUSE of the county's great growth, and the consequent increase in official business, the taxpayers are obliged to pay $26,287.96 rent for offices outside of the Courthouse. This financial burden must be borne for two years, or until the Hall of Records is completed.

Most of the apartments rented are in ramshackle buildings, and are far from being in good repair, but the sums received for their use are none the smaller.

At one time the county officials were scattered all over the city, but at present all have quarters within a comparatively small area, bounded by Main and First to Temple street and Broadway. The largest group is in the International Bank building, and the next, in the old two-story structure at Spring and Franklin streets.

The Courthouse now contains only some of the Superior courtrooms and the offices of the Treasurer, Auditor, Recorder and Clerk.

In the International Bank building are the Law Library, paying a rental of $400 a month; the District Attorney and deputies, paying $250; Superintendent of schools, paying $333.33; Highway Commission, paying $180, and the Coroner, paying $80, a total of $1243.33.

The Tax Collector, Assessor and Surveyor are at the southwest corner of Franklin and Spring streets. The county pays $1300 a month for the use of that building, which is ancient and not fire-proof.

Pending the completion of the Criminal Court building, Judges Moss and Hervey of the Superior Court are trying cases in the Bullard block. The rent is $195 a month.

The Horticulaural Commission is housed in the Equitable Savings Bank building at First and Spring streets, at a cost of $92.50 a month. Three township justice courts are located on the east side of New High street, between Franklin and Temple, and cost the county $50, $60 and $75 a month, respectively, and the rent for a fourth justice court, at Temple and New High streets, is $75 a month.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

RECEIVER NOW TO BE NAMED.

UNFAVORABLE REPORT ON THE CONSOLIDATED BANK.

Committee of Financiers Decides Assets Insufficient to Pay Depositors and Other Creditors in Full. No Information as to Who Will Have Charge of Institution.

The matter of the Consolidated Bank of Los Angeles will be called before Judge James tomorrow, and a receiver named for the defunct concern.

The Committee of Bankers—M. S. Hellman, W. H. Holliday and J. E. Fishburn—that on the 11th inst. accepted the tender to inquire into the assets of the bank, with a view to providing for the payment of the debts, amounting in round numbers to about $48,000, made a report to the court yesterday, that disposes of any further proceedings in the line of procrastination on the part of the president W. H. Carlson, and his attempts to float the enterprise.

The report is that, after an examination of the Consolidated Bank, the committee does not wish to undertake the taking of the assets of the institution and other securities offered for the purpose of paying depositors and other creditors the amounts due them. It is further stated that the committee cannot recommend that any one else should do so, deeming the assets and securities are not sufficient to pay claims in full.

At the time this committee was named, President Carlson made a stipulation that if the assets of the bank were not sufficient to pay the claims against it, he would no longer oppose the naming of a receiver.

It is stated, in an unofficial way, that the committee found little in the way of assets, except the $8000 which has been for some time in the hands of Evan Lewis, under the orders of the court.

There is no information as to who will be named as receiver, but there are several aspirants for the position. One is Lewis, who has had charge of the institution since the failure.

MARITAL TROUBLES.
STORIES IN WITNESS BOX.

Frank Deardorff, an Ohio man, who said he was married to Blanche Peters in Columbus in 1902, was granted a divorce by Judge James. Deardorff testified that his wife left him in August, 1907, because he remonstrated with her for keeping late hours with other men, taking long rides and indulging in other dissipations of which he did not approve. She left their home one sunny afternoon, and left no word. He said he had not seen her for almost two years.

The pictures thrown on the screen in the story of domestic infelicity recited by Lucy Harrison, in the action against her husband, Robert Harrison, covered their married life in Vancouver, B. C., New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Los Angeles. They had been married sixteen years, and in all that time he had done nothing to assist in the support of the family, although the woman is the mother of seven children. In New York Mrs. Harrison tried to run a boarding-house so as to make both ends meet, but Harrison would get drunk and drive away the customers. She wanted the divorce, she declared, largely for the reason that she did not want him to interfere with her boarding-house industry in Los Angeles. She was allowed a decree.

For several years M. T. Owens was a prosperous plumber in the city of Long Beach. But his habits were bad, business dropped away, and on the 26th of August, 1907, he left his shop and his family, going to parts unknown. In a few days after his departure he wrote a letter to a young man in his employ advising him to turn the place over to the creditors. Judge Monroe thought the wife, Margaret Owens, was entitled to a decree of separation.

George W. Hancock, who testified that some years ago he was a prosperous member of the Chicago Board of Trade, was divorced from Gertrude L. Hancock by Judge Monroe. The husband declared that when he was overtaken by financial difficulties he asked his wife to move into less pretentious apartments, with a view to reducing the household expenses, but this she refused to do, and left him. This was in June, 1899. He has not seen or heard of her since.

The story of Allie S. Hatton against Jesse C. Hatton was simply a recital of extreme cruelty and non-support on the part of the husband. The wife was allowed the custody of the child born of the union, a little girl, who smiled at the court while mamma was giving her testimony. The decree was allowed by Judge Monroe.

ALL-NIGHT SESSION.
BRINGS VERDICT OF ASSAULT.

The jury in the case of Agnes Mathewson, charged with making a deadly assault upon Rosie Lopez, a Mexican woman, returned to Judge Willis's court yesterday morning at 10 o'clock with a verdict of simple assault, accompanied with a recommendation of mercy. In the absence of Judge Willis, Judge James received the verdict, and sentence will follow Wednesday. The jury was in session all Friday night, and the verdict was a compromise, a majority of its members favoring the acquittal of the woman.

Judge James ordered Mrs. Mathewson released on $500 bail, the same amount given at the time of her arraignment, but after waiting several hours, and no one coming to the rescue, she was remanded to jail.

NEW WAY, THE ONLY WAY.

Recent Discovery, Dose Seven Drops, a Success.

For years past sufferers from asthma have tried smokes, sprays, inhalers, douches, changes of climate and similar methods, without success, until the fact was established by the most prominent medical authorities that asthma is a constitutional disease and must be treated accordingly, if cure is expected. The discovery of the famous specific, ascatco, was the result of the efforts of a celebrated European specialist, who studied asthma on the theory that it is a constitutional ailment. His success is evolving a postive and permanent cure by the use of ascatco in doses of seven drops is so well known that the demand for it in Los Angeles as a remedy for the large number of those afflicted with asthma has made it necessary for the Austrian Laboratory to supply the Owl Drug Co. drug stores with the preparation, so as to enable sufferers in this city to obtain it without inconvenience. Ascatco is prepared in two sizes—the 50-cent size and the $2 size, which is sufficient for a month's treatment.

The Austrian Laboratory, 32 West 25th street, New York City, will send free an experimental treatment to all who write to them for it.

FINED FOR ASSAULT.
RANCH SHOOTING AFFRAY.

J. Frank Ware, a real estate man of this city, was fined $500 yesterday by Judge Davis, in Department Twelve, for making an assault upon Albert J. Ellis, September 14, last. The information against Ware charged assault with a deadly weapon.

The trouble accurred at a ranch of Ware's near Altadena, when he shot Ellis in the right leg because the latter insisted upon going over his lands in spite of the signs posted thereon. Mrs. Ware warned Ellis away, but he paid no attention to her. Then Ware, taking his gun, went after the alleged intruder. The shooting followed. Ware asserted that the weapon was accidentally discharged.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

INCORPORATIONS. The following incorporations were filed yesterday: Cleveland Oil Company, capital stock $300,000; G. G. Gillette, Curtis L. Knight, William Jennings Batchelder, Isidore B. Dockweiler and Frank P. Jenal, incorporators. Associated Supply Company, capital stock $500,000; W. S. Porter, O. Scribner, F. E. Clohan, J. A. Chanslor and F. H. Buck, incorporators.

JUDGE WILLIS ABSENT. Judge Willis was not on the bench yesterday in Department One, on account of the death of his uncle, E. J. Martin, which occurred at the family home, No. 3011 Altura street, yesterday morning, from Bright's disease. The deceased came from Coggon, Iowa, about two years ago. The funeral will take place Monday, and Judge Willis will not be on duty until the next day.

ASKS FOR DAMAGES. Edward Stuart brought an action against the Union Pacific Railway Company in the Superior Court yesterday, asking for damages in $925. He alleges that on the 26th of March, 1907, he shipped a carload of twenty horses from Fremont, Neb., to San Francisco, and that three of the animals were lost and never delivered.

BOND CASE DECISION SOON. The papers in the school bond injunction case were sent to Judge B. F. Bledsoe, at San Bernardino, yesterday, and it is expected a decision will be sent down by the court the latter part of the week. Before leaving for his home Judge Bledsoe said the matter is so important to the people of Los Angeles that he will reach a conclusion as soon as possible.

GUARDIANSHIP. The application for the appointment of a guardian for the person and affairs of Ira Stephens, whose son, Iva Stephens, failed in his effort to have the old man declared insane, will be called in Judge Rives's court tomorrow morning. It is understood the new wife of Stephens will make a strong fight against the appointment. She is of the opinion that she is perfectly able to handle both her husband and his money.

LONG BEACH MEN FINED. T. J. Stroup, employed by R. J. Parker; Sam Hubbell, employed by H. E. Smith, and L. I. Olson, employed by E. H. Jackson, were each fined $20 by Justice Summerfield yesterday for violating the State pharmacy law in Long Beach. Parker and Jackson, the proprietors, were fined $25. Smith is out of the city and will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

YOUNG ACTRESS.

Identity of Successful Girl Student of Plays Who Has Part in "Peter Pan."

There has been a deal of speculation among theater-goers as to the identity of Miss Miriam Meridith, one of the actresses in the popular play, "Peter Pan," which has just finished its third week at the Burbank Theater. It is not generally known that she is a Los Angeles girl, but such is a fact. Her real name is Miriam Woodward. She is a daughter of Prof. Sherman M. Woodward of the National Irrigation and Drainage Service, stationed at Washington, D. C., and a granddaughter of ex-Gov. Hughes of Arizona, in which Territory she was born. A large part of her life has been spent in traveling with her parents, and the rest of the time she has resided in this city. This has been her first appearance before the public, although she has acted in her home since she was a baby. She had taken but few dramatic lessons, and those from a local teacher. She has great natural dramatic talent, and has been devoted to the stage. She has dramatized all the books she has ever read.

In "Peter Pan" she has had the part of Curley, and this, while only a minor part, she has rendered so well that she won the hearts of those who saw her. Miss Merideth has a most striking appearance, with large brown eyes and abundant golden brown hair. In her part of Curley she made up into a handsome, wholesome boy.

She has received several flattering offers to continue on the stage, but has not accepted any of them, as they necessitated her leaving her home. Her friends predict for her a brilliant career. She is the same young lady who, during the political campaign last fall, organized, among her school mates, a band of faithful Democratic girls, pledged to pray daily for hard rain in New York State on election day, in order to keep the Republican farmers there from going to the polls to vote for Taft.

Profits in Magazine Publishing.

Frank A. Munsey started in the magazine business with a capital of $40; his business now pays a profit of $1,000,000 a year. The stock of the S. S. McClure Company is worth $1,000 a share. The income of the Curtis Company from the Ladies' Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post is nearly $6,000,000 a year. The annual income from the Cosmopolitan Magazine is about $1,500,000. The property is now owned by William Randolph Hearst, who bought it from John Brisben Walker. Mr. Walker had made several fortunes from the magazine. The profits of Everybody's magazine are estimated as being as high as $800,000 a year. Other American magazines are all large profit earners. A well known English author about ten years ago accepted $2,000 worth of McClure's stock in payment for a story; recently he sold this stock for $30,000. During the time when he held the stock it paid him dividends of $14,000, making a total of $34,000 cash for the $2,000 worth of fiction manuscript. If you had been able to secure an investment of only $100 in Munsey's magazine, that investment would now be paying an income of $1,000 every year, and would be worth at least $10,000 in cash. Those who had the opportunity to become interested with magazines when they first offered their stock to the public have become wealthy.

Greatest Sale Ever Planned

The Pinnacle of Value Giving Reached in These Offerings for Tomorrow

THE 5th STREET STORE

"Go the Limit," Was the Imperative Command from the Head of the House

Monday we begin one of the greatest sales in our history—an event that dominates your Easter buying not alone by the sheer force of low prices, but mainly by the high standard of the merchandise involved. In a progressive institution such as this, the volume of business must ever be on the increase. A year ago at this time, we began the sale of the bankrupt Central Department Store stock. To surpass the sales record made then, we organized this sale. No body of men ever got together with more singleness of purpose than those who had in hand its arrangement. Conscious of the fact that you were watching us, and expected better values than those of a year ago---confident that we could secure them and surpass last year's sales record, we began to plan months ago. Fortune favored us from the beginning. Never before were we able to secure such vast quantities of merchandise at such extremely low prices. In consequence, we have an array of bargains without a parallel in this city. values you'll be glad to share. Every item in this ad. tells a story of economy. Don't miss any of them. Be here early tomorrow.

THE EXPECTED.

ANTI-SALOON FIGHT COMING.

Recall Manager Graham Says That's Next Thing.

Declares 'Twill Be Issue of December Campaign.

Significant Speech at Meet of the City Club.

A fight for a "dry town" in the next municipal campaign was the post-election gauntlet thrown down by S. C. Graham, chairman of the Recall Campaign Committee, at the City Club yesterday. Graham spoke for the recall manager, and discussed their accomplishments, particularly the election of George Alexander as Mayor, and his address was enthusiastically applauded.

He touched the liquor question without indirection. He declared that in every fight for "reform" the liquor element had been lined up with the forces against the reform movement. The "reform" element must fight the liquor element every time, and must count it hostile in any future movement.

"It might as well be understood," said Graham, "that we must fight the saloons and the liquor interests every time, and if that is the case, why let it be a real fight on this issue next.

This was also wildly applauded. The statement of Graham merely confirms what has been the suspicion throughout, that the purpose of the reform-recall agitation has for its ultimate object the driving out of licensed liquor selling. Ten days before the recall election the liquor interests were given to understand that if they did not take to the woods or aid the recall forces there would be punishment in store. It was even said that an attempt was made to frame a deal with the recall campaign managers whereby the liquor and liberal elements would cease fighting. In line with this were the declarations of Alexander that he was not to attempt to make the city "dry," but that he believed in licensed traffic so long as the people vote for it. He repeated this declaration after his election Friday night.

But it is pointed out that he was careful to say he was for license "as long as the people vote for it." This is now regarded by politicians of the liberal element as meaning nothing more than that he is for license as long as he may have to be under the law.

Mayor-elect Alexander was the guest of honor at the City Club luncheon yesterday, and was received with great [illegible]eering. He didn't say much. His [illegible] sentences were to apprise the [illegible]rship that he had appointed [illegible]G. Henderson, secretary of the [illegible], his private secretary. [illegible]is is in line with the char[illegible] the appointments I shall [illegible]he. [illegible]s a court stenographer. [illegible]he stenographer of the [illegible] spent five months in[illegible] alleged "vice protec[illegible] private secretary to [illegible]hen he was Governor [illegible] said he had no other [illegible]ake or discuss. In [illegible]he had not thought [illegible]pointees. He expects [illegible]rs of the Fire, Po[illegible]th commissions will [illegible]ations and then he [illegible] he wishes to, per[illegible] to continue. Ex[illegible]ers of these commis[illegible] were uniformly that [illegible]n, as has been cus[illegible]es of administration, [illegible]r commissions consti[illegible]r's immediate official [illegible]ng, ex-officio, chairman [illegible] other commissions are [illegible] to resign, as they are ap[illegible] longer periods and always [illegible]

[illegible] Mayor-elect will not talk about [illegible]ssible appointees, others will. [illegible]g the recallers it was regarded as [illegible]tain that Thomas Lee Woolwine, who lit the match that started the recall conflagration, will become a member of the Police Commission. Thomas E. Gibbon, once a Police Commissioner, is talked of as another probable appointee, though it is said Gibbon does not want to serve. Woolwine and Gibbon are Democrats (silk,)and if they should be named it might be gall and wormwood for Joe Simons and Maj. W. R. Burke (also silk,) who are looked upon by the recallers as being material for the Police Commission. R. W. Burnham's name was mentioned as a possible Republican appointee. Others expect that the resignation of E. B. Tufts, Republican, one of Harper's last appointments, would not be accepted by the new Mayor.

Of course a new Police Commission means a new chief, and Chief Broadhead is understood to have cleaned out his desk and made himself ready for a change. He has been chief only two months. Broadhead will not say what he will do, but members of the Police Commission believe his resignation will accompany theirs. The recallers predict that it will be accepted.

They also predict that when it has been accepted, Michael Collins, a recall Democrat of the Ninth Ward, will be made Broadhead's successor. No other name has been seriously mentioned in recall circles, though occasionally those of Lieut. C. E. Dixon, in charge of the East Side substation, and S. L. Brown, chief of the secret service force of Dist.-Atty. Fredericks, are heard. If any man on the police force is chosen Dixon has the best chance.

The secretiveness preserved about the plans of Alexander when he takes office is taken to mean that he intends to play politics for the benefit of the non-partisan organization in the next municipal fight. That is why it is announced by his managers that resignations are expected. Removals might invite hostility from the Council, which must consent to them.

In the distribution of patronage the recallers are urging that Alexander choose Fred C. Wheeler, the Socialist candidate who so nearly defeated him, for one of the commissions, thus intending to gain the aid of the 2000 Socialist votes in the non-partisan campaign. The Socialists do not receive this talk with approval.

NEWSPAPER MAN DEAD.

C. E. Washburn, a newspaper man, died of typhoid fever at the California Hospital Thursday afternoon and was buried in Rosedale Cemetery yesterday afternoon. Services were conducted at the home of Edwin Pope, No. 1210 Dewey avenue, by Rev. Dr. Henry of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. J. M. Schaefle of the Pico Heights Congregational Church. Mr. Washburn was a native of Maine and had resided here a number of years, during which time he was employed on the editorial staffs of several papers. He was 42 years of age and leaves a widow.

STOUT WOMEN IN THE Nemo TRIPLE-STRIP "NEW AMERICAN SHAPE"

CAN WEAR
Directoire Gowns with
Grace and Comfort

The Nemo "New American Shape" has been adopted by London, Paris and Berlin, and its influence is already shown in recent changes in Paris modes and the statement that—

"In 1909 the waist-line will resume its normal position."

The Nemo "New American Shape" is simply this:

Extreme Directoire slenderness with the tapering waist retained.

This effect can be produced only by the new Nemos for 1909. The long, barrel-like corsets which Paris has made and America has copied, can crush your figure, if you pull hard enough; but it's misery to wear them, and they won't let you sit down.

Nemo Corsets for 1909 give you absolute comfort and the ultra-fashionable figure.

The illustration shows one of the new Self-Reducing Corsets—No. 405, at $4.00. Its long skirt produces extreme reduction of back, hips and upper limbs when you're standing. When you sit down, the pressure is released, and you are as comfortable as though you had no corset on.

The new Relief Bands add greatly to the hygienic value of this corset. They are extra-wide, follow the convexity of the form, and give complete comfort by firmly supporting the abdomen from underneath.

This is only one of the Nemo Specialties for 1909. Later we'll tell you of others equally important.

SELF-REDUCING CORSETS

At $3.50 For short stout figures—No. 314; and No. 318 (with Flatning-Back). For tall stout figures—No. 312; and No. 320 (with Flatning-Back).

At $4.00 For tall stout figures—No. 405. For short stout figures (sizes 24 to 42)—No. 404. Both have the new Nemo Relief Bands.

At $5.00 For tall stout figures—No. 516 (white mercerized brocade) and No. 517 (white French coutil). For short stout figures—No. 518 (white mercerized brocade).

[illegible]ND COMMENT.

[illegible]eneral and encourag[illegible]t in the real estate [illegible] the report that [illegible]es to be almost [illegible]erators. The im[illegible]ond city prop[illegible]uburban, and [illegible]e towns, and [illegible] lands, where [illegible]ed much the [illegible] is also very [illegible]nent will be [illegible] steady. It [illegible]pposition for [illegible] very little [illegible] about it.

[illegible]ons prevailing [illegible]petent to guess [illegible] months past. [illegible]g improvement [illegible]few. Liquidation [illegible]ed to a considera[illegible] end of last year. [illegible]t had righted itself [illegible] being more plentiful [illegible] and interest rates cor[illegible]y easy. The inflow of new [illegible] was scarcely checked by [illegible]epressed business conditions of [illegible]teen months following the crisis. [illegible]inter brought more tourists than [illegible] ever known to come here before, [illegible] the spring is following with an [illegible]ally large number of home-seek[illegible] coming on the low fares estab[illegible]d by the railroads for the current [illegible] days. The tourist army is es[illegible] to have numbered 100,000, and [illegible] of the settlers is expected to run [illegible]mething like 50,000. With these [illegible]ions prevailing, and added to [illegible] a little easier prices for skilled [illegible] and some kinds of building ma[illegible], naturally all look to increased [illegible] in building, and that was [illegible]arily preceded by an increased [illegible] for real estate.

[illegible] Backward.

[illegible] eighteen months since the finan[illegible] crisis fell upon the world. We [illegible] been going through a great specu[illegible] boom in real estate just pre[illegible] to the collapse, and thousands [illegible] were caught with a heavy [illegible] of real estate on their hands only [illegible] paid for. In many instances [illegible] installments had been paid and [illegible] only one-quarter of the pur[illegible] price. The mortgage indebted[illegible] the county of Los Angeles and [illegible] money due under contracts for [illegible] purchase of real estate ran to [illegible] sums. Those who had bought [illegible]ly for investment purposes [illegible] generally all right. They had [illegible] ahead and seen where the [illegible] for future payments was to [illegible] from, and these kept to their [illegible], met their obligations, paid [illegible] getting clear titles to their hold[illegible]. But the speculative plunger was [illegible] a sad plight. This class of buyer [illegible] gone into the market with the expectation of never paying out on his contracts or lifting his notes secured by mortgage. His hopes were all based upon the prospect of transfer[illegible] his equity to some new specula[illegible] at an advance over his price, thus [illegible] him a profit. These expecta[illegible] all came to naught with the [illegible], and threw a good deal of real [illegible] on the market for whatever [illegible] be got for the equity.

[illegible] and Comment Advice.

The editor of the Times real estate [illegible] saw immediately the grav[illegible] of the situation. What was to be [illegible] was a general stampede on [illegible] part of holders, throwing their [illegible] indiscriminately on a droop[illegible] market, and thus forcing prices [illegible] unheard-of level. The advice of the department was prompt and positive that no panic should be permitted to take possession of the holders of real estate. It was pointed out that our city lots and country property all had great intrinsic value, that it would be the part of wisdom for all who could to struggle along under the load, however heavy and inconvenient it might be, with the sure expectation of better times in the future. Recognizing the certain fact that many would be forced to let go, the department advised those intending to buy real property in this section for investment purposes to do it promptly. When the crisis came values necessarily settled down to the lowest level likely to be reached because the necessity of letting go was felt by the greatest number of holders. Month by month, as time passed and the financial situation became a little relaxed, the Fact and Comment columns still urged holders who could do so to keep hold, and those who desired to invest to do it at once. It has been very generally recognized by those operating in real estate in all ways that the policy of the department was wise. Those who bought promptly after the collapse find their holdings are more valuable now than when they put their money into the property. Those who were able to keep control of their holdings find a better market today than a year ago.

Each passing month brought an easier money market, a little lower cost of building material and skilled labor, a little cheaper money, and an increasing demand for property for investment purposes. This caused the market to become firmer, and enabled those forced to let go to realize a little more for their equities than if all had rushed madly in panic fear into the market at the first. The buyers who hesitated in the earliest days of the panic, expecting vainly a more easy market than prevailed then, found gradually the situation becoming more firm against them, and fearing to

TOWARD SETTING SUN.

REACHING EVER TO THE WEST.

MARVELOUS GROWTH OF CITY SURPRISE TO MANY.

Great Improvements on Wilshire Boulevard West of Vermont. Transportation Facilities Equal the Best—All Conveniences Installed, and Many Fine Homes Erected.

With the recent opening and improvement of Wilshire boulevard from Vermont avenue west to Arlington, a development of residence property started, which in scope, character and rapidity of home building growth today far surpasses the expectations of the most sanguine.

Many fine homes of our best citizens now adorn Wilshire boulevard, while many sales of the choice corners promise greater things for the future.

In transportation facilities the Wilshire Westlake section equals any of the high-class residence districts. The extensions of the West Sixth, West Fourth and the West Ninth-street car lines give three parallel lines, and a splendid service, the West Sixth-street line practically forming the connecting link of the city with Hollywood.

Sunday afternoons the crowding of the West Sixth-street cars, and the fact that very few of the passengers alight before reaching it attest the interest shown, and the growing popularity of the section. These cars unload between Normandie and Western avenue, in the center of building activity. Going back, standing room is at a premium, and passengers waiting from Sunset Park into the city wonder and inquire the cause.

One of the sightliest and best-improved stretches on Wilshire lies between Normandie and Western avenue. On the northwest corner of Jasmine and Wilshire is the home of W. D. Longyear, on the northwest corner of Kingsley, that of George F. Getty, and on the southwest corner of Harvard, that of George Chaffee. The new home of J. W Bowen occupies the southeast corner of Irolo street.

To the south of Wilshire boulevard, between Normandie avenue and Harvard boulevard, is a subdivision where building activity is at fever heat. This is Wilshire Harvard Heights, owned by the Forrester Improvement Company. One year ago in this tract there were only three houses. Today there are sixty-three houses built, and under construction, costing more than $260,000. E. A. Forrester & Sons, Inc., agents for this subdivision, report sales of $100,000, all made within the past thirty days.

[illegible]orrester Improvement Company has moved 200,000 yards of earth, graded, graveled and oiled three miles of streets, put in six miles of cement walks, curb and gutters, 1900 feet of concrete storm drain, seven feet in diameter, and set out 1500 shade trees, and at its own expense brought water, gas, electricity, phones and street-car lines into the district. The water supply coming from the new covered reservoir at Ivanhoe, with a capacity of 47,000,000 gallons, has been fully described in the columns of The Times. It is the purest domestic water supplied by the city. Expenditures for improvements on Wilshire Harvard Heights to date exceed $135,000.

Three years ago, this territory, then a dairy ranch, was scarcely accessible in rainy whether. The road was rough, hilly and narrow, teams were often stuck in the mud, and a culvert, opposite what is now Alexandria avenue, was generally impassible. In earlier days this subdivision was a part of a sheep ranch, owned by Germain Pellissier, a Frenchman, one of the early settlers of Los Angeles. Pellissier bought the former owner's flock of sheep and good will, and the land was "thrown in for good measure." This bonus alone has made a millionaire's estate.

Realty Firm Reports Sales of High-Grade Properties—Improvements Planned.

L. Guggenheim has purchased from J. E. Carr, through A. T. Jergins & Co., the eleven-room, two-story dwelling at No. 731 Beacon street, on lot 50x150 feet to twenty-foot alley, for $12,500 cash. A. T. Jergins has purchased from Gus H. Bauer, through the same firm, the property at No. 1228 West Ninth street, improved with three buildings, lot 75x175 feet, for $20,000.

W. E. Stephens has sold to Emma F. Thornton, through the same company, on the west side of Harvard boulevard, 150 feet south of San Mareno street, 48x136 feet, for $1000. E. F. Thornton sold E. Bradford, through the same agency, a lot 50x150 feet on the west side of Harvard boulevard, between Eighth and Ninth streets, for an consideration of $1300 cash. The purchaser is preparing plans and will erect a two-story house to cost $2000. W. O. Lewis has sold to Mrs. D. E. Loomis, through the same agency, a lot 60x150 feet on the east side of Arapahoe, between Tenth and San Mareno streets, for a consideration of $3000. Mrs. Loomis intends to improve this lot with a house to cost $10,000, to be occupied as a home.

EASTERNERS INTERESTED.

Apple Lands and City Lots at Beaumont Sold to Newcomers for Improvement—Water Development.

Evidence of the widespread demand for Southern California fruit lands is furnished by purchases during the week by eastern people of fifty acres of Beaumont apple lands and several city lots for $7350. Most of the acreage was taken in five and ten-acre parcels. All of the land carries water rights and includes the delivery of water to the line of the property.

Beaumont's water development is assuming a constantly widening scope. Over four miles of steel pipes will be required to lay the latest unit of the water system. Each five-acre tract will be reached by a steel main with pure mountain water under fifty to eighty pounds pressure. This will also obviate the necessity of settling cisterns such as are necesary in some irrigation districts where the water in the ditches is heavily impregnated with mud and silt.

Contracts for planting trees have been awarded by Miss J. H. Street, Highland Park, Ill., five acres of pears and apples; Dales & Karstadt, ten acres of apples and cherries; W. E. Baker, twenty acres of apples; C. Wimpress, twenty-five acres of apples. The Beaumont Land Company's orchards have been extended to sixty acres, with over 5000 apple, pear and peach trees. Strawberry plants set two months ago are already in bloom, and despite the recent cold snap no harm has been done to fruit trees in blossom.

Artistic Homes Will Grace Mt. Washington

A. C. SMITH.

[illegible] the present home-building development on the [illegible] of beautiful Mt. Washington is any criterion [illegible] the future—the future is bright indeed. Home after [illegible] is being erected on this commanding eminence, [illegible] plan after plan is being drawn for homes, the [illegible] of which will soon begin.

[illegible] Washington—nearly 1,000 feet above the city's [illegible]—enjoys absolute freedom from fog, frost, dust [illegible] smoke. Eliminating these disagreeable elements [illegible] an almost ideal residential condition.

[illegible] stately and picturesque Sierras, including snow[illegible] Old Baldy, Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson, loom up vividly before the Mt. Washington resident in the full glory of their rugged grandeur. The beautiful Eagle Rock, San Fernando and Cahuenga valleys present a charming vista.

Practically all of Los Angeles may be seen from this splendid viewpoint. The view at night is a truly magnificent spectacle—the lights of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Glendale and other surrounding towns literally carpeting the earth with a myriad of stars. Mt. Washington is destined to become a veritable show place of the art of landscape gardening. The undulating character of the land lends itself splendidly to artistic landscape effects. The development of Mt. Washington is attracting wide attention. Every sunny day throngs of visitors investigate the development and enjoy the beauties of Los Angeles' finest living place.

ANTI-SALOON FIGHT COMING.

Recall Manager Graham Says That's Next Thing.

Declares 'Twill Be Issue of December Campaign.

Significant Speech at Meet of the City Club.

A fight for a "dry town" in the next municipal campaign was the post-election gauntlet thrown down by S. C. Graham, chairman of the Recall Campaign Committee, at the City Club yesterday. Graham spoke for the recall manager, and discussed their accomplishments, particularly the election of George Alexander as Mayor, and his address was enthusiastically applauded.

He touched the liquor question without indirection. He declared that in every fight for "reform" the liquor element had been lined up with the forces against the reform movement. The "reform" element must fight the liquor element every time, and must count it hostile in any future movement.

"It might as well be understood," said Graham, "that we must fight the saloons and the liquor interests every time, and if that is the case, why let it be a real fight on this issue next.

This was also wildly applauded. The statement of Graham merely confirms what has been the suspicion throughout, that the purpose of the reform-recall agitation has for its ultimate object the driving out of licensed liquor selling. Ten days before the recall election the liquor interests were given to understand that if they did not take to the woods or aid the recall forces there would be punishment in store. It was even said that an attempt was made to frame a deal with the recall campaign managers whereby the liquor and liberal elements would cease fighting. In line with this were the declarations of Alexander that he was not to attempt to make the city "dry," but that he believed in licensed traffic so long as the people vote for it. He repeated this declaration after his election Friday night.

But it is pointed out that he was careful to say he was for license "as long as the people vote for it." This is now regarded by politicians of the liberal element as meaning nothing more than that he is for license as long as he may have to be under the law.

Mayor-elect Alexander was the guest of honor at the City Club luncheon yesterday, and was received with great cheering. He didn't say much. His first sentences were to apprise the membership that he had appointed Frank G. Henderson, secretary of the City Club, his private secretary.

"And this is in line with the character of all the appointments I shall make," said he.

Henderson is a court stenographer. He was also the stenographer of the grand jury that spent five months investigating the alleged "vice protection." He was private secretary to Henry T. Gage when he was Governor of California.

The Mayor-elect said he had no other appointment to make or discuss. In fact, he declared, he had not thought of his possible appointees. He expects that all the members of the Fire, Police, Park and Health commissions will tender their resignations and then he will accept those he wishes to, permitting the others to continue. Expressions of members of these commissions yesterday were uniformly that they would resign, as has been customary in changes of administration, because the four commissions constitute the Mayor's immediate official family, he being, ex-officio, chairman of each. The other commissions are not expected to resign, as they are appointed for longer periods and always hold over.

If the Mayor-elect will not talk about his possible appointees, others will. Among the recallers it was regarded as certain that Thomas Lee Woolwine, who lit the match that started the recall conflagration, will become a member of the Police Commission. Thomas E. Gibbon, once a Police Commissioner, is talked of as another probable appointee, though it is said Gibbon does not want to serve. Woolwine and Gibbon are Democrats (silk,)and if they should be named it might be gall and wormwood for Joe Simons and Maj. W. R. Burke (also silk,) who are looked upon by the recallers as being material for the Police Commission. R. W. Burnham's name was mentioned as a possible Republican appointee. Others expect that the resignation of E. B. Tufts, Republican, one of Harper's last appointments, would not be accepted by the new Mayor.

Of course a new Police Commission means a new chief, and Chief Broadhead is understood to have cleaned out his desk and made himself ready for a change. He has been chief only two months. Broadhead will not say what he will do, but members of the Police Commission believe his resignation will accompany theirs. The recallers predict that it will be accepted.

They also predict that when it has been accepted, Michael Collins, a recall Democrat of the Ninth Ward, will be made Broadhead's successor. No other name has been seriously mentioned in recall circles, though occasionally those of Lieut. C. E. Dixon, in charge of the East Side substation, and S. L. Brown, chief of the secret service force of Dist.-Atty. Fredericks, are heard. If any man on the police force is chosen Dixon has the best chance.

The secretiveness preserved about the plans of Alexander when he takes office is taken to mean that he intends to play politics for the benefit of the non-partisan organization in the next municipal fight. That is why it is announced by his managers that resignations are expected. Removals might invite hostility from the Council, which must consent to them.

In the distribution of patronage the recallers are urging that Alexander choose Fred C. Wheeler, the Socialist candidate who so nearly defeated him, for one of the commissions, thus intending to gain the aid of the 2000 Socialist votes in the non-partisan campaign. The Socialists do not receive this talk with approval.

NEWSPAPER MAN DEAD.

C. E. Washburn, a newspaper man, died of typhoid fever at the California Hospital Thursday afternoon and was buried in Rosedale Cemetery yesterday afternoon. Services were conducted at the home of Edwin Pope, No. 1210 Dewey avenue, by Rev. Dr. Henry of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. J. M. Schaefle of the Pico Heights Congregational Church. Mr. Washburn was a native of Maine and had resided here a number of years, during which time he was employed on the editorial staffs of several papers. He was 42 years of age and leaves a widow.

STOUT WOMEN IN THE Nemo TRIPLE-STRIP "NEW AMERICAN SHAPE"

CAN WEAR

Directoire Gowns with Grace and Comfort

The Nemo "New American Shape" has been adopted by London, Paris and Berlin, and its influence is already shown in recent changes in Paris modes and the statement that—

"In 1909 the waist-line will resume its normal position."

The Nemo "New American Shape" is simply this:

Extreme Directoire slenderness with the tapering waist retained.

This effect can be produced only by the new Nemos for 1909. The long, barrel-like corsets which Paris has made and America has copied, can crush your figure, if you pull hard enough; but it's misery to wear them, and they won't let you sit down.

Nemo Corsets for 1909 give you absolute comfort and the ultra-fashionable figure.

The illustration shows one of the new Self-Reducing Corsets—No. 405, at $4.00. Its long skirt produces extreme reduction of back, hips and upper limbs when you're standing. When you sit down, the pressure is released, and you are as comfortable as though you had no corset on.

The new Relief Bands add greatly to the hygienic value of this corset. They are extra-wide, follow the convexity of the form, and give complete comfort by firmly supporting the abdomen from underneath.

This is only one of the Nemo Specialties for 1909. Later we'll tell you of others equally important.

SELF-REDUCING CORSETS

At $3.50 For short stout figures—No. 314; and No. 318 (with Flatning-Back). For tall stout figures—No. 312; and No. 320 (with Flatning-Back).

At $4.00 For tall stout figures—No. 405. For short stout figures (sizes 24 to 42)—No. 404. Both have the new Nemo Relief Bands.

At $5.00 For tall stout figures—No. 516 (white mercerized brocade) and No. 517 (white French coutil). For short stout figures—No. 518 (white mercerized brocade).

FACT AND COMMENT.

THERE is a general and encouraging improvement in the real estate market. This is the report that comes so generally as to be almost universal from the operators. The improvement extends beyond city property, and embraces suburban, and then beyond that outside towns, and still farther agricultural lands, where the activity still continued much the [illegible]. The expectation is also very general that the improvement will be progressive, not rapid, but steady. It will be an investment proposition for some time to come, with very little of the speculative feature about it.

[illegible] is the Expected.

The improved conditions prevailing are what all those competent to guess have foretold for some months past. The signs of coming improvement were plain, and not few. Liquidation had been accomplished to a considerable degree by the end of last year. The money market had righted itself quickly, funds being more plentiful than normal, and interest rates correspondingly easy. The inflow of new population was scarcely checked by the depressed business conditions of the fifteen months following the crisis. The winter brought more tourists than were ever known to come here before, and the spring is following with an unusually large number of home-seekers coming on the low fares established by the railroads for the current sixty days. The tourist army is estimated to have numbered 100,000, and that of the settlers is expected to run something like 50,000. With these conditions prevailing, and added to them a little easier prices for skilled labor and some kinds of building material, naturally all look to increased activity in building, and that was necessarily preceded by an increased demand for real estate.

[illegible] Backward.

It is eighteen months since the financial crisis fell upon the world. We had been going through a great speculative boom in real estate just previous to the collapse, and thousands of speculators were caught with a heavy load of real estate on their hands only partly paid for. In many instances small installments had been paid and perhaps only one-quarter of the purchase price. The mortgage indebtedness of the county of Los Angeles and the money due under contracts for the purchase of real estate ran to enormous sums. Those who had bought wisely for investment purposes were generally all right. They had looked ahead and seen where the money for future payments was to come from, and these kept to their contracts, met their obligations, paid up, getting clear titles to their holdings. But the speculative plunger was in a sad plight. This class of buyer had gone into the market with the expectation of never paying out on his contracts or lifting his notes secured by mortgage. His hopes were all based upon the prospect of transferring his equity to some new speculator at an advance over his price, thus netting him a profit. These expectations all came to naught with the crash, and threw a good deal of real estate on the market for whatever could be got for the equity.

Fact and Comment Advice.

The editor of the Times real estate department saw immediately the gravity of the situation. What was to be avoided was a general stampede on the part of holders, throwing their property indiscriminately on a drooping market, and thus forcing prices to an unheard-of level. The advice of the department was prompt and positive that no panic should be permitted to take possession of the holders of real estate. It was pointed out that our city lots and country property all had great intrinsic value, that it would be the part of wisdom for all who could to struggle along under the load, however heavy and inconvenient it might be, with the sure expectation of better times in the future. Recognizing the certain fact that many would be forced to let go, the department advised those intending to buy real property in this section for investment purposes to do it promptly. When the crisis came values necessarily settled down to the lowest level likely to be reached because the necessity of letting go was felt by the greatest number of holders. Month by month, as time passed and the financial situation became a little relaxed, the Fact and Comment columns still urged holders who could do so to keep hold, and those who desired to invest to do it at once. It has been very generally recognized by those operating in real estate in all ways that the policy of the department was wise. Those who bought promptly after the collapse find their holdings are more valuable now than when they put their money into the property. Those who were able to keep control of their holdings find a better market today than a year ago. Each passing month brought an easier money market, a little lower cost of building material and skilled labor, a little cheaper money, and an increasing demand for property for investment purposes. This caused the market to become firmer, and enabled those forced to let go to realize a little more for their equities than if all had rushed madly in panic fear into the market at the first. The buyers who hesitated in the earliest days of the panic, expecting vainly a more easy market than prevailed then, found gradually the situation becoming more firm against them, and fearing to

REACHING EVER TO THE WEST.

MARVELOUS GROWTH OF CITY SURPRISE TO MANY.

Great Improvements on Wilshire Boulevard West of Vermont. Transportation Facilities Equal the Best—All Conveniences Installed, and Many Fine Homes Erected.

With the recent opening and improvement of Wilshire boulevard from Vermont avenue west to Arlington, a development of residence property started, which in scope, character and rapidity of home building growth today far surpasses the expectations of the most sanguine.

Many fine homes of our best citizens now adorn Wilshire boulevard, while many sales of the choice corners promise greater things for the future.

In transportation facilities the Wilshire Westlake section equals any of the high-class residence districts. The extensions of the West Sixth, West Fourth and the West Ninth-street car lines give three parallel lines, and a splendid service, the West Sixth-street line practically forming the connecting link of the city with Hollywood.

Sunday afternoons the crowding of the West Sixth-street cars, and the fact that very few of the passengers alight before reaching it attest the interest shown, and the growing popularity of the section. These cars unload between Normandie and Western avenue, in the center of building activity. Going back, standing room is at a premium, and passengers waiting from Sunset Park into the city wonder and inquire the cause.

One of the sightliest and best-improved stretches on Wilshire lies between Normandie and Western avenue. On the northwest corner of Jasmine and Wilshire is the home of W. D. Longyear, on the northwest corner of Kingsley, that of George F. Getty, and on the southwest corner of Harvard, that of George Chaffee. The new home of J. W Bowen occupies the southeast corner of Irolo street.

To the south of Wilshire boulevard, between Normandie avenue and Harvard boulevard, is a subdivision where building activity is at fever heat. This is Wilshire Harvard Heights, owned by the Forrester Improvement Company. One year ago in this tract there were only three houses. Today there are sixty-three houses built, and under construction, costing more than $260,000. E. A. Forrester & Sons, Inc., agents for this subdivision, report sales of $100,000, all made within the past thirty days.

Forrester Improvement Company has moved 200,000 yards of earth, graded, graveled and oiled three miles of streets, put in six miles of cement walks, curb and gutters, 1900 feet of concrete storm drain, seven feet in diameter, and set out 1500 shade trees, and at its own expense brought water, gas, electricity, phones and street-car lines into the district. The water supply coming from the new covered reservoir at Ivanhoe, with a capacity of 47,000,000 gallons, has been fully described in the columns of The Times. It is the purest domestic water supplied by the city. Expenditures for improvements on Wilshire Harvard Heights to date exceed $135,000.

Three years ago, this territory, then a dairy ranch, was scarcely accessible in rainy whether. The road was rough, hilly and narrow, teams were often stuck in the mud, and a culvert, opposite what is now Alexandria avenue, was generally impassible. In earlier days this subdivision was a part of a sheep ranch, owned by Germain Pellissier, a Frenchman, one of the early settlers of Los Angeles. Pellissier bought the former owner's flock of sheep and good will, and the land was "thrown in for good measure." This bonus alone has made a millionaire's estate.

Realty Firm Reports Sales of High-Grade Properties—Improvements Planned.

L. Guggenheim has purchased from J. E. Carr, through A. T. Jergins & Co., the eleven-room, two-story dwelling at No. 731 Beacon street, on lot 50x150 feet to twenty-foot alley, for $12,500 cash. A. T. Jergins has purchased from Gus H. Bauer, through the same firm, the property at No. 1228 West Ninth street, improved with three buildings, lot 75x175 feet, for $20,000.

W. E. Stephens has sold to Emma F. Thornton, through the same company, on the west side of Harvard boulevard, 150 feet south of San Mareno street, 48x136 feet, for $1000. E. F. Thornton sold E. Bradford, through the same agency, a lot 50x150 feet on the west side of Harvard boulevard, between Eighth and Ninth streets, for an consideration of $1500 cash. The purchaser is preparing plans and will erect a two-story house to cost $2000. W. O. Lewis has sold to Mrs. D. E. Loomis, through the same agency, a lot 60x150 feet on the east side of Arapahoe, between Tenth and San Mareno streets, for a consideration of $3000. Mrs. Loomis intends to improve this lot with a house to cost $10,000, to be occupied as a home.

EASTERNERS INTERESTED.

Apple Lands and City Lots at Beaumont Sold to Newcomers for Improvement—Water Development.

Evidence of the widespread demand for Southern California fruit lands is furnished by purchases during the week by eastern people of fifty acres of Beaumont apple lands and several city lots for $7350. Most of the acreage was taken in five and ten-acre parcels. All of the land carries water rights and includes the delivery of water to the line of the property.

Beaumont's water development is assuming a constantly widening scope. Over four miles of steel pipes will be required to lay the latest unit of the water system. Each five-acre tract will be reached by a steel main with pure mountain water under fifty to eighty pounds pressure. This will also obviate the necessity of settling cisterns such as are necesary in some irrigation districts where the water in the ditches is heavily impregnated with mud and silt.

Contracts for planting trees have been awarded by Miss J. H. Street, Highland Park, Ill., five acres of pears and apples; Dales & Karstadt, ten acres of apples and cherries; W. E. Baker, twenty acres of apples; C. Wimpress, twenty-five acres of apples. The Beaumont Land Company's orchards have been extended to sixty acres, with over 5000 apple, pear and peach trees. Strawberry plants set two months ago are already in bloom, and despite the recent cold snap no harm has been done to fruit trees in blossom.

Artistic Homes Will Grace Mt. Washington

A. C. SMITH.

If the present home-building development on the summit of beautiful Mt. Washington is any criterion of the future—the future is bright indeed. Home after home is being erected on this commanding eminence, and plan after plan is being drawn for homes, the construction of which will soon begin.

Mt. Washington—nearly 1,000 feet above the city's level—enjoys absolute freedom from fog, frost, dust and smoke. Eliminating these disagreeable elements gives an almost ideal residential condition.

No city in the world possesses a more magnificently elevated residence subdivision from a strategic, healthful and scenic standpoint, than Los Angeles, with its beautiful Mt. Washington—a real mountain with mountain views—yet right in the city and just a few minutes from the heart of things commercial.

The stately and picturesque Sierras, including snow-capped Old Baldy, Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson, loom up vividly before the Mt. Washington resident in the full glory of their rugged grandeur. The beautiful Eagle Rock, San Fernando and Cahuenga valleys present a charming vista.

Practically all of Los Angeles may be seen from this splendid viewpoint. The view at night is a truly magnificent spectacle—the lights of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Glendale and other surrounding towns literally carpeting the earth with a myriad of stars. Mt. Washington is destined to become a veritable show place of the art of landscape gardening. The undulating character of the land lends itself splendidly to artistic landscape effects. The development of Mt. Washington is attracting wide attention. Every sunny day throngs of visitors investigate the development and enjoy the beauties of Los Angeles' finest living place.

Robert Marsh and Co., 140 W. Fifth St. (Ground Floor), Security Bldg., are general agents for Mt. Washington.

ENTIRE LOWER FLOOR FINISHED IN GENUINE MAHOGANY AND QUARTERED OAK. TILED BATH.

An exceptional value is this very pretty home, which has just been completed, in the western part of the city; delightfully situated among other fine homes; consists of 8 rooms; built by day labor; every piece of handsome mahogany and oak was carefully selected for this home. The dining-room, with its beautiful buffet, paneled walls and beamed ceilings, all of mahogany, is a perfect dream. The living-room with its beautiful mantel and built-in bookcases, including hall, with its pretty stairway and paneled walls to top of doors and windows, all selected quartered oak, is quite as beautiful as the dining-room. These hardwoods were finished by experienced painters, men who do nothing but harwood finish, consequently they have put on a piano finish. The lighting fixtures are of especial design, and very beautiful. Any woman, indeed, would be proud of such a home. There are 4 artistic bedchambers, all handsomely finished, with large closets. The plumbing is modern, the handsome bath is tiled; our salesman would be pleased to show you this handsome home.

THE HOUSE DEPARTMENT.

HERE ARE SEVEN GOOD ONES.

OUR LIST IS ONE OF THE MOST COMPLETE IN THE CITY.

MODERN BUNGALOW, SOUTHWEST.
BUILT BY THE DAY.

$2400. $2400.

In the rapidly-growing southwest section of the city, among the many pretty bungalow homes; 5-minute car service; gas, electricity; fine water; street work all in and paid for. We can offer this modern 5-room bungalow at a snap. Owner goes to Arizona next week, hence this very low price. The bungalow is new, just completed; modern in all respects. This is one of the best little snaps we have ever offered.

BUNGALOW MARKED DOWN.
PART CASH.

$3000. $3000.

This fine modern bungalow of 7 large rooms, was built by owner for his home. Best of material was employed, and the most modern and artistic features were entertained. Oak floors, beamed ceilings, beautiful buffet with leaded doors, generous closet room, wash trays, 2 brick fireplaces; paneled walls in dining-room, and fine lighting fixtures. Bedrooms and bath finished in white enamel. Lot is nicely improved with lawn, shrubs and trees; just 2 minutes' walk to car line; located in West Adams-street district. Owner has best of reasons for disposing of this property.

ANOTHER BUNGALOW BARGAIN.
WEST ADAMS ST. DISTRICT.

$3750. $3750.

This bungalow is dirt cheap at this price. Modern, tastefully arranged; 5 large rooms, fine bath, gas and electricity; oak floors, open fireplace, bookcases, leaded glass buffet, etc.; large chambers, living-room, 22x14; paneled walls, beamed ceilings. Dining-room in Flemish oak, large closets, plenty of light all around, and one of the prettiest homes in this section of the city. Terms can be arranged.

VERY ARTISTIC, WELL-BUILT BUNGALOW, ON HIGH GROUND.

$5000. $5000.

This is certainly a winner; 7 rooms, new, strictly modern, with some of the most delightful and unique features we have ever seen incorporated in the interior arrangement of any bungalow in the city. The owner has personally superintended the construction of this home, utilized the most modern methods of the present bungalow building, coupled with his own original and decidedly effective ideas. The living-room, dining-room and library have oak floors, paneled walls, beamed ceilings, most beautiful lighting fixtures and very fine wall covering. Built-in writing desk, shelves, seats, etc., plate-glass windows. Very pretty buffet in dining-room. Three fine large bedrooms, very large closets, all enameled in ivory, well lighted, ventilated closets, etc. The kitchen will simply win the heart of every woman seeing it. Lot large, level, 50x150; fine garage, cement porch across front and one side to French doors opening into dining-room. This bungalow is the best value in the city for a fine home, and not a cent less than $5000 will buy it.

A BEAUTIFUL HOME, SOUTHWEST, NEAR THE LOG CABIN.

$6500. $6500.

In submitting this property, we feel very confident your inspection will verify every statement we make, both as to value and substantial construction, and it certainly does compare very favorably with houses that $1000 more is being asked for them. Eight large, well-lighted rooms, living-room opens from a spacious reception hall, complete in the most modern and artistic features, with fine large fireplace, beautiful fixtures, oak floors, etc., thence to a very pleasing library or music room. The dining-room has a beautiful buffet, plate-glass windows, oak floors, etc. Kitchen is a model of convenience, with plenty of bins, shelves and drawers. There are wash trays on screen porch, fine cellar, with furnace. The second floor has four fine bedrooms, large ventilated closets, exceptionally well-appointed bathroom, a large sleeping balcony, etc. The yard is well improved and has driveway. Lot is 50x135, and on one of the best streets of the aristocratic W. Adams st. section. Don't miss seeing this.

BEAUTIFULLY LOCATED IN FASHIONABLE WILSHIRE DISTRICT.

$9500. $9500.

We are closely in touch with the merits of most of the fine residences being erected monthly, and we consider it a pleasure to submit to the homeseeker this beautiful ten-room residence just being completed on one of the very best streets in this most popular section, near Wilshire blvd. The rooms are all large, cheerful, carefully arranged, well lighted with plate-glass windows, art panels, etc. Dining-room has exquisite buffet, walls hung with imported tapestries, oak floors throughout. The kitchen is large, convenient, and the large screen porch is equipped with heavy roll-top wash trays, etc. This home has five very large bedrooms, all enameled white, daintily decorated and papered, and each has a very large closet. There are two fine baths, two toilets, lavatories, etc.; in fact, a thoroughly modern home, on a fine, elevated lot, 60x150, and priced right. Terms can be arranged.

BUNGALOW, WILSHIRE WAY.

Less than two blocks from Wilshire blvd., we can show you an 8-room bungalow, that for attractiveness in its arrangement and construction stands in a class by itself. It is on an east front lot, nicely elevated above the curb. Across entire front is a large stone and cement porch, with steps leading from the side to pergola, under which runs cement drive to garage. Beautiful oak door of special design, opening into large living-room. The mantel in this room of Salt Lake stone, was cut and placed as the work progressed, making it a design that is not duplicated in the city. Just off the living-room is the den, with its built-in bookcases and writing desk; when furnished will be a place of comfort. The dining-room paneled with tapestry paper above; has attractive built-in buffet, with oval plate-glass doors and plate-glass shelves, with electric lights, so arranged to produce a pleasing effect. 3 bedchambers in white enamel. Fine bath, with nickel exposed plumbing, woodstone floor; large buffet kitchen in white enamel. Just off the kitchen is one of the cosiest breakfast-rooms that has been our pleasure to inspect. BARGAIN NEAR FIGUEROA.

$3100.

This is a seven-room cottage, located on one of those 100-foot boulevards just south of Agricultural Park and close to Figueroa st. This home wasn't finished yesterday, but it is in perfect repair. Is owned by one of the largest paint and wall-paper concerns in the city, so you may judge for yourself how nice it looks. They have recently gone over it very thoroughly. This property came to them in such a way that they can afford to sell it at a sacrifice. The lot is 50x166 and is highly improved with shrubs, lawn, etc. No bargain like this has come to our notice in a long time, and we have been given but ten days in which to dispose of it. Act quickly if you wish to take advantage of this opportunity.

BUNGALOW, SOUTHWEST.

Terms $1000 cash. Terms $1000 cash.

At such a price you cannot afford to pass this by without looking at it. Located on a beautiful street, southwest, near the W. Adams and W. Jefferson-st. car lines. It has seven rooms, including a very pretty breakfast-room, hardwood floors, all the down-to-date built-in features, Flemish oak finish in all the principal rooms and white enamel in the three bedrooms and bath. The lot is large and well improved with lawn, flowers, barn, etc. This home is now vacant—has been used but a short time, and is $700 under value. It is a bargain.

SOUTHWEST CORNER BUNGALOW.

This bungalow has seven exceptionally large rooms, built on a grand southwest corner lot, 50x155, close to car lines, churches, etc., and is located near Adams and Vermont ave. The home has every modern idea, such as beamed ceilings, paneled walls, massive mantel, hardwood floors, Flemish and golden oak in the principal rooms, and white enamel in the bedrooms, with a very artistic breakfast-room just off the kitchen. The main thing we wish to draw your attention to is the location and price. First, there is no home of this kind in the whole city that has a finer appearance from the street; set well back, with palms between the curb and walk along the entire 205 feet of frontage, growing 15 feet apart. The rear yard is red graveled and has an artistic lattice fence interwoven with vines. In the yard we find fruit trees, grape vines, roses, sweet peas in profusion, and many shrubs, and, last but not least, a $200 barn and workshop, set back 50 feet from the street. This property is less than a year old, and is $1500 under value.

$6000.

We have on West Adams Heights a splendid 9-room home that will be sold this week at a surprising bargain. It lies one block from Berkeley Square on a full sized fifty-foot lot surrounded by many of the best homes in the city. This house does not need a dollar spent on it. Its rooms are large throughout and fitted with every built-in and modern idea. Hardwood floors upstairs and down, furnace, 2 mantels and fire places, spacious living-room, paneled and beamed work, admirable lighting fixtures, separate den with outside entrance, four fine bedrooms in white enamel, and a closed-in sleeping balcony besides. This is your bargain. The price will not wait for next week. If you want a home at all, see this one today. Just $6000.

THE ONLY BUNGALOW IN BEAUTIFUL PALM PLACE TRACT.

Terms $1000 cash. Terms $1000 cash.

If you are not acquainted with this beautiful location, we wish to say it's bound by Pico st., Alvarado st., West 11th and Hoover sts., in the best part of the Westlake district, and just across the street from the Westmoreland Tract. How this bungalow got in this highly restricted tract, we don't know and it's none of our business; it's there and has been for a year. Was built for a home and is now for sale at the above low figure, and almost any terms you may desire. The owner has vacated and, if we hadn't said so, you would take it for a brand new home. There are six large rooms and a full tiled bathroom, big cellar and a gas furnace piped to every room, hardwood floors throughout, two patent wall beds, beautiful lighting fixtures, and the rooms are paneled and beamed and hung with expensive hangings. The bungalow is very artistic and sets on a broad lot facing almost north. If you want a home in the beautiful Westlake district, surrounded by expensive homes, fine car service, at a low price on almost any terms, see this at once. It won't last.

BEAUTIFUL NEW TEN-ROOM HOUSE, HALF BLOCK FROM WILSHIRE BOULEVARD.

$10,000.

This home will be completed in fifteen days—ready for occupancy. There are ten beautiful large rooms, two tiled bathrooms and sleeping porch. No better home can be found anywhere in the Wilshire section at the above price. The lot, 52x140 to alley, is ideally located between Shatto Place, Catalina, Sixth and Seventh sts., with expensive homes all about it. On the first floor is a large living-room with beamed ceiling and handsomely draped walls; just off this room we find an elegant dining-room, with south exposure, also beamed and paneled, with a massive built-in buffet. Den, kitchen and cosy breakfast-room complete this floor. On the second floor are four large bedrooms, a large tiled bathroom and a sleeping porch. On the third floor, which is reached by a broad stairway, are two servants' rooms, a storage-room and a large, complete bathroom. The plumbing in this home is a most expensive feature, and will have to be seen to be appreciated. All the floors are to be quartered oak, and there is a large cellar with completely equipped furnace. Buy this home now, away under value, select your own tints and save yourself the trouble of building. This is, undoubtedly, one of the most artistic homes in the Wilshire section. Price $10,000.

WESTLAKE SACRIFICE.

This is the most beautiful property in the entire Westlake district, and the largest east-front lot intact in that very desirable section. Getting down to a "heart to heart" talk, let us first present it to you from a business standpoint. The lot is 125x150 feet, and highly improved with old trees, shrubbery, flowers and a large lawn. It is worth in actual money today $125 per foot, or $15,625. If the lot were vacant, it would make an excellent hotel or apartment-house site, and this section is rapidly filling up with that class of property. There is no question in our minds but this same piece of ground will sell for not less than $25,000 as a vacant lot within a very few years. Now, let us talk it over from a real home standpoint. The house is a very artistic home, and is more the substantial mansion than the usual stereotyped house of today. It has large and airy rooms with high ceilings and the many desirable and homelike conveniences which are not found in contracted houses—a most livable home of fourteen rooms; seven large bedrooms and several baths. We believe the house represents an expenditure of $12,000 to $14,000, and it is in perfect condition. It would be impossible to spend a dollar on it which would improve it in any way. There are hardwood floors throughout, ⅞-inch in thickness; some quartered oak and some very fine white pine, rubbed to a piano finish. The third floor has two servants' rooms, a cedar room for the storage of furs, bedding, trunks, etc., and another room suitable for cardroom or den. The cellar is large and is equipped with every modern appliance. There is a large garage on the property, which will readily accommodate three machines.

Now to get back to business: The lot is actually worth today $15,625 and the improvements $14,000; total, $29,625. Considered as a whole, the place is well worth the above amount, but for quick sale, the price is $19,500. The owner of the property can more than double the sacrifice he is making, in a business deal which is now pending and which must be consummated in the next thirty days, hence the marked sacrifice of a handsome property. If you are looking for a home which will also prove a good investment, do not fail to let us show this one to you.

BEAUTIFUL MISSION HOME IN THE WESTLAKE DISTRICT.

$37,500.

This palatial house contains fourteen rooms and three bathrooms. The lower floor is finished in selected oak and mahogany, with seven-eighth inch oak floors throughout. The upper hall is also in solid oak, while the sleeping apartments are in white enamel. The rooms are exceptionally well lighted. The walls are draped with rich tapestries and real leather on the first floor and rich papers upstairs. There is an artistic pergola in the court with bricked floor; this pergola is covered with beautiful vines and roses and is ideally suited for outdoor breakfasts and teas. There are two complete heating systems; also Ruud water heater and electric ventilating system. The garage is large enough for three cars and has man's rooms above. The lot is 110x145 feet.

This is, without question, one of the best built and well arranged residences we have ever offered. It can be seen by appointment only.

WONDERFULLY ATTRACTIVE HOME. MOST IDEAL CORNER ON WILSHIRE.

$50,000. —$50,000— $50,000.

We want you to understand what we say about this perfect home. The view is one of the most magnificent of any in the city. The lot has 160 feet front on Wilshire blvd. An important point in favor of the location is that it is close in and very near two of the city's beautiful parks. The exterior of the house shows the matchless skill of the architect and the interior reveals his choicest taste in its appointments. We are in a position to sell this fine home for less than cost, hence all the profit comes your way. You seldom have this kind of an opportunity, especially after the lawn is growing and the flowers are blooming and the birds are singing in the trees.

There are 12 large rooms, 3 elegant baths in this fine home. All the lower floor is finished in carefully-selected quarter-sawed oak, in elegant piano finish with beam ceilings. The reception hall is 20x26, with grand stairway and landing in the rear, all of solid quartered oak, also beautiful art-glass windows, hall racks and seats, and built-in safe underneath stairway. Living-room to the left of entrance is exceptional, being 26x31, with art-glass windows and Gruby tile mantel 12 ft. long, with recesses and seats on each side, paneled and canvas, frescoing of unique design. Perfect model of a library, with every comfort and convenience. Dining-room to the taste of a queen, has relief frescoe, beautiful fireplace with French doors on each side leading to the porch. An ideal den. Large kitchen, lavatory, screen porch, pass pantry, all finely appointed for service. There are 5 beautiful bedchambers on the second floor, each one exceptionally large. Fine billiard-room and servants' rooms on third floor; 2-story garage, with servants' quarters. You will make a mistake if you do not let us show you this perfect home. You can only fully appreciate it by seeing it and we do not want you to miss the opportunity. So please call at once. Terms to suit purchaser.

AN UNPARALLELED BARGAIN.

One of the show places of South Pasadena, 1102 South Fair Oaks avenue, a mansion of 11 rooms, with corner lot 100x153, can be bought for, 10 days only, at the ridiculously low price of $10,500. Built like iron, the house is a model of staunch construction and a paragon of comfort and convenience. Many orange trees, grape fruit trees, peaches, figs and other bearing fruit trees together with dozens of shrubs and vines makes for the unmatched of the grounds. Four-minute car service, only 20 minutes to 6th and Main st., fare 7 cents. The lot is worth $5500 alone and the house would cost as much as I ask for the house and lot. I have good business reasons for selling and can convince you of the exceptional advantages of this purchase. See owner, 226 MERCANTILE PLACE, Home F4868. Main 3215.

WHY DOES EAGLE ROCK SUCCEED

in getting so many nice people to make their home there? Everything that Eagle Rock has accomplished in the way of modern improvements, transportation, etc., has been done under difficulties and against odds. Eagle Rock has no newspaper proprietors, or railway owners, to promote her welfare and boost her sales. But people keep on coming out, keep on buying property, keep on building homes. Why?

EAGLE ROCK HAS THE NATURAL ADVANTAGES.
NEARNESS TO THE CITY.
HIGH ALTITUDE.
PURE, SOFT, MOUNTAIN WATER.
FRESH BRACING AIR.
WONDERFULLY VARIED SCENERY.
FERTILE, EASILY WORKED SOIL.
GOOD NEIGHBORS.
HERE IS WHAT YOU CAN GET IN EAGLE ROCK
FOR THE YOUNG COUPLE.

Lots of young people now making their first start to establish themselves in a home of their own in Eagle Rock. For you we have well situated building lots from 50x140 to 100x240 at from $250 up. All street improvements, etc. included. Very easy terms, or if you pay cash for the lot, we will arrange to build for you without any further first payment.

FOR THE BUSINESS MAN.

Many prominent city business men now have their homes in Eagle Rock. There is no other suburban district so close to the city, and reached by two city street cars. Think of the joys in store for your children in such a beautiful and healthful environment. For you we have large building sites, from one-half to three acres each at from $500 up, all improvements, petrolithic oiled streets, etc. included.

FOR THE MAN OF LEISURE.

Eagle Rock especially appeals to those who have the time to appreciate and enjoy the fine scenery and magnificent, bracing climate. For you we have the choice of several of from six to fifty acres each. Several are well covered with live oaks and sycamores. Prices from $400 per acre.

EAGLE ROCK THE BEST.

You will find, after looking over the whole residence district, around Los Angeles, that you get more and more attracted to Eagle Rock every time you go out. This is the severest test and we desire you to make it, because we know the inevitable result.

A WORD ABOUT OURSELVES.

Eagle Rock is our hobby, we know every inch of it and have sold about half of it at one time or another. We live there ourselves wouldn't live anywhere else. When we ask you to put yourself in our hands, and let us show you over Eagle Rock we do so because we want to share our enthusiasm with you.

WE DO NOT PESTER YOU TO BUY.

Simply drive you over the district, that's the reason we sell so much property. Because after you have made your comparisons

YOU WILL WANT TO BUY.

We sell more Eagle Rock property than all other agents combined.

A HOME ON AN ACRE
AT SOMERSET.

Don't wait until this valuable property has doubled in value. Buy now and make the profits yourself. Remember that Somerset is only half an hour from the business center and that passenger and express electric car facilities render it a close-in suburb. It has the soil fit for everything known to this climate. It has plenty of water piped in steel mains from artesian sources, flowing to your door, without a cent of expense. For orange and walnut groves, fruit, vegetable and poultry farms, returning a revenue sufficient to maintain a family and still advancing in value every day. Somerset has no equal on the map.

A HOME ON AN ACRE
AT SOMERSET.
Don't wait until this valuable property has doubled in value. Buy now and make the profits yourself. Remember that Somerset is only half an hour from the business center and that passenger and express electric car facilities render it a close-in suburb. It has the soil fit for everything known to this climate. It has plenty of water piped in steel mains from artesian sources, flowing to your door, without a cent of expense. For orange and walnut groves, fruit, vegetable and poultry farms, returning a revenue sufficient to maintain a family and still advancing in value every day. Somerset has no equal on the map.

FOR SALE—

$30,000.

Lot value alone $25,000

House value $20,000.

It's a Southwest corner 100 by 150.

This property today is actually worth $45,000.

But I am going away and want to sell soon. My price will appeal to any fair-minded purchaser as a splendid speculative investment as well as every possible comfort of a home.

MY HOUSE CONTAINS 14 ROOMS with hardwood floors throughout and it is perfect in every appointment. The surroundings are the best in the city and my price is $15,000 UNDER VALUE.

If you are looking for a conservative $15,000 profit-making proposition your time will be well worth investigating this opportunity. See my representative, VERNON H. PECK, 713 Grant Bldg. Main 6066. A1110. 28

FOR SALE—OR LEASE.
We have for sale or lease, one of the most desirable warehouse properties within a short distance of the downtown district, and bounded by the city car line on one side and the main line of the Southern Pacific on the other.
The building itself covers the entire lot, approximately 100x102 feet.
We can offer a very attractive proposition on this property. The sale price of the property is $13,000, and we can exchange it for a close-in apartment house and assume a small mortgage on the right property.

Ask About the Alfalfa Proposition.

To concentrate buying in certain localities, land will be seeded to alfalfa free of charge. Alfalfa yields 10 tons per acre and sells around $17 a ton.

Visit the Cudahy Ranch Sunday.

Facts About the Cudahy Ranch Water Supply.

Suppose you were offered ten acres of land, which included a deep well, fully equipped with a modern gasoline engine, compressor and storage tank? Would you not consider that the proposition, so far as the water was concerned, was quite ideal? Would you not realize that the actual cost of lifting that water would be as nothing compared to what you would pay to a water company selling water for profit?

This is what we are offering you on the Cudahy Ranch, ONLY A LITTLE BIT BETTER. Instead of each man having his own well, engine and tank, each man becomes a partner in ONE LARGE SYSTEM of wells and merely PAYS HIS SHARE OF THE COST OF PRODUCING the water, for which he receives his share.

To date the owners of Cudahy Ranch acres have paid 50 cents a month per acre between July and December and 33 cents a month per acre for January, February and March. This entitled them to 77,000 gallons of water per month per acre, which is the relative amount of water you would have if you owned five acres of land and had one full miner's inch, which is considered by all large ranchers as a bountiful supply. REALIZE THAT THIS ALSO INCLUDED THE DOMESTIC WATER.

Now make the comparison. Suppose you buy land where they charge you $1 per month for domestic water and then sell you water for irrigating purposes at the rate of ONE CENT PER INCH PER HOUR, which is quite the prevailing rate. The difference is fully FOUR TIMES what you pay on the Cudahy Ranch, to say nothing of the fact that the probabilities are you should be compelled to take your irrigating water at certain hours, which might be a source of great inconvenience.

The water situation on the Cudahy Ranch is NOT ONLY SOLVED, but I doubt whether there is a supply in the county AS CHEAP. Take the advice of old Californians and consider that in purchasing land the first thing that should be settled in your mind is the water situation. There is land in Southern California that you can buy for $10 an acre that, so far as the soil is concerned, is equally as good in quality and productiveness as that for which you pay $1000 an acre, but it has no water.

If you contemplate buying land anywhere, we want you to visit the Cudahy Ranch. We want you to give us an opportunity to tell you of its DISADVANTAGES as well as its advantages. We want none but satisfied buyers, and for that reason don't tell you things that ARE NOT! We can't suit everybody—that's impossible, but you should at least come and learn why 75 families have already built homes on the Cudahy Ranch.

In point of soil some of the best land on the entire ranch can be bought at $400 an acre.

LARGE TRACTS

OF GOOD LANDS

IN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

FOR COLONIZATION

OR FOR INVESTMENT.

We offer herewith a most desirable list of San Joaquin Valley lands in large tracts, suitable for colonization. They are all carefully selected, and all have been examined by us. We vouch for their merits and careful investigation in each instance, will convince the most critical buyers that there are rare opportunities for big profits in each and all of these various properties.

7650 ACRES,
FRESNO COUNTY.
TWO MILES FROM R.R.
ON MAIN LINE.
ONLY $32 AN ACRE.
LEVEL AS A FLOOR.
RICH SOIL.
NO HARDPAN OR ALKALI.

There was never a better proposition offered for colonization purposes. This land lies all in one body and is three miles wide from east to west and four miles long from north to south. The soil is superb, no better anywhere and it is perfectly uniform in quality. It is covered with a heavy growth of natural grasses that indicate the rare productiveness of the land. Water in greatest abundance can be developed from wells. For alfalfa, fruits and other purposes this land cannot be excelled. See our Los Angeles office for further particulars.

2580 ACRES.
MADERA COUNTY.
FINE LAND.
$25 AN ACRE.

This lies close to the San Joaquin River and has been farmed to grain for several years. Water in great abundance. This is a good colonization proposition of moderate size, or for eucalyptus culture this tract is especially desirable.

1280 ACRES.
KINGS COUNTY.
GOOD LAND.
$7.50 AN ACRE.

The only reason why the price on this land is so low is that it lies a little distance from the railroad. The character of the soil is such that it will grow fine alfalfa and fruits as well. Water can be developed. A rare investment. Come early for this will sell quickly.

640 ACRES.
$20 AN ACRE.
5 MILES FROM KERMAN.

This is near the townsite of the Fresno Irrigated Farms Tract and is a snap.

5000 ACRES.
ALL IN ONE BODY.
ONLY 12 MILES
FROM FRESNO.
$12.50 AN ACRE.

There are some big colony propositions close to this land that are being marketed at from $40 to $100 per acre. The soil in the tract here offered is quite as good, so that as an investment and profit making proposition this is an unusually attractive offering.

360 ACRES.
FIVE MILES FROM FRESNO.
ONLY $37.50 AN ACRE.

We are selling colony lots only three miles from this land at $100 per acre. Soil the same and conditions the same. The famous Kearney Park and estate is only two miles south. You cannot help but make big money on this investment.

FOR SALE—TWO THOUSAND ACRES.

AT RIALTO. AT RIALTO.

READ THIS—FROM THE TIMES, MCH. 24.
San Bernardino correspondence.
"RAILWAY COMING.

"That the Huntington electric railway system is actually headed toward San Bernardino became evident this afternoon, when W. G. Kerckhoff, for the company, placed on record 24 deeds for right of way for the roadbed across two sections of land at Upland.

"It is understood that the company has practically secured its private right of way from Upland to this city. Surveyors who have been to the two sections mentioned, where grading for the roadbed has been under way for 2 months, stated that the surveys are pointing direct east, which will place Cucamonga and Rialto in touch with the electric system."

Now let me ask you if you ever saw lands through which the electric railway runs that did not treble and quadruple in value, and some go to ten times their "isolated" price if QUALITY and LOCATION justify. 1280 acres of this land I am offering have QUALITY and LOCATION second to none in that section, and will have

2 MILES OF FRONTAGE ON ELEC. RY.

Don't overlook that. This line to San Bernardino will go right through it on a straight line.

Don't wait till the rush begins up there and pay the big prices.

You can buy this land now for only

$75 PER ACRE,

including the 720 acres of water land with 35 inches of water (but on which engineers say 260 inches can be developed,) and a 3,000,000 gallon cement reservoir (cost about $25,000,) and the whole proposition together is one of the prettiest subdivision or

FINE ORANGE GROVE PROPOSITIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

Don't go 300 miles from Los Angeles and 10 miles from R.R. (Santa Fe now runs THROUGH this, also oiled road from Los Angeles to San B. is on the center line through it,) and out of all reach of electric lines to pay $100 for land, but buy it right where it will be in 10 or 15 minutes' electric car ride of San Bernardino and 5 minutes' ride of Rialto on direct line to Los Angeles.

Other people have made big fortunes buying large bodies of land rightly located in Southern California, and you can do the same, if, if, if you only have the nerve to buy when others are waiting and when the opportunity knocks at your door. If you feel like asking why I don't want to keep it and get rich, I'll answer you in all candor and calmness that I do wish very much to do so, and WILL DO SO IF you will lend me the price of this land ($150,000) on a Spring street lot worth $300,000. But I MUST raise $150,000 and the necessity alone makes me offer to raise it by letting this land go.

If you have the price (or $75,000 cash and bal. mtg. at 5 per cent.) and are interested, come and let me tell you a few facts that will convince you of the genuineness of this ad; Facts that I can't publish without some smart fool saying I'm "knocking."

I can also show you some interesting maps and other data and will be glad to talk with a purchaser, but not with any agents. I will not list this land at all—ONLY for the reason that I don't want any one to "work the deal," as I am liable to withdraw it any hour.

No trade. No trade. The old man got sick of these California "trading" propositions 10 years ago and has never sufficiently recovered from the illness to be able to look a trade in the face without throwing up the window and yelling for the "physician" and the police.

But if you have the coin of the realm and the nerve to act, just come around and let me show you a "colony in the shell."

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

A few selected country properties, in the northern part of the State, not far from San Francisco.

$6500—A fine place of 57 acres on main county road, in Sonoma county; good orchard, hay, grain and potato land. 15 acres wooded. 300 cords wood; 7-room house and barn. Running stream. A good place to make a comfortable living and enjoy a fine climate.

$20,000—A fully-equipped poultry ranch on a large scale. Everything arranged for 10,000 poultry. Some general farming also. Contains 91 acres. Close to good live town, electric road and all conveniences; house of 10 rooms, which cost $6000; modern in every respect. Creek of running water all year round. Fine place for ducks, which are very profitable. Gas engine and pumping plant. This place was acquired by a city man, and will sell it for far less than it is worth. It is worth at least $30,000. Sonoma county.

$12,000—A truly fine profitable fruit ranch near San Jose. Quarter mile from electric road. Consists of 12 acres hay land; 21 acres apricots; 4 acres peaches; 22 acres prunes; 3 acres oranges, lemons, walnuts, etc., etc. Splendid house and other improvements. Present owner too old to run it. Income from $4000 to $5000 net, above expenses.

$19,500—The most picturesque and profitable general farm in the State. Positively. Contains 400 acres, of which 100 acres in all sorts of deciduous fruits, nuts and berries of the finest quality; 25 acres hay land; 6000 cords of fine oak wood. The owner who has for business reasons to return to Chicago, sells reluctantly for he has spent years of valuable time and lots of money in making the place beautiful. Cool mountain spring water piped all over the orchard and house; house small, but comfortable. Summer and fruit houses, and all necessary outbuildings. Range for 25 head cattle and sheep. Income $4000 net, and gradually increasing. Ready market for everything on the premises as fast as produced. Splendid hunting and fishing.

$20,000—A fine alfalfa, hog and cattle ranch; 100 acres and fine improvements; planted to alfalfa. Land alone worth the money. A good dairy proposition. This land is rich beyond comparison and perfectly level. Excellent irrigation facilities. This is a fine ranch in a fine locality. Near border line of Merced and Stanislaus counties, on west side.

We suggest that land in the northern part of the State is cheaper than in the southern part, and the incomes are greater in proportion. We have more rain, and we think an all-round better climate. All of these properties are within easy access to San Francisco. Write to us at once, and we will arrange to extend you every courtesy to inspect these places.

FOR SALE—
DID YOU SEE WHAT HARRIMAN SAID ABOUT "THE CALIFORNIA OF MEXICO?"

MAGNIFICENT LANDS FOR SALE
—IN—
SINALOA, "THE CALIFORNIA OF MEXICO."

The Culiacan Valley is the very center of the great development of the State of Sinaloa, brought about through the opening up of that virgin country by the new Southern Pacific Railroad, now building to Mexico City, and already operating trains through the entire State. Make the trip now all the way by Pullman car.

All of the lands, with the exception of the two parcels here described, of the Culiacan Valley, are now owned by strong American and Mexican capitalists. One large company is about to begin the construction of an irrigation canal for their lands, the improvement to cost $100,000. There is a strong demand for this property at $25 per acre.

Property No. 1.—Approximately 10,000 acres, 1 mile south of Culiacan River, 7 miles from Altata, which is a port of entry and railroad terminal. Adjoining lands of the Sinaloa Land Company, and under the canal system which they are preparing to establish.

This tract can be very easily irrigated by a separate canal, the slope from the river bank being such that a 3-mile ditch will take the water to a point from which almost all of the lands can be covered. Over ¾ of this is free loam, alluvial soil, and the other soil is a clayish loam, very rich and retentive of moisture. There is no alkali, no hardpan. This property is especially adapted to sugar cane, cotton, rice, alfalfa and bananas. Improved sugar lands cannot be secured for $100 per acre. On most of this land alfalfa would thrive without irrigation, and humidity being at a shallow depth.

Price $5 per acre, 1-3 cash, balance 1 and 2 years, interest 6 per cent. There are 500 head of cattle on place, secured for $12.50 each. Nothing else of this character can be secured in the Culiacan Valley at this original price. One year's work will make property worth $25 per acre. Ideal for quick profits in subdivision. Fine climate.

Property No. 2.—About 3000 acres, ¾ mile from new S. P. Railroad, surrounded by American lands, now held for many times the price of this land. In the Culiacan Valley, where lands are developing into very best properties. Choice property, magnificent soil, splendid location. Suitable for alfalfa, sugar cane, beans, fruits, corn, etc. Water within 25 feet of surface in abundance. Development brings property of this class up to $100 per acre. Can be sold in parcels of 494 acres each, or in one parcel, at $5 per acre. Adjoining lands selling for $25 per acre.

Other properties—Rich valley ranches, somewhat removed from Culiacan Valley for sale for from $1.50 to $2 per acre; liberal terms. Pay for these properties in first year, with handsome balance besides.

FOR SALE—

A paying walnut ranch.
At less than adjoining ranches.
Not as good.

20 acres on Santa Ana electric.

This fine soft-shelled walnut ranch is all set to 11-year-old trees and practically all budded trees, which always bring the highest price, 16 to 25 cents per pound. The crop last year was over 30,000 pounds and should be close to 45,000 pounds this year.

Improved with a six-room cottage, 4-room cottage, large barn, warehouse, etc.; also one of the finest pumping plants in the valley. 32-h.p. gas engine, 3 7-inch wells and 120 inches of water. More water than can ever be used on this ranch. Water sold last summer to other ranchers for $20 per day, 10-hr. run.

Compare this price with others and see the snap you have.

Price includes team, imp., etc., with a payment of only 1-3 cash.

Price $750 per acre.

MODEL CHICKEN RANCH.

WORTH $10,000—BUY IT, $5500.

Located at Altadena, elevation 1600 ft., overlooking Pasadena, the San Gabriel Valley and the ocean. But 3 blocks north of car line, on Fair Oaks ave. There are 5 acres, beautiful bungalow with every modern convenience. There are 2½ acres of splendid chicken corrals, with all necessary outbuildings, including brooders, incubators and every equipment for 2100 chickens. Splendid family orchard, great variety of deciduous fruits; also oranges and lemons. This property might more properly be described as a villa home. The surroundings are beautiful, the vacant land is actually worth $1200 per acre, while the improvements cost more than $4500. Owner must sacrifice and will sell for $5500 if sold this month. The title is perfect; the property is unincumbered. We are prepared to verify our statement as to value. Never in our experience have we offered such value for the money.

FOR SALE—
$400 AN ACRE
WITH WATER.

Must raise money. Owners will sell a few tracts of from one to ten acres of deep, rich level loam, ten miles from center of Los Angeles; five from center of Pasadena, and three miles directly east from center of Alhambra, for $400 per acre, including water. This does not mean that they have a few acres of poor soil to sell for this price, and that the good soil is from $600 to $1000 per acre, but it means that you can select any piece in the tract at $400 per acre, which is just half what it is worth. If you know values and have the cash, you will do yourself the justice of investigating this at once.

TULARE.

LAND BUYERS, ATTENTION—
NEW SECTION OF TULARE AND FRESNO COUNTY OFFERED FOR SALE.

Right in the heart of the finest dairying and farming district in the State. Several sections in the above counties that we are interested in are going to be placed upon the market in pieces to suit, from five acres to 160 acres or more.

Prices range from $35 per acre up. Unlimited water supply.

NO ALKALI OR HARD PAN.

Good schools and churches, and land within one-fourth mile of the main line of the Southern Pacific R.R.

TERMS IF DESIRED.

We are directly interested in a small portion of improved land, but the greater portion of our land is unimproved rich sandy loam, suitable for anything from vegetables to oranges.

These sections have never been offered for sale before, and we are manufacturers of this city and not real estate agents, nor do we care to farm. Look into this quickly, as it will not last long. For terms, exact location, etc., call or write to GEO. R. E. MILLIGAN, President GEO. R. E. MILLIGAN ARTIFICIAL LIMB CO., 541 E. Fifth st., Los Angeles. Both phones. Broadway 1894. F3296. 28

DELANO.

FOR SALE—

Our experts, after one year of actual test in the field, selected Delano in preference to any other part of California because:

It is an early region, and the demand for early products is always great.

It is a deep, rich, sandy loam soil, and we will furnish implements for you to test its depth.

It is a healthful and accessible region.

We will show you practical demonstrations on our land from oranges to alfalfa.

We sell 10 and 20-acre tracts with water and a perfect water system.

FOR SALE—
Lemon and Orange Groves.

FOR SALE— BY R. J. WIDNEY.

9 GOOD LEMON ORCHARDS, 9.

AT SAN DIEGO.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

A COMPETITOR last week ADVERTISED

"THERE ARE NO CHEAP GROVES."

I realize that the average real estate firm is not in a position to secure bargains in citrus properties for their customers.

Therefore they are compelled to list and advertise such properties at full asking price.

I have a working agreement with the packing-house managers of one of our large fruit-buying and shipping firms.

This firm has packing-houses at ten or twelve different points.

These men are always looking for bargains in their locality.

THEREFORE I AM IN A POSITION TO BUY YOU A GOOD GROVE CHEAP.

Bargains advertised by me represent months of effort on the part of well-posted men in the localities in which the groves are located.

All groves advertised are inspected and passed on by the packing-house manager at that point.

There is only one way
TO MAKE MONEY.
Whether in citrus properties, peanuts, or railroads,
And that is,
BUY CHEAP AND SELL DEAR.
If you want to make money in citrus properties,
IT WILL PAY YOU TO SEE ME.

THE DUTY ON LEMONS

Will positively be increased at least ¼ cent per pound.
It is expected that the Senate will raise this duty to ½ cent per pound.
This will mean a large increase in earning capacity of lemon orchards, and the prices of lemon orchards will necessarily advance largely in value.

IF YOU WANT TO MAKE MONEY

BUY LEMON ORCHARDS NOW.

FOR YOU.
THE POOR MAN'S OPPORTUNITY
IN THE RICHEST ORANGE DISTRICT.
I wish every tired city man, weary of the eternal grind, and every homeseeker, could have 5 acres of Monte Vista land, to place him beyond the reach of want forever. Monte Vista lands need not be judged by their surroundings. They speak for themselves. The soil is there. The water is developed. Two railroads are there. Three packing-houses are there. Schools and colleges are there. Churches are there. Cities are there. Progress is there. The present value is established and the future is secure. It is all done for you. There is no pioneering. You settle into a community where the bearing groves on four sides of you sell at $1000 to $2000 and more an acre. Where they yield a revenue of $500 an acre and up. Where winter rhubarb yields up to $750 an acre. Where everything grows and pays handsomely. Where there is no experiment and failure is unknown.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE GROVES AT COVINA.
If a committee were appointed to decide on what was the most desirable section of the world in which to buy a country home, what would they have to take into consideration? Why location, climate, electric and steam car service, class of people, distance from beaches and mountains, shopping facilities, churches and schools, good soil and abundance of pure water, and last but not least, the amount of income it could show.
The Covina section has all these advantages and a great deal more besides.
Here are a few snaps that the homeseekers can't overlook.
Price $8000—
5-acre navel orange grove, in fine condition; best of soil and cheapest water in the world, costing $8 per year for the entire ranch. 8-room house, furnished, and good barn, etc. Team and all implements included. Terms $3000 down; balance long time.

$22,500; POSITIVELY WORTH $30,000.
AN UNPRECEDENTED SACRIFICE.
CIRCUMSTANCES FORCE IT. THE PROPERTY ITSELF IS ELEGANT. Very few such groves ever put on the market; the location is exclusive; scarcely ever anything in this neighborhood can be bought at any price; THE HEAVIEST PRODUCING GROVES IN CALIFORNIA ALMOST JOIN THIS PROPERTY;
20 Acres; the fundamental principle is there;
THE SOIL:
NO BETTER SOIL IN CALIFORNIA:
It's a rich, red, mellow loam, 20 feet deep; the trees are great, big, and uniform; giants as compared with some groves; NO ORDINARY SOIL COULD PRODUCE SUCH IMMENSE TREES; they are now just coming into their prime;
VALENCIAS: NAVELS: SWEETS: ST. MICHAELS: GRAPE FRUIT AND WALNUTS:
THE INCOME ON THIS PLACE CAN BE MADE TO PAY A HANDSOME PROFIT ON A MUCH LARGER INVESTMENT.
A lady owns this grove and cannot give it the proper attention; it can be made to sell for $40,000 within three years if properly cared for; it is worth every dollar of $30,000 today. BUT, IT MUST BE SOLD NOW, AND IS A MOST EXTRAORDINARY "SNAP" AS AN INVESTMENT.
7-room house; barn; outbuildings; cement pillars in front;
elegant driveway; beautiful ornamental trees and shrubbery; a perfect bowery;
A PERFECTLY MAGNIFICENT HOME.
THIS PLACE IS NO ORDINARY SNAP: FINE OILED BOULEVARD: ONLY 45 MINUTES' RUN FROM LOS ANGELES. IN THE HEART OF THE BEST ORANGE BELT IN CALIFORNIA: CONSIDER THIS.
$1000 worth of water stock; abundance of water; place irrigates perfectly. NOW SEE IT FOR THE REST: ONLY ONE SUCH PROPERTY IN CALIFORNIA FOR SALE: TERMS.

FOR SALE—BY J. A. FITCH, POMONA.
Positively one of the best and cheapest income orange groves in So. California. Has never changed hands. Owner a wealthy, successful orange grower, now advanced in years, having other large land and business interests, has instructed me to close out his entire citrus grove holdings. Have carefully looked over the property and considering the location, valuable water rights and excellency of soil, pronounce it one of the best buys in orange groves in So. California. Just listed and exclusively and at a price which should move it quickly. It comprises nearly 68 acres, all in fine condition, except about 2 acres; 11 acres full bearing lemons, mostly Eurekas, with heavy crop, balance Washington navel oranges, part full bearing, balance part large buds; part coming 7 years. Location near Claremont. Pacific Electric Ry. line, soon to be constructed, will run very close to this property.
The water rights, appurtenant, are estimated to be worth $20,000, about 7000 boxes oranges still remaining on trees, also heavy crop of lemons, which go to the buyer, if purchased soon, buyer to pay for care and expense incident to property from date of listing. This grove should produce 20,000 boxes oranges the coming season and income will increase annually thereafter. A splendid income investment for some one who is able to buy now. A good property for a syndicate to handle and segregate into small groves. Good lemon house, dwelling house, 4 horses, wagons, implements and all equipments included. Liberal terms. $40,000 or more down, balance 6 per cent. no trades.
Any one looking for a first-class investment should at once see J. A. FITCH, sole agent, 371 W. 2nd st., Pomona, Cal. Phones Black 16, Home 102. Send for my late real estate booklet, recently issued, free for the asking. 28

LIVE STOCK FOR SALE—

Horses, Cattle, Mules, Etc.

FOR SALE—AUCTION, AT 10 O'CLOCK A. m., Tuesday, April 6, on the old Cook Ranch, 2½ miles southwest of Burbank, on Central ave., 1½ miles northeast of Toluca. Take S.P. train leaving Arcade depot at 7:50 a.m. to Burbank. Teams in waiting. 65 dairy cows and heifers, 1 thoroughbred bull, 50 head fine dairy cows, mostly Holsteins and Durhams; a few choice Jerseys, all young and in good condition, fresh and coming fresh, large milkers; in fact, as fine a herd of dairy cows as you can find in Los Angeles county; 15 head fine heifers, 1 thoroughbred Holstein bull 2 years old. This herd is out of the dairy district, and prospective buyers will do well to attend this sale, as everything will not bring the prices that they do in other localities. Anyone wishing to inspect this herd prior to the sale will be met at Burbank by appointment by the owner and taken to the ranch, where you can see this stock milked and tested. Cows will be delivered in Los Angeles, after sale, free of charge, if desired. Two driving horses. Owners are dissolving partnership and quitting the dairy business, and every animal positively must and will go to the highest bidder. No limit or reserve. Terms—Six months' time on sums over $50 with note and approved security. Liberal discount for cash. Don't miss this genuine closing-out sale. Free lunch at noon. FUSTER BROS., prop. RHOADES & RHOADES, auctioneers, Office 530-532 S. Main st. 'Phones—F1259, Main 1259. 28

FOR SALE—AUCTION SALE, LIVE STOCK, implements, etc.; horses, cows. At 10 o'clock a.m., Thursday, April 8. On the Griffith Ranch, 1½ miles northeast of Downey; 1½ miles southeast of Whittier electric line, at Downey Road. Take S. P. train leaving Arcade Depot at 8:50 a.m. to Downey. Teams waiting. 9 head first-class milk cows, Jerseys and Holsteins. Large, rich milkers, fresh and coming fresh, all young and in good condition; in fact, all first-class dairy and family cows; 2 good driving horses, 3 fine work and brood mares, all first-class work stock; 1 yearling colt, 1 Holstein bull, 2½ years old; 1 heifer. Ten tons barley hay baled. IMPLEMENTS—2 farm wagons, buggy, seeder, sulky plow, riding cultivator, 2 harrows, 2 scrapers, shovel plow, sub-soiler, mower, rake, cart with breaking shaft, 2 sets work harness, feed boiler, corn sheller, 24-ft. drag, forks, shovels, rakes, milk cans, pails, etc., etc. On account of leasing the ranch I am closing out all of my live stock and implements, and everything positively goes to the highest bidder. No limit or reserve. Terms—1-4 cash, balance 6 months' time, will be given with note and approved security at 8 per cent. interest, on sums over $50. Liberal discount for cash. Free lunch at noon. FOR SALE—AUCTION SALE; 40 FINE Holstein cows; 1 bull; on the old Tweedy Ranch, 3 miles east of Watts. On the Tweedy county road, 1 mile east of Alameda st., Thursday, April 1, at 10 o'clock, a.m. Take electric cars to Watts. Teams in waiting. 40 head fine young Holstein dairy cows; many with first and second calves, 30 head of these cows will be fresh before day of sale, giving large quantities of milk. This is without doubt one of the very best dairy herds in Los Angeles county, and buyers looking for first-class dairy stock should not miss this sale. Intending purchasers are invited to visit the ranch prior to sale and inspect the herd, which is the result of careful buying, breeding and culling. 1 fine 2-year-old Holstein bull; 1 span good work mules, weight about 1200 lbs. each; 5 good brood sows; will litter soon; 1 fine boar. Terms—6 months' time will be given with note and approved security on sums over $50, 5 per cent. discount for cash on time sums. On account of poor health, owner is retiring from the dairy business, closing out his entire herd, and every animal will positively go to the highest bidder. No limit or reserve. Good lunch at noon. FOR SALE—INCUBATORS.

IMPROVED PACIFIC INCUBATORS.

There are none better made. We make them and that is the reason we can sell the 62-egg size at $7, freight prepaid, to any point in California, and the larger sizes also at real bargain prices. These are not old, second-hand machines, but new and up to date. Hot water heating, best Sheer regulator; everything the best. Come and look at them or send your order. Catalogue free. Guaranteed as represented.

DRIED MILK.

What pure, sweet milk is for the babe, this dried, or evaporated product of pure, sweet milk is for the chicks. How they like it, too. Don't feed too much, though, for while it is most wholesome, it is very rich, almost 50 per cent. pure protein.

It is also an excellent food for the grown fowls. Our State chemist, who analyzed it for us, says so. It is a fine egg food, highly nitrogenous, hence economical to feed even at our regular price of $8.50 per cwt. We want many more to try it and will make the price for a short time $3 for 100 lbs., 30 lbs. for $1; 7 lbs. for 25 cents. Delivered anywhere in Los Angeles.

MINING—

I HAVE MINING PROPERTY FOR SALE near Parral, Chihuahua, Mexico. It is situated very near the renowned "Palmilla" mine, belonging to Pedro Alvarado, from which several millions have been taken out. It is on the same vein and near the Capuzaya mine. Will sell the whole mine, or my own individual interest in it, about 60,000 shares. Have also option for sale of valuable railroad property, timber lands, cattle ranches and mines in Chihuahua. The commission for sale of such will amount to nearly $300,000. Have also option for sale of valuable railroad property in Sonora, Mexico, and also mining property now in full operation with stamp mill and cyanide plant; the commission on sale will amount to about $30,000. I will sell these properties to bona fide capitalists, or sell my commission on the lot for part cash and transfer the options to such parties with bank references acceptable to the owners of the properties. For further particulars address S, box 204, TIMES OFFICE and Branch Office. 28

OFFICERS SLA FIGHT WI

Two Dead and O tacked When Th Warrant on Chief Oklahoma Creeks.

[ASSOCIATED PRES

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 27.—In a battle at Hickory Ground between a posse of five officers and Creek Indians of the Snake vations this evening, Edward of Checotah, and Herman Odom Checotah were killed.

Frank Jones and William Carr, mem of the posse, escaped without in and fled to the settlements, where news of the battle was telephoned Sheriff Odom of McIntosh county. Frank Swift, a member of the posse officers sent to the home of Chitti chief of the Snake clan of the Indians, to serve a warrant on chief, was probably fatally wounded.

Herman Odom, son of the Sheriff of McIntosh county, and Edward Baum, Marshal of Checotah, were killed right. Swift dragged himself from scene of the battle, and was later up by William Carr, one of the escaping officers, and taken to Pierce, station one mile away.

Frank Jones, another of the posse escaped, boarded a train at Pierce went to Checotah early in the bearing some details of the battle.

ATTACK A SURPRISE.

Officers having heard that the In and negroes were again peace after the trouble Thursday morn approached the cabin of Harjo, Hickory Ground, without fear of trouble. As they were in the act of entering the chief's yard, twenty guns leveled upon them from windows the house and around the corners. Odom and Baum fell dead, and Swift seriously wounded. Jones ran a yards and hid himself in a clump trees until the Indians disappeared. he returned to the bodies of his comrades. Finding them dead, he hurried to Pierce.

Within thirty minutes after the re of the battle reached Checotah a hundred men were armed. Every available gun and practically all the ammunition in town was taken. In hour fifty men were marching toward Hickory Ground. When the

His Desire Is to Run from Cover the University Student Who Seeks to Hurdle Study and Indulge at Pleasure in the "Larger Life" at Bottom of Every Outbreak.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hobos and "Hoboines," hobos wealthy and hobos intellectual, hobos common and seedy, and hobos with toboggan foreheads, were all contrasted and balanced before an assembly of University educators in the Auditorium Hotel today. The lecturer on plain and fancy vagrancy was Dean J. O. Reed of the University of Michigan. His auditors were members of the North Central Association of Colleges and secondary schools.

The aim of Dean Reed's volley at both gross and gilded trampdom was to run from cover the college student, particularly the fraternity member, who seeks to hurdle study and indulge at pleasure in the "larger life." This "man," Dean Reed hinted, is best depicted in the 59-cent posters advertising peg tops and bulldog pipes for the adornment of boarding-house "dens."

If we turn from the economic and commercial to the intellectual world we find a similar development of undesirable citizenship. In every high school, college and university in this country we find the intellectual hobo.

"He is at the bottom of every surprising outbreak of disorder. He may be an athlete or a fop, or both combined; he usually excels in dancing and other social functions and maintains toward the principal an attitude of armed neutrality or of open insurrection, according as he feels safe in assuming one or the other."

POET LEFT FOUR WIVES.

Problem of Dividing Drachmann's Estate Becomes a Serious One.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COPENHAGEN (Denmark) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The entire estate of the late Holger Drachmann, the poet and dramatist, has now been inventoried. In his villa at Skagen he left several big trunks packed with manuscripts, including two important dramas and a large number of unpublished poems, many of them from America. It is believed that he was the most prolific of any of the modern poets.

While everybody, including Drachmann himself, thought he possessed nothing, it turns out that he really died wealthy. There will, it appears, be great difficulty in dividing the estate, because the poet was married four times and all the wives are living. The last one recently was married to a Norwegian merchant.

MURDERED.

OFFICERS SLAIN IN FIGHT WITH INDIANS.

Two Dead and One May Die—Attacked When They Try to Serve Warrant on Chief of Snake Clan of Oklahoma Creeks.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 27.—In a battle at Hickory Ground between a posse of five officers and Creek Indians of the Snake factions this evening, Edward of Checotah, and Herman Odom of Checotah were killed.

Jones and William Carr, members of the posse, escaped without injury and fled to the settlements, where news of the battle was telephoned Sheriff Odom of McIntosh county. Swift, a member of the posse of officers sent to the home of Chitti, chief of the Snake clan of the Indians, to serve a warrant on the chief, was probably fatally wounded.

Odom, son of the Sheriff of county, and Edward Baum, Marshal of Checotah, were killed tonight. Swift dragged himself from the scene of the battle, and was later picked up by William Carr, one of the surviving officers, and taken to Pierce, a station one mile away.

Jones, another of the posse who escaped, boarded a train at Pierce and went to Checotah early in the evening, bear' g some details of the fight.

ATTACK A SURPRISE.

Officers having heard that the Indians and negroes were again peaceful after the trouble Thursday morning, approached the cabin of Harjo, at Hickory Ground, without fear of trouble. As they were in the act of entering the chief's yard, twenty guns were leveled upon them from windows of the house and around the corners. Odom and Baum fell dead, and Swift was seriously wounded. Jones ran a few yards and hid himself in a clump of trees until the Indians disappeared. Then he return d to the bodies of his comrades. Finding them dead, he hurried to Pierce.

Within thirty minutes after the report of the battle reached Checotah a hundred men were armed. Every available gun and practically all the ammunition in town was taken. In an hour fifty men were marching toward Hickory Ground. When the news reached Muskogee officers immediately issued a call for men, and a short time later a posse of fifty was ready to march. From Henrietta and Weleetka men will go to Pierce tonight. At 11 o'clock tonight Adjt.-Gen. Frank Canton of the Oklahoma National Guard has wired Col. Roy Hoffman of Chandler to immediately call four companies of the State guard for mobilization.

Companies at Oklahoma City, Chandler, Muskogee, and Durant probably will depart for Henrietta tonight.

A dispatch from Checotah says the Snake Indians have been purchasing rifles and ammunition there for a month and that they are supplied with powder and lead enough to last for two days.

CLIMAX OF THREATS.

Harjo, who has often within the last two years expressed his displeasure at the restraint of law, and who has often called his men into council for threatening officers of the law, is believed to have determined to make a final stand in behalf of his ideas of liberty. His band have been outlaws for years. It required the services of United States officers, and the threat to call for the State militia to quell his band last fall during a session of the council at Hickory Ground.

When Sheriff Odom received from Eufaula today the warrant for the arrest of Harjo the clerk admonished him that he would have trouble.

"The negroes are cowards," said Odom, "and there is no danger."

Officers from Henrietta visited Hickory Ground today and found it practically deserted. They returned late this afternoon and reported that four negroes killed in the fight of Thursday morning were buried today.

MILITIA UNDER ORDERS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GUTHRIE (Okla.) March 27.—At the telephonic request of Sheriff Odom of McIntosh, Gov. Haskell directed Adjt.-Gen. Canton to assume charge of the situation and order the necessary militia to the scene of tonight's battle.

The Chandler company has been ordered to hold itself in readiness to proceed at an instant's notice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hobos and "Hoboines," hobos wealthy and hobos intellectual, hobos common and seedy, and hobos with telegram foreheads, were all contrasted and balanced before an assembly of University educators in the Auditorium Hotel today. The aim of Dean Reed's volley at both green and gilded trampdom was to run from cover the college student, particularly the fraternity member, who seeks to hurdle study and indulge at pleasure in the "larger life." He was a rider for the Pony Express until that method of communication was transplanted by the railroads.

MISSOURI SUFRAGETTES.

Women to Invade Legislature This Week With Demand for Vote of People.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JEFFERSON CITY (Mo.) March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Early next week, probably Wednesday, suffragettes, headed by Mrs. Virginia Conkling Whitney of St. Louis, will invade the Missouri Legislature to demand that it submit to the voters an amendment to the Constitution, giving woman an equal rights with men in voting at all elections.

The Legislature is not in session today and most of the members are out of town, and what it is likely to do with the proposition cannot be satisfactorily forecasted.

Preceding sessions have refused to submit the question, but woman's influence in politics has increased, especially in the past two years during the anti-saloon wave.

PASSENGERS IN IGNORANCE.

Fall River Steamer, Helpless from Broken Paddle Wheel Is Towed Into Port.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—With the greater part of her thousand passengers unaware that an accident had happened, the steamer Providence of the Fall River Line, was towed into Newport early this morning from the vicinity of Point Judith, where, during the night, she had become disabled through the breaking of her port paddle wheel. Of the passengers on board about six hundred were school children bound for Washington from various sections of New England, and great was their astonishment when they awoke to find themselves at Newport instead of at New York.

When the Providence became disabled, wireless telegraphy was employed to call the steamer Commonwealth, of the same line, which was in the vicinity, and she stood by until the tug Teaser put in an appearance and took the Providence in tow for Newport.

All of the Providence's passengers were transferred to a special train which took them to New York.

MR. TAFT AND DR. ELIOT.

President of United States to Meet President of Harvard at Alumni Banquet.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 27.—President Taft and many other prominent men in public life will attend a dinner to be given Tuesday evening by the Washington Harvard Club. The occasion will be notable for the presence of Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard University, and his appearance will be somewhat in the nature of a farewell by the Harvard alumni in this city, in view of Dr. Eliot's resignation next May.

Others who will attend are Dr. Harvey Wiley, Senator Root, Senator C. W. Needham, Dr. C. W. Walcott, R. S. Woodward, Jerome D. Greene, Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale and Charles Francis Adams.

DIE IN BURNING HOME.

SCRANTON (Pa.) March 27.—At Greenwood, late last night the home of Mrs. Veronica Wochefeski was destroyed by fire and the woman and three daughters were burned to death. Two sons were badly injured before they were rescued by neighbors.

BANK MAY OPEN.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Comptroller of the Currency has issued certificate authorizing the First National Bank of Exeter to begin business with a capital of $25,000. E. J. Norcross, president; J. F. Duigan, vice-president; Fred Norcross, cashier.

Map showing position of Glendale.

BY THE FOOTHILLS.

PROSPEROUS GLENDALERS.

Very Thriving Suburb of Los Angeles.

Fine Foothill Town of Many Pretty Homes.

See What Rapid Transit Is Accomplishing.

BY E. C. PENTLAND.

If you board either a red or a yellow electric car in Los Angeles, you can reach Glendale in less than half an hour, and see one of the most picturesque, prosperous and attractive of the many suburbs of the City of the Angels. Glendale is the home of people of moderate means, the home of the merchant, the wage earner, and those who want the comforts, the pure, clear air of the fertile San Fernando Valley, and at the same time rapid transit to and from the city. Rapid transit is furnished by the two electric railroads now in operations to Glendale.

Glendale is growing rapidly, there being now in course of erection nearly 100 new buildings. These are mostly residences costing from $1500 up to as high as $10,000 each. Those who have investigated the conditions, and advantages of Glendale, state that real estate is being offered at exceptionally low prices. The town has a present population of about 3000, but this will probably be doubled in another year or two. It is distant from the business center of Los Angeles about seven miles. The time taken by the electric cars to reach it is about twenty-five minutes. The fare is 25 cents for a round trip, or, where you buy a coupon book, as low as 15 cents for a round trip. The Pacific Electric road (the red cars) take you to the west side of the town, while the Los Angeles Railway Company (the yellow cars) take you to a point on their line, two miles east of Glendale, and there you connect with a local electric road, recently built, called the Glendale and Eagle Rock Railway, which lands you through the east side of Glendale, on Glendale avenue and Fourth street. It seems probable that either one or the other electric roads will be built across the city soon, and thus there will be a loop made, so that for 25 cents a trip can be made from Los Angeles, out through Glendale, among its pretty homes and orange and lemon groves, and back to Los Angeles, by another route, with extensive transfer privileges in the city, a total distance of about fifteen miles. At present it is only a five-minute walk from one car line in Glendale, to the other, coming out on the Pacific Electric and going back by way of the Los Angeles Railway.

WHAT THE ACTING MAYOR SAYS.

Glendale is a city of the sixth class, having as a governing body five Trustees: T. W. Watson, president; Robert Blackburn, W. A. Anderson, Simeon Grant and J. A. Cole. President Watson, speaking of what the city has accomplished, and intends to do, said: "We have about 2000 acres in our townsite, and about half is platted to town lots, the other half being, in part, orange and lemon orchards. Within the last three years nearly every street within the platted portion of the city has been either treated to the petrolithic pavement process, or surface oiling, and many miles of cement walks and curbing have been built. At present there are in course of construction not less than five miles of street grading, and cement sidewalks, these walks being five feet wide, with a grass plot of six feet on each side. When the street paving is completed we will take up tree planting along the streets, it being the intention to have every street shaded and beautified. We also intend to call an election soon, and vote bonds, to the amount of $60,000 to erect a municipal plant for lighting the city. It is looked upon as probable that the recent construction of the Glendale and Eagle Rock Electric Railway into Glendale will have a tendency to create a demand for the use of our streets for further extensions of the electric lines, and a substantial revenue will result for the use of the streets. I do not believe we should give away these franchises as freely as has been done in the past. When the two electric roads are connected Glendale will be on an electric circuit, and a scenic route from Los Angeles, persons leaving on one electric line and returning on the other. Then the visitor can really see what a beautiful 'city of homes' we have."

WHY GLENDALE?

"Why have you selected Glendale as your future home?" I asked Mr. H. S. Donnell, a retired employé of the Southern Pacific Railroad, he having been with the engineering and maintenance of way departments for over thirty-seven years.

"Perhaps it would be easier," he said, "to answer your question by giving my reasons for not selecting some other town. There are so many advantages in Southern California climate, and social surroundings, beautiful cities, with their attractive homes, which appeal to a person in my position. I can call to mind some points of difference in the towns I have visited. All are attractive, and I could be content to live in many of them, and just why I decided on Glendale as my future home it will be hard to explain to you.

"In the first place is the climate. The '300 sunny days of Southern California' is a heritage which you possess, and which I wish to enjoy. In order to do so, I, with my wife, must locate where the sun shines. There are very many things which a man can secure through his own efforts, no matter where he lives, but a pleasant climate is not always one of them. He must come to the climate. So the first asset of Glendale is its climate, and this I find is as nearly perfect as any place where I have visited. The warm, sunny days, the cool nights, the fruits, the flowers that bloom from January to December, all are advantages which appeal to me.

"Another feature of Glendale, and one which I appreciate very much, is the sociable nature of the people whom I have met. They have given us of their fruit and their flowers, they have answered our questions pleasantly, and seem to extend to us a welcoming hand. While we want to enjoy the climate, we also want the companionship of congenial people, and Glendale seems to contain the sort of people we would enjoy neighboring with.

"I visited a number of the suburbs of Los Angeles, staying several days in each, and getting prices on property. It seems to me that the prices at Glendale, considering the present prosperity, and prospects of future growth, are lower than elsewhere, and while I am not buying on speculation, I do not want to pay more for property than it will bring, should I ever want to sell.

"Another advantage of Glendale is the excellent electric car service. I can, for only a trifle over 7 cents a trip, leave Glendale every half-hour, day or night, and reach the business center of Los Angeles within twenty-five minutes. The conductors and employés are courteous, and the management seems to really wish to make the service pleasant for the traveling public. I have been a railroad man so long I recognize that this is not mere chance, but that the instructions come from the headquarters of the company.

"Another advantage in Glendale, and Los Angeles as well, is the low cost of living. It is much less than in the State from which we came. The meats are no cheaper, but in this climate one does not need so much meat; while the fruits and the vegetables are very cheap, and one can almost live on them the year round. Taking a basis of spending $20 a month for our living, I believe we can live better for that sum in Glendale than for $30 where we recently lived. I am not going to knock the State where I came from, for it is a good one and has many advantages, but it is sufficient, is it not, when I tell you Glendale suits me better? My business interests will call me away a part of the year, but from October to April of each year we will spend in our home in Glendale."

WHAT A RESIDENT THINKS.

"What are the reasons for the prosperity I see manifest on every hand in your city?" I asked of J. W. Lawson, a resident of Glendale for the past two years.

"The fact that our schools are up to date, that our churches are of so many denominations, that we have fine mountain water, that the prices of real estate are low, compared to other sections, all combine to make us prosperous in Glendale."

"What about the building restrictions on Glendale property?"

"That is another matter of importance. The restrictions on building lots in Glendale are from $1500 to $3000, on a lot 50x150, or larger. This has a tendency to bring in a class of people who are of about the same social standing, and consequently the social conditions in Glendale are commented upon by residents and visitors, and pronounced ideal."

"How fast has your city been growing during the past four years?"

"I should judge that there have been 2500 lots sold during that time, and on these at least eight hundred residences, or stores, have been erected. We have built, in that time, two new grammar school buildings, costing $30,000, and we are now erecting a high school building costing $60,000, and several fine store buildings. We have free mail delivery every day, being a branch of the Los Angeles postoffice. Our business men have erected a Country Club building, which cost nearly $20,000. Of the ten church denominations represented, all are prospering. There have been three new church buildings erected this year.

"There has been a gradual increase in the prices of town property, the residence lots now selling at from $500 to $1500 each, and the tendency is still upwards. There are no vacant houses, and very seldom one for rent, the dwellings having been built for occupancy by the owners rather than tenants."

TOLD BY SECRETARY.

"What are Glendale's advantages?" I asked G. H. Baragar, secretary of the Glendale Board of Trade.

"In the first place, we are favored here in Glendale by location, as to drainage, and also on account of our altitude of from 600 to 700 feet, and the sea breezes, we have a very uniform and pleasant climatic condition. The people who have located in Glendale have been a very desirable class and they have invited their friends to join them in making a home here, so that the same conditions which have helped build up Glendale in the past will continue. We have no saloons, and it is very likely never will have. It may seem to some that a small town of only 3000 to 4000 must be dull, but I find it otherwise. I am kept busy every evening in the week filling my social engagements. We are so close to the city that at any time we can take advantage of the better grade of attractions there. Our city is now, and aspires to become a city of homes. We have all the advantages of the country, while we also have the conveniences of the city. We have two transcontinental railroads and two electric car lines which are catering to the wants of the community. Our orange, lemon and vegetable productions are of considerable importance, amounting to something like 1500 tons annually. Our four packing-houses are taking care of the present crops, but we should have a cannery here. The poultry business can be made a great success in Glendale. We have as fine orange and lemon groves as can be found in California. Our Verdugo Park, of several hundred acres, attracts large crowds locally, and also from Los Angeles, and as it is further improved will be still more popular.

"The business lines represented in Glendale are seven groceries, two hardware stores, two banks, two meat markets, two drug stores, sanatorium, newspaper, two dry goods stores, two plumbing shops, two tin shops, two feed stores, two furniture stores, three millinery stores, undertaker, two lumber yards, livery stable, two jewelry stores, twelve real estate agents, three hotels, tree nursery, shoe store, two bakeries, two planing mills, four fruit packing-houses, cement plant, two blacksmith shops, four dentists, four doctors, two attorneys, laundry, ten churches, four schoolhouses, operahouse, four barbers, two tailors, upholsterer, electric light and power plant (and soon a gas plant,) two telephone exchanges."

GLENDALE LEADERS.

The following are the names of persons who have interests in Glendale and are awake to its advantages: C. L. Chandler, J. W. Lawson, D. McDonald, C. B. Franklin, Claud O. Pulliam, F. M. McIntyre, C. H. Boyd, F. I. Marsh, J. C. Mason, J. J. Mesom, E. L. Robbins, J. A. Logan, T. W. Watson, G. H. Barager, F. H. Vesper, M. A. English, R. J. Perkins, B. F. Patterson, R. A. Blackburn, A. Leves, Edgar W. Pack, J. N. Sanborn, C. D. Thom, F. L. Osenberg, G. B. Woodbury, Thomas O. Pierce, F. H. Guernsey, Fred Deal, W. A. Anderson, E. V. Parker, R. S. Jones, Raymond E. Chase, T. W. Doyle, Frank Zett, L. H. Hurtt, R. A. Petersen, Frank Campbell, S. F. Hinkley, Mrs. E. M. Mitchell, C. E. Shaver, W. W. Burford, T. B. Collier, E. D. Goode, W. D. Buck.

MONEY IN VEGETABLES.

W. W. Burford is an authority at Glendale on the growing of vegetables. He says there are a number engaged extensively in the business of raising tomatoes, potatoes, onions, peas, sweet potatoes, etc. There will be set out in tomatoes this year nearly six hundred acres; also fifty acres in sweet potatoes; three hundred acres in Irish potatoes; one hundred acres in onions and three hundred acres in peas. The coming industry of this section, Mr. Burford thinks, is sweet potatoes, as they do exceedingly well. A new use for these potatoes is as feed for dairy cows, as they are said to be better than bran, will produce a better quality of milk and more of it. The sweet potato plants cost about $20 an acre, the usual crop being 600 boxes, which brings a return of about $350 an acre, and leaves a profit, over all expenses in the field, of about $200 an acre. On a ten-acre tract the profits would be $2000 a year. The land suitable for growing sweet potatoes sells for from $600 to $800 an acre, as all soils are not adapted to their growth at a profit.

ORANGES AND LEMONS.

The acreage of citrus fruits in and near Glendale is about 250 acres in oranges and 150 in lemons. The names of the growers are given as follows: E. M. Ross, 40 acres in lemons and 90 acres in oranges; Mrs. E. W. Wing, 25 acres oranges; J. P. Lukens, 10 acres lemons and 12 acres oranges; A. V. Fansett, 7 acres oranges and 3 acres lemons; Ed M. Lee, 10 acres oranges; L. H. Hurtt, 7 acres oranges; Fred Shearholtz, 4 acres lemons; Julius Kranz, 12 acres lemons and 5 acres oranges; Mrs. Flash estate, 25 acres oranges; T. Schroeder, 6 acres oranges; J. N. Williams, 6 acres oranges; Alva George, 5 acres oranges and 2 acres lemons; Mr. Moncton, 3 acres oranges and 2 acres lemons; Mr. and Mrs. Black, 20 acres oranges; Mrs. M. Z. Valentine, 2 acres lemons and 3 acres oranges; D. Campbell, 20 acres oranges; L. C. Brand, 12 acres oranges; W. H. Reynolds, 20 acres oranges; D. McNiven, 6 acres lemons and 3 acres oranges; W. H. Spinks, 10 acres oranges; D. E. Fuller, 5 acres oranges, 5 acres lemons; Albert Dow, 5 acres oranges, 3 acres lemons; Mrs. Griswold, 5 acres lemons; Sparr Fruit Company, 20 acres oranges and 30 acres lemons. The shipments amount to about 250 carloads each year, valued at about $350,000. In addition there are raised peaches, apricots, grapes and plums. Winter vegetables are also grown quite extensively.

WATER SUPPLY.

Nearly all of the land in the vicinity of Glendale has appurtenant to it a fixed proportion of the water of Verdugo Cañon. The Verdugo Cañon Water Company acts as the distributing agent of its stockholders (the land owners,) bringing it down in pipes to the several reservoirs from which it is generally distributed. The right to this water is unquestionable, and as it is distributed by gravity, without expensive pumping, it constitutes, as now developed, one of the most economical and satisfactory water systems in this part of the State. This supply has been supplemented from time to time by wells of various (but not great) depths throughout the valley, which have so increased the supply that there is now water for all purposes equal to the demand, while the very general success achieved in development by wells, assures the supply for the future. As for the quality of the water, it comes from springs in mountain sources and flows uncontaminated to the consumer.

BRIEF FREEDOM.

ELEPHANT ONCE MORE CAPTIVE.

IS CAUGHT AT COLTON AFTER A WILD NIGHT.

Its Path of Destruction Is Over Three Miles Long—Angeleno Files on Twelve Thousand Acres of Nitre Bed Along the Colorado River South of Needles.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 27.—"Nero," the fugitive elephant, which escaped from the Norris & Rowe circus last night, was captured this morning at Colton, after it had terrorized this community all night, and left in its wake a path of destruction over three miles long. Wrecked fences, barns, outhouses, demolished telephone poles and destroyed flower gardens testified to the big creature's gigantic strength.

The beast first visited the Lawson dairy in Lower G street. Lawson telephoned to the circus, but by the time attaches reached the spot the elephant had disappeared, and was heard in the jungles of Lytle Creek, smashing trees and spouting water. The attaches camped through the night about the spot, and at daylight routed the animal from the jungles. He took to the road, and headed for Colton.

Vehicles and automobiles approaching sighted the big beast bearing down upon them and, turning about, they put back to Colton with all speed. "Nero" was finally headed down the Southern Pacific freight yards, and was cornered on the platform of the freight house. An effort was made to get him into a box car, but the elephant leaped from the platform, and was driven into the stock pens half a mile further east. There he was chained and his imprisonment in a furniture car easily effected.

FILES ON NITER BED.

Arthur G. Munn of Los Angeles today filed on 12,000 acres of nitre bed along the Colorado River, forty miles south of Needles.

SUIT TO RESTRAIN.

John Woodbridge today brought action in the Superior Court through Attorney H. W. Nisbet of Los Angeles against the Woodbridge Chemical Works of this city, to restrain the company from selling his twenty-seven shares of stock in the corporation for delinquent taxes. He declares that of the 75,000 shares of capital stock but 4000 was represented at the stockholders' meeting when the assessment was levied, that the levy was illegal and is void. His brother, S. M. Woodbridge, is suing Thomas Blakely of the company to force an agreement by which Blakely was to pay him $600, and he was to transfer to Blakely all his stock, these exchanges to constitute a complete settlement of all accounts between them.

ENGINEER ARRESTED.

Engineer E. A. Somers of Salt Lake train No. 82 was arrested here at 1 o'clock p.m. on instructions from the police of Riverside, charged with wounding a Mexican. At first the prisoner denied the affair, but finally admitted that he had shot at the Mexican, though he supposed that his aim had been well over the fellow's head. The shooting occurred at Pachappa. Somers states that the Mexican threw a rock at the train, so he fired six shots at him. Somers lives at Los Angeles.

CHARGED WITH SHOPLIFTING.

Rafaela Alvarado, Vicenta Alvarado and Romaelda Alvarado, mother and two daughters, were arested this afternoon on complaint of Joe Cohn of Cohn's dry goods house, charged with shoplifting. When searched at the Police Station much plunder was taken from each. Cohn had watched the women pilfering as they walked from counter to counter, and waited until they had entered another store, when the arrest was made.

EUCALYPTUS EXPERIMENT.

A forest of eucalypti, comprising some 20,000 trees, will be set out at once by the Riverside Trust Company, on its lands along the channel of the Santa Ana River. These will be merely for experimental purposes, to ascertain which varieties are best adapted to this valley. When the final selection is made the company will set out over 500 acres. The trees to be set out now are the Rostrata, Cornycalsyx and Tereticornies.

SANTA BARBARA.

RIPLEY GIVES T'OTHER SIDE.

REPLIES TO CHARGE THAT THE RATES ARE EXTORTIONATE.

President of Santa Fe States That Railroads Are Greatly Underpaid for Services Rendered Government and Asserts Postal Deficit Is Due to Extravagance.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, March 27.—E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fé Railroad Company, was interviewed tonight in response to a published statement regarding the cost to the government of carrying the mails. In reply to the allegation that the railroads are charging the government extortionate rates, Mr. Ripley said:

"The statement that the government pays $12,000 a year for a car costing only $8000 has been many times made, and as many times contradicted. The fact is that the government pays $12,000 a year for a postoffice on wheels, and for handling it probably 400 miles a day, with all its paraphernalia, including from three to five employés, which puts an entirely different aspect on the matter.

"The saving to the railroads from reduction in car mileage if they were not obliged to furnish these traveling postoffices would be many times the amount paid for the use of the cars. It is easily capable of demonstration that the railroads are greatly underpaid for the services rendered the government.

"The adoption of the parcels post idea would greatly increase the deficit of the department, and the inevitable result would be greater concentration of business in the larger cities, and the consequent ruin of the country merchant for the benefit of the mail order business. The present deficit arises from extravagant management and the absurdly low rates on various descriptions of printed matter."

CHARGE OF MURDER.

Joe Fornaco, who shot Alexander Benetti in Montecito Thursday night, now faces a charge of murder. His victim died in the Cottage Hospital today, and the inquest will be held tomorrow morning. Fornaco, in the County Jail, is suffering from a severe beating which he alleges he received at the hands of Benetti and others of a group he afterward fired into with his shotgun.

Rain ceased tonight with the season's total at 35.58 inches.

Dennis Carroll, who was run over Thursday night and suffered the loss of both legs while trying to board a south-bound train, died late last night at St. Francis Hospital. He was a member of the Pinole, Cal., Order of Eagles.

We make a specialty of removing superfluous hair, moles, warts, birth marks and guarantee our work absolutely.

REMEMBER—We use the latest scientific FIVE NEEDLE method so extensively used in the East, and remove 250 to 300 hairs per hour, while no operator using only one needle can remove over 60 per hour and do good work. We have tried it for years.

REMEMBER—We guarantee to kill every hair we treat, and should any return we will gladly remove them FREE OF CHARGE and thank you for the privilege of doing so. Try it; it's your only hope.

REMEMBER—The same number of hairs we remove, costing you $10, would cost you $25 elsewhere. One treatment will convince you how quickly we do it. NO PAIN, NO SCARS—this we guarantee.

REMEMBER—Your face is getting worse daily. Pulling, cutting and depilatories only increase the growth. A talk with us will do no harm. Consultation free.

PROF. W. E. KING, Los Angeles' celebrated psychic, is permanently located here. His honesty, test of time and 23 years' continuous practice as a psychic have proved beyond all doubt that PROF. W. E. KING is the leader of his profession.

LIVE AND LET LIVE.
Never before in the history of occult science has a man of PROF. W. E. KING'S professional standing consented to place his services at the disposal of the public for such a nominal consideration. Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders and that many of its citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic PROF. W. E. KING has decided to place his consultation fee within the reach of all.

EXTRAORDINARY PSYCHIC POWER, combined with his superior knowledge of occult forces, enables him to read human life with unerring accuracy from infancy to old age; his powers are wonderful and indisputable; his advice is reliable, his information clear, concise and to the point; will tell you every hope, fear, ambition, better than you could tell it yourself.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO SEE A PSYCHIC WHY NOT SEE THE BEST?
As the best is always the cheapest in the end. Better consult no psychic at all than one who is unable to help you, as false prophets do more harm than good, as they leave you in a worse condition than before by their false advice, based upon guesses; but PROF. W. E. KING has an established reputation; testimonials and credentials from thousands of your own citizens and friends.

"Arise! Throw off thy shackles!" Exchange sorrow for joy, darkness for light. "Be master of your own destiny."

SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS, pointed out to all. The grand results obtained by those who have consulted W. E. King is positive proof of his superior power to reveal the mysteries of the future. When truth is revealed, as it always is when they consult the peer of all life readers, the universal expression is, I am satisfied and happy since I consulted W. E. King.

Call and he will guide you with certainty higher than human power; tells you the truth, good or bad.

STANDING CHALLENGE:
$5000.
FOR HIS EQUAL.
$5000.

Others may come and others may go, but W. E. KING always remains.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap, clap-trap methods, start from the beginning and consult PROF. W. E. KING. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

PROF. W. E. KING FORETELLS MANY GREAT EVENTS.
Some of the prophecies made by PROF. W. E. KING and which were fulfilled to the letter and day were:

The explosion of the United States warship Bennington at San Diego, Cal. It was predicted that on that day the government would lose a ship in the Pacific.

PROF. W. E. KING, Psychic, had warned the public of San Francisco's earthquake of 1906 for years.

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the Japanese-Russian war. The day of the month and year was predicted on which hostilities would be begun and the victory of the Japanese.

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the late President McKinley's assassination at "Buffalo Exposition."

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the assassination of Carter Harrison the elder three weeks before the weak-minded Prendergast fired the fatal shot at Chicago's chief executive.

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the earthquake at Kingston, Jamaica, W. I.; the earthquake in Chile; the Thaw-White tragedy; also predicted the Galveston flood.

PROF. W. E. KING, Psychic, has foretold many great events that took place on the day set.

Recommended by a New York Judge: August 20, 1905—I cheerfully recommend Prof. King as a gifted psychic. He predicted my election. JUDGE F. B. CROWELL, Supreme Judge.

FROM LILLIAN RUSSELL, THE WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS.
I was greatly impressed with PROF. W. E. KING'S reading. His powers are truly marvelous. He develops in one a force that enables them to attract people, to interest them and to please them to their good and to your advantage without the least effort on one's part. His advice and assistance have been of great benefit to me.

FROM A PROMINENT MINISTER.
I desire to bear evidence to the genuineness of PROF. W. E. KING'S work. God gives to us an intuition whereby we may guide our lives. That PROF. W. E. KING possesses this guiding power to a marvelous degree is evident. The fact that his clients are his warmest and truest friends is alone a tribute to his sincerity and honest methods in dealing with all. He has rendered me immeasurable assistance. Rev. W. C. Jessup.

FROM M. ROTHSCHILD, THE WELL-KNOWN FINANCIER.
For the past five years PROF. W. E. KING'S advice and assistance has been of great benefit to me. I have tested nearly every psychic in this country, and find PROF. W. E. KING'S advice reliable and far superior to any that I have ever met.

To Whom It May Concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. W. E. KING, as a psychic of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental psychicship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his services.
Dr. John Westerfield,
President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.
Chesterfield, Ind., September 4, 1896.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 332 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE.

305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 25 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environment; tells about children, when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE—telling everything about one's self worth knowing, being in truth one of the best guides in life that the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of others—showing how best to deal with those you come in contact—and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN was an expert astrologer; SIR ISAAC NEWTON and the famous astronomer KEPLER practiced astrology; PROF. GARNETT, the great English scholar and Librarian of the British Museum, wrote some of our best works on astrology.

PROF. ALTHOUSE, in September, 1908, PUBLICLY predicted—by the PLANETS—the election of TAFT and the defeat of BRYAN.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Florence Roberts, Paul de Longpre, Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, David Starr Jordan, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, Sousa, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Caruso, Josef Hoffman, Huntington, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, Sembrich, Jefferson, Lillian Russell, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Fritzi Scheff, Schumann-Heink, etc. He stands at the very head of his profession, and his skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has positively read all these and many other noted persons; he does not deceive the public in this respect—like the humbug reader, who claims to have read noted people, to have been in India, etc., etc.—all false statements.

LOUIS JAMES says: "I wish to say that your reading was entirely SATISFACTORY."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings—from the HOROSCOPE AND HAND—were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

DR. ALEX. J. McIVOR-TYNDALL, says: "Your work in ASTROLOGY and PALMISTRY is highly spoken of on all sides."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Highest grade of work given; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED. PRICES within the reach of all, but no cheap 50c humbug readings by PROF. ALTHOUSE. Daily and evening, Sunday 10 to 2.

WANTED— $150,000—On central business property, worth $300,000; it's a 50 per cent. loan, but it's better than a 35 per cent. loan in locations that are less secure. The income is only about $15,000 per annum, but if you "have to take it for the loan" you could struggle along on that income by close economy until you starved to death; so don't let your "friend" persuade you that 4 per cent. is better than 10 per cent. For further particulars address Sole Agent, V, box 10, TIMES OFFICE. Will divide regular commission with agent. 28

AN EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD AND MOST unusual business opportunity is herewith offered to any man or woman who desires to step right into a prosperous, attractive and growing business, right in the heart of the business district, in this city. No expert or technical knowledge necessary to profitably conduct this business; ordinary business capacity all that is required; disagreement between business associates sole cause for this advertisement. The entire proposition can be purchased for $8500, or a controlling interest can be purchased. Don't answer this unless you mean business. Details and bank references cheerfully given to responsible parties. Act promptly if you want this proposition; minimum profits under competent management should be not less than $100 per week, and susceptible of being quadrupled. Address S, box 3, TIMES OFFICE. 28

THOMAS ROSE, Yard Master.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., March 24, 1909.

MR. B. R. SEABROOK, Inventor Seabrook-Box Differential Railway Axle Coupler, 501-2-3 Herman W. Hellman Bldg., Los Angeles, California.

DEAR SIR: Referring to our several conversations, had in reference to your invention, you know how skeptical I have been in regard to the breaking efficiency of a car equipped with your device. My opinion was that you were making a job for the wrecker, and that when your car went out a wrecking car would have to go behind it. I was not satisfied with your explanation, but at noon on the 12th of March, 1909, under the direction of Mr. I. C. Hicks, master mechanic, I arranged to take engine No. 2290, with Engineer John Culey, and in the presence of Mr. Hunt, agent, Mr. Parker, Mr. Box and a number of others, proceeded to give your differential coupler the following tests:

We first tried it on a 7½ degree curve at a speed of approximately four miles per hour, and then over the same piece of track at a speed of 25 miles per hour, but in both cases I failed to find where the flange on the outside of the wheel ground against the rail, demonstrating its efficiency in flange and rail resistance.

We then took the car to the reverse curves on the cut-off and proceeded to give it the same tests, with identically the same results. We then went to the main line, and not satisfied with personal observation, we chalked the flanges of the wheel on the outside of the curve. This, I think, was on the 10-degree curve, where our large engines have failed to enter successfully. We gave the car a slow and fast test, proving conclusively that there was no friction of the flange against the curve, as the chalk was undisturbed throughout the test.

We then proceeded to No. 11, and tried the braking power in the following manner: Going at the rate of 25 or 30 miles per hour, we made every possible test sufficient to satisfy a skeptical railroad man, as to the braking efficiency of a car equipped with your patent. We were all satisfied, that due to the differential axle, the braking efficiency was very much increased, and I feel that we could let a train of cars down a hill with as much or more safety, equipped with differential axles, than if they were equipped with the present rigid axles.

I feel that it is nothing more than justice to you and your patent that I explain myself on this question, after contending that the braking efficiency would be diminished. You understand that these tests were made with oil car No. 96307, the same being loaded to its full capacity with water.

You can use this letter in any way you see fit to further the interests of the Seabrook-Box Differential Railway Axle Coupler. This is an apology for the abuse I gave you before I made the test of the car.

Yours very truly, (Signed) THOS. ROSE, Yard Master.

Santa Fe oil car No. 96307 can be seen Sunday, March 28th, and Monday morning, March 29th, by calling at the Santa Fe yard master's office. This point can be reached by taking the green Boyle Heights car, which goes east on Third street. Get off at the Santa Fe roundhouse, on the corner of Santa Fe avenue and Fourth street. Call at the yard master's office, under the viaduct, where he will be pleased to show you to the location of the car.

Watch the daily papers for further information on the Seabrook-Box Differential Railway Axle Coupler.

Those wishing to purchase stock may call at 44 N. Raymond avenue, Pasadena, 224 West Third street, Los Angeles, or at our general offices.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

BAIRDSTOWN IS LATEST FIELD.

Company Organized to Drill There for Crude.

Exclusive Pasadena May Be Invaded by Wells.

Recently Invented Machine Cuts Rock Rapidly.

Tomorrow will be begun operations to test a new field, and a new method of drilling. At Bairdstown, the Okell Core Drill Company, composed of Max Livingstone, and G. E. Okell, owners of the new machine that is to be used, have acquired 100 acres of possible oil land on what is known as the Evans property, two blocks from the station. No work has ever been done there, but the Standard's recently acquired land on the Rapheto ranch, is only about a mile distant. A good strike would mean the opening of many wells between Los Angeles and Pasadena.

The machine to be tested is the invention of Mr. Okell, who put down some of the first wells in local fields. It combines the water well tools for going through gravel and sands, the hydraulic rotary rig for shales and a new device for boring through hard rock at the rate of two feet an hour.

The contrivance is a core barrel, ten feet in length. Water is run down through the swivels and mixed with it is a small quantity of abrasive, which gets between the cutting edges and the rock so that the revolving barrel grinds it, cutting a thin channel around the edge of the hole, working its way downward and encasing, as it were, the entire contents of the hole in solid form. When it has gone down to its full length, wedges are applied to hold the core fast, and it is drawn to the surface, leaving a perfectly straight and well-rounded hole. A very distinct advantage is that by bringing up the core in solid form, the formation can be examined and its character fully determined at every step. Many thousands of dollars would have been saved in wells that eventually failed had this been possible sooner.

Wellman Oil Company.

The Wellman Oil Company was organized on the 22d inst. to take over the southwest quarter of section 36, township 12, north of range 24 west, in Sunset. The concern is capitalized for $500,000. The option calls for $100,000 to be paid to the former owners of the property. Its holders have paid $15,000, and loaned $35,000. Additional treasury stock has been issued, fully paid, at $80 a share, to cover the amounts advanced by the first holders of the option, and 2375 shares have been optioned to the stockholders at $80 each, to provide for the balance of the purchase money, and working capital. Further payments on the option have been extended until the final determination of the present litigation over the title. Work on the property will be commenced soon. The officers are: C. O. Morgan, president; W. E. Mitchell, vice-president; G. G. Lawrence, secretary, and W. F. Young, treasurer.

Standard Opens Office.

As a result of its new policy of field development, the Standard will open an office in Los Angeles in the Douglas building with Frank Fether, who has been superintending the drilling in Monterey county, and who was assistant to General Superintendent Atwell, in charge. He will control all production south of Kings City. He has been with the Standard less than a year, and was formerly superintendent of the Monte Christo at Kern River and of the Twenty-five at Midway. Hitherto the Standard has had only its refined oil sales department represented here.

An office has been opened at Bakersfield, with J. R. McAllister in charge.

"RECIPROCITY DAY."

To Be Observed, Wednesday, by Congress of Mothers—Interesting Programme Arranged.

"Reciprocity Day" will be observed by the Congress of Mothers, Wednesday, at Polytechnic High School. Mrs. Catharine Pierce Wheat has arranged an attractive programme. The meeting will open at 10 o'clock in the morning with music by the Polytechnic Orchestra. After the invocation, by Rev. William MacCormack, Mrs. W. W. Murphy, president emeritus of the congress, and Mrs. Chalmers Smith, State president, will extend greetings. County Superintendent of Schools Mark Keppel will make an address and committees will report. The feature will be the answering of vital questions by Mmes. L. L. Mitchell, Dana Bartlett, Jessie B. Allen, H. R. Boynton, A. L. Hamilton, Theophile Colville, Marshall Stimson, W. H. Bayley, Dr. Sarah Morris and Prof. E. J. Lickety. A reading will be given by Mrs. C. Q. Stanton, and the morning session will close with the singing of "America."

The afternoon meeting will begin at 2 o'clock and an address upon "The Larger Motherhood," will be made by Mrs. Clausine B. Mann of Orange, N. J., a notable worker in the Mothers' Congress and a brilliant clubwoman.

NORMAL SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

Reorganize After Vacation—Ask Governor to Sign Bill Granting Strip of Land to City.

For the first time in three months, owing to the death of John Wasson, president, and the absence of Richard Melrose at the State Legislature, the board of trustees of the State Normal School held a meeting on Thursday. They passed resolutions on the death of Mr. Wasson and elected Dr. Lewis Thorpe to the vacancy, and A. B. Cass was elected to complete the board of trustees.

Of special interest was the action of the board approving the bill now in the hands of the Governor, and asking him to sign it, which dedicates a strip of ground to the city of Los Angeles for the widening of Fifth street, which is to be opened through to Flower street.

Dr. Thorpe, A. B. Cass and J. F. Millspaugh were chosen to represent the board at the meeting of all the normal school trustees in San Francisco on April 9.

President Millspaugh reported the number of students enrolled at the school this year to be 632, and stated that there will be 250 graduates during the year.

MUCH INTEREST is being manifested in two, big, forthcoming Mt. Washington events—the opening of the Los Angeles and Mt. Washington Incline Railway, and the tryout of high power automobiles on the incline. Both events will attract thousands of people and will be in the nature of public celebrations. Both will take place following the completion of the incline, which the contractors state is now only a matter of a few days.

Home building activity continues vigorously on the mountain summit, and plans for nearly a dozen more fine new homes are now being drawn. Rapidly and surely, Mt. Washington—highest and most picturesque of Los Angeles residence districts—is coming to its own.

INCLINE CARS NEARLY READY

Various Parts Are Now Being Fitted Together on the Mountain—Road Will Be Tested By Experts In a Few Days.

The bodies are being fitted on the trucks of the incline cars and everything will be in readiness for the first test of Los Angeles' newest railroad in a few days. The engineers, the builders and directors of the costly little railroad are now anxiously awaiting the completion of the cars in order that the railroad may be given its first professional test. Following this try-out, arrangements will be immediately made for the public opening of the road. An elaborate programme is being prepared by the directors. The dedication will be fittingly celebrated with a fine musical programme and addresses by prominent men. In the evening there will be a display of fireworks. All Southern California is invited to be the guest of Mt. Washington on Incline Opening Day.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPH

Local Manufacturer Comments Highly on Advantages Possessed By Mount Washington For Wireless Station.

A local manufacturer of wireless telegraphic apparatus claims that Mt. Washington will make an ideal location for a wireless station, and it is altogether probable that a station of this character will be established on the highest point of the mountain some time within the near future. The wireless station will add materially to the many attractions that this big eminence already possesses.

How to Reach Mt. Washington

Mt. Washington is now reached by L. A. Ry. yellow Garvanza car. Off at Mt. Washington Drive (formerly Ave. 41,) thence by boulevard to summit one mile by easy ascent. Incline railway in operation in April, direct to property.

LIKE VIEW FROM BALLOON

Well-Known Aeronaut Describes Outlook From Mt. Washington Almost Equal to View From Balloon in Mid-air.

A well-known aeronaut who has made several ascensions in this locality, in an interview with the writer this week, said: "The view from the top of Mt. Washington is a great deal similar to the prospect you get when you sail over this territory in a balloon. Mt. Washington stands in the center of a wonderful 'panoramic circle'—if I may use that rather unusual phrase. From its summit you actually get a birds-eye view of mountains, cities, valleys and the ocean. What better view can you get in a balloon 1,000 feet above the earth? You really don't get a better view. Few residence sections in any of the great cities of the world offer the magnificent advantages and possibilities of Mt. Washington. A home on this glorious elevation should be ideal indeed."

A BOILER HEATER THAT HEATS

Notice the disc has a separator placed in it to compel the water to pass through in thin sheets, which makes the heating surface large and the heat from the powerful blue flame burners passes through holes cast in these discs. In the process of heating the water has to pass through five or six of these discs before it is discharged in the boiler and the result is a large volume of hot water in a very short time. The burners are arranged to get all the heat possible out of the fuel, burning a large amount of oxygen. They have patent adjustable gas cocks. The heater has a cast iron jacket with a removable pocket elbow, which catches any burnt sulphur in the gas and prevents it from clogging the heater. They are made non-explosive and are easily kept clean. Guaranteed satisfactory or money refunded in 30 days. They are sold for $15.00, connected.

DETROIT JEWEL
The Original and Genuine

Detroit Jewels are unique from the fact that they are the only gas ranges in the United States that have been persistently counterfeited in name. By appropriating the name "Jewel" they reap the benefits of its reputation, but, from the United States Court's recent decision against them these people have got to stop, so any one offering you a Jewel not a "Detroit Jewel," which is the genuine, is trying to work off on you one of those counterfeits.

The great features of the genuine Jewel are—the highest grade of gas ranges made in the United States, the burners producing the hottest fire known to gas without the use of a blow pipe; burning one-half the gas of the average stove, they make an intensely hot fire, bake and brown top and bottom and both ends alike without turning the bread. They are made of the very best material scientifically constructed and cost no more than those gas stoves made out of common stove pipe steel and covered with a nice, black Japan or painted a dead black to deceive you. Your money back in 30 days if these ranges do not work entirely satisfactorily.

Chino Ranch

Adjoining Pomona, with a Population of 12,600—and Ontario, Population 8,000

Lands on the Chino Ranch, bought at the present prices---from $100 to $225 an acre---improved and put under cultivation, will double in value within a few years. A practical farmer can buy land here, make his first payment, and meet all future payments from the products of the soil. The foregoing statements, made advisedly, can be fully substantiated.

Products of the Ranch

Among the principal products grown on the Chino Ranch are Alfalfa, Sugar Beets, Potatoes, English Walnuts, Citrus and Deciduous Fruits, Vegetables, Small Fruits and Berries. Dairying and Poultry Raising are also profitable industries here.

Abundant Water Supply

There is not a better watered ranch in Southern California. The water supply is practically unlimited. Land is sold with or without water. A large number of Artesian Wells have already been developed—and in no instance has a well been known to fail.

DAILY CITRUS REPORT OF EASTERN MARKET.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

Glenwood Groves Oranges Always Bring Top Market Prices

Look at the Eastern market reports any day—you'll see that L. V. W. Brown's (Glenwood Groves) oranges always command the best prices of any oranges on the market.

This is a significant—a vital—fact—a fact that no prospective investor in orange lands can possibly afford to overlook.

Glenwood Groves produces the best oranges—the oranges that bring the highest prices—because Glenwood Groves possesses the soil—the climate—the natural orange-growing advantages—such as positively cannot be found in any other orange-growing section in the world.

Records prove conclusively that oranges at Glenwood Groves in the past fifteen years have paid a clear net profit of 20 per cent.

These are the facts that confront you, Mr. Investor.

You can buy orange groves today at Glenwood Groves—only ten minutes by electric car from Riverside—for

$500 to $1000 Per Acre

Send for illustrated booklet, which gives you the facts you want to know about orange groves.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Saturday brought few changes in the local market. One of these was a decline in eggs, candled and case-count locals both going off half a cent on former prices. This was due to the heavy arrivals, 834 cases, and came against the predictions of certain market factions which have been stating that the market can do nothing but advance. Eastern eggs are arriving slowly, and a good portion of them are not going into storage, but are offered on the street and are selling well there. As a result, the present market will hardly make any decided advances in the immediate future, particularly since the season for heavy receipts is only at hand and the month coming is the month in which the majority of storage for the season takes place. On account of this storage the market will undoubtedly rule firm, but will not go any higher. Prices throughout the East have been coming down gradually until they are averaging several cents lower than eggs in California.

Butter arrivals were 24,600 pounds. The price of the week, 52½ cents per two-pound roll on creamery extras, has been sustained and the outlook for the next seven days, according to a number of dealers, is for the same price or lower if receipts become very heavy.

Cheese has been selling well during the past few days, and the decline in northern fresh has accelerated the demand for that variety. Other varieties are not extremely firm. Receipts during the week have been heavy, but fell off considerably yesterday, when only 781 pounds were reported in.

The firmer feeling in potatoes continues. Any first-class stock, really fancy, will bring a premium above the present quotations. There is a great amount of second-class goods on the market and it is this which is keeping prices down. Arrivals were about 8 cars.

Onions dropped sharply yesterday morning with receipts of good proportion from outside States. One of the causes for the decline also lies in the poor grade of the onions on hand. Much of the stock has begun to sprout, and for that reason is worth little. Receipts reported from the neighboring territory were light.

Beans have been holding firm. Small whites are moving slowly at $6 a hundred, while there has not been the movement expected in other varieties. Arrivals have been too small to reckon with, and all of the dealers are selling their stock from accumulations. Sweets have been holding steady, and extra fancy potatoes have been selling as high as $2 a hundred.

Asparagus dropped yesterday again, after showing more firmness with light arrivals occasioned by northern rains. The best grass on the street brought only 8 cents. Others sold as low as 4 cents. Tomatoes are moving from $1.25 to $1.40 a crate. Bell peppers are holding firm and cucumbers are up fractionally. The best hothouse stock sold as high as $3 a dozen.

The decline in ham, bacon, lard and other pork products, which started last Tuesday in one or two varieties, has become general and all of these are down from ⅛ to ¼ cent a pound. Fresh meat and live stock are unaltered.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

CONSOLIDATED MINES ACTIVE.

LEADS TRADING WITH SALES OF THIRTY THOUSAND SHARES.

Six Thousand of Clark Copper Handled—Union Oil and Associated Fractionally Higher—Profit-Taking Lowers Home Telephone Preferred Quotations.

On the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, yesterday, sales of Consolidated Mines amounted to 30,000 shares. Prices ranged from 2 to 2⅝ for regular delivery. The close was at 2½@2 5-8.

Clark Copper closed at about the same level as on Friday. Six thousand shares sold at 20¼@20½. Johnnie Mining and Milling was handled at 20½.

Union Oil was fractionally higher, but trade on the floor was of small volume. At 105.25 five shares changed hands. Off board, 25 shares sold at 105.25@105.00. The stock closed 5-8 point higher in the bid, and ½ point up in the asked price, at 105.25@105.75. Union Provident was quoted at 103.75@104.00, up ¼ and off 3-8 point, respectively. It was not handled, nor was United Petroleum, which closed at 165.00 bid, off ¼ point.

Ten shares of Associated Oil were sold at 37.50, and the stock was quoted at 37.50@37.75, up ¼ in each quotation. Amalgamated Oil was ½ point higher on the bid, at 86.00@90.00. Brookshire Oil closed with a 5-point gain in the asking price at 1.90, closing without a bid. Central was quoted at 83@91, off ¼, and up the same amount, respectively. Rice Ranch was off 5 points in the bid, closing at 1.20@1.35.

Globe was dealt in at 23¾, and closed at that bid. It was offered at 24.

Profit taking in Home Telephone preferred pulled that stock down to a close at 60.00@61.25, off 1 point, and 1¾ points, respectively. Sales amounted to 51 shares at 62.50@61.00. Common was not handled, and closed at 16.25@17.00, off ¼ and ½ point, respectively.

San Diego Home Telephone was in demand, and 40 shares changed hands at 32.00@32.50. The close was at 31.50@32.50, up 1½ points in the bid, and down as much in the asked price.

Bank stocks and bonds were inactive.

Trading, last week, amounted to 180,726½ shares of stock, valued at $98,309.75. Eleven bonds sold for $10,720; 318½ shares of industrial stocks for $10,768.75, and 19,787 shares of oil issues for $60,194. Mining shares handled numbered 160,600, valued at $13,452.

LOS ANGELES-NEVADA EXCHANGE.

IMPROVEMENT PRONOUNCED.

MINING STOCK PRICES FIRMER AND SOME HIGHER.

Florence and Consolidated Are Best Boosted of the Goldfield Leaders and Score Sharp Advances in the Closing Quotations — Eleven Hundred Shares of Daisy Are Sold.

There was pronounced improvement in the mining market on the Los Angeles-Nevada Exchange yesterday. Trading was active and prices were firmer and in many cases sharply higher.

While neither Florence nor Consolidated were handled, the demand for these issues resulted in substantial boosts in quotations.

Florence closed at 3.45 bid and was offered at 3.55, showing an advance of 12½ and 15 points, respectively. Good news from the mine and the improved market for the stock in San Francisco had much to do with this.

Consolidated closed at 8.12½@8.30, up 27½ and 20 points, respectively.

Daisy was handled to the extent of 1100 shares at 49@50, regular delivery. The close was at 49@52, up 2 points in the bid.

Combination Fraction closed at 1.03@1.04, after sales of 1100 shares at 1.07@1.04 regular; at 1.06, seller ten, and at 1.05, seller three days. There was an advance of 1 point in the bid.

Montana sold at 65 in small quantities, but closed in good demand, as did the remainder of the Tonopah list. Kewanas was traded in at 17@16, regular, and at 15¼, seller three days; Leon Gold and Silver at 23, Clark Copper at 20, and Red Hills at 10.

California Hills sold at 5¼, Eureka at 3¼, Consolidated Mines at 2@2½, North American Mining at 5, and Blue Bull at 12.

Ten shares of Edison Electric preferred changed hands at 82.50, and the same number of Merchants' Bank stock at 75.00.

Eleven Union Oil rights sold at 10.00, and 30 shares of the stock at 105.25.

LOS ANGELES-NEVADA EXCHANGE QUOTATIONS.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

BULL NEWS IN RICH SUPPLY.

ENOUGH TO CONVERT THE MOST PESSIMISTIC BEARS.

Scare Over Nevada Stocks Now Seen to Be Due Solely to Manipulation—Florence Strike Exciting. President of Goldfield Consolidated Company Sells His Interest.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 524 Citizens' National Bank Bldg.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—There has been enough bull news around the exchange today to convert the most pessimistic bear. For the past six months, because of manipulation looking to securing control of properties such as Kewanas and others in this class, these have been kicked and cuffed around until the most ardent believers in Nevada stocks have been either scared or forced out of their holdings. That this result was brought about by pure manipulation is now apparent, and the ownership now rests in strong hands.

The authentic statement is made, today, from New York that Senator Nixon, president of the Goldfield Consolidated Company, has sold his entire interest in Consolidated to eastern millionaires, getting nearly $8 a share for the stock.

A telegram received from Goldfield from the Florence Company, said that a strike had been made, Thursday, running $17,000 to the ton. This accounts for the big buying, most of which comes from insiders and it looks as though the stock would go higher.

The best-posted mining men who have come from Nevada, during the past two weeks, are a unit in agreeing that the physical conditions are better now, from a mining standpoint, than ever before in the history of the State. If certain changes were made in the management of at least one of the banner Goldfield companies, its stock would sell considerably higher than it does.

It is believed here, tonight, that Goldfield Consolidated will very soon cross $10, not because Senator Nixon has sold out his interest, but because of the intrinsic value of the property.

There is no question but that the strike made, three weeks ago, on Combination No. 1, is the biggest showing of ore for the work done ever uncovered in the State. Daisy, Fraction, and the better class of Rawhides will all share in the prosperity which seems in store.

Important announcements are expected regarding at least one of the Rawhides.

The close on the New York curb was strong and Nevada stocks were in demand. Goldfield Consolidated closed 10 points up from the opening, and 25 points above last night. Florence was up 7½ points from the opening, and 12 points above yesterday. Daisy gained 4 points; Fraction was up 7½ points, and Kewanas closed even.

The Tonopahs were strong. Belmont was up 3 points; Tonopah Mining was 7.27½ bid, with no selling.

The market during the week has certainly been erratic enough to suit the most exacting scalper. Consolidated closed last Saturday night at 7.67½ bid. Florence was 3.06 bid, but sold down on Monday to 2.55. Fraction closed at 96 bid. Kewanas was 10c bid, offered at 11c. Atlanta showed a 2-point gain. Sandstorm is up 5c. A week ago this class of stocks was neglected.

Following are the closing bid and asked prices, with sales on the formal close:

SHARES AND MONEY.

BULLS PROD THE MARKET UPWARD.

NO NEWS TO ACCOUNT FOR THE SUDDEN CHANGE.

Constant Manifestation of Indifference to Bear Reports Encourages the Speculative Element to Jump on for an Advance and the Close Justifies Their Judgment.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—The latent forces which have been gathering in the stock market came into the open today and carried the market vigorously and quite comprehensively upwards. There was no conspicuous change in the news to account for the fresh upward impetus, but the constant manifestation of indifference to unfavorable news made a growing impression on speculative sentiment, and encouraged the profit element to embark on bolder operations for an advance. The day's market was ascribed still to professional initiation in large part, but operations were conducted with much greater freedom. The continued scarcity of stocks made the upward movement easy. Minor low grade stocks were first affected, but the higher grade speculative favorites came into the movement, and the whole market broadened out materially after the hesitation was overcome. The prospect of a coming period of world wide ease of money is a factor in the situation which is counted upon to stimulate speculation. The outgo of gold from New York seemed to have terminated and New York borrowers find it impossible to secure funds to advantage in foreign markets. The temporary hardening of money rates in New York also has given place to renewed easing tendency. Speculative operators were inclined to make much of the reported early return of E. H. Harriman to the financial district, which presaged active steps in various enterprises for the properties connected with his name. The presence in his company of President Louis H. Hill of the Great Northern added to the speculative impression made by reports of his movements.

The half monthly decrease of 3800 in the number of idle freight cars reported was a helpful factor in the day's advance. The rise continued with increasing animation and buoyancy up to the very end of the day.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $2,454,000.

United States 3's coupons have advanced ½ per cent. during the week.

The proceeds of this will go into further development and acquisition of addi proven oil land. Although the Company has been in oper only about 8 months, the net earnings are now at the $42,000.00 per year. The sinking of six additional wells double this before the first of January next. Therefore present offering is most desirable.

Union and Union Rites

One event of the week has attracted especial atten the Exchange. I refer to the listing and operations in Oil "Rites," which opened Monday with sales at $6.00 per rite for one share, and a later advance to $12.00. The course, resulted in heavy sales and a subsequent decline excellent demand that existed and still exists for these significant, and I am of the opinion that any material Union Oil Stocks is altogether an improbability, as appears to be an unlimited amount of buying orders at slightly below the present market. This company is enormously to its already great strength. The issue of shares is as sure to put $950,000 into the treasury as previous issues have been greedily absorbed; and while might possibly be a slight downward reaction, yet it is that the great movement in Union is to be upward. intending purchasers cannot afford to wait for a point decline, as such delay might result in missing the altogether.

BULLS BOOST WHEAT PRICES.

CHICAGO MARKET GOES CLIMBING UNDER PRODDING.

Trading in July and September Options Is Brisker Than for Some Time Past—Demand for Distant Future Heaviest—Deal of Million Bushels Is Reported.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 27.—More active and distinct bullishness marked trading in the wheat pit today than has been manifested during any session for some time. There was general buying of the July and September deliveries throughout the entire day, with the demand for the most distant future particularly brisk. The feature of the trading was the heavy purchases of the September option by the same trader who was credited with having engineered the recent deal in the May delivery. The total purchases by this one operator was said to have aggregated more than 1,000,000 bushels. The range in September was wider than in any other month. The market closed strong, with September at the high point. May closed at 1.18⅝ and July at 1.05½@1.05⅝.

Despite the strength of wheat, corn was scarcely more than steady at any time during the day. Sales of a fairly large line of July corn early in the day seemed to dampen the enthusiasm of would-be bulls and left the market little support. The close was steady, with prices unchanged to ⅛@¼ higher, May being at 66⅜ and July at 65⅝.

Oats under fair support by some of the bulls in the wheat pit displayed considerable firmness and closed firm, with May at 54⅛ and July at 47@47⅛.

Provisions were firm at the start, owing to a 5-cent advance in live hogs, but weakened on selling and closed unchanged at 5 to 7½ higher.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, steady; straights, 5.15@5.50; spring patents, 5.40@5.80; straights, 4.15@5.25; baker's, 4.05@4.35; No. 2 rye, 78; feed or mixing barley, 62½@63½; fair to choice malting, 64@65; flax seed, No. 1 Southwestern, 1.58; No. 1 Northwestern, 1.68; timothy seed, 3.75; clover, 9.90; mess pork, per bbl., 17.65@17.70; short ribs, sides (loose,) 8.75@9.25; short clear sides, (boxed,) 9.50@9.62½.

New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 113 West Third street.]

NEW YORK, March 27.—Brought into sight to date, 11,785,000 bales against 11,910,000 to same date in 1907, thereby indicating a crop certainty of 125,000, and probably 250,000 bales under that year's figures, which were 13,500,000. The visible supply this year stands at 5,075,000 bales against 5,378,000 bales in 1907, this deficiency of 300,000 bales having been brought about by the rapid shrinkage during the last three weeks, thereby indicating an outward flow of cotton, larger than in 1907, which is further verified by the week's takings, being 254,000 this week, against 225,000 for the same week in 1907. The reasons for contrasting this crop with that of two years ago are that they are usually smaller in size, and in market price on this date. The price two years ago however, shows a perpendicular advance of 3½c a pound after this date. The reason for the advance two years ago was, first, the statistical position, and second, the unfavorable conditions in Texas due to a prolonged winter drouth. The drouth during the past winter has been more severe than it was two years ago. In fact the most severe in the past thirty years, and the conditions east of the Missouri river are infinitely worse this year than two years ago. Today's ten-point advance speaks for itself, and is merely the forerunner of very much higher prices.

Bulls are still talking about movement of the crop, and trying to make it smaller than the government says was actually ginned. The report shows there was ginned for the season, reduced into 500-pound bales, the second largest crop on record and that Georgia, South Carolina and Arkansas ginned the largest crop on record. Mr. Ellison, the world's best authority on consumption, estimates the total of the world for American cotton at 12,423,000 bales. Therefore, you can see we have 1,847,041 bales in excess of last year. Big spot people continue to be free sellers here and we would sell cotton on all hard spots.

The Chronicle says: "Advices by telegraph from the South last evening indicate that the weather has been generally favorable during the week. The rainfall has been light or moderate as a rule. From Alabama and Mississippi points we are advised that, while the rivers continue at a high stage, the water is now gradually receding from flooded low lands. On the whole, crop operations have made good progress."

DEMAND GOOD IN COUNTRY.

Ranch Lands and Orange Groves Attract.

Blizzards Drive Easterners to California.

Business Property in Small Towns Sells.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 2[illegible].—While there has been a lull the past two weeks in important transactions in city real estate the demand for outside properties continue at a steady pace.

Several wealthy men from North Dakota have come here in search of a climate that is quite the contrast to the blizzards of that cold region. The latest is Maj. James K. Darling, one of the biggest growers of wheat in Cass county, N. D. He came here from Fargo, and has purchased the Gillette ranch at Chula Vista, for $15,000. There is a residence on top of a hill, commanding a fine view of ocean and mountains. The seller was E. P. Gillette.

Among recent deals in city property were the following: Two lots in block 4, Hillcrest, by John W. Smith to David Welch for $4350. C. O. Nichols has sold to M. O. Hogoboom of Bostonia, lot 10, block 30. Culverhill & Taggart's addition. The purchaser has already begun building a home. The price was $2100.

Unusual building activity is prevalent in all sections of the city, and the lumber and supply men say they were never before so rushed with orders. At a conference this week between Harrison Albright and the heirs of Henry Timken, it was decided to go ahead with the construction of the Timken office building, work on which was interrupted by the death of Mr. Timken. The building will be finished according to original plans, eight stories, reinforced concrete. The contract calls for its completion by October 1.

Work has just been started on a $6000 flat building on the east side of Fifth, between Upas and Ivy streets, for Frank O'Farrell. The flat will be modern in every respect, and will contain twenty-two rooms. The first floor will contain two apartments, of five rooms each, and the second two of six rooms each.

There are three handsome homes being built in Hillcrest. One of these is a two-story seven-room residence for Charles T. Chandler, cashier of the University-avenue bank. It is located on the east side of Fourth, just south of Washington street, and will cost $5000. Directly across the street John Wood is erecting a residence of seven rooms at a cost of $4000.

On the same side of Fourth street, between University and Washington, the Pacific Building Company is building for Mrs. Jerome Winder, an eight-room house at a cost of $4500. On the south side of Washington, between Second and Third streets, George Wright is building a Mission style cottage to cost $2500.

ONTARIO SALES.

INVESTORS COME FROM FAR.

ONTARIO, March 27.—N. L. Mitchell has sold his home place on West A street, consisting of ten acres, to C. H. Ford of New Orleans, for $21,000.

P. F. Mather, who holds a responsible government position in the canal zone, was here last week, and purchased twenty acres on the corner of Francis avenue and Bon View. He has returned to Panama, but expects eventually to erect a handsome residence on the property.

D. L. Cook has purchased from T. M. Henery a villa lot on West I street, for $5000. The sale was made through the agency of J. V. Caldwell.

SALES NEAR ORANGE.

FIVE GROVES ATTRACT BUYERS.

ORANGE, March 27.—J. C. Briggs reports the following sales: Silas Cossairt to Emma Walling, five-room cottage and a lot for $1550. H. W. Mills to David Cole, a lot for garage on North Glassell street, for $1500. F. A. Blake to G. G. Richards, a twenty-acre orange orchard for $22,500. S. M. Bennett to P. W. Wyland, two acres of young Valencias for $2300. John E. Kellogg, from Frank Palmer, three and one-half acres of the finest loam soil, set to Valencias for $6000. A. H. Bibber to James Ellis, a one-and-one-half-acre lot in The Bibber addition, for $1500.

Littlefield and Schaffert report the following sales: Thirty-three acres, one-and-one-half miles from Orange, by D. Montgomery to E. A. Freeman for $12,500. Forty-five acres, one-and-one-half miles northeast of Olive to Clayton Stanfield for $31,000. Twenty acres on East Chapman avenue to Clayton Stanfield for $14,000.

ACREAGE WANTED.

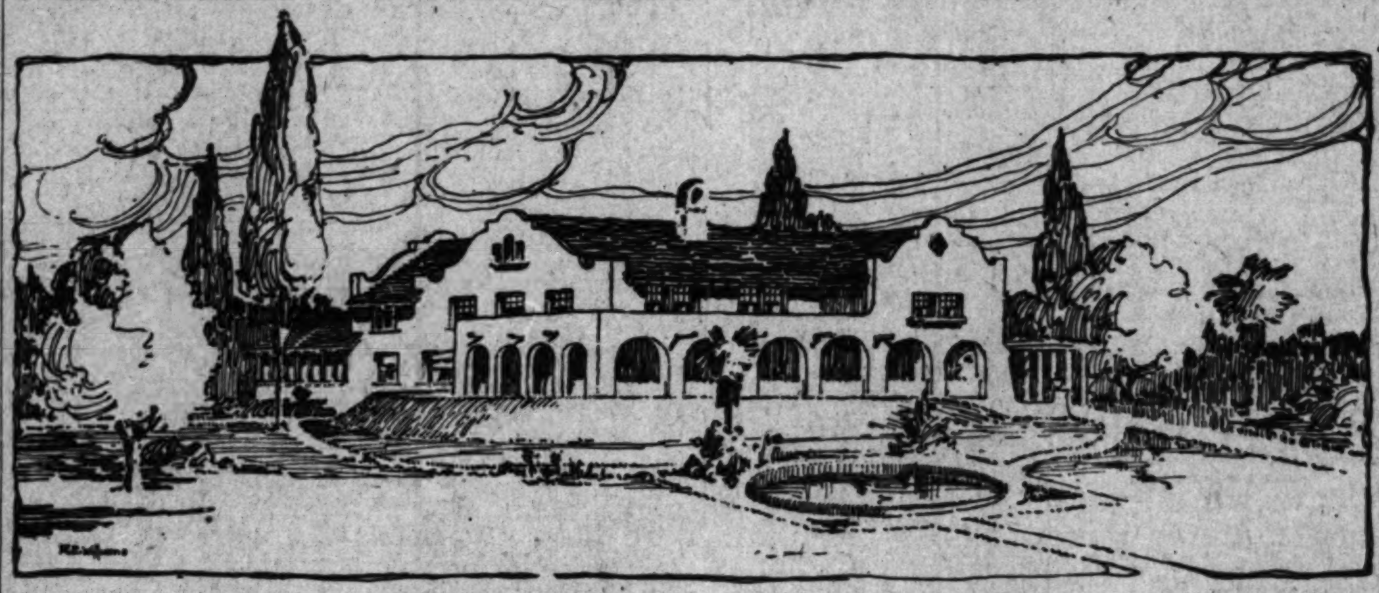
BUYERS TO IMPROVE.

HEMET, March 27.—The report of sales made by the real estate agents at Hemet for the last few weeks shows an ever increasing demand for places of from five to thirty acres in size. Orange land has a good market, and most of the buyers plan immediate improvements. Recent sales aggregate nearly $100,000.

The Hemet Land Company has sold to J. R. Cary of Santa Ana ten acres on the corner of Lincoln avenue and South Meridian street. There are no improvements. Consideration was $2000. George Replogle of Michigan bought of the same company thirty acres of unimproved land in the Fairview tract for about $6000. The same company sold to Horace Boles five acres on Thornton avenue. The land adjoins the famous Rockmount ranch, purchased by Mr. Boles last week. The price was $875. George C. Nevins bought of the same company three acres on Chambers avenue for $150.

A. M. Hayward has sold to George Anderson of Michigan his large house and ten acres of improved land on the corner of Johnston avenue and Cornell street for $4000. H. Boles sold to O. E. Stone twenty acres of orange land near Park Hill, on Columbia street, for $4500. E. P. Pierce sold to H. L. Thompson five acres of improved property on the corner of Buena Vista street and Devonshire avenue for about $2500. H. S. Dukes sold to W. T. Elliott two lots on Santa Fé street for about $350. Mrs. Ida B. Winslow sold to Roy Tripp her five-room house and lot on State street for $3000. Orrin Stone sold to A. E. Cox twenty-five acres of 2-year-old orange trees to the south of the Fairview tract for $10,000. H. L. Thompson has sold to Orrin Stone ten acres on the corner of Acacia avenue and Hemet street. The land is set with deciduous trees. The consideration was about $2500. H. U. Howes has sold to H. P. Dillworth of Pasadena ten acres, unimproved, on the corner of Columbia street and Johnston avenue, for $2400.

CAPISTRANO HOME LIKE MISSION AT OLD TOWN.



Handsome mission home of F. A. Forrester at Capistrano.

F. A. Forrester is having a handsome mission style residence built on sightly elevation overlooking the ocean at Capistrano. The architects, Train & Williams, have followed the designs of the historic mission at Capistrano for the new Forrester home, and as reinforced concrete will be used in construction, the new structure will be one of the handsomest private dwellings in the southern end of the State.

There will be a wide, arcaded porch around two sides, one facing the sea, onto which the main living-rooms of the house will open. The building itself will be 58x70 feet over all, and will contain six rooms and a bath on the first floor, and five and a bath on the second floor.

A pergola on the side opposite the porch will furnish a shady retreat when covered with growing vines. There will be a big living-room, with a large fireplace as a feature. Ceilings in all the principal rooms will be beamed. In the rear of the dining-room a fernery will be located, separated from the larger room with French doors.

The grounds surrounding the house are extensive, and will be beautified by landscape gardening. The builder will install his own gas and water supply plants. There will be a laundry and a furnace in the basement, and other modern conveniences. The structure will cost about $12,000.

IN SOUTH PASADENA.

BUILDING LOTS PURCHASED.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 27.—The Fagg-Dublin Company, corner of Fair Oaks avenue and Mission street, reports the following sales: J. W. Moore to Clarence Baldwin, lot 50x100 feet, improved with a five-room bungalow, at No. 1737 Virginia Place, for a consideration of $2750. Mission Syndicate to John May of Indiana, lot 58x135 feet, at the corner of Avon Place and Mission street, for $1125. Mr. May will improve this lot with a residence, and move his family here when completed. G. Lawrence Stimson to Mrs. Esther Pitchford of Pittsburgh, Pa., lot 60x155 feet, improved with a new six-room modern bungalow, on Monterey road, between Fair Oaks avenue and Fremont street, for a consideration of $4500.

Estate of John Wilson of Los Angeles to Robert Steele of Denver, Colo., lot 56x130 feet at the corner of Monterey road and Windsor Place, for $1650. This was a cash transaction, and Mr. Steele will build a residence immediately. Jacob Isaacs to D. O. Anderson, lot 100x175 feet in Oneonta Park, on Laurel street, east of Fair Oaks avenue, for a consideration of $2500. Mr. Anderson is having plans drawn for a handsome residence. Jack Jevne to Jonathan S. Dodge, four lots, 45x140 feet each, at the southeast corner of Grevalia and Mound avenue, for a consideration of $4100. This was a cash transaction. Mr. Dodge will improve these lots immediately iwth four modern bungalows.

Mission Place Syndicate to Fred May of Indiana, lot 50x135 feet, at the corner of Avon Place and Mission street, for $1125. Mr. May will improve with a bungalow. Frank P. Kenniston to J. W. Moore, lot 100x175 feet on Laurel street, between Fremont and Fair Oaks avenue, for $2500. This lot to be improved with a fine home.

Huntington Land and Improvement Company to J. Hanbury of British Columbia, a lot 95x185 feet on Pine street in Oneonta Park for $3025. Plans for a $60,000 home are being prepared by the purchaser.

POMONAN BUYS AT CLAREMONT.

CLAREMONT, March 27.—Few real estate deals have been put through here this week, the activity centering in neighboring orange-grove property. Dr. F. W. Thomas has sold one lot, 75x150 feet, on the north side of Sixth street and west of Dr. R. P. Myers's residence, to Franklin Cogswell of Pomona. Mr. Cogswell plans to erect a handsome residence on the property.

BAY CITY IMPROVEMENTS.

BEACH TOWN HOME RENTED.

BAY CITY, March 27.—Material for a six-room bungalow is on the ground, and construction will begin as soon as the weather will permit. Frank Baum of Anaheim, is the owner, and builder. H. F. Metcalf reports the rental of his two-story nine room residence to Albert Smith of Los Angeles, for April.

BUILD SPRING HOUSES.

Attractive Additions Planned for Goulds About Arrowhead Hotel Harmonize With Surroundings.

A number of attractive buildings have been designed for the Arrowhead Hotel Company, for the further improvement of its grounds near San Bernardino. Three pretty spring-houses have been planned, and work already has been begun on the foundations. These little structures will harmonize beautifully with the surroundings, which are rugged and picturesque, and will lend a charm to the already grand location occupied by the hotel and grounds. Arthur B. Benton is the architect.

These buildings will be built at the three principal springs. The Penrygal Spring, which is said to be one of the hottest in the world, is located in the cañon below the hotel. The building is 22x30 feet, and will have a tile roof, supported on stone piers built on the natural ledges of the cañon sides. The stream will be conducted under the floor of the structure. There will be about the room a stone seat, and a fountain will be built in the center.

Granite Springs, which are beside the main road leading to the Arrowhead Hotel, will be covered by a house some twenty-five feet square. Extensive terraces with stone and cement seats will surround the structure.

The Palm House will be another attractive addition. It is near the corner of the hotel building. The water will be piped to it from one of the upper springs. Construction will be of heavy boulders, timbers, and terra cotta tile, with cement floors throughout.

BIG BROADWAY LEASE.

Two parties are negotiating for a lease on the Forrester building on the east side of Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets—the Los Angeles Examiner and another concern. The building is a modern nine-story reinforced concrete structure. It is stated that the Hearst sheet has secured the lease for fifteen years at a flat rental of $20,000 a year, but this report has not been confirmed.

CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITY.

TOTAL IS NEAR MILLION MARK.

BUILDING RECORD SURPASSES THAT OF YEAR AGO.

More Than Two Hundred Thousand Dollars Ahead of Same Month in Nineteen-eight—Number of Permits Is About the Same—Much New Work in Sight.

A total of $989,757 in new building permits is the record made in the first twenty-six days of March. This sum represents the valuation of 669 new buildings, permits for which have been issued by the city building department. This total is $200,182 in excess of that for the same period a year ago, and the increase serves to show the general improvement in business conditions in the West.

The outlook for the ensuing months of this year grows brighter each week. There are more big things under way, awaiting the completion of small business details before actually being begun. The amount thus far this month is sufficient indication that March will end with a total exceeding $1,000,000. There are four business days still to be incorporated in the official report, and only $11,000 is necessary to reach that sum.

There are three reinforced concrete class A structures under construction, which account for $111,000 of the total. Sixteen class C buildings ranging from one to six stories in height total $190,751, but the greatest valuation is in class D, one-story residences, which number 259, and are valued at $332,060. Following is the classified report, and the report by wards:

	Permits.	Valuation.
Class A, reinforced concrete	3	$111,000
Class C	16	190,751
Class D, 1-story	259	332,060
Class D, 1½-story	35	67,370
Class D, 2-story	48	184,635

DEMAND FOR LANDS.

The Western Realty and Investment Company reports sales as follows: J. C. Snodgrass of Ontario, ten-acre orange grove to Austin Cutler of Laporte, Ind., for $12,000. Mr. Cutler will erect a fine home. J. C. Leeman, ten-acre peach orchard on D street, Ontario, to I. J. Pierson for $1000 cash. Mr. Pierson is building a house. B. M. Frees of Chicago to E. P. Buss of Muskegon, Mich., sixteen acres of Valencia and navel oranges on A street, Ontario, for $20,000. J. H. Friend sold 100 feet frontage on Euclid avenue to F. C. Bell of Winnipeg, Canada, for $2600. Mr. Bell has begun building a $6000 home.

In the Perris Valley there is a lively demand for alfalfa and eucalyptus lands, as shown by recent sales: Joseph Jourdan to J. J. Vaughan of Roscoe, S. D., 160 acres alfalfa land near Ethanac for $8000. From same to same, twelve acres, improved, adjoining city limits of Perris, for $2000. J. W. Bartel to the South Coast Eucalyptus Company, 160 acres near Ethanac for $6000. The company will plant eucalyptus.

MANY SALES AT ANAHEIM.

Resh and Company reports sales at Anaheim, Fullerton and Placentia, in Orange County, aggregating $365,000. The purchasers are from the northern part of the State, Los Angeles and vicinity, and from the East. One of the largest transactions was the recent sale of Alexander Henry's beautiful ten-acre orange grove, two miles west of Anaheim on the county road, to John C. Cordes, for a consideration of $25,000. Resh and Company are associated and work in conjunction with the Ralph E. Pearce Co., of Los Angeles. Property is in demand through these districts, the climate, soil, water, railway facilities and other advantages making ideal conditions for those desiring country homes.

INGLEWOOD RANCHO SALES.

The Inglewood Rancho Company reports a steady demand. Freeman H. Bloodgood, who recently purchased five acres in the rancho, intends to plant lemon trees. The Inglewood Rancho Company is putting an additional 160 acres on the market, which is seeded to alfalfa. One hundred and thirty acres of this land has a two years' stand of alfalfa on it. There are now twenty-six houses completed or in course of construction. Arrangements are now being perfected for the establishment of a school.

FACT AND COMMENT.

have to pay still higher prices than at this particular point, secured very desirable parcels of real estate at prices which now they realize were more than reasonable.

The Present Situation.

We see no reason at the moment to change in a single iota from the policy of the past. It is still the conviction of the editor of this department that it is now a good time to hold on to good property where that can be done without too much inconvenience. It is still more firmly impressed upon the editor's mind that this month is a better time for those intending to buy to secure what they want than next month will be. It is not so good a time to buy now as it was six months ago, just as that time was not so favorable as a year back from now. But changing the point of view, it would certainly seem reasonable to expect that six months from now the market will be stronger and prices firmer than they are today. Therefore the wise policy would seem to be for those who have more real estate than they want to look confidently to realizing their prices for property they have for sale, providing their views are not unreasonably high. The same course of reasoning would lead the person looking for investment to act with as much promptness now as was advised six months or a year ago. If the person desiring to sell forces his property on the market with numerous others doing the same thing, he depresses the market against himself, whereas by pursuing a conservative, patient course all are more likely to realize a little higher prices. If the influx of newcomers is as large as anticipated and the activity in the market goes on cumulatively, the buyer who waits will certainly find prices higher in the middle of the summer than now.

Analysis of Real Estate.

Taking the real estate in the city and separating it into classes according to use, we should say that central business property is never likely to be cheaper than today. The city is growing with very considerable rapidity. There may be an abundance of office buildings for the present necessity, but a city growing as this is will soon overtake the supply and new structures of this kind will be imperative. There are few such buildings in course of construction today. As the demand for skyscrapers grows a little the price of central property will necessarily stiffen up. Going beyond the absolute business center into that belt of property which is too close in for residence purposes and too far out for present business, we should say that the boom prices of two years ago have been entirely discounted. Those holding this class of property will have to wait a little longer before they find it advisable to improve their holdings with three to ten-story modern buildings, but as prices have settled down in some instances 50 per cent. since two years ago, it would seem as if at ruling prices that property was good to hold on to where that is possible without great inconvenience. If it is moderately improved and does something toward carrying itself, we should say it would be unwise to sacrifice.

The Flat and Apartment District.

Outside of the belt that surrounds the business center where property waiting upon the future is situated we come to the flat and apartment belt. With the population growing as it is now and at the ruling prices in the market for this last class of property, we should say it is even a better investment to hold on to then the second class or third class of business property. It required less to improve this apartment or flat belt than in the business district. The tendency of modern life in large cities is strongly toward apartments, hotels where the cost is small, and flats. This statement is contradicted for the time being here by flats. The far-out cheap lot suitable for a cottage of five or six rooms, the erection of which costs $1000 to $2500, is where the greatest activity prevails just now. But with growing population evidently sure to come here, this will change. The belt of property around the business center as the latter stands will come into active demand for the flat and apartment building. The price of this class of property in Los Angeles at the present time is low. On the outer periphery of the belt there is choice property for which only $100 a foot is asked. This property is the cheapest flat and apartment property in any city of our class in the country.

Residence Property.

Few of us realize how fast Los Angeles is filling up. Real estate operators themselves are astonished when they visit the sections of the city in which they have not been actively operating. To the city boundaries on every side the growth of population has been exceedingly rapid. When we realize that the new cottages and other classes of strictly residence building going up, even in the dull times of last year, generally amounted to 500 a month and rising some months to 600 and more, making from 6000 to 7000 residence structures erected in a year, the impression is lively that the city is filling up. In spite of this rapid multiplication of residences the price of property for these purposes has not risen in the last two years. There had been a very considerable rise in price during the two years preceding that and the market had come to a standstill in the matter of values before the collapse reached us. The dull times had but little effect upon prices. Holders realized that property was cheap enough and where it was possible they held on with a great deal of firmness. In a city growing as fast as this, level building lots on good streets that are offered for $10 a foot are cheap. In that part of the city lying west of Hoover street, westerly to the west boundary of the city, and from Temple street on the north to Jefferson on the south, where the growth of population has been largest, there are many choice sites in the very cream of this district to be had for $50 a front foot and good lots as low as from $10 to $20. Undoubtedly that is cheap property. It is good property to hold on to. It is good property to buy for those who intend to secure a home at some time in the city of Los Angeles. With 20,000 to 30,000 added to the population a year, with the absorption of 5000 or 6000 or 7000 of these lots annually, the time is not far distant when property at $10 a front foot on grade and otherwise desirable will no longer be found and when the $50 property of today in the cream of this growing section canot be touched for twice the money.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Renewed Activity Reported in Vacant Building Lots—Sales on Mt. Washington Are Heavy.

Robert Marsh & Co. reports quite a little activity in unimproved residence property. The following sales of vacant lots purchased for homes would indicate a renewed activity in building. Robert Marsh & Co. to W. S. Heineman, two lots in Westchester Place, 150x150 feet, on the west side of Arlington avenue, 270 feet north of Pico. The property is valued at $12,000. This purchase is made for immediate improvement. Restrictions are $15,000.

H. A. Getz to Harry N. Armbrust, an unimproved lot 50x135 feet on the east side of Woolsey avenue, about 600 feet south of Pico, for $1250. The purchaser will improve. H. A. Getz to Mrs.

GLIMPSE of the LARGER PARIS HATS

THE huge hat that took the world by storm and concealed the wearer past all hope of recognition was dubbed "an extreme." It was "harried" and "hurried" out of existence, but not until it had inconvenienced great numbers of people and had been the butt of all good-natured fun on the part of car conductors and elevator men.

The smaller hat that obligingly walked in to take the other's place has just become firmly established, and it is asked to remain but a little longer, and milady may wear it for a short while with her spring costume and in the morning only. This smaller hat is unhesitatingly informed that there will be no further use for it when the fluffy summer gown calls back the larger hat.

Be that as it may, there has been clashing in Paris on the subject of large hats and small hats and hat periods generally. One milliner has said "empire"; another "directoire"; a third has proclaimed the fashions of Louis XVI, and a bolder spirit, "No period of any one sort, but an adaptation of all to suit my own ideas." The sound of the myriad voices of the milliners has been compared to the noise that went up from the Tower of Babel. This diversity of opinion has resulted in an infinite variety of hats, interesting, to say the least, in shape, material and color.

The day of vivid colors is over, so Paris says, and that city is steeping herself in soft twilight shades. It will be noticed that ribbon velvet, with its dulled finish, has been chosen as a background for the prevalent color of faded flowers. The old tapestry tones are combined in the most enchanting way, and the originator of this softened color fad that has swept over Paris is a little woman who lives on one of the top floors in a street famed for its hat garnitures.

For three years she has been working to bring out a certain sort of rose. Think of it! Three long years for a single rose! —that particular rose that may be found in the pictures by Nattier, Boncher and Fragonard. She had the colors dyed in her own ateliers, the silks prepared especially for her, and the petals shaped and put together by a band of the most skilled flower workers.

After abundant effort her rose has bloomed, and Paris, at the first sight, has lost its heart completely. Only two of the most important houses have been able to buy these roses, because the little atelier is not large enough to supply more. The other milliners in Paris are enviously trying to copy the beautiful flower, and a stream of shaded roses is pouring forth.

This special rose comes in seventy-two different shades, and thirty of them have been combined on a single hat. Their softened colors vary, even to dull greens and blues which bear a stronger resemblance to tapestry than to nature, but enable the artist in hats to carry out her last idea of matching the rose to the straw.

With so many roses to be placed—thirty to a single hat—is there not reason to credit the advent of the larger hat?

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

CONCERNING OIL CLOTH

Putting on the oilcloth sleeve.

The gorgeously impossible Flower pattern.

Neat geometric figures, imitating tile.

Selecting oilcloth.

THEY call it "American cloth" in English talk and writings, and a plebeian flavor clings to every such mention of it. It belongs, there, to stories of squalid lodgings and shabby-genteel eating houses in the rural districts and at the seaside. It cannot be denied that, in our own country, this native product of inventive genius has lost caste within a quarter century. Middle-aged women recollect when the dining table was covered between mealtimes with a square of painted oilcloth, bound with galloon or tape. In some households it was not removed when the damask went on. The oilcloth, if of good quality, was lined with heavy canton flannel, and reversed in spreading the glossy linen over it, serving the double purpose of protecting the mahogany from hot dishes and splashes of liquid and deadening the impact of crockery and silver against the polished surface.

We use the "silence cloth" of quilted muslin or of felt, now, to protect the table and to make the damask lie smoothly, at the same time gaining the effect of a better quality for the linen. A thin, well-laundered tablecloth laid over the felt takes on the look of a heavier weave than if spread on the bare boards. It wears longer, too, and keeps cleaner. I have explained repeatedly to the young housewife that a creased and limp cloth "catches dirt" sooner than a smooth, thereby increasing the laundry bills.

ZINC VERSUS OILCLOTH

But to our oilcloth, which still has its uses, I might add—and its abuses. For a long time it held its own on the kitchen work-table. It was easily cleaned; it did not absorb grease, and it was impervious to unholy drippings which would have soaked into the wood but for intervention. Zinc drove oilcloth out of housewifely favor on table-tops. Let me say, digressively, at this point, that my vanity as a kitchenly authority had a hard blow in the discovery that I was not the first woman to discover and utilise the value of zinc as a table-cover in laundry, pantry and cookroom. I verily believed that nobody else had ever thought of superseding oilcloth by nailing a sheet of zinc upon the deal boards and tacking the edges neatly under the projecting top of my kitchen work-table. My pride had a fall a year later when I read a recommendation of the plan in a cooking magazine, written by one who certainly had never seen my "invention."

Oilcloth had a way of curling up at the edges, and one dared not set down a hot saucepan upon it for a second. Carelessness in this respect was registered in discolored rings and crescents, which presently wore into bare spots, through which the foundation of the fabric showed forlornly. Zinc is heat-proof as well as water-proof.

DUBIOUS ECONOMY

The stouter floor oilcloth held its ground longer. In fact, it is still extensively used in halls and kitchens, especially in the country. The gorgeously impossible flower and fruit patterns that pleased our childish fancy have passed away, with the monstrous designs of carpets affected by our grandmothers. Neat, geometric figures, in imitation of tiled pavements and other "conventional" designs, show an advance toward just artistic taste that is gratifying.

In buying oilcloth never lose sight of the truth that a cheap article in this line is the dearest in the end. Likewise, that the end is not far off for the housewife who lays the "bargain" upon hall or kitchen floor. Within a few weeks there will appear little lanes and alleys, criss-crossing one another, where the mother's busy feet and the boys' brogans have trod into the soft lacquer, which is the best the manufacturer can afford "at that price." The coating is thin, and the cotton web it overspreads is also of poor quality.

The number of distressful letters I receive from housekeepers begging for some method of making oilcloths last long enough to pay the buyers for putting them down are abundant proof of the false economy of laying cheap stuffs upon floorings where there is much passing. "Much traffic," one housewife styled the going to and fro of many hurrying feet. It was an apt word for the rush of the day's occupations in an American home.

With a kitchen apron of oilcloth.

Oilcloth is firmer than shelf paper.

If you can possibly afford it, buy linoleum—the aristocratic cousin of oilcloth—for the kitchen and bathroom. It outlives the usefulness of the best oilcloth by an incredible term of years. The "inlaid" linoleum of fair quality is the next best thing to a tiled floor.

Some years ago I visited a friend who had hung the walls of her kitchen with oilcloth. The pattern, an arabesque design in green and white, matched the linoleum on the floor, and the effect was most pleasing.

She expatiated upon the merits of the material for covering the side walls with all the zeal of an inventor and benefactor. It was easy to keep clean. A little soap and water, a soft brush, a soft cloth—and presto! a wall as good as new. It was not injured by smoke and steam, as paper would be. It did not scale off and crack after the manner of painted walls. It was tacked smoothly to the wall and finished at the top with a pretty frieze. I heard from my friend last summer a tale of disappointment that was affliction. The vaunted oilcloth had proved a harbor and breeding ground for roaches and croton bugs—for black and red ants that equaled Pharaoh's plagues in degree if not in variety. It was necessary to tear down the beautiful screen to unearth the pests. The walls behind it were literally black with the hordes.

"I am having the walls and floors painted!" wailed the disconsolate victim. "But shall I ever get rid of the infliction I invited so ignorantly?"

Other housemothers tell me of similar experiences with the pinked shelf oilcloths that have superseded paper in most of our pantries, storerooms and china closets.

"There are so many hiding places for vermin of all kinds," writes one. "Hereafter I use papers and look under them every week."

I answered that she would find it as easy to look under the oilcloths. They are prettier, firmer and not susceptible to dampness; more easily dusted and altogether preferable to shelf papers, provided they are lifted frequently and search made for the intruders. If the shelves are treated once a month to a hot bath plentifully dashed with red pepper, the tiny pests will not take refuge under them.

I am surprised that so few housewives supply themselves with kitchen aprons of oilcloth. A light and flexible quality should be selected for this purpose. The apron must be made with a bib, kept in place by shoulder straps.

It should be ample in

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

FOR the possible benefit of "G. B." (Buffalo, N. Y.) and others, I inclose the recipe I use in making French uncooked candy, also one for pecan nougat.

Your familiar talks and the Exchange are of weekly interest to me, and I have in course of making a recipe book of those I have tried and liked.

French Uncooked Candy.

One pound of confectioner's sugar, sifted; one tablespoonful of water, white of one egg, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla extract.

Add the water by degrees while you are beating the white of egg stiff. Then, with a scattering motion, add a little sugar gradually, beating steadily until you have a soft, plastic mass of the consistency of putty. "Ball" small bits of this and press half of a pecan kernel on each side, shaping the bonbon nicely. You may use any other nutmeat you fancy, or fill a stoned date or dried fig with the mixture; or roll the balls in grated cocoanut; or pierce them with a hatpin and dip carefully into melted chocolate. Or flavor a portion of the mass with peppermint and color pink or green, roll out upon a biscuit marble or board and cut into small cubes.

An almost infinite variety of candies may be made from the cream.

Pecan Nougat.

("The best ever.")

Four cups of granulated sugar, one cupful of glucose, one cupful of boiling water, four cupfuls of picked pecans or walnuts, the whites of four eggs.

Mix together sugar, glucose and water, and stir until dissolved. Boil until brittle when dropped into water. Have ready the stiffly beaten whites in a deep bowl; pour the candy into these in a thin stream, beating constantly and hard to prevent lumping. Add the pecans and beat, beat, beat, without stopping until it is a thick mass. Drop upon a buttered dish in great lumps of uniform size, or smooth and mark it off in squares.

The lumps are preferable to the cubes, as a more delicate creaminess is attained by the long beating—tiresome, but essential.

A. N. W. (Natchez, Miss.).

If I dared add to the foregoing the contents of a charming letter that inclosed the recipes the reader would have another argument in support of the fact of inherited talent and tendencies. The writer of the formulas comes of a stock to which American housemothers owe much.

One of my earliest memories is of the revered gentlewoman who, as editor and author, controlled the thoughts and directed the aims of thousands who have arisen and called her blessed. She it was who set at the head of the woman's page she conducted ably and long the sentence, "Man and woman are the two royal names of Scripture." She based upon this dictum a crusade against the much-abused names of "gentleman" and "lady." Her contention that "man" and "woman" are nobler titles is now generally accepted by thoughtful and refined writers and speakers. To speak of "a gentleman friend" or "my lady friends" is to write one's self down as vulgar or untutored. The true woman who adorned the name—Sara Josepha Hale, who served her sex and her generation down to an age at which most men and women are accounted cumberers of the ground—did all this and more for America.

Her kinswoman will forgive this spontaneous outburst of respectful veneration for her memory—a memory that is the heritage of American housemothers.

Hints on Custard Making

"Novice" (Columbus, Ohio) will not have her custards break into curds and whey if she has the oven slow enough. My custards are perfectly smooth, and there is never a drop of whey in them. I do not set them in a pan of water, as some do. I make a very thick caramel sauce, and line the dish in which I am to bake the custard with this sauce. Then I pour in a mixture of six well-beaten eggs, a quart of milk, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla. I set the dish containing this right in the oven, and bake steadily—not fast—for an hour or more.

The custard will be perfect, as I have said, and it may be turned out on a platter. It makes a pretty dessert, if turned out upon a handsome glass dish.

Like "M. D. S.," of Philadelphia, I also make a kind of custard with flour in it, but I call that "oven-baked pancakes." For this I use four eggs, quart of milk, half a cupful of flour and the same of sugar. Bake to a delicate brown. Serve with preserved berries or jam.

This is a good dish to have when eggs are 35 cents per dozen.

Mrs. B. R. E. (St. Joseph, Mich.).

I smiled in reading that last clause. For on the very day you wrote it, I was paying 52 cents per dozen for eggs, and my cook, who has a turn for economy most uncommon with her guild, was taxing her brain and searching my cook books to devise desserts in which the costly ovates have no part.

I should call the oven-baked pancake a sweet-baked omelet. I can imagine that it is delicious if eaten before it has time to fall. The idea of pouring caramel into the bake dish is also a novelty. "We" use but five eggs to a quart of milk and a tablespoonful of sugar for each egg. When cold, the custard is turned out into a glass dish (chilled) and the caramel sauce—likewise very cold—is poured around and over it. Sometimes we substitute chocolate sauce for the caramel. I return these samples of "our" ways, in reciprocation of your valuable suggestions—all in the way of exchange.

About Canning Pumpkin

"Mrs. H. M." (Providence, R. I.) wishes information as to canned pumpkin. I have canned pumpkin for several years and have never lost any.

Prepare the pumpkin as for pies and put boiling hot into fruit jars (air-tight). Be sure to get all the air out. I use a knife to press the contents of the jar down solid. Have the jars perfectly full, put on the covers and seal at once.

If there should be a little mould or scum on top, don't think it is spoiled. Remove it carefully and use the pumpkin.

One cupful of the pumpkin is sufficient for a pie.

I have never canned squash, but I see no reason why it should not be put up in the same way as pumpkin.

Some time ago I clipped from your Exchange (I think) directions for making silk curtains or portieres. I have either lost or mislaid the cutting. Would any of our ever-kind members repeat the instructions? I have a fancy that mosquito netting was used as a foundation, but of this I am not quite sure.

I should like to tell how a very nice "sauce" may be made from canned pumpkin. Would you like to have the recipe?

Mrs. C. A. B. (Evanston, Ill.).

I have a hazy recollection of the mosquito foundation of the portiere. I recall more clearly that the design struck me as ingenious and artistic. Will not somebody who knows all about the formula repeat it for our esteemed correspondent?

While upon the subject of silk patchwork, I gleaned a new (to me) notion on that head the other day. A little seamstress—60 odd years of age, and the widowed mother of a family—chanced, while taking my order, to speak of the use she was making of silk bits given to her by a dressmaking neighbor. She showed me how she sews the strips together as for rag carpet, and then crochets them into a pretty rug.

"Just as I used to crochet tidies," she said, "only more solidly. I do it in the evenings while my daughter reads to me."

True to my rule of sowing—and reaping—beside all waters, I am passing the "wrinkle" along to my beloved Exchange. I add that the bits, when cut and folded lengthwise, may be joined on the sewing machine. This saves time and makes the strips stronger.

Query About Antiques

Can you or some reader of the Exchange tell me how I can dispose of several pieces of antique furniture? They came from [illegible] and St. Domingo originally, and have been in the family for several generations.

E. G. D. P. (Du Pont, Ga.).

Business addresses are not given in this department. But if you have no dealer in such articles in your neighborhood, there must be in the nearest large city shops where curios like those you speak of should bring good prices. I shall hold your address and forward to you the names of any correspondent who may be interested in you and your query.

Cleaning Tea Kettle

Will you kindly tell a perplexed housewife how to remove the coating of lime from the inside of a tea kettle? We use very hard water, and my kettle is heavy from the accumulation.

To prevent cake from sticking to the pan, grease the inside and dust with flour, shaking off all surplus flour.

I have been greatly helped by the Exchange. K. T. R. (Mount Pleasant, Iowa).

Fill the kettle with vinegar and bring slowly to the boil. Leave on the fire for an hour. Then, while it is still hot, break away the incrustation with a flat stick or paddle. It will yield readily to the pressure. To guard against a reformation of the lime, keep an oyster shell in the kettle, changing from time to time for a fresh. The lime will gather on the shell.

The Five-Minute Luncheon

THAT most business women are given their hour at noon is an established fact, but that comparatively few of those occupying responsible positions take so much time as that is quite believable.

That the majority of business men feed themselves more carefully at noontime than do women is not beyond belief. This neglect of the noon luncheon is no more a time-saver in the long run than it is economical. All that is saved on her luncheons by the overcautious woman goes eventually to the doctor who restores her shattered nerves—or tries to.

A very excellent quick lunch for the woman who will not take time for a respectable one is that adopted by some of the hurried men—several eggs shaken into a tall glass of milk. Hot soup is, of course, preferable from a health standpoint to cold milk, but the egg-and-milk counter bids fair to supplant the soda fountain of a few years back.

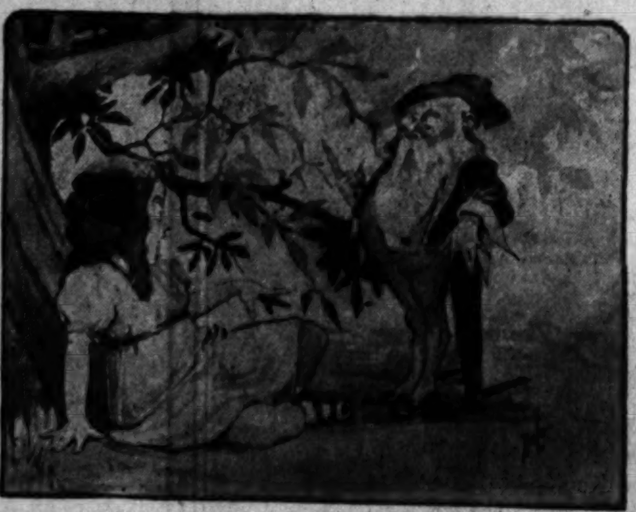
What Happened to Polly



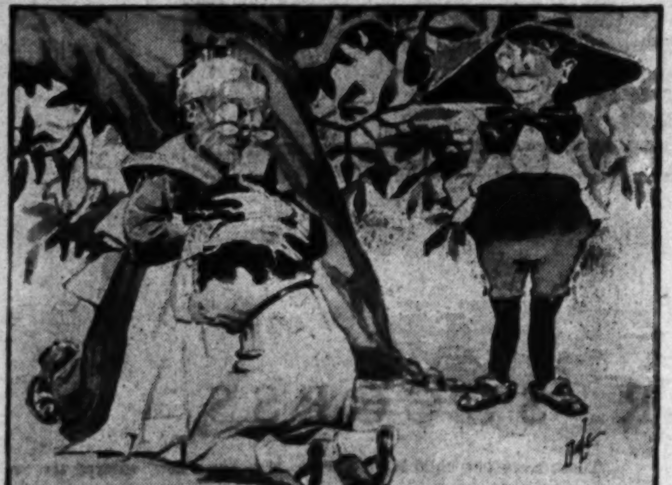
THE MANIKIN APPEARS

IT was an exceedingly warm day out on the farm. The wind had died completely down, and old Sol was doing his best to make things hot for everybody. The bees hummed so softly and drowsily that one knew they must be half asleep; even the flowers drooped their heads to keep off the sweltering sunshine and to take a little nap on the sly.

Polly dragged herself wearily across the orchard, meanwhile keeping her eyes open for the biggest tree that made the thickest shade. Presently finding it, she dropped down like a lump of lead, instead of like the very spry, lively little girl of 10 she really was. She thought she must be almost as old as grandma, who had just reached her fiftieth birthday, and Polly thought that was "awful old," so old that she often wondered how it was grandma could get around at all. Of course, she didn't tell this to grandma, for somehow the old lady, as Polly thought her, didn't seem to be old at all—in fact, quite the contrary, especially when she was dressed up for church, with those new puffs on her head, which she had bought the last time she was in town, and that leghorn hat with a long, white feather sweeping over its upturned side. But there; this story is about Polly, not grandma!

As I have said, Polly found the big, broad tree she was hunting for and threw herself flat down on the soft, green grass. It was a very nice place. I shouldn't have minded being there myself if I'd had the chance.

From under her half-closed lids Polly could see the men in the adjoining field busy taking in the hay. She could see brother Tom, who was only two years older than she, gathering up forkfuls a pretty big size for him, and tossing them into the wagon. Tom was warm, too, and somewhat cross, because grandpa should think it wise for boys to be kept out of mischief by giving them a little work to do. So Polly smiled quietly, all to herself, at Tom's fierce frown, for she knew right well he couldn't see her 'way under those low-hanging branches, and so couldn't tell grandma where she was. Grandma, rarely idle herself, thought it was only right that this little city-girl, who was paying her such a lengthy visit, should help all she could.



"I'LL NEVER SNEAK AWAY AGAIN," SAID POLLY.

Now, Polly wasn't lazy as a usual thing, but it was so hot today that instead of going into the rose garden to dig a little and pull off the dead leaves, as she was accustomed to doing in the morning, why she sneaked—yes, sneaked —(I know it isn't a pretty word, but it's just what she did) sneaked off 'way up in the orchard where she knew no one would ever think of looking for her. That sneaking troubled Polly's conscience quite a good deal—but—the grass was so lovely and green, the shade so pleasant, and besides, there was a little bit of breeze, just a stray zephyr from the tip of old Boreas' wing—if Boreas has a wing—which made it next to impossible for human nature, especially little girl human nature, to resist.

So there she stayed, listening to the voices of the men calling one to the other, the soft pad, pad of the horses' feet, the gentle droning of the persistent bee, and an occasional chirp from a sleepy sparrow.

All of a sudden, a funny-looking little man stooped under the branches and peeped in at her.

"My, what a lazy girl," said he, "leaving your grandma to do all the clipping and digging in the rose garden while you come up here to loaf! Aren't you ashamed of yourself? Just come out now. I'm working at something and I don't mean to do it alone when there's a big, strong girl so near to help me. Hop up and get a move on you!"

Polly stared wide-eyed at the queer figure. She was annoyed at his familiar manner, yet afraid to resent it.

COMMANDS POLLY TO HELP

"Come along," he continued, "or—" and he made a motion as if to come toward her, but Polly sprang up quickly, exclaiming excitedly, "I'm coming! Can't you give me time?"

"Well, I'm glad you are," he replied, "for I'm tired to death, and can't push that wheelbarrow of dishes any further, so you'll have to do it for me."

"Wheelbarrow of dishes!" echoed Polly, aghast; "why I couldn't do such a thing. It would be too heavy for me."

"Nonsense!" The little man laughed heartily. "Too heavy for you—a great, big, fat girl like you? How absurd!" Polly pouted. Tom was all the time calling her fat and she didn't like it a bit. So she wasn't any better pleased now.

"Where did you get the dishes?" she asked, rather pertly.

"Get 'em? See here, young lady, you don't think I stole 'em, do you? Where would I get 'em but out of the garden? You didn't suppose I got 'em in a shoe shop? Ha! ha!"

"Got the dishes out of the garden?" repeated Polly, much puzzled. "They must be queer kind of dishes."

"Well, just come along with me and push 'em for me, and you'll see the kind of dishes they are, fast enough."

Polly moved forward slowly. She didn't want to push the wheelbarrow—in fact, knew she couldn't—and was 'most ready to cry at the thought; but she was afraid the little man would catch hold of her if she didn't go with him, so she just HAD to do it.

"It's dreadful hot in the sun," she grumbled, complainingly, as she left the shade of the tree.

"Yes, that's so; but other people have to work in the sun—grandma, for instance, and Tom."

At the mention of Tom, Polly turned quickly, intending to call him to her aid, but the hay had all been gathered in and the field was quite empty. Indeed, there was no one in sight anywhere.

"No use looking for Tom," said the little man curtly; "he's gone home long ago, so come on and push them dishes."

"Them dishes!" said Polly, contemptuously.

"Oh, I presume you'd say 'them there dishes,' wouldn't you, now?" he returned, ironically. "Well, I'm not so high-toned. 'Them dishes' is good enough for me."

A FUNNY KIND OF DISHES

Polly sniffed, but by this time she had reached the wheelbarrow. After looking intently at it for a moment, she exclaimed in a surprised voice: "Dishes! Are those what you call dishes? Ha! ha! ha!"

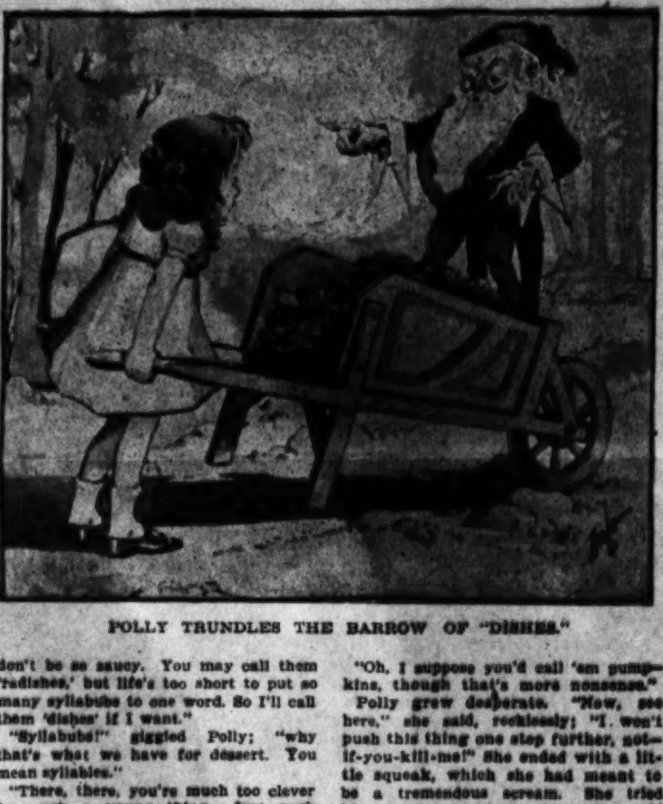
"My, but you think you're funny," remarked the little man, gazing at her disapprovingly.

"I'm not funny. You are," grinned Polly. "Why, do you call those things 'dishes'?"

"Oh," he inquired in a very affected tone; "and pray may I ask what YOU would call them?"

"Why, radishes, of course, you simple thing," she said, derisively.

"Simple thing, am I, Miss Smarty?" he cried angrily. "That's enough now. You grab hold of those handles, and don't be so saucy. You may call them 'radishes,' but life's too short to put so many syllabubs to one word. So I'll call them 'dishes' if I want."



POLLY TRUNDLES THE BARROW OF "DISHES."

"Syllabubs!" giggled Polly; "why that's what we have for dessert. You mean syllables."

"There, there, you're much too clever for such a young thing. Just push now, and don't talk so much, for a change."

Polly caught hold of the wheelbarrow and did her best to move it. "I can't do it!" she exclaimed, half crying.

"Ugh! what a cry-baby," said the little fellow, scornfully. "Come on now, I'll help." So, together they pushed and tugged, and tugged and pushed, making but little headway with all their effort. The perspiration ran down Polly's face.

"That's great," said the man, smirking provokingly at her. "You'll lose lots of fat by this; it's fine exercise for you."

Polly didn't resent his remarks. Indeed, by now she little cared what he said, only asking forlornly, "Do we go much further?"

THEY REPROACH EACH OTHER

"Oh, no; just a couple of miles," was the cheerful response.

Poor Polly burst right out crying. "You're a wicked, cruel man," she said, sobbing as if her heart would break, "to treat me this way. My grandma would never do it."

"No, I guess not," replied the little man, seriously, and wagging his head; "but all the same, you were very mean to grandma, leaving her to get a sunstrike, or any old thing, out there weeding the garden, for all you cared."

Polly couldn't help smiling, in spite of her distress. "You certainly call things by queer names," she said, drying her eyes.

"Oh, I don't know," he returned, airily, "I ain't so badly edulated."

Before Polly could speak he called out: "Get on, get on; one, two, three, up she goes!"

Very slowly they crept on, the sun growing hotter and hotter, and Polly more and more tired and fretful. Pretty soon the little man pulled off his coat, and throwing it over Polly's shoulders, panted: "Whew! but the weather's tancankerous; put that on and it will keep off the sun."

"I won't do it!" she rebelliously cried, pitching it on the ground.

"Here, miss, that's my Sunday go-to-meeting costume, I'll have you know." He picked it up and carefully shook it. Then placing it again over her, he said, with a nod: "What'll keep out the cold will do the same for the heat."

Polly shook herself angrily, but the coat hung on, seeming to grow heavier and bigger with every move she made, until it came almost to her feet.

"You're hateful," she said, looking at the little chap from the corner of her eye. She didn't dare make the least motion for fear the old coat would crawl over her head.

He just winked and chuckled. "You WILL sneak off, will you, you mean, little thing!"

"I'm not! I'm not!" sobbed Polly bitterly.

Suddenly, without warning, the fellow began singing in a high, cracked voice:

Oh, pretty Polly, don't you cry,
Or that'll give you a bunged-up eye;
Then you'll get a cold in your head,
Which'll make your nose just fiery red.
Tiddy, iddy, umpty, bumpty a-a—

"I was always a great singer and poet," he remarked conceitedly.

"I guess no one ever thought so but yourself," snapped Polly.

"Oh, now you're getting nawsty," reproached he, "and I don't like nawsty folks. But come; we must be jumping, for it's getting late, and, besides, we are to take on a lot of pumps after while."

"Pumps?" repeated Polly, mystified.

"Oh, I suppose you'd call 'em pumpkins, though that's more nonsense."

Polly grew desperate. "Now, see here," she said, recklessly; "I won't push this thing one step further, not—if-you-kill-me!" She ended with a little squeak, which she had meant to be a tremendous scream. She tried her best to run, but not a foot could she move—simply standing there helplessly.

The man came threateningly toward her. "You won't, won't you? Well, we'll see about that. You shan't treat me as you did grandma."

This time Polly opened her mouth wide and yelled with all her might: "Gramma! Gramma!"

At that moment a familiar voice fell on Polly's ear. "Here she is, Tom! My, Polly child, what a fright you gave us!"

Polly opened her eyes with a start, to find herself still stretched out under the shady tree, but the little man had vanished, and there was grandma kneeling close beside her.

"Oh—Oh-O-h!" she wailed, "what an awful dream I had—what a dreadful dr-e-a-m!"

Tom, brother-like, grinned. "That's what you got for sneaking," he said, unsympathetically.

"Sneak," thought Polly; "there's that disgusting word again." And throwing herself straight into grandma's arms, she sobbed penitently, "Oh, gramma, gramma, forgive me; I'll never, nev-er sneak again!"

"There, there," comforted grandma, smiling, and kissing the tearful eyes, "there, sweetheart, don't cry. I don't believe you ever will."

And Polly never did.

Made a Fuss

CLARA, aged 6, did not know the meaning of an encore, and was very much disgusted with the children's concert in which she took part.

"I just know we didn't make a single mistake," she exclaimed, "yet the people in front got cross and made such a fuss that we had to do it all over again."

A Raindrop's April Trip

NOT as a raindrop it began
The trip from mountain top to sea,
But an icy crystal, glistening
And white as snow can ever be.

No heavy trunk was there to pack,
Of ev'ry burden it was free,
When the crystal murmured to itself,
"'Tis spring, when merrily I flee."

For April's sun gave it release—
A raindrop now it swiftly sped
A-down the steep, the barren slopes,
With streams that coursed o'er rocky bed.

Descending farther to the plain,
With multitudes of drops so glad,
Which as a river smoothly flowed
Through smiling meadows greenly clad.

Still onward did the raindrop go,
A-singing low and charmingly,
Until it reached the journey's end
And danced on wave-crests of the sea.

(Now, if you find the title wrong,
Say simply "drop," and drop the "rain";
But don't forget it won't be long
'Til it will fall as rain again!)

Queen Victoria and Stores

A CERTAIN lady, engaged upon some work for her majesty, was allowed to bring her daughter, a child, with her. The queen, taking a fancy to the little girl, entered presently into the following conversation:

Child: "Where do you live when you are in town?"

The queen: "I live at Buckingham Palace, my dear. Where do you live?"

Child: "Oh! we live in the Fulham road." (Short pause.) "Where do you get your things from? We always get ours from Harrods' stores."

Too Busy to Grow

THE diminutive office boy had worked hard on a salary of $3 a week. He was a subdued little chap, faithful and quiet. Finally, however, he ask for an increase.

"How much more would you like?" inquired his employer.

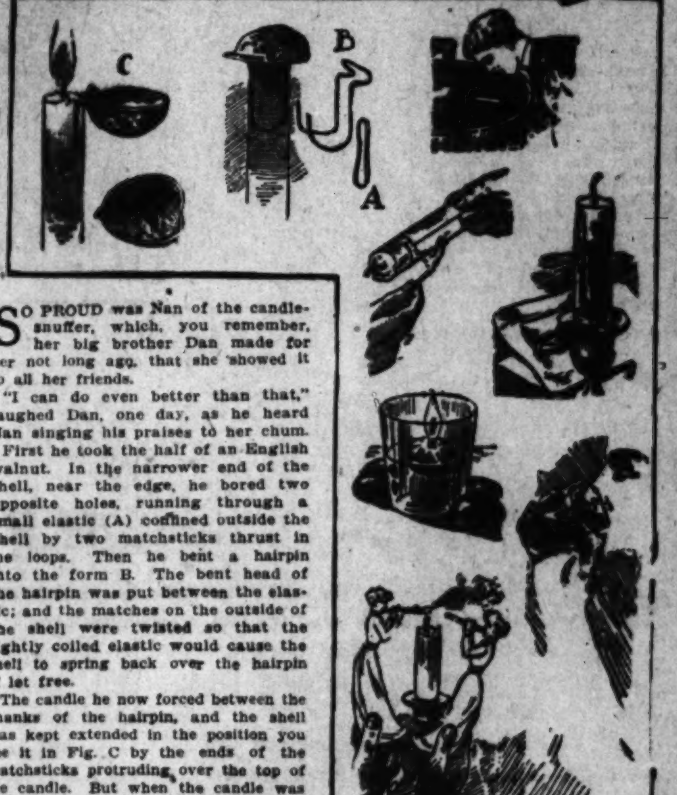
"Well," answered the lad, "I don't think that $1 more a week would be too much."

"You are a rather small boy to be earning $4 a week."

"I suppose I am," he replied. "I know I'm small for my age, but, to tell the truth, since I've worked here I've been so busy I haven't had time to grow."

He got the "rise."

Dan's Candle Magic



SO PROUD was Nan of the candle-snuffer, which, you remember, her big brother Dan made for her not long ago, that she showed it to all her friends.

"I can do even better than that," laughed Dan, one day, as he heard Nan singing his praises to her chum.

First he took the half of an English walnut. In the narrower end of the shell, near the edge, he bored two opposite holes, running through a small elastic (A) confined outside the shell by two matchsticks thrust in the loops. Then he bent a hairpin into the form B. The bent head of the hairpin was put between the elastic; and the matches on the outside of the shell were twisted so that the tightly coiled elastic would cause the shell to spring back over the hairpin if let free.

The candle he now forced between the shanks of the hairpin, and the shell was kept extended in the position you see it in Fig. C by the ends of the matchsticks protruding over the top of the candle. But when the candle was lit, and burned some distance down, the ends of the stick lost their hold on the candle, and the nutshell flew forward over the wick.

"Now I'll make you a funny little oil lamp, the oil of which I'll drink," said Dan. Into an almond he thrust at right angles a splinter of another almond. Pouring some white wine in a glass, he floated the almond in the wine and lit the end of the splinter. This queer light burned steadily, fed by the wine; until Dan drank the "oil."

"You can have a dandy horse-chestnut lamp," remarked Dan, "by soaking a horse-chestnut in coal oil for about twenty-four hours and giving it a wick. Light your wick and float your lamp in a glassful of water. It will burn through the whole night."

Nan and her chum had become so interested that they begged Dan for a few more candle tricks. Thereupon he showed them how to decorate candles. Around a candle he wrapped a black drawing, placing the drawing inside. Afterward he gently heated the paper with several matches, pausing when the paper began to look greasy. Unwrapping the paper, the drawing was found printed clearly upon the surface of the candle.

Continuing his demonstration, he cut out two little women from pasteboard. These he gave trumpets of quill toothpicks, the ends of which he fixed in some mysterious manner. Bringing one woman toward the flame of a candle, the end of the trumpet was held exactly over the flame, whereupon the light immediately went out. But when the other lady trumpeter extended her quill, touching the smouldering wick, the candle was again lit. The girls were lost in wonderment, until Dan explained that in the end of one quill he had put a grain of powder, the explosion of which had extinguished the light. And the wick was relighted by a fragment of phosphorus (placed in the end of the other quill), igniting when it came in contact with the smouldering wick.

"That old trick of having your hands tied behind you and then picking a floating candle out of the water with your teeth is the simplest thing in the world," added Dan, as he turned to go. "All you have to do is to get the candle between your lips and then draw in your breath sharply."

UNDISCOVERED BEAUTIES

The Russian-American Beauty

Her Horoscope.

By Minerva Meares.

This Russian-American beauty was born August 17, which gives her a nature adaptable to many different stations of life. In youth she will have strong religious aspirations and tendencies, but these fade with the years, and she will become cynical and pessimistic. She will be a good mimic and be capable in many ways. She will want her life active and filled with color, and it will be changeable.

There will be love of home, but this will find channels that will lead the interest out of domestic spheres. This nature is very buoyant and happy, rebounding quickly from disappointment and seeming defeat, and she will be exacting in the demand that affection be shown and not merely implied.

There is good executive ability, but because the nature is fiery and restive under criticism and restraint conditions will not always be harmonious.

While she will be sympathetic she will want things done as she prefers, and will lose interest very quickly in matters if her ideas are questioned or opposed.

She will be intelligent and tactful generally in handling people, and have a certain popularity for that reason, but the nativity shows many warring traits and characteristics, governed as it is by the emotional sign of Leo. As the sign is from the heart of the solar nature, it makes reciprocal centre for all the forces of humanity.

Consequently she will be apt to be led, and not always led wisely, by those professing friendship. And in this way the emotional temperament will be prone to go to extremes.

She will be clever with her hands, and will have excellent taste in her ideas of dress and surroundings. This nativity seldom makes high attainments in life, though planetary influences will sometimes aid in making the life successful.

Marriage should be with one born between March 17 and April 19, or between November 22 and December 21.

HER STRUGGLE FOR SUCCESS

"WHAT an unusually striking girl!" The ejaculation came from one of two men standing upon the crowded corner awaiting a chance to cross the street. His companion looked up.

Coming directly toward them, evidently also destined for the opposite corner, was a tall, graceful figure, a brilliant combination of purple velvet and ermine. The second man surveyed it placidly, but with distinct approval.

"She certainly is a stunner," he assented carelessly. The well-poised head under the ermine hat grew a trifle more erect, the curved lips closed.

Not Altogether Disagreeable.

"She heard you," said the first man. But the figure in purple velvet gave no further sign. She is quite accustomed to overhearing remarks of a similar nature. They are not altogether disagreeable things to hear, although they make her uneasy for the moment. The purple velvet and ermine add to them, she knows, but—she looks down at her white muff and strokes the delicate fur—she loves them. She is going to have them; she has earned the right to wear what she pleases!

Even the sternest critic would not gainsay her. The purple velvet and ermine are acquisitions of recent date. The glorious masses of red gold hair, the large brown eyes, the full scarlet lips—these have always been hers; they marked her as a beautiful child when she crossed in the steerage with her parents on that terrible journey from Russia twenty years ago.

Beautiful as a Child.

She was three years old then, and the wonder and discomfort of the voyage form her first definite memory. She remembers, too, that some ladies in the saloon, seeing her, sent for her and her mother. And they, too, had admired the long braids of wavy hair, which even then were remarkable, and the clear skin and great eyes. And they had prophesied great things for her and had given her mother money.

It seemed at first as if the great things could not possibly come. Often there was not enough to eat and she went with her pail for soup to the free kitchen where they filled it for you once daily. By and by she went to school; she liked that. She passed easily to the head of her classes. From an unnoticed member she became an object of envy. Her soul was elated.

But this was not for long. One day she appeared in a new frock. A schoolmate asked her where it was bought. Innocently she replied:—

"My mother does not buy clothes, she gets them by the mission." And she had sealed her doom.

"Charity clothes," the schoolmate retorted, with curling lip.

Caste in Dress.

That night she cast the frock from her in a passion of weeping.

"I don't want it," she stormed. "I won't wear it. You must buy my clothes by the store, not get them from the mission."

"What?" asked her mother, sharply. And she had reiterated the statement, stamping her small foot. And then her father had whipped her with the strap hanging on the wall until there were great welts on her white shoulders, and at last, very miserable, she crept upon her mattress, undaunted, muttering between her teeth:—"I'll show 'em."

It became the dominating motive of her life. She would show them. She could get the first seat in the first row; she would get other things, too. Her small being was daily torn by a conflict of passions not pleasant to look upon in a child of tender years. But somehow it helped her.

It helped her to stand the meagre fare, the hard blows, that were her daily portion. It became her religion; she would show that she could look as the best of them.

There were few child labor laws to stop her when at ten she left school and obtained her first job. She came home and told her mother with pride. She was stringing beads in a glass factory at ten cents a day. That meant sixty cents a week; she could in two weeks get a new frock.

Strangely enough, when she got it on, the worn, discarded garment of some child one step higher in the social scale, she did not like it. Her ambition had progressed. Not only did she want bought frocks, but nice ones as well.

She got them. It is a long story from the first ninety cent frock to the ermine and purple velvet. She went to night school. She progressed from the glass factory to a paper box factory, then to a candy factory. She studied hard. She passed the grammar classes and entered the night high school. There she learned stenography.

Nights of Study.

Then she did a courageous thing. She left the factory where she was making $12 a week and started as a stenographer at $6. She was then seventeen years old.

Night after night she continued her studies. In the course of time she left the night high school and entered the evening law school for women. ary steadily increased. Then she opened stenographer's office, and her earnings $40 a week.

Reward of Beauty.

PERHAPS there is no more frequently quoted phrase in the English language than "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." We use it carelessly, facetiously, meaninglessly.

It is quoted by the half-fledged literary amateur, by the idle chatterer, who has picked it up from some other chatterer; even the enterprising advertiser makes it his own to extol a brand of cigars or a style of furniture.

In fact, the poor phrase has been so mistreated and so abused that it has passed into the realm of the banal.

Yet there is a wealth of meaning in these words for each and every one of us. The vision of beauty which we make our own may be always our own. In the fraction of a second we can call up memories of scenes and images long since vanished from our actual world.

One of the English poets who loved beauty with all the strength of a deeply spiritual nature found beauty in the common things of daily life. Once he saw "a host of golden daffodils," and to him that glimpse of beauty was eternal.

In speaking of this vision he said:—"They flash upon that inward eye which is the bliss of solitude."

These words have a message for us. We can, if we will but try, look for the beautiful here, there, everywhere around us, and so fill our minds that these remembered images may flash into our memory and be a joy to us.

SUETENE

Thirty Days Fresher
Than Eastern Shortenings

It is economy to use Suetene—that's certain. It costs no more per pound than common food shortenings—and is so concentrated that it takes one-third less.

It is a fact of science that Suetene is the most healthful shortening. It is just pure beef suet and refined vegetable oil. It doesn't contain a particle of hog fat.

Suetene is unquestionably the most wholesome and satisfactory shortening you can buy for daily use in your home.

Sold by leading grocers and meat dealers.

THE MODERN PULPIT.

IT is not a century yet since it required about a month to cross the Atlantic. Now the transit is accomplished much inside of a week. The old sailing vessel had no schedule time. The passage might take two months instead of one. The modern liner has a schedule kept almost as perfectly as that of a railroad train. One of the six-day steamers reduces its variations not to hours, but in ordinary weather to minutes. It is only about fifty years since sleeping-cars were things unknown on American railroads. The journey from New York to Chicago had to be made in the ordinary passenger car, the traveler sitting bolt upright in his seat for a matter of about forty hours. The "Twentieth-Century Express" makes the journey in eighteen hours, and the night hours are passed in a sleeping berth all but as comfortable as a luxurious bed.

In moral matters possibly as great a transition as any may be found in the treatment of subjects in the pulpits of Christian churches. When gray-headed men were young the ordinary Sunday-morning sermon, and that almost without exception, discussed only two classes of subjects. The discourse treated upon either some religious matter or a theological one.

But there were real gospel preachers in those days, whose discourses were altogether from the religious point of view and devoted to the improving of the moral life of the people in all their everyday affairs.

The transition in the pulpit of the present day from that of the past which is most noticeable is a departure from purely religious topics, an almost entire neglect of purely theological subjects, and the devotion of much time and thought to matters of everyday life which can only be construed to come within the scope of religion in a secondary way.

A favorite topic of the modern pulpit is often expressed in the phrase, "What would Christ do?" if He should come to this, that or the other place and in relation to the various contentions that occupy men politically rather than religiously.

Of course there is a certain moral element in politics. The civic action of every citizen ought to be taken on a conscientious conviction that it is right, and yet it is not a purely religious act, and the pulpits which discuss political subjects show a very sharp transition from those of a generation or two ago.

The demand of the pew upon the pulpit has been for practical discourses. By this is meant something connected with the everyday life of the people, mostly of an entirely local and transitory importance. The old-fashioned gospel has palled upon the hearts of men, and there is no sensation in sitting and hearing a minister advise his hearers to be good.

This way of using the pulpit is modern, is popular. Yet up to date as it is and much admired as it is, it may well raise a question whether after all it is for the best interests of the churches and of church people. Referring to the phrase, considerably hackneyed, "What would Christ do?" it appears to us upon careful reflection that He would scarcely do what many of those of our day who assume to speak in His name do. Important as civic duties are, and they may be a little more so than in the days when the Christ was here among men, yet His example ought to be the guide of the minister rather more than the people. When the modern preacher mounts his pulpit and with the query, "What would Christ do?" plunges into all the transient political squabbles of his day and locality, is he doing as the Christ would do? If he is not, the question still remains open, Which best suits our times and makes more effectively for the good of the people?

To answer this it would appear as if we must ask what religion is, what are its aims, spirit and purpose. We know ourselves that the original Preacher of Christianity carefully avoided every attempt to draw Him into the least discussion of the political affairs of His time. There was more need for political reform in Judea two thousand years ago than in Los Angeles this Sunday morning. Yet this original Preacher never once in any word touched at all upon the political corruption, the governmental tyranny and wrongs of His time. Tax gathering among the Jews under the Roman policy of farming out the taxes of a province or a district was about the most inquitous thing ever known upon earth. This very iniquity in all its blackness was brought directly to Christ for a solution. He "sidestepped" from it in a way as sharp and positive as could be.

The purpose of religion is to make the lives of men purer and better. The scope of religion is the individual. There is nothing in the gospels that deals with men in herds, classes or parties. Every appeal is to the individual conscience. Every attempt at reform is upon the heart of the personal being. The means used for the uplifting of the race are not negative. There is no attempt in the gospel at representing vice and there is nothing in the gospel that deals at all with crime. Human laws are left to human governments and their agencies to frame and to execute. Religion is separated from these negative and repressive and punitive human laws. The effort is a direct one to plant in the individual soul a positive principle which will work a moral transformation in the heart of the recipient. It does not take men's lives and acts and analyze them in detail, putting obstacles in the way of their going astray here and there and yonder. The aim is to implant such a spirit of purity, integrity and love of right that once having taken possession of the human heart, the footsteps of the individual will always move in the right path.

It is a very remarkable thing to the student of the gospels that the first Preacher of Christianity abstained with such care from arousing the obstinate antagonism of those who heard Him. There was no invective in His word, no crimination in His discourses, no bitterness even against sin itself. The treatment of the subject always by the Christ was that of the gentle and skillful physician who found a human being afflicted with some disease of the body. The gentlest touch was used; the most careful means to allay, not to increase the pain, were resorted to. This first Preacher of Christianity never forgot the truth embodied in the words of the older scripture which tells us that God "remembers that we are dust." The idea was always present to His mind that humanity was ignorant almost to blindness. weak to the point of absolute imbecility.

If He were to mount a modern pulpit in Los Angeles today, think you there would fall from His lips any harsh expression of condemnation against the vilest sinners in this whole city in its worst quarters? One of the most degraded of human beings, a fallen woman, was brought into His presence, and with a gentleness as soft as the morning breeze, as sweet as the very breath of heaven. He said to her in tones of divine pity, "Go and sin no more." And the effect of that leniency, of that love, was the Magdalen, who broke the box of spikenard upon His head, washed His feet with her tears and wiped them with the long tresses of her beautiful head.

The work of the Christian churches in the world for two thousand years has been the most remarkable thing in history. The effect of the teaching of Christ in the lives of men and upon human civilization has been the greatest uplift humanity ever knew. This work was done through the power of love. Its temper was always gentle. It broke down no obstacles before it with denunciations of a "big stick" of any kind. It will lose its power and its efficacy will decay in direct proportion as those who preach the gospel lose the gentleness and forget the love their Master manifested, and undertake to repress vice rather than win men to the ways of righteousness and peace.

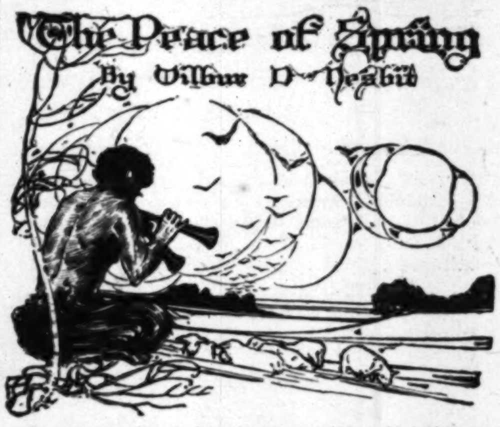
Sermons in Song..

The Peace of Spring

By Wilbur D. Nesbit



"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters."—Psalm xxiii., 2.

The quiet of the pasture lands!
  There all the grass is green and sweet,
And, whisperless, it understands
  The gentle pressure of our feet;
There dandelions thickly spread
  In wondrous arabesques of gold
As though the stars from overhead
  Upon earth's bosom had been rolled.

The violets laugh at the sky—
  An echo of the dreaming blue;
The voiceless breezes wander by
  To thread the blossom paths anew;
The early bees in search of sweets
  Seem all a-tiptoe in the air,
Each wing is noiseless in its beats
  As through the soundless day they fare.

The wild rose in its cloister nook
  Is shielding yet its summer blush;
The trees beside the lazy brook
  Sway softly in the morning's hush;
The scattered clouds of white go by
  Like sun-kissed sails far out at sea—
The argosies that journey high
  To whatsoe'er their haven be.

The quiet of the pasture lands!
  Where new-born flower, leaf and vine
Seem to be spring's cup-bearing hands
  That offer us her amber wine;
Where filmy veils of mist uproll
  On sights that halt and hold us long—
There, in a chord that thrills the soul,
  The very silence sings a song!

IN MEMORIAM—ELIZA A. OTIS.

She lives, she lives! May earthly thought then dare
Deny a godly spirit and declare
A stone a witness, that she was? She is!
There is no dust to mar our memories!

She is, she is! Our sense, our own, is numb!
We may not fathom her millennium,
And yet her lips to us clairvoyant speak;
I pity you, so numb, so blind, so weak!

She lives! O earthing friends, why should you mourn?
She lives—far more than you, who stand forlorn!
That chair is empty by your emptiness!
Does grief heal grief or human selfishness?

She lives, she lives! The Southland Troubadour!
Who touched the Lyre, and taught us love the Pure,
The leaves, the flower in arroyo bed,
The lofty fir on the Sierra's head,

The ocean's magic spell, majestic mood,
The orange blossom and the sun-gold fruit—
Much we have lost, much more her spirit won:
Immortal Life, beneath, beyond the sun!

She looked up at him.

"You love me, George," she said. "You have told me you would do anything to prove your love."

"Anything, dearest," he fervently muttered.

Her steady gaze did not waver.

"My new suit from Paris has come," she said, "together with my new hat and my new puffs. I will array myself in these and you will walk down the avenue with me tomorrow afternoon."

He turned pale and hesitated.

"This is the acid test of love," she coldly added.

He mutely shook his head as he arose.

"I can't do it," he hoarsely gasped, and went away deeply sorrowing.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

YOUNG JAPAN.

LETTER FOR AMERICAN CHILDREN ABOUT CHILDREN OF JAPAN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KYOTO.—I have been asked to write a letter for the children of America about the children of Japan. I want the boys and girls who take this newspaper to seat themselves upon the magic carpet of fairyland, which will take one around the world in the twinkling of an eye. All you have to do is to shut your eyes and wish you were there, and when you open them, lo! your wish has come true. Our magic carpet has carried us across the Pacific and has dropped us down in the heart of Japan. We are in the big city of Kyoto, in the central part of the country. There are mountains in sight everywhere, and behind us is a beautiful lake which fills the river running through the city. The houses are so many that they cover as much space as Philadelphia, which has three times as many people. Their walls are such that they can be slid back during daytime, and we can see all that goes on within. Most of the streets are lined with stores filled with all kinds of curious goods, and the streets, stores and houses are swarming with children. Here they are working, helping their parents; there they are playing, and further on is a crowd going to school.

What jolly youngsters they are! We hear their laughter sounding out on the air, and as they see us some bend half double, in Japanese fashion, and yell out: "O-hi-O," their word for good-day. Others, who are ruder, cry out Japanese syllables which, our interpreter says, mean:

"You furry-headed foreigners; you have eyes like a cat!"

Our Japanese Brothers.

We find that we are as great curiosities to the Japanese children as they are to us. Their skins are yellow, and their eyes are a trifle aslant, and so fastened at the corners that they do not come as wide open as ours do. They think that their eyes are the more beautiful, and that cream-colored skins are quite as fine as white ones. Outside of this, Japanese boys and girls are just like Americans. Their little black eyes can see as far as ours can; and if you scratch their yellow skins they bleed in the same way. You had better be careful not to do so, however. They are as proud as you, and they will fight at the drop of a hat.

They are not as tall as we children of the same age, but they are fully as strong. Get one of the little fellows to double up his arm, and put your hand on his biceps. Every muscle stands up like a baseball, and every ounce of his flesh is hard with the athletics which every schoolboy has to take daily. As to his fighting, you have heard how the Japanese whipped the Russians, who are almost twice as heavy as they are and three times as many in number, and how, about fifteen years ago, they conquered the Chinese, who have ten times as many people in their great nation over the way.

The Children Soldiers.

Just now the children of Japan are all playing soldier. The nation is still excited over its victory, and the boys go about with guns and flags, marching while their trumpeters blow. Their guns are bamboo and their swords are of wood. They right well, however, and they have sham fights tween the different companies of boys in a town. babies are now dressed in military costumes of the mothers, and many a four-year-old baby goes about in the dress of an officer of the Some children who wear kimonos have soldier not a few are dressed in khaki. The toy shops of lead soldiers and miniature guns and drums. older boys are real soldiers, for every school has itary drill under officers of the army. Boys of 14 have to march with guns, and as they grow they go out in the field to camp and take part in battles. In every Japanese school there is a drill where the guns are stacked up against the walls not in use. Every school has a gymnasium, and boys and girls go through all sorts of exercise to them strong and enable them to fight and work their Emperor when a war comes. Just now, the think the Japanese people could whip any other and that the United States would have a poor a fight with their country. We are friendly to but we must keep our eyes open, for no one can that we may have to fight them by and by. They far more soldiers in their army than we have, and navy is one of the best in the world.

A Day for Dollies.

On the 3rd of March every year occurs a great holiday, known as the feast of the dolls. On the boys have to stand in the background. ents pay little attention to them, and they girls, for the time, the chief members of the is the one day in the year when they are more important than the boys. At this time every girl gets a new doll, and all the dolls of the family, including those of mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, are brought out to be admired and played with.

The dolls used at this time are not like ordinary dolls, and they are played with only once a year, and then laid away for twelve months, when the next doll festival comes. These dolls represent some favorite prince or princess, some hero or heroine and sometimes the Emperor or Empress. There is a little throne of steps made for them in the back of the parlor or in the most honored place in the house, and they are placed upon this in rows. The children then sit down in front of them and talk to them. They put food and drink before them in tiny dishes, and listen to stories about them. They give them doll toys, which are as fine as they can afford. In rich families the toy dishes are sometimes of silver with little toy silver chopsticks for the toy Emperor and Empress to eat with. They serve toy wine, made especially for this feast, in toy cups. Some families have collection of dolls, which have been saved by the children for generations, and which go back for a hundred years or more.

Then the stores are filled with dollies for this feast, and the little yellow-shinned girls trot around in bright kimonos on their wooden clogs, admiring them and picking out the ones which are to be bought for this festival.

The Teddy Bears of Japan.

The ordinary Japanese doll used by the girls is not like the American article. It is a miniature Japanese child or woman, with the blackest of black eyes, with queerly-dressed Japanese hair, wearing a kimono and wooden shoes. Such dolls are of all sizes, from as big as your finger to your little baby sister, and the children in playing with them often carry them about on their backs, tying them on with strings, just as the real Japanese babies are tied. In the stores there are all sorts of doll furniture, and one can get a full housekeeping outfit for a very few cents.

Among the queerest playthings in the way of pets are what might be called the "Teddy Bears of Japan." I call them puppy-cats. They are in reality a sort of a cross between a dog and cat, made of papier maché and painted in gorgeous colors. The Japanese call them "ino haurico," and it is not beneath the dignity of the boys to play with them. They are as popular here as the "Teddy Bears," with us, and they would, I doubt not, be great favorites with our children if introduced at home.

A Day for Boys.

The boys of Japan have their special day also. This is May 5, and it is known as the feast of flags or as the festival of the god of war. On that day every house has a pole of bamboo from which to float gaudy fish made of tough paper. The wind blows into the mouths of the fish and inflates them, and they swim about through the air. Sometimes there will be a half-dozen of these fish on one pole. There will be a big one at the top and smaller ones below, until the one at the bottom may be the size of a minnow. Each fish represents a son of the family, and not a few have six or more. Some of these fish may be fifty feet long, and they look like great whales as they swim in the air. They represent the carp, which is noted for its strength and daring. Every one wants his son to become a strong man, and this fish means strength.

Kite Fights.

The Japanese boys are great kite flyers. I have counted a hundred kites in the air at one time over a Japanese village. The kites are of all sizes, but they are usually square or oblong instead of the shapes known in America. They are often made like birds with wings, and sometimes like fish. A favorite amusement is fighting kites. In this sport the strings are first soaked in glue and then dusted with powdered glass. This is done for a long distance from the kite, and it makes that part of the string a sort of flexible file. When two boys fight their kites they try to make the strings cross as the kites are flying, and by sawing cut one string in two. The kite which breaks away first then becomes the property of the owner of the one which is still flying. The favorite time for kite flying is in the winter, and it is at its height about New Year. There are kite stores in the Japanese cities, whose sign is a cuttlefish perched on the top of a high pole. The words for kite and cuttlefish sound the same in Japanese, and for this reason the signs.

In the Toy Stores.

The toys of Japan are an evidence of the love which these people have for their children. Every family spends money in amusing its little ones and a great industry is carried on in toymaking. There are toy stores everywhere. Every village that is large enough to hold a shop has one or more. They are to be found in the poorest parts of the cities, especially near the temples, where the streets are lined with them. Some of the favorite toys are made of dough, and there are peddling cooks who go around selling them. There are men who carry toy stoves through the streets and rent them out to the children at so much per hour. They furnish cakes and other things for the little ones to cook, so that for two or three cents a party of girls can have a stove for an hour and cook a whole meal for themselves.

Some of the toys are made of lacquer and many of paper. One can buy a very nice gun for $2 and a tin sword for 10 cents.

Instructive Games.

Many of the toys and games are used in teaching the children. There are playing cards with classical poetry on them, used much like our game of authors. Another pack of cards teaches the old Japanese proverbs, and another the names and forms of animals. The Japanese are experts in top spinning. They have whistling tops and can keep a half-dozen of them going at one time. They play battledore and shuttlecock, especially at New Year, and at that time the stores are filled with bats and balls. Many toys are used in the kindergartens, and there are games which teach history and geography and also cleanliness, unselfishness and morality.

The Japanese have fairy tales of all kinds. They have stories like Goody-Two-Shoes and Hop-o-my-Thumb. The Hop-o-My Thumb of Japan is a priest one inch long, who does all sorts of curious things. Another popular fairy tale is known as the Lucky Teakettle, another the Battle of the Monkey and the Crab, and a third, the Old Man Who Made the Dead Trees to Blossom. The Story of Urishima, a sort of a Japanese Rip Van Winkle, is exceedingly popular, as are also many fables about the badger, which might be called the Bre'r Rabbit of Japanese childhood.

In a Japanese Home.

But suppose we call upon some of our little Japanese friends. Their house is situated in a beautiful garden. Its roof is covered with black tiles, and it has double walls of wood. The outer walls of each side are shoved back during the daytime into little cupboards at the corners, and the fine inner walls of sash filled with paper panes may then be seen. There is a space between the two walls, and in this we sit while awaiting our friends. They soon appear. They get down on their knees and bump their heads on the floor in bowing to us, and then ask us in. We take off our shoes and leave them outside. This is the custom of all Japanese. The houses are exceedingly clean, and the floors are covered with thick mats of woven white straw which would be hurt by the nails in our shoes. The mats are so soft that our feet sink into them, and we feel like lying down and rolling over and over.

In the meantime, our little Japanese friends have laid cushions on the mats and beg us to sit. These people do not use chairs or sofas. They have tables for eating which are not more than a foot high, and they sit and sleep on the floor. The mats are soft and when they have taken out and spread on them some well-padded comforters they have a very soft bed. In the daytime, these comforters are rolled up in a bundle and put away in a cupboard or hole in the wall which by a sliding door is so covered that you would not suppose it was there. By this means the bedroom is turned into a parlor, and when a table is brought in it is a dining-room as well.

As we sit on the mats our little friends tell us about their homes, explaining some customs which are different from ours. They say that the mats are cleaner than our carpets and that they are very convenient in describing a house, as they are always of the same size. They show us that each mat is three feet wide and six feet long and say that the size of a house or room is known by the number of mats it takes to cover the floor. The room we are in has eight mats. Larger rooms have twenty or thirty mats, and when a carpenter starts to build a house he asks the owner how many mats he wants, and thus fixes the size and price. All land in Japan is measured by the unit of the mat, a tsubo, being six feet square or two mats in size. Land here is measured by tsubos, not acres. It takes more than a thousand tsubos to make one acre of land.

How the Children Bathe.

By and by we go out to look at the bathroom. The Japanese children are very cleanly, and they take a red-hot bath every day. The bath tub is about as high as our shoulders. It has a stovepipe running through it with a board resting against the pipe to protect one's body from it when he gets in. The pipe is filled with charcoal and lighted. It soon heats the water to boiling, and when it begins to steam, the Japanese jump in. Even little babies are put into this hot water. It turns their skins red, and when they come out, they are the color of beets. We try such bathing ourselves. It is so hot that we jump quickly out and cannot be induced to attempt it again.

The Japanese have many public bath houses. There are hundreds in Kyoto, where one can get a good hot plunge for 3 or 4 cents.

Houses Without Chimneys.

You would think that houses so thin and open as this one, where we are visiting, would need steam or hot water, or at any rate great coal or wood fires to make them comfortable during the winter. Nothing of the kind is known to the children of Japan. If we should go up in a flying machine and look down upon the roofs of Kyoto, we could not count a hundred chimneys on its tens of thousands of houses. These people have no fireplaces, no grates and no means of heating like ours. The cooking is done with charcoal in little clay ovens, and if one would give a big dinner he must have many such stoves. For warmth a small, brass-lined box filled with ashes with a little burning charcoal within it is most common. This warms only one's hands, and he keeps his feet from freezing by sitting upon them. Sometimes a wood fire is made in a box of this kind. This, however, is only in the poorer houses; and the smoke goes out where it can.

We take a meal with our friends. Each of us has his own little table. The meal is served in individual dishes and the girls bend low and bow before they offer them to us. The meal begins with sweet cake and candy. Then there is a bowl of soup in a dish of wood covered with lacquer, a varnish so bright that one can see his face in it. There is fish, raw and cooked, and fried eels, which taste delicious. The raw fish is not bad. It is served upon ice, cut into little slices so we can eat it with chopsticks. After all, why should not one eat raw fish as well as raw oysters?

And then there are salads and pickles, apples and pears, and great red persimmons as big as tomatoes. The rice is brought in at the close of the meal in a wooden bucket bound with brass rims. We are told again and again to help ourselves to the rice, for one is supposed to complete his dinner with it as, with rice in plenty, no one can go hungry. We find some difficulty in conveying the rice to our mouths with the chopsticks, and finally raise the bowl to our lips and shovel it in. As it grows cold we pour a little hot tea over it, laughing with the Japanese children as they do the same.

How the Children Dress.

But there are so many strange things among the little ones we see all about us that it would take a long time to mention them all. The children wear shoes of wood or of straw, and their stockings are foot mittens with a finger for the big toe. These mittens stop above the ankle, and the rest of the leg goes bare except for the gown or kimono, which falls from the shoulders. The kimono has very long sleeves. These, in the case of the women, hang down, forming quite large bags at the wrist, which serve as pockets. The boys have smaller sleeves. The girls have great belts called obis, which are tied at the back and which hold their kimonos together. For the same purpose the boys have sashes which are scarcely larger than ropes. The girls wear bright red underclothing, although their kimonos are usually of more modest hues.

All the school children of Japan have their own dress. The boys wear a divided skirt, which reaches from the waist almost to the ankles, and the girls have fuller skirts not divided. Both boys and girls wear kimonos, which are tucked inside their skirts and which cover the upper parts of their bodies.

From this one would think it almost impossible to tell the boys from the girls. It is not so. The skirts of the girls are either dark red or of the color of a blue damson plum, while those of the boys are steel gray. The girls go bareheaded, and their hair is twisted up on the top of their heads. The boys wear caps or hats, and their hair is cut short and it stands out like a shoe brush in bristles over the scalp.

In the schools of Japan the boys and girls do not sit together, although they have the same studies. They now use desks and chairs, but they used to study sitting on the floor. In other respects their schools are not very unlike our schools at home.

The Young Man Could Talk.

It isn't always safe to trust appearances, as two young women learned to their chagrin on a trolley trip out in Jersey.

Two other young women with a man between them were seated on the opposite side of the car. They were a silent three; the young women and the man, but they talked excitedly—with their fingers. Deaf mutes, evidently, the other young women thought, and after they had got a little used to the novelty they began to talk out loud about the young man and his companions.

"Isn't it a pity," said one, "that such a nice young man should be deaf and dumb?"

The other agreed audibly, and the talk went on. As is the way with the sex, there was little commiseration for the young women afflicted as the young man was.

The young man got his revenge for himself and his friends. Arriving at the point he wished to embark he raised his hand to the conductor and said in a loud voice:

"Stop at —— street, please."

The young women who trusted to appearances looked mighty sheepish as the three left the car. The young man wasn't deaf and dumb at all. His companions were, and he was simply talking to them in their own language.—[New York Sun.

He nodded toward an Everest of broken bottles in the yard.

Flight of Snowy Owls.

A remarkable and beautiful flight of snowy-white owls was witnessed in La Porte City yesterday afternoon. There were about forty of the birds and they stopped to rest in the pine trees in the residence district. Many people witnessed this unusual migratory movement, and the birds, with their snowy-white and barred plumage, attracted much attention.

The snowy owl is a native of the far north, subsisting on small animals and scraps of meat left by the polar bear and other animals of prey. The male bird is large and snowy white and the female is smaller and has barred plumage. They are a species of owl that hunt and fly in the daytime.—[Waterloo Correspondence St. Paul Despatch.

Improbable Combination.

They were talking of the strange sights to be seen in a great city, and one man paid his tribute to New York. "I don't believe one of you could think of any combination of circumstances that hasn't at some time occurred on the streets there," he said.

"I reckon I know of one that's never occurred there?" said Hiram Fowle.

"What's that?" asked the other curiously.

"I guess," said Hiram slowly, "that you've never seen nor ever will see a brass band going in one direction an' the heft of the folks going the other."—[Youth's Companion.

About Tornadoes.

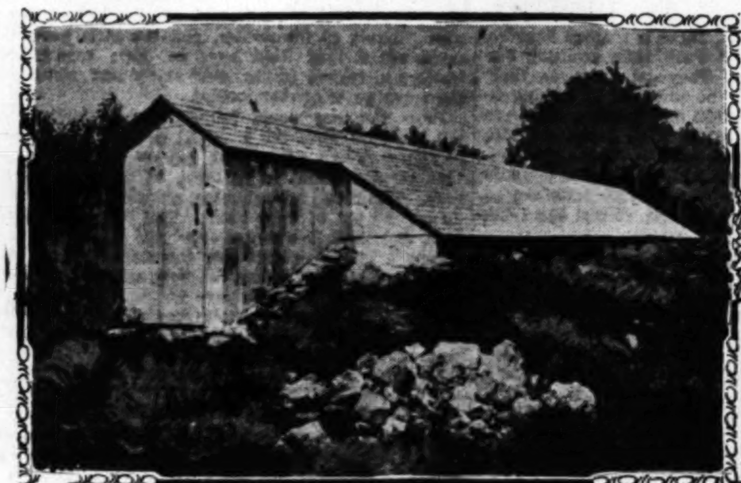
UNITED STATES WEATHER BUREAU LEARNING MUCH OF INTEREST.

NEW METHOD OF MEASURING THEM BY SURVEYING AND PHOTOGRAPHY—DIMENSIONS AND FORCE OF THE GREAT VORTICES MEASURED—VELOCITIES UP TO ELEVEN MILES A MINUTE COMPUTED. PRESSURES THAT NO BUILDING ON EARTH CAN BE MADE TO RESIST.

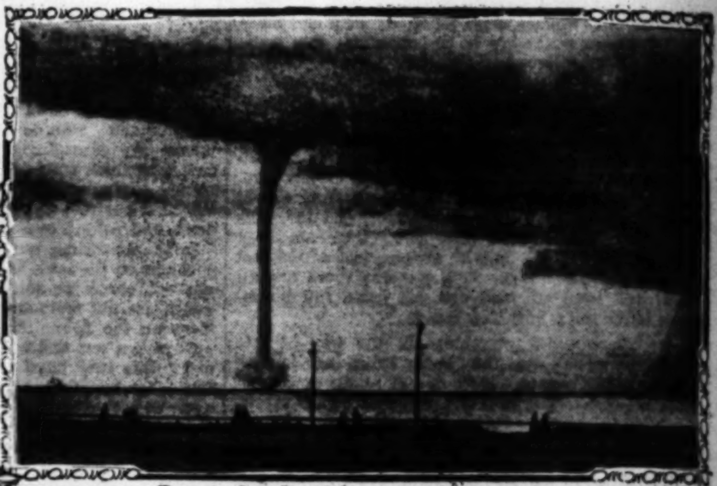
By a Special Contributor.

THE weather bureau is just completing a new investigation of tornadoes which is developing some interesting facts. Since tornado season begins with spring, this is an opportune time to tell you what is being found out about these most violent storms known to man.

The investigations are being made by Prof. Frank H. Bigelow of the weather bureau staff, and on the basis of these new observations he has formulated a new theory that refutes the old notion that tornadoes are due to the mechanical interference of air currents.

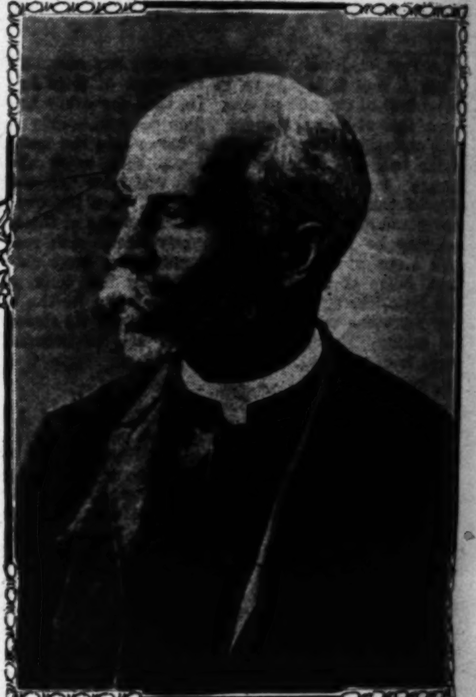


A Kansas "cyclone cellar."



Dumb bell vortex.

In the tornado's path, Kirksville, Mo.



Prof. Frank H. Bigelow.

Twenty-five tornadoes devastate our territory per annum. This is the average frequency, and there seems to be no increase from decade to decade. You will probably be reading of the season's first visitation in a few weeks, or, perhaps, in a few days. Then they will increase in frequency during May and June, and then commence to taper off in July. There are, however, a few winter visitations in the Gulf States. When tornadoes appear the papers generally announce them as "cyclones," a result of our national hobby for misnomers, evidenced also in our calling the cicada a "locust" and the bison a "buffalo." As a matter of fact, cyclones are the general storms which sweep over our country from the north Pacific coast and last for days at a time, whereas tornadoes develop suddenly within, perhaps, one township and generally last but a few minutes.

The tornado's vortex or tube, is usually but a few rods in diameter, leaving a path of destruction but a few rods wide and a few miles long, whereas that of the cyclone is perhaps 1000 miles across, leaving little if any destruction in its path. The cyclone's funnel is a mile or two, but the tornado's funnel only a few hundred feet high.

Their Cause Discovered.

As to the cause of tornadoes, Prof. Bigelow finds it due to a sheet of cold air lying over a sheet of warm air. Since heat ascends, these two sheets change places and develop currents of motion forming into the whirlwind seen in the tornado cloud.

He finds two types of these tornado vortices—the funnel and dumb-bell form. We have heard only of the funnel type hitherto, have thought of the tornado as having always a funnel cloud or tube. Sometimes one of these forms changes into the other, as in the case of the waterspout seen off Cottage City, Mass., August 19. A waterspout, of course, is nothing more than a tornado appearing over the ocean, from which it sucks up water. That off Cottage City changed from the dumb-bell to the funnel-shaped tube.

New System of Measuring Them.

For measuring a tornado or waterspout tube Prof. Bigelow has employed an ingenious method. Photographs having been made of them from two different angles, he can accurately compute the dimensions of the tube from these snapshots. After collecting the photographs he visits the spots where the cameras have stood and makes a survey of the distances between these spots and stationary objects of the landscape shown in the pictures. Thus with his surveying instruments he gets his scale of distances. Then he plats the vortex on a map and gathers data from all of the weather records kept in the neigborhood. Finally, by aid of mathematics he constructs a diagram of the funnel-shaped or dumb-bell-shaped tube, and from this he estimates its volume and the velocity of its spiral air currents. Such a thorough study of tornadoes and waterspouts has never been made before. He is extending his method also to cyclones and hurricanes, and thus these phenomena can be compared with the smaller and more furious storms.

Our first glimpse at the terrible force of tornadoes is to be had through his computations of the great Cottage City waterspout, which, as stated, appeared in both the funnel and dumb-bell form. In the funnel form it was about 3600 feet high and its vortex spread out to about 3900 feet at the top. At the bottom the tube was surrounded by a lofty cascade, which presented a measurement of its diameter at sea level.

This monster funnel was operating like an expanding and contracting corkscrew, whose rotation was much more tremendous at the bottom than at the top, and increased in fury toward the core or axis. The velocity of rotation computed for the innermost edge of the bottom of the funnel was 772 feet per second, or nearly nine miles per minute. You know how destructive a mile-a-minute hurricane is. But here we have a wind nearly nine times as great. At the same time that it was rotating at this awful speed—exerting a centrifugal force, hurling everything outward from the center—it was sucking up air at the rate of about 19,200 cubic yards per second. Within the tube was a partial vacuum, exploding and chilling everything in its path. It is this chill that makes a waterspout or tornado tube visible in the form of a cloud.

Eleven Miles a Minute.

Its force was still more terrific while it was in its dumb-bell form. Then the greatest power of rotation was not at the bottom, but in the narrow neck between the expanded upper and lower ends. For the inside of this neck the computed velocity was 705 miles per hour, or nearly eleven miles per minute—over two miles per minute faster than the neck of the funnel tube. The inner edge of this neck revolved twenty-seven times as fast as the outer edge, and on the outer surface of the great dumb-bell the rotation was twenty-seven times greater at the neck than on the expanded surface 295 feet above the neck. In this dumb-bell form it sucked nearly seven times as much air as when in the funnel form, or about 86,000 cubic yards per second.

The force of the great St. Louis tornado, which ravaged that city twelve years ago, has also been computed by Prof. Bigelow, whose figures for that phenomenon are also just announced for the first time. He estimates that the innermost edge of the vortex neck of the St. Louis tornado—which had the dumb-bell form—rotated at a speed of 787 feet per second, or nearly nine miles per minute, which was somewhat less than the velocity of the corresponding point in the Cottage City waterspout when in its dumb-bell form, yet somewhat greater than when the latter was in its funnel form. But the St. Louis tornado is found to have been nearly fifty times as efficient in lifting air as was the Cottage City waterspout when it also was in dumb-bell form. Prof. Bigelow tells me that all of these computations, of course, are mathematical, and based upon what the force of these phenomena would have been if their vortices were perfectly formed. Of course no photographic lens can penetrate to the interior of a tornado or waterspout tube, to show whether it was regular or irregular.

Large tornadoes, cyclones and hurricanes are constructed upon the same principles, differing only in dimensions and proportions, according to Prof. Bigelow. They all develop at an upper plane and extend downward toward the surface of the earth, the lower portion of their vortices being destroyed in the working of their tubes against the land or sea.

Hurricanes are deep tornadoes of the simple dumb-bell shape, and cyclones are of this shape, in part, but the vortex is very imperfect. One hurricane which has been computed—the "De Witte typhoon"—in the China Sea, in August, 1901, was a great dumb-bell vortex. The part of its neck that showed the fastest rotation was some two miles higher than sea level, and therefore above buildings and ships. Here the wide vortex of wind revolved at a speed of about seven and a half miles per minute, which was less than the tornado velocities above mentioned. But the vastness of this dumb-bell can be better realized by Prof. Bigelow's computation that it carried up nearly 100,000 times as much air as the Cottage City waterspout.

The Terrific Pressures.

It is beyond human power to build a structure, even of the strongest steel or masonry, which can withstand the tornado's full fury. The inner edge of the vortex of the Cottage City waterspout exerted a pressure up to about 1000 pounds per square foot at sea level, when it was in the funnel form; and it must have been more than a ton per square foot up in the fastest part of the neck when it was in the dumb-bell form. Structures built to withstand forty pounds to the square foot are considered to be hurricane-proof. But there is not a building on earth that could withstand the pressure in the eye of the vortex of the Cottage City waterspout or of any other tornado of its power.

The danger zone of a tornado is confined pretty closely to the path of the vortex, according to Prof. Bigelow. In the northern hemisphere, which we inhabit, its violence is always greatest on the southern side of this path, but in the southern hemisphere—below the equator—the greatest fury is always on its northern edge. Another interesting fact is that all of these corkscrew vortices—those of tornadoes, hurricanes and cyclones—in the northern hemisphere invariably rotate in a direction opposite to that of the hands of a watch laid face up, while those of the southern hemisphere revolve in the same direction as the watch's hands.

Safety Hints.

The direction of the tornado path is usually from southwest to northeast. Hence when you see a vortex cloud in the southwest the chances are that it is coming your way. The signs of the tornado's approach are those of a thunderstorm, but much exaggerated. The vortex cloud approaches with a roar like that of a hundred heavy railroad trains at top speed. Often the vortex cloud cannot be seen, however, even at midday. Intense thunder and lightning, a torrent of rain or hail frequently accompany or follow it.

To escape an approaching tornado persons in our hemisphere should run to the north or northwest of the evident path of the approaching vortex or take refuge in a cellar, preferably that of an ordinary frame house, where falling walls of brick or stone cannot crush them. The "cyclone cellars" scattered over our tornado belt have been the means of saving many hundreds of lives. These excavations are usually crowned by low mounds and superstructures of light framework like that of the ice-house cellar of an old-time country house.

The tornado is the most eccentric of our storms. One minute it will grind a stately building to dust and the next it will lift a locomotive from the rails, only to replace it uninjured hundreds of feet away, while at a further stage of its progress it will drive straws or bits of paper through the bark of trees without tearing them. The tornado of Kirkville, Mo., in 1899, lifted a piano out of one house, transported it 1000 feet through the air and then deposited it through the roof of another dwelling.

Our Tornado Belt.

Sixty tornadoes in one day devastated parts of eight of our States in 1884, our banner tornado year. Fully 800 people were killed, 2800 injured and 10,000 buildings were destroyed on that single date. But the most disastrous tornadoes of our history have been those of Louisville, in 1890, and St. Louis, in 1896. The former plowed a furrow 1000 feet wide through Kentucky's metropolis, destroying five churches, the union station, two halls, three schools, 266 stores, 32 factories, 10 warehouses and 532 residences. Seventy-six people were killed, 200 were injured, and the loss was $2,150,000. In 1854 another tornado had plowed through Louisville, killing 25 people. The St. Louis visitation was the severest of our history, killing 500, injuring 1500 and destroying property worth $14,500,000.

Our "tornado belt," or region of greatest frequency, occupies the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, but Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa and Minnesota are our tornado States par excellence. The Rocky Mountain plateau and slope are free from such convulsions, but thence eastward to the Atlantic there are few States, if any, not occasionally visited. New England's cool climate has not rendered it immune. It was visited by destructive tornadoes in 1878 and 1890.

The Penguin's Wings.

Ornithological puzzles are the penguins, with their curiously-shaped wings and odd unbirdlike upright carriage. The peculiarities of their wings suggest that the penguins are descendants of birds which used their wings rather than legs in the pursuit of prey under water, and as the struggle intensified between the competing individuals the most expert at this sort of swimming would get the most food and oust their less successful rivals. The winners gained advantage over their neighbors in proportion as their wings improved as swimming organs, and inversely and of necessity became less suited to perform the work of flight.

In all other birds the feathers though shed annually are more or less gradually displaced; but in the penguins the new feathers all start into being at the same time and thrust out the old feathers upon their tips, so that these come away in great flakes. Whereas in all birds save penguins the new feathers as they thrust their way through the skin end in pencil-like points, formed by investing sheaths, in the penguins these sheaths are open at the tips and attached by their rims to the roots of the old feathers, and hence these are held to their successors until these have attained a sufficient length to insure protection against cold.

This curious device for retaining the warmth afforded by the old feathers until the new generation can fill their places is apparently due to the fact that penguins are natives of the antarctic regions, although some now inhabit the tropical seas.—[Chicago Tribune.

Complimentary.

The young theological student who had been supplying the Bushby pulpit for two Sundays looked wistfully at Mrs. Kingman, his hostess for the time being. "Did you like the sermon this morning, if I may ask?" he inquired.

"You done real well with the material you selected," said Mrs. Kingman with much cordiality. "As I said to Zenas on the way home, 'I've heard a dozen or more sermons preached on that text, and this young man's the first that ever made me realize how difficult 'twas to explain.' Music's Charms.

THE HOTEL CLERK TELLS HOW THEY AFFECT HIM.

By a Special Contributor.

"S' HELP me, never again," said the Hotel Clerk wearily, as he came in about 10, wearing his granitewear shirt, his pearl studs and the rest of his after-6-o'clock clothes.

"Where you been?" asked the House Detective, who was staying up late to hang the quarantine sign on a promoter who had the habit of invading the St. Reckless of an evening and selling stock in a mining property warranted to contain large quantities of gold, silver and amalgam fillings, to unwary investors from the Middle West. "Did some gladsome social diversion claim you on your night off?"

"Nothing of the sort," said the Hotel Clerk. "It was a recital, a piano recital, if you must know—the damning truth. I have just returned from a place called Odium Hall, or some such name, and you behold me now in a state bordering on nervous exhaustion. One of those Little Sisters of the Hurried Touch with a winning smile and a way about her, caught me with my guard down the other day, and before I could cover up, she'd sawed off a couple of tickets on me. So, forgetting that the only way to get your money back on one of those orgies of the true music lovers, is to stay carefully away from it, I put on my Young Prince Charming tonight and walked foolishly into my fate, just the same as a muley cow going through a slaughter-house door.

"Any man ought to be able to find all the harmonic trouble that the artistic side of his nature might crave without going out hunting it. He can stay at home and it'll come looking for him. Most of our music is now punched out for us by machinery; also button holes, animal crackers and musical comedies. A penny in the slot may mean a pack of pepsin gum, or it may mean a national air by Williams and Walker.

"When you hump into a foolish-looking brass-bound machine with pipes and things curving around all over it, and you touch it off, it's liable either to blow your eyebrows off your face with a sudden blast of compressed air, or hand you the opening bars of 'The March of the Tuskegee Cadets,' on the drum of the ear, because it's a wise father these days that knows his automatic player from his vacuum cleaner. It used to be that after the youngest female child in the family had spent four hard years practicing the scales, running from 'do' to 'dough,' or words to that effect, and the next two years learning 'Buy a Broom' and 'There, Little Girl, Don't Cry,' with the bone-felon effect, and another very hard, bumpy year beating the vitals out of the Standard Classical Valse Collection Album, why, then, the neighbors could enjoy a well-earned rest. The piano was retired on a pension, and stayed closed from one housecleaning season to another, its main object being to give the house a tone of true refinement and enable the family to refer to the space under the front stairs as the music-room. But now, by heaven, they hang a devilish contrivance shaped like a dog house on its lower jaw and by a person sitting on this thing and churning the unfortunate instrument full of wind, it is compelled to throw the latest popular airs off its stomach in a metallic tone of voice that can be heard on a quiet night as far as four blocks.

"But being a perfect beggar for punishment, I had to go piking off tonight to this haunt of the bluff heads, sometimes called high brows. They called it a recital on the programme, but while I'm thankful to say nobody felt called upon to do so, at the same time I've got to confess to you that what I heard was worse than any recitation that ever came out of the box. 'How Salvador Won the Race,' with the correct elocutionary gestures and pauses, is a peaceful pipe alongside what I've been facing this night.

"Counting all of us there was quite a crowd. There were a lot of the real steep foreheads—you could spot them easy by their eyes and their dandruff and their rapt expressions—and a few rank outsiders like me, with the wild, hunted glance roving about from side to side, as if seeking a way to escape, and here and there, trying to look all wrought up and interested and everything. I could pick out a charter member of the Order of Husbands who Go Everywhere with their Wives. You know what merry devils they are! All one of these fellows needs is crepe on his sleeve and a derby hat worn in the crook of the left arm to be an honorary pallbearer.

"Well, after our appetites had been all whetted up, waiting, out came a densely-settled foreigner who either paid a heavy duty under the wool schedule when he came into this country or else dodged the customs officials by crouching down behind his own jungle. He certainly was the walking argument against a low tariff on raw products. Anyway, out he came and bowed very low and ran his hands through his acreage a couple of times so it all stood up straight like a maiden-hair fern in a pink dish. Then he tuned up the piano stool to the right pitch after considerable trouble and sat down and got up and spun her round and tuned her up some more and sat down again and wiped his hands on a handkerchief that looked like silk to me, and hurled it from him with a great disregard to expense, and then he shut his eyes and leaned forward and several of the true believers said 'Sh-h-h,' like that, and we were off.

"He started gently, I'll say that much for him. First he leaned away over and pushed two of the trebles a couple of gentle little nudges, 'tappy-tappy,' like a second-story man tiptoeing across a tin porch roof with goloshes on, and then he swung south and bumped two of the basses 'bummery-bummery,' away down deep, like an indigestion symptom. But then without waiting to give the piano a pepsin pellet or massage its abdominal wires, he came sliding in home from third, tore off two hang nails on the middle key with a loud rending sound and grabbed the poor thing by the upper lip and tried to pull all her front teeth out by the roots. I thought that was going pretty far, but he'd only started. All of a sudden he gave a convulsive start, and tore down to the corner and turned in a call for the entire department. Almost instantly intense excitement began to reign. All you could hear was the engines coming, and one of the hook-and-ladder trucks hit a milk wagon and knocked it through the front window of a tinware store and a lot of chemicals exploded in the basement, and at that flames burst out from the windows and people began to jump out of the upper stories with cooking stoves in their arms—I counted no less than fifteen Charter Oak ranges striking the sidewalk before I lost tally—and a side wall fell, burying many people in the ruins, and their shrieks were pitiful to hear, and one of the ambulances ran away and crippled a dog. The programme called it a Bach fugue. But you can't fool me; I know a third alarm when I hear one.

"The holocaust lasted for twenty minutes, as near as I could tell, and was attended by great loss of life and suffering. But after our Polack friend got the ruins damped down, he went back behind the scenes to take off his slicker and helmet and put on his running trunks to do a Mozart Marathon in the second half. After the applause had died out and all was quiet, except for the gasps of the exhausted instrument, which was leaning back on its haunches, panting like a lizard, and as I reached for my hat, the lady sitting next to me leans over and says to me—she had bad teeth and she'd undoubtedly been doing up her hair with an egg beater, but anybody could tell at a glance she had one of those temperaments you could fry an egg on—she leans over and she says:

" 'Excuse me, sir, for addressing a stranger, but I could tell that you were also deeply affected. Ah, me, music moves one strangely.'

" 'Yessum,' I says, 'it moves me strangely, too, not to say rapidly. And if you'll sit right still, ma'am, and watch me, you'll be able to see me moving.' And I came away.

"I guess the trouble with me is, Larry, that I've been having too much music lately. If I go into a regûlar restaurant, they insist on backing me up so close to the orchestra leader that we're both wearing practically the same pair of suspenders and the clarionet instrumentalist blows down my neck until I'm so tickled I can't eat. Sometimes I like those Bohemian eating-places where if I spill some of the red wine on my shirt, I can wait until it dries and then brush it off, without leaving any stain. But as sure as I go out into one of them a troupe of bushy Italian bandits in green velvet coats and wide red abdominal bandages, issue forth from behind the potted palms, armed with their national weapon, the guitar, and, gathering in a bunch just outside my ear, they render that famous Sicilian ballad, 'Come Into the Garlic, Maud,' until I'm a gibbering maniac.

"Now, on the other hand, if a good-looking girl comes out in a white dress and a rose in her hair and sings, 'In the Gloaming,' I can get a lump in my throat that makes me remind myself of a blue racer trying to swallow a china darning egg. But I don't care deeply for male quartettes that reset their heads on one another's shoulders and announce that 'My Lady Sleeps,' in a tone of voice which makes it a dead moral certainty that my lady won't sleep a wink unless she's lucky enough to be in bed over in the next ward.

"I used to like John Philip Sousa's line of stuff, too. I liked the way John Phil would stand up on a little perch keeping time with that gifted spine of his to a little fountain pen that he was waving in his hand, and making motions at a large bunch of Germans armed with steam-heating fixtures. He'd wave it this way and the little German with the big instrument that looked like a ventilator funnel on the Mauritania and sounded like Wallace the Untamable, would start up. And then he'd point it that way and the big German with the little instrument that looked like a stick of licorice and sounded like hog day at the Chicago stock yards, would join in, and then all the others would open up with their sections of open plumbing and I couldn't hear the music on account of the noise, and liked it fine. But the last time I fell for a brass-band concert, they produced 'My Old Kentucky Home' with so many variations that I couldn't recognize the original premises for the furnace plant and the tra la la bay windows and the Italian pergola and other things they hung on the poor old shanty. I guess, Larry, my musical education was neglected in my youth, or else my musical ear is all in my eye."

"Ain't you never heard any music that seemed to carry you away?" asked the House Detective.

"The kind I heard tonight carried me all the way here," said the Hotel Clerk. IRVIN S. COBB.

Getting Ready to Propose.

A train stopped abruptly a few miles outside the little station of Hergatz, in Bohemia, and the passengers alighted to ascertain what had happened.

They found the guard engaged in shaving the engine driver, who apologized for the delay and explained that he was about to propose to the young woman in the refreshment room at the next station, and he had no time to complete his toilet before starting.—[London Standard.

Paris Doctors May Wear Badges.

The Paris Medical Society is considering asking physicians to wear badges in the streets and public places so that they can be easily found in case of accidents. It is not infrequent for a person in need of medical aid, or acting as messenger for some one who is, to run for blocks before encountering a doctor's sign, and at any time he might unknowingly pass a physician.—[Popular Mechanics.

Billy Possum.

HOW THE SOUTHERN ANIMAL HAS COME INTO POPULARITY.

By a Special Contributor.

WEN the inaugural parade turned into Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol on March 4 with a brand-new President at its head, the first thing that met his eye was a huge picture of himself and perched upon each shoulder with a familiarity that indicated an assurance that it knew its place, was an opossum. The inauguration artist had supplanted the Teddy Bear cartoon. But this was not the first of it. There had been an opossum dinner down at Augusta, and that had started it. The President-elect had eaten of the meat that is the particular and exclusive portion of the Southland, and had pronounced it good. The opossum dinner had sprung into national fame and the victim of it into national popularity. The opossum became the mascot.

Back in the years of the early Roosevelt administration, Cartoonist Berryman of Washington had placed a small and quaint-faced bear in the corner of all the cartoons he drew of the President. Those were the days of great hunting expeditions, and the little animal came to have a close association with the Chief Executive. Some time later a church fair was being held out in Kentucky, from which State Berryman came, and one of the ladies having it in charge conceived the idea of making the small bear into a toy and offering it for sale. The few toys that she was able to make proved the hit of the evening, and her booth was soon depleted.

Then some commercial-minded individual, hearing of the idea, and realizing its possibilities, patented the Teddy Bear and put it on the market as a toy. The result was the hit of the time, the amassing of a fortune and the supplanting of the doll in the childish heart. Years passed, and the fuzzy little animal held its place. But always it has carried the idea of the President. Mr. Roosevelt met Berryman at a Gridiron dinner not long ago and jokingly accused him of being the man who had supplanted the doll by the Teddy Bear. Now that Roosevelt has retired, the little bear is desirous of sharing his fate.

With the stay of the President-elect in the South and the "possum-dinner" enthusiasm the appropriate substitute for the Teddy became obvious, and the new toy came into being. To be sure the Teddy Bear manufacturers sued the Billy Possum people for infringement of patent, but such lesser unpleasantries could not stem the tide of the popular demand for Billy.

But the toy did not monopolize the opossum trade. The banquet demand for the fat and palatable denizen of the woods of the South placed him at a premium and the natives got busy to supply the demand. Then there came the call for the nocturnal rodent as a mascot for various and sundry Republican clubs throughout the country. So insistent were these calls that one New York house placed an order in Atlanta for 1000 opossums at $10 each despite the fact that the price under the old régime had been only 50 cents. But such are the freaks of American fortune which put the under dog of yesterday on top today.

Now this possum is the instinctive first love of the colored man on his native heath. His capture and his preparation for the table are arts around which center the ambitions of thousands of good old "uncles" from the Chesapeake to the Rio Grande. His consummation into the finally perfectly-prepared delicacy marks the point of greatest satisfaction in the careers of the people who worship at his shrine. The tales of his capture, his cooking and his eating are the real folk-lore stories of the Southern negro and bubble over with the humor and the quaintness of the race.

One of these stock stories of the preparation of the possum and his eating is that of Uncle Henry, who lived in Alabama. He had captured one of the finest and fattest possums that that community had ever known and was looking forward to the greatest feast of his life. He had baked his prize as only he knew how to bake it brown and crisp. He had "basted an' basted" it with possum gravy as he cooked it, and had piled the yellow yams high about it. He had made a hoe cake as light and yellow as the yams themselves, and had so timed the whole feast that it would come to perfection along about bedtime, for it is then that the possum should be eaten.

As Uncle Henry watched the feast coming to the desired end he nodded before the fire and, with the habit of sleep common to his race when at ease, at length fell into slumber. His dreams were sweet and he slept long, for in them he could see that fine old possum. Just then Sam, a jocular young scamp from the cabins, put his head in the door and quickly sized up the whole situation. Coming in on tiptoe, he lifted the prime possum from the fire, tore him limb from limb and devoured him to the bones. In the meantime, Uncle Henry slept on. When the last bit of possum was gone, Sam smeared the gravy liberally on Uncle Henry's face, on his hands and upon his shirt front. The bones he piled about the old man as they would have fallen had he eaten the possum. The circumstantial evidence was all arranged in such a way as to indicate that unquestionably Uncle Henry had feasted long and well.

Sam went out of the cabin, and soon the old man waked up. He looked about him at the bones of the possum, he examined the grease on his hands and his shirt front. His face was smeared with it. Finally he shook his head mournfully as he rubbed his stomach and said: "I reckon I musta et dat possum, but if I did, he sho am de mos' onsatisfyin' possum I ever et."

A possum on each shoulder

Mother possum and young.

The hunting of the possum is one of the rare sports of the South. With the colored man it is what cock fighting is with the Cubans or the bull fighting is in Mexico. He studies it and prides himself in its arts above all things. White men are sometimes foolish enough to go hunting before midnight, but never the black man. The small possums come out in the early hours, but it is along after midnight that the great, fat, heavy old patriarchs of the hollow trees come forth.

The possum dog is the chief asset of the colored man who is true to his instinct. This dog may be a mangy old cur, but he knows the art of finding the possums, and he will not be led from his particular game by the crossing of all the trails of coons that the woods furnish. He is out for possum, and when he sets up his bark, there is sure to be a possum up a tree somewhere about. White men of the South are often called upon to loan money to the negroes, and the security is often very uncertain, but when the applicant says that he has a good possum dog that he will pledge for the payment of the loan, the security is regarded as absolute, and the loan is sure of payment.

The hunt usually begins about 2 o'clock in the morning. The dog and his owner and possibly from one to six pickaninnies, if they can possibly wake up, make up the party. No gun is taken, but an ax with which to cut down the tree, and a knot of fat wood or pitch pine with which to shine the possum's eyes in locating him. Old Towser trees his possum in an hour, and a council is held in the dark as to whether the tree shall be cut down or a pickaninny sent up to shake the possum down. Many a hardwood tree that contained $20 worth of lumber has fallen before the ax of the colored man that he might get a 50-cent possum, yet the Forest Service, with all its publicity, has not reformed the system. When the possum is brought to the ground the dog is upon him, and so is the darky upon the dog, for he wants to capture the animal alive and perhaps fatten it that it may be more prime when killed. When the dog catches the possum the latter sulls. He pretends he is dead. He plays possum. By so doing, he has added an expression to the mother tongue.

The opossum is the stupidest animal in the world. It shows no cleverness at all in evading its pursuers, and scrambles by choice up a scrub sapling from which it will be easily shaken. When sulled it is in no way watchful for an opportunity to escape, and may be safely left alone by the roadside for a half an hour. The negro cuts a convenient-sized stick and makes a split in it near the middle. In this he places the possum's tail and it springs shut and holds it. This he throws over his shoulder or gives to two of the pickaninnies to carry between them, and the return is made to the cabin. If the opossum is to be immediately killed, the negro places it on the ground, puts the ax handle over the back of its neck, gets hold of its tail and pulls it until the neck breaks. In death the animal wakens from its simulation and struggles vigorously.

The new trend of affairs with $10 each bid for possums threatens the entire upset of conditions in the South by elevating the possum dog owners to the moneyed class. Sport and financial reward promise to go hand in hand to such an extent that the pleasure of wealth and its acquirement will be combined. It is a mistake to figure that this demand cannot be supplied and that there is danger of exterminating the species. As a matter of fact, there are millions of the vermin in the South, and millions of young ones are born every year. The very fact that a mother may give birth to sixteen young at a time and put them in her pocket and walk off is assurance that there is little danger of exhausting the supply as long as a few mothers escape.

This pocket of the mother is one of the many peculiarities of the possum. In this the mother keeps her young tucked snugly away for weeks after they are born, and even in the zoo it requires the closest attention to see the head of the young stuck out of the pocket. Then, after they are allowed to venture forth, the slightest cry of alarm sends them scurrying back and out of sight. At an age a little further advanced they climb about the mother, scrambling over her back and wind their prehensile tails about hers. Unlike the female of the human family, the representative of the animal world that is most out of date is the member with a pocket.

Exit Teddy Bear.

The brain of the opossum is the most primitive of all the animals. The brain cavity is filled with sort of spongy, bony material, and there is no open space for the brain, but it is crowded into the interstices of the bony mass. Another peculiarity rests in the fact that a dog will not eat of the meat of the opossum. It is the only meat that man eats that his dog will not join him in. The reason for this is an unsolved mystery. The negro has a peculiar way of dressing an opossum which gives rise to another mystery in this connection. Ordinarily the system is to scald the dead animal and scrape the hair off in the manner that a hog is prepared for dressing. This is not, however, the system of the old "uncle." He takes the newly-killed animal and buries it a foot underneath the ground. It is left there for half an hour and dug up, and lo! the hair slips off readily.

Opossum fur began a year ago to come into use. This season it has appeared upon thousands of turbans of the inexpensive variety. It made no claim of being the fur of the opossum, for heretofore that animal has not been so popular as to make such a claim a drawing card. Under the new order of things, it has taken, however, that the opossum turban will come out into the open and declare itself and become the prize winner of them all.

Taking it all around, circumstances have wonderfully conspired to make the opossum the idol of the times after all its waiting. As it rides into fame its constant associate, the darky, cannot be expected to be left behind. The darky and the possum are one and inseparable in fact as well as in the public mind. Anyway Mr. Taft has solved the financial problem of the rural colored man.

WILLIAM ATHERTON DU PUY.

Sunken Rocks.

COL. SNEED WARNS DAUGHTER OF PERILS OF MATRIMONY.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN Col. Sneed dropped in to say "Good-morning" to his daughter, young Mrs. Rollins, he was surprised to find her in tears.

"Why, what's the matter, honey?" he inquired with tender solicitude. "Anything wrong with the baby?"

"No, papa, the baby's all right," she answered, wiping her face and dabbing a little powder on her nose.

"Nothing happened to William, I hope," ventured the colonel, a little puzzled.

Mrs. Rollins straightened up and a flash came into her eyes.

"Yes, papa, if you must know, something has happened to Will. He spent five minutes brushing his hair this morning, he put on a red necktie, and he's got a—got a new typewriter."

At this revelation of masculine duplicity the colonel puckered up his lips and drew down his eyebrows to hide the twinkle he couldn't suppress.

"So-ho," he exclaimed, "and that's the way the land lies, is it? And you just put two and two together and made seven out of it, did you? Tut, tut, tut, child; you mustn't let suspicions turn your pretty nose red. First thing you know you'll have your complexion all ruined, and that would never do. Fact is, honey, you're barkin' up the wrong tree. There's nothin' the matter with Bill. I happen to know that he's got a particular engagement this morning, and there's good reason why he wants to look a little spruce. There's no petticoats in the deal, my dear, and as to the new typewriter, why, she's old enough to be your mother, and she's got anywhere from three to seven children. I don't remember the exact number she told me, but it was quite a bunch.'

"But why," persisted Mrs. Rollins, "did he put on a red necktie?"

"Ah, honey, you've got me there. I never could understand why any man should want to wear a red necktie at any time. But lots of good fellows do, and I've never been able to discover that it had any bad effect on their morals. Seriously, though, little girl, you mustn't get in the habit of puttin' two and two together, as the sayin' goes. Nine cases out of ten they add up wrong, and it's a mighty poor kind of figurin' anyhow.

"I s'pose you've heard about the sea of matrimony, haven't you? Of course you have; but I don't reckon anybody ever told you, not even your old daddy, about the sunken rocks. It's considerable of a sea, you know, and there's lots o' ships on it, all kinds o' ships, from little catboats to battleships, and some of them go sailin' over smooth water all the time and some don't more than get out o' one storm when another hits 'em. It's such an uncertain sea that it's wonderful how many vessels cross it in safety; but there's lots of wrecks, too, and most of the ships that's lost go to pieces on these sunken rocks. They hide their ugly heads just under the surface and nobody knows they're there until the boat goes crashin' into 'em. That's the worst part about 'em. If they stood up a little ways so a pilot could see 'em he could steer around 'em; but the sea where they are looks just like it does anywhere else, and there ain't any lighthouse in the neighborhood to warn him.

"Now, little girl, your ship's gettin' mighty close to these sunken rocks and you'd better sheer off before somethin' goes to pieces. I've been navigatin' around in this sea o' matrimony a pretty long while and I've seen enough wrecks to know just about where the Suspicion Rocks are located. That's the name of 'em—the Suspicion Rocks, and the biggest and ugliest and meanest one in the bunch is the one they call Jealousy. It's the one that's got the sharpest points and cuts the biggest holes in the bottom of the ship, and it's a thunderin' good boat that can get away from it without bein' so badly crippled that the pumps have to be worked all the rest of the trip to keep from goin' down.

"Of course, that's all just allegory, honey, but there's more truth than poetry in it, as they say down on the farm. The hardest kind of an enemy to fight is the one you don't know anything about, and the worst thing that can come between a husband and wife is suspicion, for it always works in the dark and seldom raises its head so you can see it and get a lick at it until it's done its work. If I had my choice I'd ten times rather have a woman with frowsy hair and the rollin'-pin habit than one who gets the notion in her head that her husband is a devil of a fellow when he's away from home and weeps her eyes out over imaginary wrongs. I'd know what to do with the rollin' pin—at least I could dodge it, but how're you goin' to dodge a thing that you can't see or can't—hear? Now, William went off downtown this morning without a thought in his heart that he'd done anything to worry you, and as a matter of fact, he hadn't. He didn't know you were seein' things that didn't exist, and if I hadn't dropped in and set you right you'd kept on seein' 'em, and they'd have kept on growin' bigger and bigger in your mind until you couldn't see anything else. Chances are you wouldn't have said a word to him until the poison had corroded all the sweetness of life, and it would then be too late for antidotes.

"I don't care what these sour-faced knockers say, little girl, this is a mighty fine world and most of the people in it are all right. Nine men out of every ten and nine women out of every ten are true—I believe the proportion's even bigger than that; and there's more genuine fidelity right now than there ever was since Adam and Eve took hands and strolled out of the orchard. But if you look at 'em through smoked glasses you can't see the white that's in 'em, and if you get the notion fixed in your head that they're all black, why, so far as you're concerned, they'll be black. A shovel of soot will soil an acre of snow, honey, and a little suspicion will make your William grow a couple of horns and a spiked tail right before your eyes. No, little girl, don't do it. Don't let doubt get to swellin' in your pretty head. Bill's all right. He don't wear any gold rings over his head and he can't say the forty-seventh Psalm backward, but I'll bet all I got against the hole in a doughnut that he hasn't got a thought in his mind that isn't true to you. Trust him. It don't make any difference what you hear or what you see—trust him. If I was goin' to build an arch to support married happiness I would make Love the keystone, and at the bottom of the arch on the side I'd put Trust, and at the bottom on the other side I'd put Confidence, and it would stand till the crack o' doom.

Earth Tides

LAND AS WELL AS SEA SAID TO RISE AND FALL

From London Morning Post.

THE announcement that Prof. Hecker has determined the size of the earth tides opens up a very interesting topic. It would probably be a rather difficult task to persuade the ordinary layman, who is neither a physicist nor an astronomer, to believe that there could possibly be such things as earth tides. At first sight it seems incredible. The earth's surface shows no sign of being daily heaved into great waves, and it seems impossible that the solid-seeming earth should rise and fall beneath our feet without our knowledge. Nevertheless, if physicists and astronomers are to be believed, this is what actually happens. Of course, the earth tides are not "high tides," but even if they were, even if the earth bulged out to a quite considerable extent in London every day, a moment's reflection will suffice to show that we should be little the wiser. Men on board ship in mid-ocean are quite unconscious of the rise and fall of the tide. The surface of the water rises; they rise with it, and consequently they notice no difference in level. The same applies to a man standing on the earth. The earth may be falling into a vast dimple beneath his feet (vast, that is, in extent, not in depth,) and he be none the wiser. As a matter of fact, earth tides must be very small in "height," and consequently even if we had some absolutely fixed object by means of which we could measure the rise and fall of the earth's surface, we might still not notice the "tides." Indeed, it may be stated at once that the earth rises so little between low earth tide and high earth tide that all efforts to measure the rise and fall—even with the most delicate apparatus—have so far been unsuccessful.

The Cause of the Tides.

The obvious questions at once arise: What are the facts that lead astronomers to think that earth tides really do exist? What do astronomers mean by earth tides? Sir George Darwin, who is the greatest living authority on tides, defines a tide as a "rising and falling of the waters of the ocean caused by the attraction of the sun and moon." The ancients had extraordinary notions as to the effects of the sun and moon upon the tides. In the old Icelandic "Rimbegla" we find the following lucid explanation: "But when the moon is opposite to the sun the sun heats the ocean greatly, and as nothing impedes that warmth the ocean boils and the sea flood is more impetuous than before—just as one may see water rise in a kettle when it boils violently. This we call spring tide." There seems to be a considerable inconsistency in explaining one spring tide by the interception of the sun's heat by the moon, and the next one by the excess of that heat. But it is not necessary to search ancient literature for grotesque theories of the tides. In 1722 E. Barlow, gentleman, in "An Exact Survey of the Tide," attributes it to the pressure of the moon on the atmosphere. And theories not less absurd have been promulgated during the last twenty years. It is difficult to explain in non-mathematical terms the actual way in which the moon and the sun produce tides. The secret lies in the fact that although we talk of the attraction of the moon for the earth, we ought strictly to remember that neither of them are, so to speak, absolutely continuous. What we really mean when we talk of the attraction between the earth and something outside it is the sum of the attractions between that outside body and every separate particle of which the earth is made up. Now the force of attraction between two bodies is greater the nearer they are to each other and less the further they are apart. Consequently the moon attracts the nearer particles of water in the ocean with a greater force than it attracts those further away. The ocean is, of course, a fluid, and the particles of fluids can to some extent move freely under forces from outside. And as the earth turns first one face and then another to the moon, the waters of the ocean are alternately piled up and released. This piling up of the ocean results in those constant changes of level which we call tides.

What Are Earth Tides?

These tides are only possible because the ocean is fluid, and can take up new shapes as it approaches and recedes from the moon. If it were perfectly rigid the attraction of the moon would make no difference to its shape, for the simple reason that no external force could alter the shape of a perfectly rigid body. Most people, of course, would say that all solid bodies were perfectly rigid, but the fact is that all real solids are to some extent either elastic or fluid. They can in some degree change their shape. A body which was perfectly rigid we should call an ideal solid; and an ideal solid has never yet been found. The earth itself is not perfectly rigid, and hence the attraction of the sun and moon must produce an alternating change in its shape. If we consider only the greater attraction of the moon we shall expect to find the earth as it spins on its axis always bulging slightly in the direction of the moon. This will mean that any definite tract of the earth's surface will as it comes opposite the moon be pulled out into a sort of ridge, and will then sink into a comparative hollow again as it moves away from the moon and the next tract becomes a ridge. And if this occurs every time that portion of the earth's surface comes opposite the moon, the total effect will be a periodic rise and fall in the surface of the earth, which has every claim to be called an earth tide.

The Birth of the Moon.

Although the earth is now so stiff that the changes in its shape are very minute, and hence escape attention, yet in previous times those changes must have been much greater. The earth is now a moderately rigid solid, but it must once have been molten and plastic. When this was the case, the sun and the moon must have produced tremendous tidal effects in the semi-liquid earth, just as they now produce tides in the oceans. The molten rock of which the earth then consisted must have been a very sticky, viscous fluid, and consequently there must have been a great deal of friction. But friction always tends to bring bodies to rest. The fly wheel is brought to rest by the friction on its bearings, and though the case of the spinning earth is more complex, there can be no doubt that the friction caused by tides in the semi-fluid earth tended to retard its motion; and this slowing down in the earth's motion must have been continuously in progress ever since the moon was formed. Sir George Darwin assumed that the moon had broken off from the earth, and on this assumption has been able to show that the gradual recession of the moon and the evolution of the present periods of rotation can be accounted for by supposing them due to the action of earth tides in the past. Indeed, Sir George Darwin explains the formation of the moon as being due to earth tides. The tide due to the sun's attraction must, for various reasons, have increased more and more in height. Eventually the oscillation became so violent that, in coöperation with the rapid rotation, it shook the planet to pieces and huge fragments were detached, which ultimately became our moon. But this—as Sir George Darwin himself confesses—is only a wild speculation, incapable of verification.

Measurement of Earth-tides.

Since the earth became solid and rigid the earth tides must have become smaller and smaller in size. Nowadays it is so stiff and rigid that although men of science have been engaged in trying to measure the size of the earth tides for nearly thirty years, it is very doubtful whether they have yet been successful. Almost twenty years ago Sir George and Mr. Horace Darwin together made an elaborate series of experiments with a view to computing the yield of the earth to tidal forces. They concluded, however, that almost all the movements which they could measure were due to extraneous causes such as minute earthquakes and effects of temperature and pressure. Many other experimenters have also attempted the problem, and though they have often claimed success they have produced little evidence in favor of their claims. The effect to be measured is so small that the measurements made must be of extraordinary accuracy. Until recently the only physicist who had been in any way able to show good evidence in favor of his having actually measured the earth's tidal movements was the late Dr. von Rebeur-Paschwitz, who made use of a horizontal pendulum. In his case, however, he afterward made a searching analysis of his results, and was subsequently rather doubtful as to whether he had actually measured earth tides or not. The problem is altogether an extremely difficult one. Sir George Darwin has pointed out that the constant tidal heaping of the oceans against the shore must produce a considerable earth movement, which might very well be mistaken for an actual earth tide. Consequently, until definite figures are produced and have been criticised by competent authorities it is well to accept determinations of the size of earth tides with some reserve.

Dog Dentist Makes Fortune.

The man with an idea is the one who prospers in these days. An idea has been the making of a young man who starved for a few years waiting for patients to come to his dental office uptown. Satisfied that he was in a field that was overcrowded, he decided to strike out along a new line. He became a dog dentist. New he rolls in money, or has rolls of it. His office, luxuriantly fitted up, is in Fifth avenue. He is kept busy, and exacts big fees. A dog with an unsound tooth is an abomination. The pets of society women get far too much candy, and that means a harvest for the lucky operator. There are women who take their dogs around at regular intervals for the inspection of their teeth. One Boston bull of society has a gold crown. Boston bulls are poor representatives of their kind when it comes to teeth, and they are most often in the dental chair. But the terrier, of all varieties, gets there, too, and the collie, and the Pomeranian and the pug. Gold, silver and platinum are used for fillings; in fact, the dogs are treated to the same dental processes as human beings.—[New York Press.

Pleasant Walking Trips.

GOOD EXERCISE MAY BE MADE MORE ENJOYABLE BY SCENERY.

By a Special Contributor.

MANY of the wealthy tourists who are now spending the winter in this section have brought with them their own automobiles or hire machines here and are enjoying to the limit the fine oiled roads of Southern California. But there is a larger class of visitors who cannot afford this luxurious mode of reaching those points of interest which the suburban cars do not touch. For a while this latter class patronize the liveries, but they soon learn to adopt the true California method of getting from the place where one is to the place where one wishes to be, and—walk.

It is a habit we have acquired from the English residents and so thoroughly have Southern Californians accepted it that the man or girl who cannot do a dozen or fifteen miles a day without undue fatigue is not to be regarded as a fair sample of native product.

Los Angeles, situated as it is in the midst of a vast garden extending from the ocean to the mountains, offers unlimited opportunities and inducements to the pedestrian. Walking along the city streets, observing the diversity of home architecture, is pleasant enough, but it is only a short distance in any direction to green fields and country lanes where the palm and pepper give a delightful contrast to the maple and elm shade of the East. Let us suggest a few of the tramps open to the visitor who enjoys a jaunt with Shank's ponies, but who is not yet well enough acquainted with the country to choose his own routes.

On Mt. Wilson.

In Elysian Park.

Eaton Cañon Falls.

Difficult traveling

Along the shore of the placid Pacific

Above Santa Monica.

For half-day "hikes" which will afford a variety of scenery and road Elysian Park is the nearest field. The Garvanza and Griffin-avenue cars pass its entrance on Buena Vista street. One climbs the hill, through the terraces of elaborate flower beds, and suddenly finds himself in a great natural park with a half-dozen hilltops in sight, from any of which he will obtain an unsurpassed view of the whole of the city and on up the valley of the Los Angeles River. It was upon the top of the highest of these hills that the "nature man," Ernest Darling, made his headquarters before he went to Tahiti, there to be made famous by the eloquent pen of Jack London.

If you wish to "really get out in the country," and have only an afternoon to spare, ride out to the end of the Eagle Rock car line and then follow the main road to the east toward the huge rock with the apparently perfect eagle which the sculptor, Nature, has cut in its side. From the rock one may proceed along the southerly road to Highland Park, there to take a returning car to the city, or one can follow the northerly road over the hills past the country club to the end of the Annandale car line.

Griffith Park, a vast stretch of hills covering an area of several thousand acres, is reached by the Glendale car. Although as yet but little improved, Griffith Park has many enticing trails that will lure the "tramper" on for a long jaunt.

One of the favorite trips with local pedestrians, and that will be worth while for visitors to familiarize themselves with, is through the San Rafael Hills. Take the car to Glendale, and when you reach that city strike off east along any of the streets till you reach the Verdugo Road, which should be followed north a few blocks till the Sycamore Cañon Road is reached. Convenient signs will keep one on the right road thus far. The cañon road runs far up into the hills, crossing and recrossing the little stream beneath the sycamores, and finally becomes a trail which can be followed over the hills to a point near Devil's Gate, about five miles from the starting point. From Devil's Gate it is only two miles along the main road to the car line at North Pasadena.

This last excursion may be varied by continuing to follow the Verdugo Road through the orange groves and Italian vineyards of Verdugo Cañon to the foothill village of La Cañada, and from there to North Pasadena, passing Devil's Gate. It is eight miles along this route from car to car.

Those who delight in the song of the waves, and also wish to get away where the crowds either cannot or will not follow will find it a pleasant trip to go by car to the Long Wharf above Santa Monica Cañon and from there walk up the fine beach as many miles as they choose. The scenery along the coast north of Santa Monica, with the mountains and the ocean touching hands across a narrow strip of sand, is wilder than elsewhere along the near-by shore, and many quaint characters, "beach combers," will add spice to the tramp.

But it is the blue mountain range a few miles to the north of Los Angeles that most attracts the enthusiastic "hiker." Usually his destination is the summit, but some of the more modest are content to follow the windings of the beautiful lower cañons. Mt. Wilson, the highest of the nearer peaks, is the most popular mountain climb in Southern California. The trail, which starts from Sierra Madre and is reached by that suburban car, is a fine one kept in constant and excellent repair. It is a steady uphill climb of eight miles to the summit, 6000 feet above the sea. Whatever the condition of the weather the pedestrian is well repaid for his labors by the magnificent view. If the day be a clear one, he will see the whole garden of Southern California spread out in little square patches below him and at the western horizon the blue of the sky will blend with the blue of the Pacific. But if it be stormy below the climber will look down upon the more unique sight of scurrying clouds and liken them to the ocean itself. There is a little hotel upon the summit, and the excursionist on a first trip usually stops over night, taking two days to make the round trip, for the climb is a hard one for soft muscles.

On the summit of Mt. Wilson is located the great Carnegie Observatory, and there is another trail or road which by easier grades leads down to Eaton's Cañon, above Lamanda Park, and about three miles from the electric car. This trail is used to transport supplies for the observatory and does not penetrate so picturesque a portion of the range as does the Sierra Madre trail. Many visitors to the peak go up by one route and return by the other.

For those who wish to visit the mountains but do not care for such strenuous exercise as climbing 6000-foot peaks, the lower cañons are readily accessible. The Arroyo Seco, from which the city of Pasadena obtains its water supply, is only a mile west from the car line at North Pasadena Cemetery. A road runs up this "Sycamore River" for miles and every foot of its way discloses delightful picnic spots.

The Little Santa Anita Cañon is but a short distance from Sierra Madre. Sawpit Cañon, back of Monrovia and a mile walk from that car, is a beautiful place for a one-day's tramp. The Sawpit Cañon trail leads up to the summit of Monrovia Peak, 4500 feet elevation.

Once one has become a California "hiker," he will on every trip meet other enthusiasts who have learned the joy of using their own motive power and who will suggest ever new scenes for the exercise of the habit. For the tourist of moderate means who is anxious to get away from the beaten paths of tourist travel and see all possible of this region, the "western habit" is an unfailing source of satisfaction. Missouri Willow Farm.

East Kansas City is one of the most important centers in the Missouri Valley in the business of shipping willows. In the last three months alone the Kansas City Southern Railway has hauled from there 140 flat carloads of trimmed willows, and is taking out more as fast as the willow plantations can furnish the crop.

The roots of the willows keep the sand from shifting along the river banks; but the use of the tops of willows in fighting currents of water is comparatively new. Government work with willows requires that the trees shall be more than twelve feet high and between ¾ and 2½ inches in diameter at the butts. After a patch of these trees has been cut, the ground looks like a stubblefield of corn. The new sprouts, however, look more like a field of wheat—if wheat only had the peculiar reddish tinge that willows take on at this time of the year. In two and a half to three years after cutting willows will grow up again to the size required for dikes or for plaiting into mats.

The willows now being bought by the railway are for use in checking the inroads of the Arkansas River between Spiro and Fort Smith, Ark. The dikes that are being constructed run out into the river 150 feet and are of willows held in place with large steel cables. Since December 11 nearly 800 carloads of trees—and of these willows—have been dumped into the river.

The sand filling the crevices between the bundles of willows makes a strong and economical pier. The steel cables insure the safety of the pier until the [illegible] has done its work.

In cutting and trimming the willows the harvesters use nothing but ordinary corn knives.—[Kansas City Star.

How High a Tiger Can Jump.

For the benefit of the prospective big game hunter, a correspondent finally disposes of the theory that a tiger is unable to jump to any height from all fours. He records that he took refuge in a tree from a particular tiger. The beast, however, jumped up to him "like an India rubber ball, a good seven feet," and it was only "by letting go with my right and ramming both barrels down his mouth that I did not have a [illegible] bad time of it."

The moral evidently is that when avoiding a tiger it is necessary to find a tree with its lowest branch at [illegible] sixteen feet from the ground.—[India Field.

Urgent Business.

It is supposed that business letters are deficient in humor. Still there have been exceptions, and the letter sent by a member of the well-known wholesale soap-making firm of (let us say) Cake & Son, is one of the most brilliant.

A retail dealer in a small way had sent for a consignment of their goods: "Gentlemen," he wrote, "wherefor have you not sent me the sope? Is it bekawse you think my money is not so good as [illegible] elses? Dam you, Cake & Son; wherefor have you [illegible] sent the sope? Please send sope at once and [illegible] yours respectfully, Richard Jones. P. S.—Since [illegible] the above my wife has found the sope under the [illegible]ter."—[Dundee Advertiser.

The Limerick of Hanna.

An Account of Its Origin and Many Variations.

By a Special Contributor.

FOR many years the author has devoted himself to the research of unpublished poems by famous poets, and, in the course of his delving, he has come upon one of the most remarkable facts in the history of literature. Perhaps no more important contribution has been made to modern literary lore than the following remarkable revelations. Most of us are acquainted with that modern narrative poem which several years ago created such a sensation by being published anonymously in Mumpsy's Magazine. The poem ran:

There was a young lady named Hanna
Who slipped on a piece of banana:
She saw stars of blue
And every old hue
That are seen in the star-spangled banner.

A gentleman came to assist her;
He picked up her hat and her wrister.
He asked: "Did you fall?"
She replied: "Not at all;
I sat down for the fun of it, Mister."

At the time there was much discussion as to the authorship, many expressing their belief that it was one of William Bean Howlin's earlier efforts. Many attributed it to Linton Collard, but this was brushed aside by Ian Langdrew because of the absence of the lyrical element. Theodosia Garrulous was tentatively put forth by her admirers as the author, but Blissful Berrie set forth in a long article in the Atlantic that it was better than anything Miss Garrulous could write. However, it was at length generally credited to Richard Watchful Gilding, despite the protests of this modest gentleman.

Whoever was the author of this modern version of "Hanna" is quite beside the mark. The particular idea embodied in this poem has been sung of by nearly all the great poets, and, in view of the following essay, no one dare claim any originality in this particular. In nearly every age this theme has attracted the poets, and in my researches I have discovered many manuscripts containing a version of this tale. How many more exist it would be hard to determine.

On a manuscript dated 1382 and signed Geoffrey Chaucer, I found the following:

Allas! Hanna! Upon a slippery fruite
Doun, doun she fel, allas and welawey!
And verylie, this falle was sore acute!
A stronge champioun seyd: "Thou fayre may,
O, haue ye fel." (She lyth ther she lay.)
"O no, I sate me doun," the maide replyde,
"It gyves me blisse ynough"—but O she lyde!

So strongly did this theme appeal to Shakespeare that he wrote a sonnet embodying the idea. I say Shakespeare because it is generally supposed that he was the author of the plays and sonnets attributed to him. The present sonnet bears the Shakespeare earmarks, though the manuscript was unsigned. He, with the touch of a master, has put all the words into the mouth of the girl Hanna.

When, in disgrace within the passers' eyes,
I all alone beweep my downcast state
And, silent, damn the peel with bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more firm in gait,
Footed like him, like him with sight possest
Who first did see the fruit and turned his fate—
O, he hath been with great discerning blest!
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising—
Haply one came along and seeing all
Did offer to assist me in my rising.
But when in banal tone he asked: "Didst fall?"
Enangered I became against this clown
And said it was for joy I sat me down.

A startling fact came to light when I was searching through the Miltonic archives: Through this poem we came near not having "Paradise Lost." In fact Milton wrote a seventeen-lines poem to Hanna, but afterward recast it into the opening lines of "Paradise Lost." Undoubtedly this accounts for his not publishing the shorter poem. Therefore, it is with considerable pride I print here for the first a Miltonic narrative which I was the first to unearth:

Oh, man's great disobedience—the fruit
From oriental tree cast on the street!
It brought to one precipitation, woe,
And loss of balance, till one greater man
Strove to restore her from her blissful seat.
"Sing, heavenly maid, how all those stars,
So many-hued and like unto a banner,
Rose out of chaos. Tell me, didst thou fall?"
He views the dismal situation wild,
Mixed with obdurate pride and consternation,
As from below cooed Hanna with sarcasm:
"Oh thou, who, platitudinously trite,
Looks from thy sole dominion, to thee I call,
But with no friendly voice: 'twas merely thus,
That from a mad desire for joy did I
Assume this half-recumbent attitude."

Blake, "crazy Blake," as Huneker calls him, was worked up in a fine frenzy of lyric expression over this tale of Hanna. The reason the poem was never published in any of his works may be explained by the following excerpt from his dairy dated June 1, 1801: "To-day, today, ah today, I have finished Hanna. I had quite decided to include it in 'Songs of Innocence,' but on re-reading it, I find that the falsehood told by the young lady to the gallant, though proletarian, young man would not be compatible with the title of the book. Therefore, wisdom directs that I omit it." Though I have searched through later editions, ardent delving fails to discover any trace of this lyric, which I copy from a scrap-book, obtained by Rossetti when he wrote Blake's life. In it we find all the charming simplicity characteristic of this painter-poet:

Little maid, hast fallen?
Dost know that thou hast fallen,
By a step most indiscreet,
There upon the public street,
Having placed your little heel
On a stray banana peel?
Little maid, hast fallen?
Dost know that thou hast fallen?

Oh, kind sir, I'll tell thee,
Oh, kind sir, I'll tell thee:
I walked the pleasant streets along,
Harking to the sparrows' song,
But ere my walk had scarce begun
I sat me down for very fun.
Oh, kind sir, God bless you!
Oh, kind sir, God bless you!

George Gordon Byron, Lord Byron, during his brief stay in Greece with Leigh Hunt, sitting on the shores one early morning where

"The mountains look on Marathon,
And Marathon looks on the sea," wrote in his note-book, afterward purloined by Jeffries, and later found in possession of Don Juan, the following stanzas:

She walked in beauty like the night:
At high noon she saw starry skies
And all the best of dark and bright
Danced gaily 'fore her hazel eyes;
She—only—saw that tender light
Which heaven the gaudy day denies.

One peel the more, one fall the less,
And was impaired her nameless grace;
I asked her in her sore distress
If she had fallen. And her face,
How pure!—as sweet she did express,
"I'm happy in my dwelling-place."

Although Edward Fitz-Gerald assured me that Omar had sung of this same theme, nevertheless I am somewhat inclined to doubt it. Internal evidence seems to uphold me in my belief—or rather disbelief. The attitude of the Persian women was surely not the same as our modern women, and the whole translation abounds in anacronisms. Another thing. Fitz-Gerald's verses being the first translation of Omar, were not made until 1847, so how did Chaucer and Milton acquire the same idea, neither knowing a word of Persian? However this may be, I quote the unpublished Rubaiyat—or quartrains—found among Mr. Fitz-Gerald's effects, and you may draw your own conclusions:

Why, if the girl can fling the peel aside
And on without an interference stride,
Were't not a shame—were't not a shame for her
To slip and on the sidewalk to abide?

A hair perhaps divides the false and true,
Yet asking did she fall you get no clew:
She says 'twas sport, and though you offer aid
And ask her out to dine—she heeds not you.

You deem she sat her down for glad repose,
Not knowing that where fruit is down one goes,
But she who slipped and fell upon the street
SHE knows about it all—SHE knows—She knows.

In the possession of Theodore Watts Dunton, with whom Swinburne is living, remains an unpublished autographed poem called "Hanores," which the "Master of Melody" gave to his friend as an appreciation for certain reforming measures adopted by the latter. I was present at the dinner these venerable poets gave to young Alfred Noyes, and having filled Mr. Watts-Dunton up with cocoa, I managed by strategy to obtain possession of this poem. Had he not been drinking cocoa so heavily this would have been an impossible feat. The poem reads as follows:

O hungering, languorous lady!
O mystical, magical maid!
O shimmering sky, and the shady
Sweet shadows that shift in the shade!
But O! how slippery the core is!
What will rest of her, O! what remain?
O fallen, fair female Hanores,
Our Lady in Pain!

O Adonis has dashed to the rescue
Of the damsel all dainty-bedight,
O unquenchable maid who is askew,
Why saidst thou that thou wert all right?
'Twas a lie to the man thou despisest,
He has gone, so 'twas not all in vain
O wise among women, and wisest,
Our Lady in Pain!

We note in the line, "How slippery the core is!" that the author of "Atlanta" has altered the variety of fruit—in other words he has used the apple instead of the banana as a means of accidental precipitation. Despite the protests of eminent critics (to whom I have shown this selection) that the fruit was altered for the sake of rhyme—(that "peel is" would not rhyme with "Hanores")—I attribute it to a deeper reason. The apple—the fruit of Eden—always symbolizes the prevailing subject of this elemental eroticist's poetry, and I think it was a temperamental appeal which made the author of "Laus Veneris" say "core is" rather than "peel is."

In the papers left by Griswold, I found the following suppressed poem signed E. A. P.:

It was many and many a year ago
In a kingdom by the sea,
That a maiden did fall whom you all may know
By the name of Hannahbel Lee:
And she saw a banner all spangled with stars
In the midst of which she saw me.

O I was so young! And I picked up her coat,
In this kingdom by the sea,
And bowing quite low: "Did you fall?" I inquired
Of this fallen young Hannahbel Lee.
"I sat here for fun in the warmth of the sun,"
Was the answer she gave to me.

The most modern rendition of this theme, barring the limerick duo attributed to Richard Watchford Gilding, is an almost unknown stanza of Kipling, published many years ago, but omitted from his later editions:

O, she stepped upon a peel with her dainty little heel,
The way of a banana and a maid,
And in her precipitation she saw the constellation
In the heel of the Northeast Trade.
O say, did you fall, did you fall, dear lass?
Like a maid she answered untrue,
And what she told was an old tale, her own tale, the wrong tale—
And though it was not a Long Tale—'twas a tale that is always new.

WILLIS KENT.

Islands of the Mutton Birds.

Some time back a party of twenty-five interested in nature study and kindred subjects formed themselves into a party to make a sea tour among the islands lying between Australia and Tasmania and off the coast of the latter place.

One of the party on his return said there are hundreds of islands in the locality mentioned which from a distance look like mere barren rocks, but on closer examination prove to be fertile territory, many of the islands being inhabited by white communities or native and half-caste people who have occupied themselves for many years as trappers of mutton birds for export to Tasmania and for their own consumption. The average catch on one island is about 1,500,000 birds a year, and the income from this source amounts to between £5000 and £6000.

The dark-skinned people who occupy Cape Barren Island are of all shades, from the mere suggestion of tint to pure black, and they have been of this variegated skin color for nearly 100 years. There is a school on this island attended by sixty or seventy children, the teacher being paid by the Tasmanian government, which satisfies its conscience in respect to these unfortunates by merely giving them instruction in "the three R's" and taking no further trouble to help them to put their education to practical account when they have finished their period of school. They are naturally nomadic in their instincts and do not know how to organize their affairs, hence as soon as they leave the school they take on the mode of life of their elders, living well when birds are plentiful, and going short to a greater or less extent in the off season.

The touring party concerned itself largely with the bird life found upon the various islands, the specimens including albatross, gannet, gulls, dotterels, oyster catchers, pelicans, geese and mutton birds. On Albatross Island the bird the place is named after hatches out its young, and it is said that this is the only known place in the world where the bird makes its nest, an old theory being that these mysterious creatures hatched out their young on their backs, a theory no doubt absurd, yet forgivable in the early days when nobody had discovered their hatching-place.

Mutton birds flock on various islands in the vicinity in myriads, and the eggs of various birds abound in such huge numbers that shiploads of them could be gathered with comparatively little trouble. It is said that numbers of eggs from these islands find their way into market and are sold as duck eggs, which they resemble in appearance and flavor.—[Sydney Times.

TO A CHILD.

O little child,
What mysteries, what pure and lovely things
Wait yet, and rest with calmly folded wings
Within thy soul untempted, undefiled?

What noble song,
Deep-toned with love, by truth made seraph-clear,
What word of faith to wake the doubt-dulled ear
Sleeps in thy heart, unguessed through ages long?

What mighty deed
To conquer war and end a nation's woe,
To loose the chain and bid the bondman go,
Unknown within thee waits the moment's need?

O unbeguiled,
Time runs apace to speed thy fateful hour.
That sleeping thought one day will rouse to power
And shake the world through thee, thou little child!

Lost Seventeen Grandmothers in Four Years.

Harry Ellefson, a student at the Racine High School, has the State record for writing bogus excuses. In four years he has presented to his teachers seventy-four excuses, all written by himself. Every conceivable reason was given for absence. In the four years he lost seventeen grandmothers. About forty times he was supposed to be ill.

When the discovery was made, the student was called in by Principal Blackhurst and admitted his guilt. He has been suspended for seventy-four days.—[Racine Correspondence Milwaukee Sentinel.

Early Nest Builders.

Home-making Methods of Our Resident Birds.

By a Special Contributor.

EVEN when the mountains are white with snow making the air decidedly wintry, as indeed it should since the calendar proclaims it winter, when the rains are still falling and the deciduous trees have not yet put forth their leaves, the birds are beginning to nest.

On a particularly cold morning I stationed myself in a protected corner of my yard and prepared to watch a pair of song sparrows whom I knew were nesting there. Soon the male gave his cheery call from the vicinity of my cafeteria—a place which he frequently patronizes—and from the depth of a deep shrub in another part of the yard came a low answering call which at once made me take an unusual interest in that particular plant. And so Madam was on her nest! Soon the little lady made her appearance on the side of the bush and peeked cautiously out. There she waited attentive for a minute, then, hearing no more from her little mate, she slipped back out of sight.

For days I had been watching her as she slipped back and forth carrying building material for her little home. As early as January 30 I had seen her first go in; then, much to my disgust, she had seemed to change her mind and go elsewhere. Again on February 13 I had seen her go into this particular place with a dry leaf in her mouth, and I rejoiced. To have a song sparrow family all my own would, indeed, be a treat.

For three hours on the 14th—St. Valentine's Day—I had watched her working busily all by herself with not even the song of her mate to cheer her. But she needed no one to urge her on; in fact, she could work better with no one to bother her; and work she did. The material she took in consisted of dry leaves from under the grapevine, coarse fibers, and strings, which were my contribution, all of which went to make up the foundation. Later she took in only palm fibers and other thread-like material for the lining of the deep, cup-shaped nest. Oftentimes she went to the nesting site with her bill so full of long fibers that they trailed on either side and out behind her as she hopped. At such times the material would catch on the shrubs through which she skulked, causing her much trouble, and would also get under her feet, to her evident distress. As she worked, she was perfectly quiet, not even giving her single call note until when, after half an hour's work, the male came with his jovial song, she answered with a song of her own, a "ci-ci-ci," given rapidly in a high-pitched voice. But though she gave him this good-natured "Good-morning," she would not stop her work to entertain him, but plainly showed by the way she continued her affairs unmindful of his presence that it was nest building that must now have her undivided attention. And her little mate, appreciating this, even tried in his clumsy way to help her. Twice I saw him take up a bit of material as if he were really going to take a hand at nest building, but it was only a bluff, for both times the material was soon dropped. At singing he was a success, but nest building was out of his line.

In the first hour of my watching, the little female made sixteen trips to the nest; after that she stopped long enough to take a bath and preen herself. She would have made more trips during the time I watched had she not been prevented from doing so by a pair of towhees who were evidently wishing to build in the same bush and would not have Madam Sparrow near them even though she is a member of the same family.

The two towhees kept close watch upon the sparrow's movements and when she tried to carry in a piece of building material they flew at her and would not allow her to enter the bush. They even chased her about the yard and tried in every way to discourage her, but to no avail. She persevered, and finally they ceased their vigilance and she continued her affairs.

The next day the building was continued, fine fibers being taken in. The towhees still bothered. At one time both song sparrows were in the rose bush with one towhee. The female sparrow kept up a low gutteral scolding note that I never heard these birds give, while the male twisted about and said "check" in a manner that seemed to indicate that he was making dire threats at the towhee, but it was evident that Madam did not need his help. There was war in her attitude and if the towhee persisted something would happen. However, the peaceable towhee could not long keep up this unfriendly attitude, and soon flew away, leaving Madam Song Sparrow in full possession.

Six days after the nest was started I found one egg in it. It had a light blue ground on which were many brown blotches. Some birds begin brooding as soon as an egg is laid, but evidently the little sparrow meant to lay all her eggs before beginning to brood. On this windy day there were three eggs in the nest and sitting had not begun, though Madam was at the nest for some time before she flew out and with a loud "check" left the yard.

The song sparrow is by no means the only bird that is now occupied with nest building. While I sat watching the sparrow a tiny Anna humming-bird darted through the air and poised before the old plumes of my pampas grass. While she balanced herself in the air she filled her bill with the fluffy material, then sped away bearing a small piece sticking from her mouth. Like a winged bullet she sped out of the yard and was lost to view among the treetops. I had hoped that she was also building in my yard, but quite evidently she had found some other place more to her liking.

For days the black phoebes have been showing signs of nest building and I doubt not more than one have nests tucked away under some eve or projecting shelf. The nests are usually made of mud, though I have seen them where straw and strings played a leading part.

Though I have seen no hint of carrying building materials, the gay little linnets are selecting mates. Not many days ago I witnessed an amusing courting scene. A demure little female and two gay suiters were on a neighboring roof in plain sight. Both males were strutting about as best such chubby little birds could, and striving by their antics to win my lady's favor, but the coy little miss in question was not prepared to make a choice and made little dives first at one lovesick swain, then the other. For some time this prancing and sparring went on, neither suitor gaining advantage, till finally they grappled in seemingly deadly combat and went fluttering down through the air in a mad jumble of wings and claws. Madam sat, unconcernedly, on the bridge pole and watched. After some minutes a male appeared on the roof and soon the pair flew away, but I am not at all sure that all was settled between them, or that Madam had made a choice.

Among the early nest builders are the tiny gray bush tits. It was on the 17th of February last year when I saw one of these midgets flying from my yard, his mouth full of fine raveled rope fibers. With his bell-like, tinkling note he bobbed through the air and, following, I saw him go with his mouthful to a long pendant nest which swung from a live-oak branch. It was the same nest that these birds had occupied the year before and they were relining it. Even though it was only being relined, they worked for nearly a month at it. In the manner of working they differed from the song sparrows in that both tits worked at the nest building while only the female sparrow did so. Like the sparrows, the male and female are much alike, and it was only after long watching that I became assured that I knew them apart. And then it was their actions that gave them away. The male heralded his coming with a constant volley of noisy bell-like notes as if to say: "Behold, I am coming. Watch me," while the female slipped into the tree quietly, seldom giving more than a note or two, and sometimes not even that. When brooding began, the female did it all, slipping from the nest and foraging for food when she wished it. I never saw the male go to the nest to feed her, but he stayed near by in the tree and joined her when she left the nest. But when the eggs were hatched the little male did, if anything, more than his share of the work. In one hour when I watched them the birds made forty-four trips with food. These little tits are, economically, among our most beneficial birds, eating as they do minute life found on leaves, stems, and twigs. They frequent the live oaks, and I doubt not that many a noble monarch owes its life to the beneficial offices of these birds.

The Pasadena thrasher is one of our earliest birds to begin nest building. There is an authentic record of eggs laid on December 16, but usually it is the last of January before nesting begins. I once found a well-feathered young bird in a thrasher nest the middle of March. This little bird was dead, having come to grief because of the heavy rains.

Of course, the birds nesting now, in winter time, are all resident birds. It will be a month or more before the majority of the summer visitants arrive. To be sure, some of them have commenced to arrive. They are indeed early birds, and are rare enough to make them novelties. The russet-backed thrush, and only one of them, is the only species I have seen. A few of these birds always come early and stay about in my yard several weeks before they go down into the Arroyo, or elsewhere, to nest. Last year one of them sang his soft liquid song again and again. Such a rich, sweet song as it was, just fitting the modest-garbed, modest-behaved bird who sang it.

Many of the birds who, perhaps, are not really beginning to build their nests are singing rapturous songs which bring delight to the human listeners as well, no doubt, as to some feathered one. The mocking-birds are pouring forth their souls in wild ecstacy that makes every bird lover rejoice. The song has woven into it so many notes of other birds that it is, indeed, a musical medley. In loud tones the bird sings: "Ja-cob, ja-cob, ja-cob," or "Ya-cup" as it sometimes sounds, which is the common call of the California woodpecker; the California shrike they also imitate, using several different notes; the "Phoeb" of the black phoebe is much like the note given by those birds; the "Whit-we-a" and the "Whe-o" of the black-headed grosbeak is a favorite, though it is used oftener after these birds have arrived from the south, as is the "Whit-a, whit-a" of the Arkansas kingbird. The falsetto three-part call of the valley quail is often heard, and the beautiful song of western meadow lark is sometimes attempted, although not with much success. Numerous short notes belonging to other birds are used by these clever mockers, making a most varied repertoire.

The ruby-crowned kinglet is a winter visitant only, and will not leave these parts until some time in April, but he is thinking of nest-building time, I am sure, for twice lately I have heard one of these birds singing a soft, ruminating song as he foraged among my pepper berries.

With the coming of the winter birds in March and April, nest building will be in full swing, but in the meantime watch the resident birds if you would partake of their secrets.

A patronizing young lord was seated opposite the late James McNeill Whistler at dinner one evening. During a lull in the conversation he adjusted his monocle and leaned forward toward the artist.

"Aw, y' know, Mr. Whistler," he drawled, "I pahssed your house this mawning."

"Thank you," said Whistler quietly. "Thank you very much."—[Everybody's Magazine.

The Ghost of Juan Ruiz.

A Romance of the Old Mission of San Gabriel.

By a Special Contributor.

SLOWLY crumbling into a picturesque ruin of its former stateliness, its outer finish scaled and discolored by the chemical action of more than a century of atmospheric changes, the old mission of San Gabriel keeps vigil beside the lifeless clay of its brother in the modest glory of olden times, El Camino Real.

So also it keeps vigil over the little unmarked and unnoticed mound of weed-grown earth beneath a gnarled and sprawling pepper tree some little distance back of the regular churchyard, and which lonely spot rest the bones of Juan Ruiz.

About and above this humble tomb the golden poppies yellow the landscape in riotous profusion during their season, and the careless tread of the delighted tourist imprints itself, unchallenged, upon the yielding surface, for the troublesome ghost of him who lies buried there has departed for other and fresher scenes of action.

A ghost, like the human tenement of dust which incloses it for a limited time, seems to be of a migratory nature, prone to leave its parental environment as soon as things become dull and uninteresting, and to seek fields more prolific of possibilities for making trouble. Thus it appears from the highest sources of information upon the subject, and far be it from me to question the higher sources of information.

And you, who possibly may be skeptically inclined concerning the existence of spirit forms, scoff not, nor sneer until you have read this story. For Juan swore many times by every saint in the calendar and over many bottles of good red wine which he had purloined from forbidden stores at the mission, that he would return after death and haunt with devilish persistency every one for whom he felt a grudge in this life; and it goes without saying that an oath performed upon and under such solemn premises must needs be kept.

When Juan Ruiz was born into the world the other planets of the solar system were evidently in position to exert an uncanny influence upon his life. From the very hour of his appearance it was plain that he was never made for a peaceful exhibit of ornamental work, but rather for a turbulent, combative specimen of infantile cussedness, the heritage of a long line of warrior ancestry. And of what avail are parents, nurses and teachers against a long ancestry?

The question may, perhaps, as well remain unanswered at this time.

As a matter of truth, things at the mission were never dull for any extended period while Juan flourished in the years of his adolescence and early manhood. If there was anything in the list of pure, unadulterated devilment calculated to keep the peace-loving mission settlement in hot water overlooked by the industrious Juan, no one at that time had discovered the fact.

Oddly enough, this imp of Satan was not without friends and admirers in the pious little community. Many demure and modest maidens, in spite of strict religious training, secretly admired the lawless and unprincipled Juan, and to the horror of the good padre and the older folk would often flash him a clandestine glance of appreciation and approval of his shameless wickedness.

This inexplicable phenomenon could not but cause much anxiety to parents and instructors, and add many gray threads to the venerable locks of the mission father upon whom rested the welfare of his annually increasing flock.

A goodly number of soul-harrowing flirtations and escapades were jotted down by the recording angel, we presume, against the scapegrace Juan, and were the affairs in part or wholly disastrous to himself and the object of his affections it was quite the same to him.

It is not surprising, therefore, when in later [illegible] he took the notion to marry and settle down [illegible] that the proceeding should be attended by tear storms and the smoke of battle.

When the momentous determination first formed itself in his mind he sat him down in the privacy of [illegible] own adobe dwelling, opened a flagon of old wine from the mission cellar, and proceeded to let the serious thought soak in deeply with the exhilarating vintage.

For serious indeed would it be for any woman [illegible] enough to embark upon the domestic ship with Juan Ruiz.

The path ahead of him was in nowise a smooth one, but this fact deterred him not a whit from his purpose. That the fair one of whom he had become enamored detested him and openly laughed all his advances to scorn, defiantly giving her heart to a despised gringo from the States, merely served to arouse his ancestral blood to fighting pitch.

The padre soon became apprised of this new condition of things and flatly forbade any further thought of such an alliance. But he knew Juan too well to be easy in his mind, and privately did considerable worrying.

And while the good father was occupied with serious anxiety, Juan was making hay while yet the weather was propitious.

Thus it happened that the Señorita Lola, in tears and great agitation, rushed into the presence of her confessor and implored him to show her some way out of the terrible difficulty which was hers.

"I have promised to marry Juan!" she declared, with trembling voice. "I love the Señor Americano; my heart belongs to him, and now I have given my solemn vow to be the wife of Juan Ruiz."

"What is this I hear, child?" responded the padre sternly. "Have you forgotten that but yesterday I did forbid you to even harbor thought of such rashness

"No, no, Father, I have not forgotten," cried the señorita.

"Then why this tale of wicked disobedience which you bring to me?"

"For the love of the blessed Saint Catherine, Padre, what can I do when Juan comes wooing, not with guitar and troubadour song as other señors would, but with a shotgun, and vows to blow out my brains and those of all my relatives if I do not promise right on the spot to be his wife! He made me kiss the image of the Blessed Virgin in solemn oath that I would be the wife of him and no other."

"Say you so, child?" answered the padre, his brows contracting in a troubled frown. "This is indeed a serious matter. That scoundrelly Juan had no right to use such unholy methods, but an oath performed in solemn covenant with the Blessed Virgin may not be broken. Go, child, and return to me at sunset. I must spend an hour in silence and prayer before I tell you what must be done."

Meanwhile, Juan, flushed with wine and victory, marched home in triumph with his shotgun. It was lucky that the Americano did not appear upon the scene that day. If he had, taunts and curses would have precipitated trouble and his blood would have reddened the fair fields of the mission.

At sunset the troubled maiden sought the padre as he had instructed her to do, and in the impressive atmosphere of the gray old mission learned her fate.

"There is no escape from your vow, my child," said the venerable shepherd, laying a hand in pity and blessing upon her bowed head. "The sacred body of the Blessed Mother must not be mocked, nor be made the plaything of erring mortals.

"A great sin has been committed, of which you are the innocent victim; but there is now no way for you but to keep your solemn vow and do as you have promised.

"Commit yourself to the care of God and the Holy Virgin, for He alone can rightfully release you from this bondage."

And the broken-hearted señorita in outward resignation to her unjust fate, returned in the soft California twilight to her home.

A number of weeks passed by, then the American, who was at that time far up the coast at a place called Monterey, received the particulars of the case between his sweetheart and Juan by a special messenger secretly sent by Lola herself.

Procuring the fastest horse he could find, he immediately started for San Gabriel with all possible speed, via El Camino Real, grimly determined to put an end to Juan Ruiz's funny business once and for all time.

But the hand of providence interposed in the matter, and two days before his rival reached his destination, Juan was stricken with a sudden and altogether strange illness. He writhed and shrieked with excruciating pains in the abdomen, and a violent fever sent his temperature rapidly and steadily upward toward the fatal point.

"It is the judgment of God come upon him," thought the padre, who had never seen a like illness before, and with all his knowledge of medicine could do nothing to relieve the patient.

Thus, swift and sure, with untold agony, came the end of Juan Ruiz's tempestuous life. He died, unrepentant and unshriven, with what is known today as acute appendicitis.

His body was laid to rest just outside the churchyard, and over the quiet spot the padre committed his soul to the mercy of Divine Wisdom.

But there were many present who secretly believed that his ghost would never remain in purgatory or any other celestial place, but would return to still further harass and frighten those good people at the mission, just as he had often sworn to do by every saint, great and small.

The nuptial ceremony of Lola and her American lover was performed in due time, and the young couple, with the good padre's blessing, settled down for a happy wedded life at the mission.

But it was destined not to be. Before a month had passed by, Lola, the first evening she had been alone since her marriage, felt an odd shiver creep over her flesh and looked up to behold the face of Juan Ruiz, distorted and infinitely more devilish than in life, gazing at her through the window with an evil leer.

The sight so unnerved her that she became ill, and for many days was confined to her bed a prey to torturing visions and grave mental hallucinations.

This was but the beginning of the unfortunate girl's troubles, and for long months she lived in extreme terror, her ghostly visitor showing himself daily and nightly in the most sleep-destroying, soul-harrowing guises.

At last, in desperation, her husband took her away from the mission and all of its associations, and lo! there were no more visits from Juan, or his ghostly apparition.

In time her health and mental poise fully returned, but her hair had whitened to the likeness of a woman of 50 during that period of fright, though she was then hardly more than 20 years of age.

After her departure from the mission, the ghost of Juan Ruiz was seen but once. This was by one of the sheep tenders as he was returning at night from a fandango.

And though his companions declared that he was so full of wine he couldn't tell a ghost from a cactus bush if he should see one, the fellow always stoutly maintained that he could see as clearly as anybody, and knew what he was talking about.

However, this is the story of Juan and his ghost, and why the yellow poppies bloom today above the little mound of earth at the old San Gabriel mission.

CLYDE SCOTT CHASE.

Behind the Scenes.

EPISODE OF LIFE ON THE VAUDEVILLE STAGE.

By a Special Contributor.

MARIE CLAIRETTE sat before her mirror in her dressing-room at the Odeon, rouging her cheeks with her gold-handled hare's foot. She did this very daintily over a layer of cold cream and powder. And after the long lashes had been carefully emphasized with the black stick which she melted over an alcohol lamp, Marie, "from the front," did not look painted—but simply a very pretty woman, with an exquisite complexion and wonderful eyes.

Marie was what would be technically termed a "headliner" in the vaudeville business. Though voluptuous of figure, she was small, with very black hair, blue eyes and a tip-tilted nose that, au naturel, betrayed her Irish blood in spite of her French name.

Her husband, Jack Odell, a big fellow weighing nearly 200 pounds, with kindness written all over his shrewd Hibernian face, traveled with her, acting the various roles of manager, advertising agent and maid. Over and above all, first and last, he was the lover. He worshiped at the shrine of his clever little wife.

Marie had been schooled in Paris, and spoke French like a native. In fact, it was to her French songs and irresistible style and artistry of interpretation that she owed her large salary and the impressive type which invariably featured her appearance.

Marie was known in private life before her marriage, as Mary, the daughter of Pat Doogan, politician saloonkeeper of the Bowery. The little girl was born with nimble feet, a sweet voice and a power of mimicry that made the stage an inevitable conclusion, and generous Pat Doogan willingly furnished the money for her training, swelling with pride at the result, and reveling in his daughter's fame—for of its kind, it was fame. Obvious reasons kept this bit of family history a secret, and to the public, Mary was only Marie Clairette, a much-talked-of Parisian chanteuse.

Marie had put the finishing touches to her make-up, and was powdering her charming neck and back with her long-handled powder puff, when her husband came in to fasten her gown. Marie's gown for this particular matinée—for she had a varied assortment of costumes throughout an engagement—was of soft black velvet, short-skirted and extremely décolleté, made very simply and clinging closely to the supple form. Around her throat she put a collar of diamonds, and on her breast, with the black velvet as an effective background, she pinned a huge diamond star. At the last, she placed a jaunty black Napoleon hat with diamond-crusted pompoms on her saucy head. Sub rosa, these diamonds were all paste. Marie had a valuable collection of jewels, but she never wore them on the stage.

There was a little time before her call. She picked up her handbag, and opening it, took out a small pink satin box.

"See here, Jack," she said, as she lifted the cover showing a tiny gold watch, fob and chain; "for Bobby. I want you to mail it tonight. You know how he's always wanted one. He'll think he's a big man now, like his daddy."

She dangled the watch with a childish delight, and her husband smiled indulgently at her as he opened the door, for the four Cavalls, trick bicycle riders who preceded her, had finished their act, and the orchestra was playing the opening bars of her song. She handed the watch to him, lifting her face for a kiss before tripping out on the stage.

Her first song was in French, a ballad of the boulevards, and to those who understood, decidedly risqué. The interpretation was so clever, however, so vividly descriptive and humorous, and her voice so pleasing, that the audience immediately liked her and applauded her, without realizing the vulgarity.

But to the more sophisticated, in spite of their grudging admiration of her skill, she seemed indelicate and bold. This always enraged Marie. She could see it in the faces of the refined, well-dressed people in the boxes, the cold look of disapproval from the women, the poorly-concealed indifference from the men. She knew that she held the masses in the palm of her hand, but she wanted the more discriminating applause.

She would stamp her small foot as she went off, saying to her husband who stood in the wings, "I'm going to bring a smile to their frozen faces if I have to turn a handspring over the footlights to do it."

Jack Odell would laugh and say with a soothing pat on her back: "Never mind, little girl; they don't count."

Following the boulevard ballad, was a very tuneful and infectious "coon song" which she interrupted in English with an amusing French accent. A dance and a cake walk accompanied this. The pliant body took new and daring postures, swaying to and fro, bending backward and forward, with an alluring grace and charm that made the men in the boxes forget their role of indifference and caused even the women to show signs of reluctant interest.

"She's a little devil," said a man standing in the rear of the house to his companion. "I saw her in Paris when she made her début. This is a Sunday-school performance in comparison. She's had to tone down her songs for American audiences. But she's an artist. Did you ever see such abandon!"

Marie's final act was a series of extremely clever imitations. And at last she captured a smile, even laughter, from the rigid-lipped women in the boxes.

An encore was demanded for this, and she gave a suggestive song in French about a little milliner and her love affairs. Her gestures, facial expression and acting made the little story perfectly plain without the words.

The audience, pleased with her voice, her dash and drollery, applauded loudly, but the women in the boxes wore their blank masks again, and the man in the rear of the house repeated to his companion, with a tolerant laugh and a shrug of the shoulders, "She's a little devil."

Marie ran off the stage to her dressing-room with a sigh of relief.

"Oh Jack," she said, while her husband unhooked her gown, "sometimes I feel as if I would like to give it all up, and just settle down in a little home of our own in the country somewhere, you and Bobby and I."

The big man stooped and kissed the back of her white neck where the soft curls grew.

"You're tired today, dear," he said.

"Yes, I'm tired—tired of it all."

Suddenly her eyes brightened, and she laughed aloud.

"I'd like to see Bobby's face when he gets that watch. Where is it? I want to look at it again."

Her husband took the tiny trinket from his pocket and handed it to her. She played with it, smiling happily while he fastened her street gown.

Just as he had finished, there was a sharp knock outside and a voice called: "Telegram for Mr. John Odell."

Jack went to the door, and signing the boy's book, leisurely opened the yellow envelope. He was used to frequent telegrams in his wife's interests.

But with his first glance at the message his ruddy face blanched. He stood perfectly still for a moment, and then put his hand to his head as if dazed.

Marie ran to him.

"What is it, Jack? What is the matter?"

She snatched the paper from his trembling fingers. The words stood out with hideous clearness.

"Dear Bobby died suddenly this morning. Membraneous croup. FATHER."

Marie stretched out her hands with a strange moaning choking sound, and Jack caught her as she swayed.

"Oh Jack—my baby, my little boy!"

The big man folded her in his arms. There was infinite compassion in his kind eyes.

"Poor little girl," he said, "poor little girl!"

He put on her hat and coat and tenderly clasped her furs. "Poor little woman," he said, kissing the white cheeks. She let her head droop on his shoulder.

"O my God!" she cried, "how can I go on tonight—how can I do it!"

The big man did not answer for a while. He held her until her sobs ceased, and she lifted her tear-stained face. Then he said:

"Come, dear, we'll go to the hotel. I must telegraph at once, and then we'll see what's best to do. Brace up, little woman."

There was a long, quivering sigh, and Marie squared her shoulders bravely. She took her bag and muff mechanically from the shelf, and as she did so, saw the little watch on the floor where she had dropped it. She stooped to pick it up.

"Look, Jack," she said, with a piteous little smile, "Bobby's watch."

The big man's eyes filled with tears. He took her arm, gently leading her out of the room.

As they walked down the long, dingy passageway of the stage entrance, to the street, the strains of a popular air from the orchestra reached their ears, and the sound of laughter and applause.

Marie shuddered.

The big man drew her more closely to him.

"Poor little girl," he said, "poor little girl!"

That's what comes from city livin'
  'Way from God's own natch'ral touch.

City folks have got some 'vantage
  Over us that's out o' town;
When it comes ter educatin',
  Got us jay ones tanned right brown!

What's their culture and good breedin'—
  Which I 'low they beat us at—
If they feel they ain't a-needin'
  Nothin' more than simply that?

What they want on top o' larnin'
  Is a heap sight more of love
Of the soil that they were born on,
  And the cooin' o' the dove!

Now's the season fer spring fever—

Why Billiard Tables Are Green.

"Billiards is one of the oldest games I know," said a sporting man, not long ago. "It is even older than croquet, which was played by French kings a great many hundred years ago. But while billiards is old, I'll bet none of the devotees of the ivories can tell me why a billiard table covering is green.

"Why, so that the red and white balls may show up well on it," hazarded Mr. A.

"Wrong! Billiards is merely a conception of the old game of bowls, which was played on a beautifully green lawn. On rainy and winter days, however, your sportsman couldn't enjoy his bowls, so some johnny conceived the scheme of bowls indoors on an imitation green lawn. But it was too easy playing with the hand in such close quarters, so the cue was introduced to put skill at a premium, and out of this developed the modern game of 'pills.' "—[London Answers.

Unique Forestry Work.

GOATS USED TO CONSTRUCT FIREBREAKS THROUGH CHAPARRAL.

By a Special Contributor.

THE work of a forester brings him so closely in touch with nature that a mere recital of his experiences and life among the trees and in the mountains proves interesting to a large proportion of our people. Most of us are, after all, nature lovers who find pleasure in hearing or reading of any manifestations of nature's beauty and utility. But interesting as are all the facts about forestry, there are some phases of the work carried on by the trained men in Uncle Sam's employ, that are of unusual interest by reason of their being new or unique in some particular.

Perhaps the most unusual thing ever attempted by the forest service is the experiment recently started whereby a band of Angora goats has been enlisted in the work of constructing a system of firebreaks through dense chaparral. When the mere announcement of this plan was made from Washington recently, it was given the widest publicity by the press, and the subject served as the basis for many a clever cartoon or pointed paragraph.

We all know that it is the habit of sheep and goats to graze closely, but until recently this habit was looked upon more as a necessary evil than one to be encouraged or rendered profitable. For mere man it is always well to do thoroughly whatever is done at all, but this maxim has evidently usurped the place of the alphabet in the education of all young goats, for the whole trouble with Billy has been that he is too prone to overgraze his pasture. This characteristic has brought forth abundant vituperation upon his head and in many cases death as well, especially when the sacred precincts of some cattleman has been invaded and the forage eaten. But it has remained for a bright young forest ranger on the Lassen National Forest to suggest a plan for turning this characteristic of butting Billy into a profitable and beneficial measure. The problem has always been to prevent the goats from destroying the forage entirely without wasting too much of the feed. Now the plan will be to not only allow, but to compel a huge band of goats to devastate a carefully-defined area by the mere process of catering to the demands of their small but insistent tummies. A contract has been entered into between the forest service and S. D. Pruden of Manton, Cal., whereby, in consideration of free grazing and other privileges granted by the government, Mr. Pruden agrees to assign his band of 3000 Angora goats to the task of constructing firebreaks. The scheme is to run lines parallel with the contours of the slopes by cutting trails about eighty rods apart. These trails are to serve as guides for the goats, from which they will graze in either direction, killing, it is estimated, a strip of brush about 300 feet wide. Several of these openings or trails will be used to allow rotation. By confining the goats to the areas outlined all the vegetation therein will be eaten or destroyed, as it is a well-known fact that goats actually kill large brush by peeling the bark from the stems. It is thought that it will require several years of grazing over the same areas to permanently eradicate the chaparral, but even where firebreaks have been constructed by actually cutting and grubbing out the break, it has been found necessary to go over the break every year to eradicate the new growth.

There are two reasons why it is hoped this experiment will succeed; one because it is desired to thus build natural firebreaks, and the other to provide good planting sites for future forests. This experiment is to take place upon an area thickly grown up with chaparral, such as is found upon thousands of acres of land in Southern California. The need for numerous firebreaks to check fires on chaparral-covered hills has been demonstrated time and again on our own mountainsides, but the difficulty and expense of their construction has prevented the construction of many where badly needed. Experiments conducted by the government have also shown that reforestation can best be carried on where the chaparral has been removed from the planting area, and if the goats succeed in killing off the heavy stand of brush which now covers the experimental area, the land will be used for planting sites with a view to the reforestation of the area. The result of this campaign will be closely watched by those interested in the question of the best means of protecting our watersheds and at the same time reforest the denuded mountains.

Porcupines as Tree Destroyers.

We hear a great deal these days about the various enemies which menace the forest. Now, it is the great timber barons; again, a disastrous forest fire. The latest enemy to rear his head against the forest is the small, but armored porcupine. Reports from Bishop, Inyo county, Cal., indicate that this animal is seriously damaging the lodgepole pine forests of the eastern slope of the Sierras. Practically the entire area of the Inyo National Forest has been affected to some extent. In many localities the damaged trees aggregate as high as 25 per cent. of the total stand. While these areas are not large, it is evident that if something is not done to curb their attack, much of the timber in that section will be killed.

The porcupine feeds, to a large extent during the winter upon the inner bark of the pine. To secure this, he travels about upon the snow and completely girdles the trees just above the snow line. Of course, this results in the death of the tree. The damage would not be so serious but for the fact that the porcupine seldom makes two meals off of the same tree, but prefers to visit several trees in the course of a night. Since its habits are nocturnal, hunting this animal is very difficult, but the attention of the local rangers has been called to the ravages of these animals and plans for their extermination are being made.

While the meat of the porcupine is not the most delicious in the world, to a hungry man it is said to be quite toothsome. In some of the Lake States, as in Wisconsin, a law has been passed which prohibits the killing of these animals except for food. The reason for this law is said to be that during the severe winters many travelers in the woods might have difficulty in obtaining food, and inasmuch as these animals abound everywhere and can be eaten, they should be protected for their food value.

Novel Methods of Forest Patrol.

If one were to follow the United States mails on their various journeys through our island possessions, many unique ways for delivering our letters would be encountered. So there are many different ways in which the forest rangers patrol the lands under their charge. For instance, up in Alaska, where Uncle Sam has several big forest reserves, some of the forestry officials find it necessary to use a launch in making their way from one district to another. A great deal of swamp land, heavily covered with cypress and other timber, is embraced within these forests, and streams abound everywhere. A large number of islands are also included within the forest, access to which can be had only by boat, and as the forest rangers are few, and their districts large, many of them must use boats to carry on their work. Owing to the great amount of rainfall and the heavy fogs, there is little danger from forest fires, and the principal duty of the local force is to watch over and provide means for rendering the timber easily accessible when the increasing demand for lumber in the United States will make it necessary to draw upon this source of supply.

There is another class of rangers on some of the northwestern forests who are compelled to do practically all their patrol work on foot. This is necessary because the country is exceedingly rough and precipitous, with few or no trails which can be used by animals. And not only must they walk, but often their supplies must be carried in on their backs. On the Olympic National Forest in Washington, which embraces a mountain range bordering on the ocean, a number of the rangers have for years been obliged to trudge into the fastnesses of the mountains on foot, with heavy packs of supplies on their backs. Along the rivers the supplies are brought in from the ocean by the Indians, who convey them upstream in canoes, and deliver them at certain points, from which they are packed into the mountains by the rangers. This locality is especially subject to being struck by lightning, which often results in fires. To discover these stricken trees and put out the fires thus started is the duty of the rangers, and to do this the roughest and most inaccessible country must be traversed. So used to walking long distances do these sturdy rangers become, that often they will cover as large an area on foot as our southern rangers will on horseback, and on their marches all sorts of difficulties are encountered. Streams must be forded, high grades must be scaled, thickets must be cut through, and often venomous snakes or dangerous animals must be vanquished. The country is wild, thinly settled, and the men who are called upon to administer the forest laws must be of the hardiest type to properly perform their duties. And they are, for some of the trips undertaken by these men if recounted here, would be almost unbelievable. As an example of the endurance shown by these men might be cited the case of a forest supervisor who recently walked seventeen hours without stopping, over exceedingly rough territory, and at the end participated in a land hearing without having had an opportunity to rest.

Hunting Ahead of Roosevelt.

We left Mombasa by train on Monday, May 4, at 11 a.m. The run of 327 miles to Nairobi takes twenty-four hours. The afternoon of Monday was an interesting trip, and we began to see game about 4 in the afternoon. They were principally tiny deer, standing about a foot high. I thought at first they were rabbits, but when I saw some close to the train discovered my mistake. We passed through typical African scenery such as one sees in pictures—natives in the scantiest of costumes, tending flocks of funny-looking goats and queer humped cattle, their huts of woven sticks daubed with clay and thatched with reeds. There were strange trees with long creepers hanging from them, and in part thick jungle that a person would have to cut his path through. Next morning the scene changed, and vast plains, in some places dotted with trees, and in some bare, were seen on all sides. Shortly before coming to Nairobi we passed the Athi plains, celebrated for their game. People are not allowed to shoot near the railroad, so one sees herds of zebra and hartebeeste, gnu looking at a little distance like our buffalo, ostriches, paa deer, stembuck, Grant's gazelle, and tiny "tommies" (Thompson's gazelle.) These have very pretty horns and a black line running from the rump to the lower part of the shoulder, and little black tails, which they whisk incessantly.

It is quite interesting to see an outfit like ours get started. The porters' loads, which by law should not exceed fifty-six pounds, are ranged in a row. The porters line up, and loads are balanced on their heads, each man making a sort of turban out of his red blankets, which, together with water bottle and jersey, each man receives as part of his outfit. The askari, or native soldiers, of whom we have two as guards, armed with rifles and dressed in khaki, start, one at the head and one at the end of the caravan. A few notes are blown on a native flute made of water buck or other horn, and off they go. As they enter the place where we are to camp the music strikes up again, the headman bustles around, pointing out where the masters' tents are to go, and the cook's fire to be, the askari to the masters' tents, the porters put their loads in a pile where they can get at them when wanted, and in a few minutes fifteen little tents have sprung up in a half-circle behind the big ones. Some porters are detailed to go after wood, and as night comes on, two big fires are lighted, and the askari relieve each other every hours, mounting guard with their rifles, as there is always danger to our mules from a prowling lion or leopard. The little porters' fires begin to twinkle in the half-circle, and, if we have shot game, the meat is distributed among the men, and until late in the night there is great feasting and snuff taking. The marrowbones and tenderloins, of course, are reserved for the bwano, or masters.—[John Jay White, Jr., in Harper's Weekly.

Hooked Noses.

THE STRANGE PASSENGERS ON A PULLMAN CAR.

By a Special Contributor.

JACOBS awoke slowly, and blinked at the polished roof just above his hooked nose. The bed was soft and pleasant, curtained and dim, and his clothes hung at his side in a hammock. He nodded into a doze until the roar of the train over a bridge half-aroused him.

"Eight o'clock, sir," said a thick voice beyond the curtain.

"A' ri'," Jacobs mumbled; "I gave the brakee four bits—good for this division."

"The dining car's attached, sir."

"A' ri'. Eh?" Jacobs suddenly sat up, striking his head a resounding blow on the berth above him. "Oh, all right, porter," he said, mechanically; "thanks." He lay back on the pillow and shivered. "What a dream!" he grunted. Then the confusion and sleep left his eyes, full remembrance flooded his face, and again he shivered.

Dressed in English tweeds, Jacobs, fresh, immaculate, debonair, and seemingly a personification of prosperity, made his way to the smoking-room. He did not wash—the close-cropped pointed beard which miraculously had grown over his face since the day before was not waterproof—but he made what toilette he could; and he was arranging his tie when the porter entered.

"Not far along yet, porter?" he inquired, glancing out upon the bleak prairie. "When do we reach Lincoln?"

"Two o'clock, sir."

"Ah, no chance to get any Denver news until then, I suppose?"

"No, sir; Lincoln papers about noon, I reckon; Denver papers in Lincoln."

Jacobs nodded and went back to the dinning car. A little old woman in black bombazine, white-haired and widow-veiled, preceded him, and he helped her across the vestibule. She had a hooked nose. Jacobs fingered his own nose in an absent-minded manner, and the old woman stopped.

"When do I shed, Captain?" she asked, furtively glancing about before she spoke.

"I'll let you know," Jacobs returned. "You're Number One?"

"No, Two."

"Oh, all right." He preceded her and found an unoccupied table.

Before Jacobs had finished breakfast, the waiter placed a little old gentleman opposite, and Jacobs instinctively looked at the nose. But the stranger's nose was not hooked; it was immense, however, gargoylean, a veritable "Master Cyrano's nose:" it stood out from a thin, shriveled, wrinkled face, with fallen chaps and a Mother Goose chin. The eyes were old and bleared, puckered into narrow slits behind their spectacles, the bald head shone glossily, and the little old gentleman's little old hands were not quite steady as he tucked a napkin under his waistcoat.

"Good-morning to you, sir," the newcomer piped; "we belong to the same sleeper, I believe. I saw you pass my section as I was dressing." He ordered his breakfast and turned again to Jacobs. "To Chicago?" he inquired.

Jacobs nodded. "Yes," he answered, thawing under the other's geniality. "A little business there. I'm a naturalized Englishman. You, I take it, have been doing the coast?"

"And the Rockies—oh, the Rockies!—I'm a Chicagoan," he volunteered, as Jacobs was leaving, "but I live in the suburbs. If you stop over, though, I'll have my son Thomas call and take my place. Stumble—Josiah E. Stumble, at your service, sir."

"My name is Bunn," Jacobs said; "thank you so much. But I'll see you again."

As he stood in the aisle, a slim young commercial man, obviously an American Jew, brushed past, fingering his nose. A brown eye winked at Jacobs, and in the vestibule the commercial man waited.

"Well?" he said, still fingering his nose.

"Number One?" Jacobs asked.

"Yes."

"You come first. Lincoln, unless the cars are searched before then; but Lincoln anyhow. When you get to our sleeper, stick to the smoker, talk to everybody, and sometimes forget what house you represent and what goods you are selling. Make us a bit suspicious of you. I'll do the rest."

"Right you are." The commercial man winked again and followed Jacobs to the Pullman.

In the sleeper the berths were made up, and as he went down the aisle to his own section at the farther end, Jacobs had his first opportunity to observe his fellow-passengers. Half-way down the car he passed two women, mother and daughter, tall, slender and fair-haired, the mother with a touch of gray at the temples, the daughter with an almost imperceptible sadness drooping her red lips. Jacobs's eyes and the girl's met in a long stare, ended on her part by a sudden flash of recognition. Jacobs, red and flustered, sought his seat; his hands trembled, his nerves twitched, sweat beaded his forehead. He sat, unseeingly staring at the light-flooding landscape, and plainly lost in some recollection, some moody memory, some dream of unforgotten days; for the hard lines limned upon his face by life were smoothed out, until, despite the beard that was not his, his face unwrinkled to the face of a boy.

He felt her presence and turned with a start.

"How do you do?" she said, brightly. "Just at first I didn't recognize you; that ugly beard, you know. No, she didn't see; I didn't tell her." She glanced down the car at her mother.

"I am glad you know me," Jacobs faltered. "After what I did I supposed no one would care. But we won't talk of that, please."

"No, of course not, if it hurts," she said. "I wanted to tell your sister about you, so I came. What shall I say to her, Clay?"

"My name is Bunn," Jacobs explained, "and I'm employed, Ja—Miss Cotesworth. I——" He stopped in embarrassment. The lie burnt.

"Clay," she said, while her eyes begged him, "surely, Clay, you earn your money? You are not what some men become after they have once made a blunder? You are honest?"

Jacobs recovered himself by an effort, but he did not look at her. "Certainly," he murmured; "I'm a gentleman yet. Or I have been until now."

"If I thought you were honest," she said, slowly; "but there, I mustn't talk too long. I told mamma you were a man I happened to meet in Denver." She bent close to him. "And, oh, Clay!" she almost whispered, "if you are honest you must repay the money."

She was gone, and as the miles flew past, Jacobs gloomed, quite bemused with ugly memories. He was still in a reverie when some one slipped into the seat and he turned upon Mr. Josiah Stumble's gigantic nose. Mr. Stumble's wrinkled face was abnormally puckered into facetious mirth, and his slit eyes were undistinguishable in their hiding-places.

"A decidedly handsome young lady," he said, nodding toward Miss Cotesworth. "Heh, I was once young myself, but I always needed an introduction, and then I never had such luck as yours."

"She's a childhood friend," Jacobs growled, unreasonably irritated.

"That's interesting. I suppose you haven't seen each other for a long time?"

"No." Jacobs turned his shoulder and devoted himself to the landscape.

Mr. Stumble rubbed his twitching hands and grinned the interested and benevolent grin which only master bores can crease. "Dear boy," he said, paternally, "cultivate her, talk to her mother. You're not married, are you? But this lady isn't English? You must have come over early in life, despite your broad A's. Childhood friends," he rambled on. "I'll guess that you were a smooth-shaven chap when she saw you last. You didn't find it necessary to recall yourself to her?"

"Do you smoke?" Jacobs asked in desperation.

"Sometimes, but I've had my morning cigar. Oh, by the way, an odd thing. There's a fellow back there—little, with a hooked nose—a commercial man. I was talking with him. He told me he is traveling for a Chicago cigar-maker; and then, in a little bit, it was a New York book concern. When I called his attention to the discrepancy he explained that the cigars were a side line, and then he said he meant that the books were. I really don't believe he's a drummer at all."

"That is rather odd," Jacobs answered. "Perhaps he has a reason for pretending to be a something he isn't? But I haven't had my cigar yet. Sorry you won't join me."

"Lincoln papers?" said the news agent, poking his head into the compartment. Jacobs bought one, and ran searching eyes down the columns. The second page rewarded him, though there he found not only what he sought, but a great deal more than he sought. A startled expression flooded his face, his lips tightened and his eyes hardened.

"Astounding Robbery, Atrocious Murder," announced the paper. "Miser Gilsdorf of Denver meets death at the hands of his nephew. His immense fortune missing." Jacobs hastily scanned the story, and, glancing up, he met the commercial Hebrew's surprised gaze, just as that worthy looked up from a similar perusal of the same report.

"A sad business," said the drummer. "Listen here, gents: A Denver man's cleaned out his uncle and done the old man up besides." He read the story aloud. "Ain't that the limit?" he demanded. "That sport's the worst ever. Here's a feller run down in New Mexico; here's another arrested in Cheyenne, an' a third guy pinched by a Kansas Sheriff. If they get the right man Denver'll lynch him, hey?" He squinted at Jacobs, and the squint grew into a rather ominous leer.

"You can see for yourself that the murder must have been almost accidental," Jacobs protested. "He was weak—gambled the money away, no doubt—who of us has not been weak? Poor devil! I would pity him, if it weren't for this. But the uncle must have discovered Gilsdorf's guilt just as the nephew was making ready to escape. That's evident. Ramon, I see, had the whole business management of the estate, and for some time previous he must have been preparing for flight. He didn't get away quite soon enough. I fancy the murder was unpremeditated."

"Here's an odd thing," said Mr. Stumble, who, with his paper, had joined the smokers and was marking paragraphs with his nose: "The police are looking for little men with hooked noses. Ha, you can't disguise a nose, gentlemen. Gilsdorf's nose will betray him."

"I wonder if there'll be a reward?" the Jew asked.

"Sure to be," Jacobs said; "and a big one, friend. George! with this nose of mine, I already feel blood-guilty!"

"The murder was done at about 9 last night," Mr. Stumble hinted, consulting his paper; "our express left at 10. Eh, have we a suspicious character on board?"

"Any one who doesn't know what he's doing, or where he's going?" Jacobs suggested. "I fancy not. Probably Gilsdorf is one of these men mentioned as already arrested."

Mr. Stumble got upon his legs, and, after shaking a pessimistic head, marched out; two other men hastily followed, leaving Jacobs and the Jew together.

The drummer quickly changed his seat to Jacobs's elbow. "They suspect me," he said under his breath.

"Well?" Jacobs challenged, "isn't that the bargain?"

"Yes, but look here, you took me in. I didn't hire to help a murderer escape."

"I'm bought," Jacobs guardedly returned, "just as you are, worse luck. Gilsdorf told me he'd got in trouble, used his uncle's money, and gone broke. He wanted me to run one way while he ran another. You're in the same box. We can't do anything but what we've agreed to do. Our hands are tied. We've been paid."

"Oh, rats!" said the Jew in disgust. "Don't I know you're Gilsdorf?"

"But I tell you," Jacobs said, "Gilsdorf is half-way to Mexico by now. We're his tools, his dupes, I grant, his plants to keep the police busy and unsuspecting unt he gets out of reach; and we've sold ourselves and been sold. If I'd dreamed of his committing murder I would never have gone into this, hungry as I was; but once in I'm not the man to crawfish. Besides, don't you see? our safety depends upon our silence. We're bound to be arrested somewhere—we can't avoid that now, for we are suspicious characters. If we confess we make ourselves accessories; but, except from our own lips, no one can prove anything against us. It's a nice rat trap we've crawled into; we can't do anything but eat our cheese. Keep quiet when you're pinched, and, as soon as you're proven not to be Gilsdorf you'll be released. It's your only safety."

The Jew cursed. "You may think you're sharp," he growled; "we'll see!"

"I've warned you," Jacobs said, ominously; "mind, keep your own counsel." He left the compartment, but, the instant his back was to the Jew, Jacobs's face changed; the mask fell, and it became old, and lined, and haggard. In the aisle of the sleeper the three smokers were grouped about the conductor. Mr. Stumble beckoned.

"What do you think?" the conductor asked. "Is he Gilsdorf?"

"Not a doubt of it," Jacobs said. "He's nervous and contradictory."

"Two of you gentlemen go back," the conductor ordered, "and engage him in conversation. I'll have the porter wait outside, and a brakee in the vestibule. Are you armed? At the next stop I'll telegraph to Lincoln."

Jacobs sank to his seat with a sigh, and Mr. Stumble eagerly sat beside him, speculating, wondering and denouncing. The old man was extraordinarily excited, and he shook more notably than ever, but his babble amused, and Jacobs, above everything, wanted distraction.

The train rumbled through Lincoln's suburbs, slowed with clanking couplings, and at once the Pullman was invaded by armed police. Passengers stood in alarm, women nervously screamed, and in the smoker heavy oaths boomed. The commercial traveler, stripped of his wig, bellowing in impotence, was hauled down the aisle.

"I ain't! I ain't!" he repeatedly vociferated. "That's him!"—pointing with manacled hands at Jacobs. "That's him, I tell you. I'm just a plain dip named Rosendale. That's Gilsdorf. I know him intimate!" And so bellowing, the police closed about him and he was hurried away.

Jacobs, standing on the platform beside Mr. Stumble, felt Miss Cotesworth's hand on his arm. "What is the trouble?" she asked.

"They think him Gilsdorf, the Denver murderer," he explained.

"And what do you think?"

"I? Oh, I don't know. He's a criminal of some sort, anyhow."

Excitement gradually subsided, and when the train pulled out, Jacob returned to his seat. Miss Cotesworth left him with a familiar nod, and a smile, almost of comradeship. She had stood talking with him, gossiping and dreaming, as if he were an honest man, a friend, some one intimate and dear. The youthful moral tragedy of weakness seemed put away, to be some day expiated and forgiven. The arrest, however, did not lessen Jacobs's moodiness, nor decrease his nervous fear; and when he saw Mr. Josiah Stumble making himself senilely affable and attentive to the Cotesworths, he was both afraid and jealous of the grotesque nose.

Mr. Stumble returned, benevolent and chirping. "I've been talking with your sly puss," he chuckled, poking Jacobs in the ribs. "Knew her in childhood? Heh-heh-heh! Eh, the twentieth century! Mamma said her Jane met you last week in Denver." He chuckled and chuckled, unmindful of Jacobs's silence. "The drinks are on you, I think?"

Jacobs ferociously scowled at the superannuated reprobate. "What difference does it make to you?" he snarled. "She's a good girl."

"Surely, surely," Mr. Stumble purred; "no offence. We'll change the topic a trifle, Bunn. You must meet the mother; nice woman, pleasant talker and all that. They're Virginians, and of course, Mrs. Cotesworth is full of village gossip. I happened to mention my son, and his business partner, Adolph Jacobs, and Mrs. Cotesworth told me a sad story of a young fellow of her town, also a Jacobs—Claiborne Jacobs. Very sad, very sad. The same old yarn, you know—village bank, trusted cashier, horse races, mint juleps, and unauthorized borrowings. It wasn't the story that impressed me, but the way she told it. I fancy he was nearer her than she acknowledges. After the crash, when he had disappeared, Miss Jane was ill. Her mother inadvertently dropped that news. You have a rival, dear boy."

"Oh, cut it out!" Jacobs crisply advised.

Mr. Stumble was hurt. He adjusted his glasses and stared. "Very well," he returned; "beg your pardon, I'm sure." He rose, frowning and thoughtful.

"Excuse me," Jacobs hastily supplemented. "I was more than usually rude. I'm not feeling well. Fact is," he concluded, in a burst of mock confidence, "I've

A Neglected Paradise.

BEAUTIES OF A LITTLE KNOWN REGION WHERE RED MEN LIVE.

By a Special Contributor.

IN the western part of the great State of Montana, hemmed in by lofty mountains and far removed from any considerable center of population, is a tract of land of definite and well-defined boundaries, known as the Flathead Indian Reservation. This tract of land is unique from three distinct points of view. First, it presents one of the most remarkable combinations of fertility and scenic grandeur to be found in the United States. Second, it is the finest section of country ever set aside by the United States as the home and heritage of several tribes of his wards, the red men. Third, it furnishes at once the most striking illustration and the most conclusive evidence of the inveterate indolence and unprogressiveness of the Indian that is to be met with anywhere.

It is probable that there are in the United States tracts of land more fertile than this reservation. There may also be those that surpass it from the standpoint of scenery alone. But there are none where high fertility and grandeur of natural scenery are combined more intimately and on a grander scale than on the Flathead Indian Reservation.

It is this mingling of broad, fertile valleys and majestic mountains that gives to this reservation its peculiar charm. The principal part of the reservation consists of a vast stretch of generally level valley land extending from Flathead Lake on the north to St. Ignatius on the south, a distance of thirty miles, and from the Mission Mountains on the east to the Bitter Root Mountains on the west, a distance of twenty-five miles. Through this great valley from north to south flows the Pend d'Oreille River, winding like a great serpent from the south end of Flathead Lake to the mountain pass on the south. Into it from either side flow the half-dozen creeks, which, together with innumerable coulées and washes, drain the valley and the surrounding mountains. The water supply in these streams is never-failing. It is for the most part the result of the gradual melting of the accumulated snow on the mountain slopes, which with their myriad convolutions constitute a vast watershed. Hence when not polluted by a sudden downpour of rain or by the sudden melting of a deep snow, the water throughout this reservation is clear as crystal, pure, cool and wholesome. Throughout their courses these streams are lined with stately trees of pine, fir and tamarack, thus forming many a nook where one may sit on the rich green grass and listen to the roaring of the water as it winds about and flows rapidly on over rocks and boulders.

But beautiful as is the valley itself, with its bountiful supply of timbered crystal streams blending with rich agricultural land, it is not until viewed in connection with its border of snow-capped mountains that the scene becomes truly enchanting. From any point in this great valley one may look in any direction, and at almost any season of the year behold the sublime spectacle of a great mountain peak crowned in snow. The most important range is the Mission Mountains. Looking at these from the west, one can see a score or more of peaks rising majestically until their whitened and pointed crowns have penetrated the clouds and stand out sublimely as though detached from the earth and resting upon some ethereal base. Surrounding these giant peaks and forming a part of them is a wondrous array of ridges, with their sharp and serrated summits, crags and vertical cliffs, of yawning gorges and rugged cañons, in whose deep recesses is piled the snow of thousands of years. Behind the loftiest of these peaks, where the sun never shines, glaciers have formed, the gradual melting of which gives to the far-off valley its splendid water supply during the long summer days.

As one looks with awe and bewilderment at this stupendous work of Nature, grim and terrible in its aspects, one is relieved to think that, nestled away in the very bowels of these giant peaks, are beautiful emerald lakes, resting tranquilly in the great gorges which nature has carved out of the adamantine rock, while around them, as the setting of a gem, have been reared groves of stately pine, fir, tamarack and cedar. Certainly there are few if any spots in the United States so little known and yet possessed of such sublime and varied scenery as this reservation.

In the main valley of this reservation there are not less than 400,000 acres of arable land, all of it capable of development into productive farms. In addition, there are several smaller valleys, which are no less productive nor inferior in their supply of water, timber and scenic grandeur. The slight efforts that have been made along the line of agriculture furnish conclusive evidence that the soil and climatic conditions of this reservation are admirably adapted to the successful growing of every variety of grain and vegetable belonging to the temperate zone.

Vast as is the extent of the agricultural section of this reservation, vaster still by far is the mountainous region. Much of the latter is covered with valuable forests. Some is inaccessible to man because of its rugged outlines or the impenetrable tangle of underbrush and fallen timber which for ages have been accumulating. It therefore offers an ideal home for wild animals, driven from place to place by the onward press of civilization, and within its borders may be found specimens of nearly every variety of wild animal that still survives in Northern United States. Within these primeval mountain forests is yet to be found the largest member of the deer family, the elk. Here also are found the bear, the deer, the lion, the mountain goat, the wolf, the coyote and the jack rabbit. But by far the most notable animal possession of this reservation is the vast herd of buffaloes which still roam at will within its border. Although several hundred head of these shaggy monsters have recently been sold and shipped to various preserves with a view of perpetuating this unique animal, there are yet more than 400 of these animals within the confines of this reservation. Henceforth they are to be preserved on special reservations by both the governments of the United States and Canada and by interested private citizens. Perhaps the most notable of these reservations is the one set aside within the boundaries of the Flathead Indian Reservation. Here, under the auspices of the American Bison Society, hardly survivors of this unfortunate animal will be segregated to perpetuate their kind amid climatic and topographic conditions most suited to their existence.

The climate of this reservation, though not entirely ideal, is very healthful and much milder than that of most parts of the United Etates situated in the same latitude. During July and August the days are hot, while the nights are cool. From September until December the weather is ideal. The gradually-shortening days of this period of the year are clear; the sun is bright and mild, while the balmy air and gentle zephyrs make outdoor life delightful. Then begins the period of general cloudy weather, with occasional light snows and sudden variations in the temperature. With January the typical winter weather begins. The most striking feature of the weather of January and February is the occasional visits of that mysterious phenomenon known as "chinook," a warm wind that suddenly makes its appearance throughout the mountainous region of Montana, causing great and sudden changes in the temperature, dissipating the blizzards and melting the snow with astounding rapidity. It is not uncommon for them to cause a change in the temperature of from 50 to 70 degrees within twenty-four hours. In fact, it is seldom that the change is so gradual as this, most of the change occurring within an hour or two. No feature of the chinook is more remarkable than its sudden appearance. More than once, the writer has been lying in bed or at work in the office and has heard the first blast of one of these mild and gusty visitors strike the building as distinctly as though it were a tidal wave. He has seen a blizzard accompanied by a temperature of 30 degrees below zero and two feet of snow suddenly dissipated and succeeded by a temperature ranging from 40 to 50 degrees above zero. Within a few minutes after the first touch of the chinook, water began dripping from the roof, which meant that the cold wave had been dissipated and the snow was melting. Within twenty-four hours the snow was reduced to a depth of but six inches, while at the end of [illegible] days it had entirely disappeared. There is no telling when a chinook will occur nor what will be the [illegible] of its duration. It may last but thirty-six hours, and again it may continue for a week. They are usually accompanied by a temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees with only slight variations between the day and the night temperatures. March is usually characterized by considerable wind and the last of the winter winds. April and May are cool, with more or less rain, while June makes the transition from the cool weather of spring to the hot weather of summer. There is little rain during the summer months, but the precipitation during the winter has saturated the soil and piled up of snow on the mountain peaks and in the deep cañons which keeps the streams abundantly supplied with the purest of water throughout the year.

The thoughtful reader who has followed this description of the splendid resources and exceptional inducements to thrift and progress which characterize this reservation, will be sure to ask, What is the present state of development here? To this inquiry the answer is a severe arraignment of the Indian found here. It proves the hopelessness of the attempt to educate him in the arts of civilization and enable him to compete with the white man in the social, industrial and business world. He will not work beyond the point of absolute necessity. His generations of living by the bow and the spear in a land where game and fish were ever abundant, have left him utterly unable to adapt himself to the new conditions and to compete with his white neighbors. For several generations the Indians on this reservation have lived in undisputed pos-sion of one of the fairest portions of the United States—a tract of land which, in the hands of average white settlers, would, in less than ten years, have been transformed into a veritable paradise. But in spite of his years of residence upon and his ownership of this reservation, which is so bountifully supplied with every natural inducement to industry, thrift and progress, the Indian has done practically nothing in the way of improvement and advancement. He has been able to see in this valuable heritage bequeathed unto him by his generous guardian nothing more than he saw in the limitless stretches of land over which he roamed in the days of his untrammeled freedom—merely a place for hunting and fishing. A rude log hut, usually with just one room and one window, constitutes his home during the winter, while near by may be seen the familiar tepee, with its typical smoke-stained apex, in which he lives during the warmer part of the year. In all these years of intimate contact with his white neighbors he has made practically no advancement, either in industry or education. Of all the productive land available, he seldom cultivates more than a mere garden. He usually owns a few cayuses, and in some cases a small herd of cattle. Between these and his occasional hunting and fishing excursions, he manages to eke out an existence. As a result, this great reservation remains to the present day, a land devoted to grazing, hunting and fishing. On a tract of land that would support 50,000 people in comfort and prosperity, less than 2500 are living—most of them merely existing, according to our standard of living. The only element on the reservation which shows any tendency to improve the land, and incidentally their own material welfare, is the "Breeds." The Flatheads have extensively intermarried with the early white hunters, trappers and adventurers. As a result, there are at present more "Breeds" (persons of mixed white and Indian blood) on this reservation than there are full-blooded Indians. While some of them are utterly shiftless and worthless, and worse in many respects than the Indians themselves, there are others in whom the characteristics of their white forebears manifest themselves in a tendency toward industry and advancement. Some of these live in quite respectable log houses and cultivate large tracts of land. (According to Indian custom, a member of the tribe is allowed to own all the land he will improve or fence.) But even of these there are only a few who show any business ability and are not largely at the mercy of the white traders.

There are many who despise and bitterly condemn the Indian because he does not take readily to the ways of modern civilization. To the writer's mind this is unwarranted and unjust. The Indian of today is the logical product of centuries spent in barbaric freedom in a country so abundant with game and fish and berries and nuts that but the slightest efforts were necessary to the support of life. There was no necessity for toil; hence no tendency toward industry was developed. There was not the slightest intimation to them that a more enlightened people would some day usurp their vast hunting ground and their food supply. The furthest reach of their imagination fancied nothing but a continuation of their easy, happy and contented life. Their highest ambition was to excel in the hunt and the fight and to endure the most terrible hardships and suffering with the least complaint. Less than two score of years have passed since the Indian became seriously affected by the encroachment of the whites. Not until then did he begin to realize that a new order of things was developing around him, and not until then was he impressed with the seriousness of his situation. Is it reasonable to suppose that the work of centuries can be undone in a generation or two? What would have been the result if in the days of the Indian's prime, the white man had suddenly been deprived of everything which pertained to his mode of living and had found himself obliged to adapt his mode of living to that of the Indian, and with the Indian's equipment maintain his existence by contesting with him in the war and the chase? No one will deny that in such a contest he would have proved an utter failure. Yet it is quite as unreasonable to expect the Indian to readily abandon his hereditary mode of living, equip himself with the implements of our modern civilization, and successfully compete with us in a struggle in which we have been engaged for ages past.

And now as if to still further hasten the inevitable fate of the unfortunate people, a mighty transformation is about to sweep this reservation—a transformation which will have a far greater effect upon the present and future of its native inhabitants than anything which has preceded it. This is to be caused by the introduction of a complete system of irrigation and the offering of the unallotted lands for entry by American citizens. The United States Reclamation Service, being splendidly equipped by years of experience, has been engaged by the Bureau of Indian Affairs to perform the task. Already preliminary surveys have been made, covering a large part of the reservation.

To every man, woman and child, of pure and mixed blood, with rights on this reservation, has been allotted eighty acres of land. So far as possible, the Indians, or their representatives, were allowed to choose their allotments, in order that there might be the greatest possible satisfaction on the part of the owners of the land. For every acre of this land it is hoped to provide an adequate and dependable water supply. Thus a man having a wife and six children, which is not unusual here, will own and control one square mile of rich and virgin soil, on which an abundant crop can be raised each year by the application of irrigation. Thus with no efforts on their part they will at once come into possession of a piece of property, such as thousands of industrious white men are unable to acquire through a lifetime of toil. Their per capita wealth will be more than twenty-five times that of Americans.

Even this generous allotment has not exhausted the arable land of this reservation. Thousands of acres remain, which will ultimately be thrown open for entry by American citizens who will reside upon and cultivate the soil. Just when this will be done, or the details of the plan under which it will be carried out, if known, have not been given out. Certain it is, however, that the realization of this is an event of the near future. Similar operations are under way on other reservations, and on all of these the days of the Indian, as an important factor, are fast coming to an end.

Precisely what will be the situation on this reservation within the next few years, can at present only be conjectured. Certain it is that we have reached the last stage in the passing of the Indian. His hereditary indolence and mental obtuseness render him unwilling and unable to become a successful farmer. Few indeed will be the number of those who will reside upon and cultivate their land. Ere long, there will be seen on this reservation the remarkable phenomenon of Indian landlords with white tenants. Of course, all business will have to be carried on between the white man and the Indian agent, the latter being an officer appointed by the government to reside on the reservation and look after the interests of the Indians and maintain law and order throughout his respective reservation. Scarcely will the reservation have been opened for entry before the white man will predominate in point of numbers, and this, together with his superior intellect, will make him the ruling power on the reservation. The government, in order to protect the Indian as far as possible, and to give him one more opportunity to qualify himself for life amid his new environments, will doubtless withhold from him the right to sell, or in any way make final disposition of his land within a specified period, probably twenty-one years. This would allow the infant papoose of today to become of age and to decide for himself what shall be the final disposition of his land. It is probable, however, that the regulations will provide that upon the death of an Indian his land may be sold and the proceeds applied to the support of the dependents of the deceased, or turned over to his nearest relatives.

Meanwhile, the Indian, secure in the income derived from his land through the labors of an industrious tenant, will continue his indolent, half-civilized existence. Indeed, it is to be feared that, with the greater assurance of an ample income for his needs, and this with absolutely no exertion on his part, he will retrograde rather than advance. It is impossible to reflect upon the sad fate of this once powerful and independent race without being affected with a sense of pity.

No other race of people ever fought so desperately and persistently for the preservation of their land and their independent existence. For 300 years the conflict raged, unparalleled in the annals of the world for desperate ferocity and vindictive and merciless cruelty. Every conflict foreshadowed with ever-increasing certainty, the inevitable end. Yet each succeeding war found the Indian as fierce, as desperate, as courageous and apparently as confident as the preceding one. Every foot of his retreat has been stained with blood, and every acre of hunting ground which he has yielded to his white enemy has been given up, not because he did not foresee his sad and bitter end, but because he was literally overwhelmed. From one reservation to another he has been driven. At last, completely overcome, broken in spirit, sullen and sad, he finds himself entirely enveloped by a civilization as mysterious to him as a problem in Euclid, and his fate is sealed. In a few years the strong arm of the government will doubtless be removed from the support of the remnants of this people, helpless even amid abundant opportunities. Then they will become the prey of unscrupulous human sharks. Their lands will be purloined, and homeless and helpless they will struggle on, remaining to the end unfortunate victims of inscrutable fate.

Knowledge as Capital.

When you get a job, just think of yourself as actually starting out in business for yourself, as really working for yourself. Get as much salary as you can, writes Orison Swett Marden in Success, but remember that that is a very small part of the consideration. You have actually gotten an opportunity to get right into the very heart of the great activities of a large concern, to get close to men who do things; an opportunity to absorb knowledge and valuable secrets on every hand; an opportunity to drink in, through your eyes and your ears, knowledge wherever you go in the establishment, knowledge that will be invaluable to you in the future.

Every hint and every suggestion which you can pick up, every bit of knowledge you can absorb, you should regard as a part of your future capital which will be worth more than money capital when you start out for yourself.

Just make up your mind that you are going to be a sponge in that institution and absorb every particle of information and knowledge, every suggestion possible.

High-Priced Horseshoeing.

Gen. St. Clair Mulholland, veteran and historian of the Civil War, tells an incident showing the utter worthlessness of Confederate paper money at the close of the war.

"Shortly after Lee's surrender," says the general, "I was a short distance from Richmond. The Confederate soldiers were going home to become men of peace again, and were thinking about their farms.

"One had a lame, broken-down horse, which he viewed with pride. 'Wish I had him, Jim,' said the other. 'What'll you take for him? I'll give you $20,000 for him.'

"'No,' said Jim.

"'Give you $50,000.'

"'No,' said Jim.

"'Give you $100,000,' his friend said.

"'Not much,' replied Jim. 'I just gave $120,000 to have him shod.'"—[Philadelphia Times.

A PLUNK A WORD.

An elephant lay dying on Africa's sunny plain,
No soft-voiced elephantess soothed his elephantine pain;
But a comrade stood beside him, while his life blood ebbed away,
And bent with pitying glances, to hear what he might say.
"My hold on life is slipping," quoth the dying pachyderm,
And though his eyes were glazing, his gentle voice was firm.
"Take a message," he continued, "and a token to the herd.
My obituary, tell them, will bring a plunk a word.

"Tell my brothers and companions, when they meet and crowd around,
To hear my mournful story, in our old-time stamping ground,
That I stood without a tremor, and didn't try to run
When I found that I was up against a rapid-firing gun.
I faced death well and bravely for the glory of the clan;
And the further aggrandizement of a literary man;
For well I knew that distant lands would be profoundly stirred
By the story of my passing, told at a plunk a word.

"Tell them that I stood at noonday, eating tender bamboo sprouts,
When my meal was interrupted by fierce, ear-splitting shouts.
I gazed about me wide-eyed, and ceased to masticate,
And in perturbation wondered whence such sounds could emanate.
I heard footsteps behind me, and swiftly wheeling 'round,
I trumpeted and flapped my ears, prepared to stand my ground,
'Dee-lighted!' cried a loud voice. 'This yarn will be a bird.
I dee-clare that it is worth it—fully worth a plunk a word.'

"Of his face I saw but little but a pair of glasses thick
And a great display of ivory that made my own look sick.
In rage I charged me toward him. He swiftly raised his gun.
I met a storm of bullets, and knew my race was run."
The feeble breaths grew weaker in the dying elephant.
His loyal friend drew nearer to hear what he might pant.
And, as he listened closely, these final words he heard:
"Tell them few obituaries bring a plunk a word."

Hot Water Farming.

"Of all farms in the world perhaps the most remarkable is in Alaska on a small branch of the Tanana River, only 126 miles south of the Arctic Circle," said T. R. Mitchell. "It is owned and operated by a man named Karshner.

"A few years ago Karshner was engaged in hunting gold when he came across something which astonished him greatly. It was a little stream of hot water. He traced the stream to a spring, which was likewise hot, and presently it became obvious that a considerable area was underlaid by such springs. Promptly deciding that this was a discovery more valuable than a gold mine, Karshner gave up prospecting, obtained a quantity of vegetable seeds of various kinds and started in to raise garden truck.

"The temperature in that region sometimes falls to 56 degrees below zero, but a natural system of hot-water heating, free of cost, was just the thing for truck gardening near the Arctic Circle, where potatoes have a market value of 25 cents and other vegetables bring prices in proportion.

"The Karshner farm occupies a flat area with a convenient slant toward the south. Hot water, oozing out of the ground, forms three small streams which empty into the near-by river. The warm spring extends over a distance of about a mile, and as the owner says, the heat must be felt to be believed. He goes on to say that the place has a climate of its own, for often there is no frost when it is freezing everywhere else.

"This hot-water farmer has seventy hens and six pigs. He claims that his crop of potatoes this year will average over 300 bushels to the acre. Tobacco grows finely and tomatoes are a success. Squashes of various kinds are grown, some of them weighing as much as fifty pounds. Not content with that, Karshner gets $1 apiece for his muskmelons."—[Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Visitor's Notes on the Inauguration Ball.

The ball was not a ball; it was a sort of promenade concert; and the big band certainly did play to beat itself. The people were interesting. More women in the thirties wear eyeglasses than formerly. Very few know how to do their hair becomingly. All dress most decorously. Two inches off the top of a waist constitutes a low-necked gown and open-work stockings are rare; but perhaps that was because it was so cold. The number of red-headed women was disappointingly small. Most of the girls looked as if they had come from normal schools. The wholesomeness of their appearance afforded partial recompense for the awfulness of their voices. Manners were generally pretty bad even among those in high places, who kept getting in front of the President. Mr. Hitchcock is a good dancer. He will probably get married during his term.—[Harper's Weekly.

Her Whole Existence.

A STORY OF LIFE BEHIND THE PAINTED SCENES.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Young Woman reporter of the Morning Star entered the Casino Theater hurriedly as the curtain fell on the second act. The boxes were filled with well-dressed people, and the orchestra seats as well as the balcony and gallery were, to quote from the notes which she rapidly scribbled, "literally packed." The music of the orchestra which crashed gaily out had an enlivening swing and harmony. The play, which was advertised as a Drury Lane success, was a story of English society life. The search for a gold mine in South Africa and a diluted love story were calculated to hold the interest until the middle of the fourth act when an exciting sham battle was promised.

As the curtain was rung up on the third act, the reporter leaned forward with pleased expectancy. The scene was a garden fête given by a lady of the British peerage. The setting, with its painted imitation of lawns, foliage and flowers, was pleasing, but the actors seemed stiff and unnatural. Their inane speeches might, perhaps, be not unlike those made in the station of life represented, but the artificial has little charm for the multitude, whether the actors be on the stage or off. The reporter yawned. Surely a play should come to its climax in the third act. Suddenly a drop curtain was run down and the chief actors of the company came out of the wings two at a time and delivered their lines in the full glare of the footlights.

An actor whom the reporter had observed before, but who had been in the background until now, interpreted his part in such a way that the audience, who had been listening with polite indifference, suddenly broke forth with warm applause. He was slightly below medium height, but of well-proportioned figure, with a polished ease of gesture and deportment. His almond-shaped eyes, which appeared dark in his mask of grease paint, had a singular beauty and power of expression. His heavily-arched brows and rich, well-modulated voice were used with the skill of a trained artist. But withal there was about him that magnetism of personality which is so potent, yet so hard to analyze.

The Young Woman glanced at her programme. The actor's name was Josef Schuyler, a German, evidently, by his name, yet he was impersonating an English nobleman to the life. His take-offs on the characteristic expressions of our beef-eating cousins, such as, "Bah Jove!" "doncherknow," "beastly," and "old chap" and the earnestness with which he frequently expressed his need of a brandy and soda were greeted by howls of delight from the gallery, as well as generous applause from the boxes. A few of the appreciative saw in the actor's impersonation not only clever mimicry, but that subtle art of producing on the stage the same glamour that surrounds a character in a book. He had a trick of voice and gesture that recalled half-forgotten memories of the beaus of a former generation described by Thackeray. The reporter bit her pencil meditatively and set down the stock phrase, "histrionic ability."

During the fourth act, in which the long-deferred climax was reached, the Young Woman sat forgetting that she was a critic, and became a spectator like those around her. She passed by the stalwart good looks of the leading man and the acceptable acting of the leading woman, who was making the best of a stupid role. It was Schuyler, rated by the critics only as a clever character actor, who seemed the real star of the performance.

The curtain fell and the reporter struggled through the crowd out into the foyer. She had a mass of scribbled notes and her head full of new ideas. Her criticism, which appeared the following morning, pleased the managing editor, and she was thereafter given assignments to report the Casino plays. Her partiality for Schuyler's acting increased, and her wonder grew that an actor who was capable of interpreting Shaw and Ibsen should take small parts in Broadhurst farces and similar productions, which theatrical managers feel it is necessary to include in their repertoire in order to cater to the public taste and swell the box receipts.

Schuyler's acting showed that the stock actor as well as the artist who creates his roles has a mission. Moreover, it is not always to the occupants of the boxes, who yawn languidly behind their fans and draw invidious comparisons between local talent and that of New York and Paris, that "the play's the thing;" but to the employés of department stores, factories and laundries, and even to the delivery boys and girls in domestic service. To these, actors like Schuyler are a godsend dropped into gray lives of drudgery. The materialist may ridicule, but the fact still remains that the actor in "his little time upon the stage" may influence at will the manners and morals of his hearers. To animate a character he may give his heart's blood, but is not his reward a sweet maddening burst of applause that, for the moment, lifts him to Olympus?

Not being the leading man, Schuyler was usually cast as the rejected lover of the leading woman; yet his manner of receiving his dismissal had so much of courtliness and chivalry that he usually bore equal honors with his rival.

The leading woman's name was Margaret Aylesworth, but she was known as "Peggy," after the immortal Woffington, to her intimate friends. She had played for four years with the Casino stock company. The manager seemed to use the same plan in selecting a leading woman that Goldsmith advised in choosing a wife; not for a showy exterior, but "for such qualities as would wear well." She was a woman between 35 and 40 and of a blond type that fades quickly. She had, however, an attractive face, a well-rounded, petite figure and a gift for making up to appear one-half her age. A marriage that she had made early in life had turned out unhappily, and she was divorced from her husband. Miss Aylesworth supported her two children by her profession. She was ambitious and worked very hard. Her talent lay in the direction of musical comedy, but by sheer hard work she had developed an ability to perform in heavier roles. Her success in serious drama, however, had not been great. The critics had a discouraging way of reminding her that she was better suited to ingenue and soubrette roles, and her ambitious attempts in problem plays of Daudet and Suderman were received with faint praise.

Josef Schuyler had been with the Casino company for the same length of time as Miss Aylesworth, and had proposed to her nearly as many times off the stage as he had before the footlights. She had refused his suit steadfastly, having at least half a dozen reasons, any of which she considered sufficient for not accepting him. Schuyler, apparently, did not accept an ultimatum. They were of necessity often in each other's company. Not being able to leave for professional reasons, Schuyler seemed to have signed away his affections every time he made a contract with the Casino for another year.

About the time the Young Woman reporter began writing dramatic notes on the Casino plays, a Dutch supper was given by the wife of one of the popular stock actors of the city. A large contingent from the Casino company attended. The affair was thoroughly Bohemian, taking place in the "wee sma' hours" after the actors had left the playhouses.

A large, round table filled the center of the small but handsomely-appointed dining-room. A keg of choice German brew flanked by quaintly-fashioned steins held the place of honor on the board. The affair was informal, and the jollity of the occasion infectious. The menus were printed in German script and looked delightfully unpronounceable and indigestible. Two little waiting maids in Dutch costume, golden pigtails down their backs, white caps and wooden shoes complete, served typical German dishes. While the sauerkraut, sausages, marinated herrings, hot frankfurters and pumpernickel went the rounds, entertaining stories and resounding toasts filled the house with a Babel of conversation and laughter.

Miss Aylesworth was in a merry mood, and consequently appearing at her best. Her smile in private life was quite as charming as on the stage. Roguish, elusive, wistful, as the case might be, she was always adorably feminine. The magic of it made one forget that the delicate skin was becoming faded and the weary lines about the mouth and eyes that all the arts of the massage parlor could not quite erase. Schuyler was seated some distance from her on the opposite side of the table. He seemed preoccupied, although he had a ready smile and answer for any sally that came in his direction. His reflective mood was so evident that his companions rallied him, asking if his new role (which consisted of half a dozen lines in two acts) was giving him "sleepless meals." He replied lightly enough that instead of giving him insomnia that it had the contrary effect so that he often went to sleep on the stage.

Schuyler was about to join a merry group about the piano, when he saw Miss Aylesworth withdraw to the den across the reception hall. She was dressed in a white gown of lacy, clinging stuff. The rosy glow from the shaded electrolier enveloped her for a moment, so that, unconsciously, she appeared as if posed for a stage picture. She was leaning back on a pillowed couch as he entered and turned with a movement of surprise to find him beside her.

"Well?" she said inquiringly.

"You know, Margaret," he replied quietly: "I am tired of waiting." He picked up her silken scarf which had fallen to the floor and placed it about her shoulders with a lover-like air of possession.

"We have lived a long time in the land of make-believe, Peggy," he pleaded softly. "Let us be real people for once. I need you, dear. When am I to have my answer?"

Margaret hesitated, fearing that he would note her quickly-drawn breath and trembling fingers. On the stage she had sometimes thrilled at the fervor of his mock passion. It was incalculably harder to resist him now when the beautiful flexibility of his voice was broken by sincerity and his words halted with real feeling, far different from the practiced ease of "stage business." She looked steadily away from his almond eyes, knowing their conquering power.

"You remember my six reasons, Mein Herr," she replied lightly, addressing him in German, as she often did. Schuyler protested that he had forgotten them. She raised her small, shapely hands with their gleaming rings and marked off each reason on her fingers as she spoke.

"I am five years older than you," she said with a pretty air of firmness. "A woman ages faster than a man. She should choose a husband older than herself."

He shook his head smiling and unconvinced. "You are an actress, Peg. Art is the true fountain of youth. One never thinks of the age of your namesake or the divine Sarah."

"Flatterer," she smiled in return, a sad little air of comprehension underlying the archness of her look.

Uncertain whether her attitude was one of disapproval or dissembled tenderness, he waited for her next reason.

"I have been the wife of an actor once before," she went on presently with downcast eyes, "and was unhappy. Our profession prevented our having a home life. We drifted apart."

He turned with the quickness of inspiration. "Yes, the home life. It is the true life for a woman. Could you not try it with me, Peg?"

"We-e-ll," she replied, doubt and pensiveness in her tone, "I'm afraid I couldn't give up the stage for keeps. The flesh pots of Egypt, you know. And as for keeping up the home life and one's career too—well, you know what happened to poor Alice."

He nodded gravely as he looked into her eyes grown suddenly somber. She referred to a young actress of brilliant promise, who had recently died under the strain of playing a difficult role night after night and caring for her six-month-old babe.

They were both silent for a minute. The gaiety of the company across the reception hall was becoming boisterous. Peals of laughter and a confusion of voices mingled with the triumphant, stirring melody of the stein song. He bent his head closer to hers in order to make himself heard above the uproar.

"The life of a stock actress is too hard for you," he urged, a caressing inflection in his voice. "When we are married you need only accept such roles as are suited to your talent."

"You think like the critics, then," replied the lady with a pout—"that I am only suited to some of the roles I play?"

He did not reply directly, but gazed amusedly into her eyes. "I like your smiles better than your tears," he said fondly. "Why should a charming little woman called the 'Peerless Soubrette' pine to don the buskin?"

"The serious drama means fame," she said, looking absently at the Persian rug at her feet.

The music master was leading the company in a farewell song. It was the exquisite refrain from "Old Heidelberg." There was a sound of clinking glasses as the whole company pledged in the words—"But first let us drink one toast with the brimming stein."

"Well, dear," remarked Schuyler, smiling as one who is indulging a child, "how many reasons have you given me?"

"Four," she replied briefly, transferring her hold from her index finger to her thumb. "My children are still another objection. I could not expect you to support and educate them."

"We could plan and do that together as I have told you a hundred times," he answered, smiling and unmoved. "Besides, they are growing up, and will leave you some day."

She reached up and took a stein down from the ledge above her head and began to study its fanciful design.

"Well," he said confidently, "have I not answered your reasons?"

"There is one more, Josef," she said.

"What is it?" he asked. But she was intently deciphering the German inscription, and apparently did not hear him. The joyous refrain of the stein song was in their ears.

"Here's to the land that gave me birth, here's to the flag she flies."

"Margaret," he whispered softly, "I have dreamed that we would one day sail together to the Vaterland and visit my old university town. Why may not the dream come true? What is it that is between us?"

The words of the song seemed to plead for him.

"Here's to a heart that beats for me, true as the stars above,
Here's to the day when mine she'll be, here's to the girl I love."

She put the stein down suddenly and placed her hands in his.

"I have given you five reasons, Josef," she said. "There is really only one. If you could promise me one thing, the other objections I have would be overcome."

"Well," he said eagerly. It was hard to resist him when he looked like that, but she forced herself to say in a hesitating, nervous way: "How can I trust you and sacrifice everything for you when you——"

"When I gamble?" he questioned calmly, without bitterness. Her expression told him that he had read her thoughts aright. The smile faded from his eyes and a weary indifference settled on his features. "It may not be an honorable avocation," he said with a short laugh, "but I came by it honestly. We Schuylers have gambled as far back as we trace our lineage. Do you regard it as so disreputable, Peg? What is life but a game of chance? It is true that I have been a heavy loser, but I have profited in that looking back I have seen the cards I might have played. To please you, dear, I promise to take no more heavy risks. The rental of some property I own will furnish funds to play with. Our joint income need not be touched."

"But you are not willing to give it up," she repeated with hurt insistence. "What better proof could you give me of your love?"

"Margaret, you do not understand," he said irritably. "A man cannot change at will what is bred in the bone. If I were able to forswear it simply by making a resolution, I would have done so long ago. Had I done so I should now be in better shape financially. Perhaps I would be playing Ibsen instead of thread-worn parts in a stock company."

"Then you have not been staying with the company for my sake?" she questioned mockingly. "Ah, you men are deceivers."

"Margaret," he remonstrated, the tenderness coming back to his voice, "don't go. Give a man a chance."

But she was already moving away toward her hostess to make her adieux. They met once more in the midst of the company as every one was leaving. He lifted his hat with an "auf wiedersehen," and soon separate automobiles had whirled them apart.

The following week the dramatic notes of the Star announced that the popular actor Josef Schuyler of the Casino was about to take a month's vacation, during which he would make a trip north and an ocean voyage to Hawaii.

The company was engaged in its usual ceaseless grind of presenting one play, rehearsing another and studying a third.

"I am glad that you are about to take a rest," Miss Aylesworth said to Schuyler one day as they met in the stage entrance. "Your throat will be benefited."

"My audience will also have an opportunity to rest," he said smilingly. He raised his hat as he bade her good-by and passed out into the sunshine of the street. She paused in the dingy greenroom and sank down on a dust-covered seat. For some inexplicable reason she felt that she resented the cordiality of his manner, the firmness of his step, the easy grace of his "good-by."

The days that followed dragged slowly for the actress. A feeling of unrest possessed her. Her usual sunny temperament became depressed and impatient. In her little nest of a dressing-room she kept a row of thirty paper dolls suspended on a string between two of her mirrors. With each passing day she snipped the head of one of these with her scissors. When but seven remained to be executed, she had a feeling of satisfaction.

The manager of the Casino had secured the celebrated play, "The Hypocrites," by Henry Arthur Jones, a success of the Great White Way in New York. The rehearsals were beginning, and Schuyler's reappearance had already been advertised, as he was to take the part of the scapegrace son of the Willmores. Miss Aylesworth was cast for the part of Rachel Neve, the most pathetic part in the play. The part of Mrs. Willmore, alluded to by critics as a heavy role, is really secondary; the pathos and love interest of the play center about the young girl, Rachel Neve. Leonard, the son of the proud, self-seeking Willmores, while away from home, has a love affair with Miss Neve, an innocent and trusting girl. He leaves her and returns home. He soon becomes engaged to a girl of high social position whom his parents have selected for him. Miss Neve, fearing disgrace, follows her lover, hoping to induce him to marry her. Miss Aylesworth put her whole energy into her work, hoping to make a successful interpretation of a difficult part. She tousled her fluffy hair fiercely in an attempt to make the "weepy" and "die-away" scenes seem natural. She had the usual symptoms of stage fright which beset the most experienced of the profession at thought of the first night. When she laughed her audience usually "laughed with her," but she feared to "weep alone." She slept with her lines under her pillow, but she did not dream of them.

She dreamed of the far-off music and shaded walks of old Heidelberg; a golden haze of sunlight through a mesh of greenery, the call of mating birds, violets at her feet. It was like the Forest of Arden, and she, another Rosalind with her lover, was "fleeting the time carelessly as they did in the golden world."

It lacked but an hour until time for rehearsal when she awoke. Her heart gave a joyous bound. Schuyler was to be there. After a hurried breakfast she took a downtown car. The West Adams-street mansions, with their shaded, vine-covered beauty, seemed an aftermath of her dream. The radiance of the morning reflected her care-free mood. She wondered what he had been doing since his arrival the night before. Possibly pacing his study absorbing his lines. Occasional chafing-dish suppers had made her familiar with his workroom. The background of leather-bound volumes and dark carved wood was lightened by a few precious bits of marble and bronze. The table was probably littered as usual with MSS. and books of reference. She could picture him pausing in his preoccupied ramble about the room to flick the ashes from his cigar. The memory of the gesture filled her with poignant happiness.

Schuyler was on when she reached the stage. She listened attentively, drinking in the sound of his voice, her eyes lighting up at sight of his profile. Then it was her turn, and she was soon too busy to look at him again, although the knowledge of his presence buoyed her up and enabled her to bring fresh originality to her part. A pleasant nod, as their eyes met in one of the intervals of their work, was the only sign of recognition that passed between them. After the rehearsal, she lingered, hoping that he would come to her. The minutes passed slowly, but he did not seek her. A faint feeling of disappointment forced itself into her consciousness. He must be very busy, she reflected. She resolutely set about planning the details of a new costume for her ever-changing wardrobe, determined that the first advance must be made by him.

A round of shopping and a late luncheon filled in the afternoon and she had no opportunity of resting until the evening. After a refreshing bath, she slipped on a chiffon negligée and lay down in her prettily-furnished boudoir for a period of relaxation before going to the theater. The daily papers were lying undisturbed on her dressing table. She reached for one, and from force of habit turned to the theatrical and society news. The first item that caught her attention contained the name of Josef Schuyler. It read as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. Josef Schuyler were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. X—— at Martini's Thursday evening. Mrs. Schuyler, who was Miss Lovell, a popular society girl of San Francisco, became Mr. Schuyler's bride during his recent trip to Hawaii. Mr. Schuyler appeared a happy and smiling Romeo."

The actress gasped, clutching the paper tightly as she reread the paragraph. Her throat was dry, her pulses pounding loudly in her ears. Even when she sank back, she did not release her vise-like hold of the printed sheet. There was an interval when breathless sobs shook her body and her whole being cried out for revenge. Then the paroxysm passed, leaving her numb with helpless suffering. The maid found her thus when she came to assist her mistress in preparing to go out. Margaret pleaded a headache, and soon, in the sympathetic and skillful hands of the servant, was restored to a semblance of her natural self. Her woman's pride and the art of the actress aided her in going through her part at the theater as usual. She came home late and thoroughly exhausted. She wondered dully how long it would take her to tear him out of her heart, out of her life. No more dreams of sunlit glades and castles of enchantment. Fragments of the world-old tragedies penned by Shakespeare haunted her through a sleepless night. The weary cynicism of Macbeth as he exclaims: "Life's a poor player," the melancholy philosophy of Hamlet with his secret sorrow like "a worm i' the bud;" the whole gamut of emotions, that she had never quite succeeded in expressing by her art, seemed possible to her now.

The following day the rehearsal of "The Hypocrites" lasted until early in the morning. She studiously avoided Schuyler, and did not see him again until the asbestos curtain fell for the first night performance. She was in the wings at the beginning of the first act, waiting for her cue, when he made his entrance. The house greeted his appearance with a storm of hand-clapping that began in the orchestra stalls and swelled in volumes as it spread upward to the galleries. It was at once a welcome home and a congratulation. His smiling, debonair ease fled as he stepped forward visibly embarrassed, and made a bow of acknowledgment.

Miss Aylesworth's understudy passed her behind the scenes.

"How splendidly you are made up!" she exclaimed.

Miss Aylesworth was clad in a plain tailor-made suit and a simple hat and veil. Her face was drawn and white with dark shadows under the eyes. She smiled involuntarily at the girl's words. She had not touched her make-up boxes, except to conceal the lines in her face lest she should appear too haggard. She heard the words that were her cue, and made her entrance. From the first, she felt the sympathy of her audience with her. The character she was playing seemed identical with herself; she made no conscious effort. When Schuyler, in his role of young Willmore, denied her, referring to their past relations as friendship, all the bitterness of a woman's dishonored love rang in her voice as she repeated the word "friendship!" Fear and loneliness at the thought of separation, absolute self-effacement for the sake of love, joy at the final reconciliation with the man of her choice—the deepest secrets of a woman's soul swept over the face of the actress in swift succession.

She realized in a sub-conscious way that she was swaying her audience, but the sympathetic murmur and prolonged applause seemed to come from a great distance. The true purpose of Art was clear to her now. It is an expression of Life—not an end in itself. To master an art, one must live, and to live, in the true sense of the word, one must love.

Schuyler's face was under perfect control, as an actor's should be, yet she understood that he suffered after a fashion also. It is not possible to entirely outgrow in four weeks an attachment that has lasted for as many years. But for a man, life holds many other things besides love. The mechanism of his existence runs smoothly on without it. The sudden breaking-off of an affair of the heart is not in his case, as that of a woman, like the snapping of a mainspring.

The stories of Psyche, Ariadne and Sappho, the heroines of deserted loves of the dim past, are read and reread, and never fail to touch the heart and imagination of the reader. Perhaps the true pathos of their situation was not that they failed to hold the fancy of an erring, faithless lover, but that in missing love, they failed to fulfill the purpose of their existence.

The criticism of "The Hypocrites" that appeared the following morning was judicious. The audiences west of the Rockies were not educated to the point where they could fully appreciate the sex-problem play. The praise of Miss Aylesworth, however, was unstinted. "Her thorough conception and sympathetic interpretation of her role assured the success of the play and removed any doubt as to her ability in the serious drama." Her versatility," concluded the critic, "places her in the ranks of the foremost stock actresses of America."

MARCH IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

An awakening to life; a mounting temperature; a swift stirring of winter's wings for flight.

A brilliant atmosphere; fragrant grass and clover and wild portulaca mingled with alfileria; distant hills yellowing with flowery gold; tracts of poppies like flames in the wind.

Gardens blue with violets; dwellings draped with roses; orange trees heavy with fruit, yet springing with tender green shoots and waxy buds and blossoms.

Bees well into the "busy season;" the air palpitating with melody from whole orchestras of birds, conspicuous among them,

In the almond tree, strung with blossoms white,
Like damp snow lodged there over night,
The mocking-bird folds his sober wings
While with his full, rich voice he sings:
"I've come! I've come! your hearts to cheer
With my happy 'Look here! Look here! Look here!' "
The rain has ceased; the wind awakes;
Rudely his fragrant shelter shakes;
But the bird sings on without a fear.
He sings of hope, he sings of cheer:
"Don't be sad! The sky is clear;
Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up!
I—I am happy! Look here! Look here!' "

Year of the Cock.

In China and Japan the year 1909 is "the year of the cock." It is regarded as a lucky year and is symbolized by a cock sitting on a drum. In statesmanship and literature this is called "the drum of remonstrance." Formerly such a drum was to be found in China in front of the imperial palace, to be struck by an official in charge whenever a letter of remonstrance was offered to the sovereign. This practice is said to have originated with Emperor Yao, a benevolent ruler who reigned from 2357 to 2285 B. C. His reign and that of Emperor Shun, who succeeded him, constitute a "golden age" of China.

It is believed by the Japanese that the cock has five virtues. His comb represents civilization and his strong feet denote military power. When he meets an enemy he fights well, thus demonstrating courage. When he finds food he calls friends, thereby showing himself kind and helpful. He keeps watch for the dawn, thus proving himself faithful.—[Chicago Daily News.

Her Cat and His Dog.

A LITTLE ROMANCE OF LIFE IN THE STUDIOS.

By a Special Contributor.

IT all began with her cat and his dog.

Her cat, Princess, wandered down from her studio home on the third floor, and tried to pass the apparently sleeping Colonel, lying at the door of his master's studio on the second floor. But the Colonel was never asleep where cats were concerned, and the surprised little visitor was promptly chased up the stairs to the third floor, and most emphatically told to remain there in her own region.

The Princess's mistress rushed to her door, gathered up her treasure, who was by this time all flashing eyes, arched back, and monstrous tail, and indignantly scolded and drove off the invading Colonel. Then she turned about and looked straight into the amused eyes of the Colonel's master at the foot of the stairs. That look of amusement was really too much to bear; she turned angrily away, walked haughtily into her own studio, and closed the door.

That was only the beginning. After that there were many stormy chapters in the affair, and at last one day the Colonel actually ascended to the third floor to pick a quarrel with the Princess.

Now it happened that Miss Whitney was blessed with the artistic temperament, and that it was very much aroused just then because of an accident to one of her favorite studies. The sounds of strife reached her—she recognized the Colonel at her open door—and with a wild desire for vengeance, she snatched up a pitcher of water and sprang after the the retreating enemy. At the head of the steps she hurled the water at the descending Colonel, and it fell—full in the face of the ascending Mr. Paul! She laughed in her surprise, and that aroused his artistic temperament. He strode angrily down the stairs and (I am sorry to have to tell it—but he really did!)—he banged his studio door!

Of course, after that, they passed in the halls and on the stairs with the utmost indifference. They had never been introduced, but each knew the other by reputation as an artist. They had secretly hoped to run across some friend who knew them both, but after that incident on the stairs, each determined to avoid the remotest possibility of such an introduction.

And so when she gave her studio tea, he locked his door and moved quietly about in his rooms, so that no artist friends would discover him on their way to the third floor, and inquire why he was not going to the tea. He tried to paint, but his thoughts continually wandered to the praise he had heard of her pictures, and he finally gave it up and sat and smoked in gloomy silence.

The next week he held a reception in his studio. Then she locked her door to keep out inquisitive artist friends, and tried to paint. But the hum of conversation on the floor below distracted her—she tried to picture the interior of the studio to herself—and at last she gave up her work in despair.

Soon after this he was persuaded to join the Art Circle, a club formed for the purpose of helpful criticism, and for the cultivation of the social life among the artist colony. He paid his dues regularly and attended—whenever he didn't forget the meetings.

Then she was persuaded to join the Art Circle. She, too, paid her dues regularly, but after she heard that he was a member, she attended not at all.

At the meeting in June, however, she astonished her friends by appearing at the Circle. She had heard in a round-about way that her artist enemy in the second-floor studio had left the day before on his vacation journey, and she felt perfectly safe in attending the meeting. Imagine her great surprise then, when her friend Miss Foster came to her and begged to present the rising young artist, Mr. Paul. Escape was impossible. Both bowed distantly, and then as the business meeting was about to begin, they sat down with Miss Foster, near where they had been standing.

After a little, the chairman of the committee on examining and judging the studies entered for that quarter, arose and announced that there had been many excellent bits of work submitted. He remarked that apparently the subject chosen for that quarter—pet animals—was a favorite one. Then he went on to say that the committee had been unable to decide between two studies that had been entered—one by Mr. Paul, and one by Miss Whitney—and that, therefore, the honors would be divided between them. He then held the pictures up a moment, and all saw that Miss Whitney's picture was of a dog, and that Mr. Paul's was of a cat. That was all that the others saw—but as for the painters of these two pictures—well, they sat toward the front, the light was good, and they saw a great deal more. She recognized that he had painted her Princess!—he, that she had painted his Colonel!

Both turned in amazement, their eyes met, and they laughed like the sensible people they were when their artistic temperaments were not aroused. They were soon absorbed in explanations, while their friends flocked forward to admire the pictures.

He confessed that he tried to please the women members of the committee, whom he naturally supposed were more fond of cats than dogs, and had lured her Princess into his studio as a model, and she acknowledged that she had been afraid that the men members of the committee would be prejudiced against cats, and so she had taken advantage of his absence one day to make friends with his Colonel.

It began, as I said before, with her cat and his dog, and it ended, as I am sure you suspect, with his dog and her cat—both living in harmony in a cosy little bungalow in the artists' colony.

The Butler's April Fool.

CHARLES FROHMAN, in the smoke room of the Lusitania, told an April Fool story.

"A Fifth-avenue millionaire," he said, "had a butler of humorous bent. The butler was English. He had worked seven years in a duke's household. Therefore his word was law on questions of etiquette.

"To oblige his friends the millionaire would let them send their own young butlers to his palace to serve a day or two under the English veteran. The youngsters learned a lot in this way. The Englishman was made a regular free school of. But he didn't mind.

"It happened, one spring day, that the millionaire was giving a dinner to a German prince. A friend's butler, as usual, was helping the veterans to get the table and wines ready and at the same time was taking a lesson in butlership.

"'Since this here man's a prince, Mr. Potts, is there anything special in the way we are to serve him?' the pupil inquired.

"The humorous butler, Potts, remembering that it chanced to be the first of April, said calmly:

"'There's only one specialty, and I'll leave that to you, my boy. When His Highness sets down, you must take up his napkin, unfold it, and knot it round his neck, continental fashion.'

"'Hadn't you better do it, Mr. Potts?' said the youth, timidly.

"'No, no; it ain't my place,' was the reply.

"Potts forgot all about his joke in the press of work that followed. Therefore his surprise and horror almost equaled his master's when, the guests having seated themselves that evening at the magnificently laid table, the young butler leaned over the prince, took his napkin, shook it out with a nervous flourish, and then knotted it like a bib about the dumbfounded potentate's neck."

The Embarrassing Truth.

"THE vindication of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley is a great triumph," said a Washington diplomat, "for pure food. Dr. Wiley tells the truth, and the truth is painful to certain types of food producers." The diplomat laughed. "Dr. Wiley was talking the other day about the painfulness of the truth," he resumed. "He said it reminded him of a morning call that he once made on a young lady in his youth.

"In answer to his ring, a tiny tot of a girl opened the door, and Dr. Wiley said to her, as he walked into the hall:

"'Where is your auntie, Mabel?'

"'Upstairs in her nightie,' chirped the tot, 'a-lookin' over the balustrade.'"

On Laziness.

DR. CHARLES A. EATON, of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, said in the course of a brilliant after-dinner speech in Cleveland:

"Laziness is responsible for too much of the misery we see about us. It is all very well to blame alcohol for this misery, to blame oppression and injustice; but to what heights might we not all have climbed but for our laziness?

"We are too much like the supernumerary in the drama," he went on, "who had to enter from the right and say, 'My Lord, the carriage waits.'

"'Look here, super,' said the stage manager one night. 'I want you to come on from the left instead of the right after this, and I want you to transpose your speech. Make it run hereafter: 'The carriage waits, my lord.'

"The super pressed his hand to his brow.

"'More study! More study!' he groaned."

A Great Attraction.

CLARENCE URMY, the poet of San José, was praising California wine.

"A New Yorker visited me the other day," said Mr. Urmy, "and I opened a bottle of our native champagne. The man was delighted.

"'Why, if they had this stuff in the East,' he said, [illegible] his glass to the light, 'they'd run excursions [illegible]

The Unhonored Prophet.

A CORRESPONDENT was talking about Wilbur and Orville Wright. "It was the usual case," he said, "of the prophet without honor in his own country. The Wrights had to go abroad to be appreciated.

"Don't think they didn't feel their country's indifference to them. They felt it deeply. On the head of it, Wilbur Wright told me something about Carlyle.

"'A visitor to Carlyle's birthplace, back in the '70s, said to a native:

"'Smart man, that Thomas Carlyle!'

"The native grunted.

"'Him smart? Why, I went to skule wi' him.'"

Lady Paget on Tips.

LADY ARTHUR PAGET, at the magnificent dinner given in her honor by Frederick Townsend Martin at the Plaza, talked of American extravagance. On the subject of tipping she said:

"Tips here are thrice as big as they are in England or France, and five times as big as they are in Italy. And you tip people that abroad we never think of tipping. You tip, in fact, every one in sight. If not——"

She smiled and resumed:

"A man's wife said to him: 'What about this yard-long golden hair on your dress coat?'

"'It must have come from the porter at the banquet hall last night, my dear.'

"'Ridiculous! The porter wouldn't put a long golden hair on you!'

"'Ah, but he would, though. You see, I forgot to tip him for calling me a taxicab.'"

The Spaniel of Devil's Lake.

SENATOR H. C. HANSBOROUGH was talking, at a dinner in Washington, about his splendid old-age pensions bill.

"We need, you know," he said, "a bill to encourage us to save. We are not all as good at saving as Hank Shuster's spaniel was.

"Hank Shuster lives at Devil's Lake. He used to give his dog a cent a day to buy a roll with, and the sagacious animal would walk to the eating-house on the corner and make his purchase like a human being.

"But one morning Hank gave the dog a nickel, and for this sum the waiter at the eating-house handed forth a sausage sandwich.

"'Would you believe it? From that day on, the dog always saved his coppers till he had accumulated five, and then went to the eating-house and bought a sandwich stuffed with sausage."

The Wicked Student.

HENRY E. DIXEY was discussing his new book—the collection of love letters written him by unknown ladies during his brilliant stage career.

"They won't compromise you, eh?" said a tragedian.

"No, no," said Mr. Dixey. "They'll compromise nobody. They won't be like the talk on Brittany that I had with a young artist yesterday.

"The young chap enthused about the Pont Aven girls. He said that these girls were as beautiful as flowers. He praised their dress—their velvet-trimmed skirts and bodices, their coquettish and dainty coifs of white linen and their enormous white linen sailor collars that completely cover their shoulders.

"'You'd think that these lovely girls never had any sweethearts,' said the student. 'Sweethearts imply, you know, tumbled curls and ruffled collars. But the collars of the Pont Aven girls are always immaculate.

"Maybe they don't have any sweethearts,' said I. 'The Bretons are a strange race.'

"'Rubbish,' said the student, with a smile. 'The girls have a way of slipping their hands under their collars and turning them up like a white wall about their ears. The custom has been handed down for centuries from mother to daughter. The shyest maid of 16 can flip up her collar with the dexterity of a married woman.'

"'How do you know this?' said I.

"'Oh,' stammered the student, 'I—I was—was told.'"

A Lesson in Banking.

THE Japanese, as everybody knows, used to despise business. They held that business meant selling something for more than it was worth—that profit meant the amount whereby the buyer had been deceived.

"We look on business more favorably now in Japan," said Jokichi Iwaya, the Japanese consul to Portland, at a recent dinner. "We now tell with scorn the money-counting story that in the past we told with approbation.

"According to this story, a banker of Yokohama took in a packet of bank-notes in the presence of his son, who desired to learn the banking business. The man counted the notes in the usual way. They lay on the counter before him, and he lifted them up, one by one, with moistened forefinger, murmuring: 'One, two, three,' and so on.

"But on reaching the last note, the banker stopped. He didn't lift it up. Instead he tapped it with his finger, and whispered to his son:

"'You must never lift the last one. Don't you see? It is just possible that there might be another underneath.'"

Queer Gardening.

SECRETARY WILSON of the Department of Agriculture said the other day of a certain farmer:

"He is now profiting by the department's advice, but he was very stupid at the beginning. He farmed as a Philadelphia lady, one spring season, planted her garden.

"The lady's husband came home and found her poring over a seed catalogue. She had a long list of seeds written on a sheet of paper.

"'This is a list, my dear,' she said, 'that I want you to buy for me tomorrow at the seed man's.'

"Her husband looked at the list. Then he laughed loud and long.

"'You want these flowers to bloom this summer, don't you?' said he.

"'Yes, of course.'

"'Well, those you ha[illegible] down here don't bloom till the second summer.'

"'Oh, that's all right,' the lady said easily.

"'All right? How is it all right?'

"'I am making up my list,' she explained, 'from a last year's catalogue.'"

An Inflated Figure.

ADDISON MIZNER, the well-known bon vivant of New York, was discussing his reported contract with a vaudeville agency for a series of Parisian dances at $3000 a week.

"That report," he said, "is inflated. In its inflation of the salary and in its inflation of my knowledge of the dances of the East, the report reminds me of a theatrical criticism I once wrote.

"In this criticism of musical comedy I desired to flatter a beautiful dancing girl. The girl's figure was superb. In my article I praised it ardently. But the exigencies of space compelled the excision of most of the praise, and only one sentence, containing a horrible typographical error was left. This unfortunate sentence ran:

"'Kathleen Vavasour, who dances in the second act, possesses a form that Jumbo might have envied.'"

Mr. Barrie's Apology.

J. M. BARRIE lives in London, in a small, quaint house in Lancaster Gate. Just across the Bayswater Road is Kensington Garden. There in the Kensington Broadwalk the playwright takes his morning stroll among the flowers and the flower-like children.

One morning in the Broadwalk an American lady twitted Mr. Barrie upon the thrifty way he uses jokes and episodes over and over again, exploding in "What Every Woman Knows," for instance, the same witticism that has already figured in "The Admirable Crichton," in "My Lady Nicotine," and in "Sentimental Tommy."

Mr. Barrie said with a laugh that his nationality was to blame.

"I am a Scot," he said, "and we Scots abhor waste. Did you never hear of the aged Saunders Carlyle, who always drank off his whisky to the last drop the very instant it was poured out for him?

"'Why do you drink down your liquor in that quick, greedy way?' a stranger said to Saunders in a reproachful tone.

"'I once had one knocked over,' the old man explained."

The Disappointed Humorists.

THE Cleveland man who hadn't put on skates for twenty-five years was dared to put 'em on again.

He shook his head.

"You want to make a cage of monkeys of me," he chuckled.

But they persisted, and finally he yielded. He is a stout man, and pretty heavy on his feet. One of his friends said it was a shame to make a guy of him. He might get hurt.

But the desire for fun was strong in their hearts, and so they finally got him on the ice. He found the new style of skates a little queer, and he looked at them with some doubt. But he managed to get them fastened, and then with some degree of uncertainty rose to his feet and stood there with one arm tenderly embracing the neck of a helpful friend. And all the other friends stood back ready to whoop with delight when the antics began.

The friend finally managed to cast him loose, and off he went with his hands pawing the air. But he didn't go down. On the contrary, he swung about and described a perfect circle and did the outer edge and the inner edge and wrote his initials, and when a pretty girl came by, he caught her hand and went swaying about the course as graceful as a flying Mercury.

When he drew up in front of that little group of sightseers he said with a grateful smile: "I'll get the hang of it a little better in a turn or two."

But his friends looked at him sadly and said nothing.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CALIFORNIA GARDENS.

REMARKABLE OPPORTUNITIES TO MAKE THEM BEAUTIFUL.

By Ernest Braunton.

IN CALIFORNIA in general and in the southern part in particular we should have the finest gardens on the globe outside of purely tropical countries. Every country contributes largely to California's gardens, and we may choose from hundreds of plants for each one we buy for a certain spot in our garden. We are in no way circumscribed so far as numbers and variety are concerned, for nowhere do garden owners have so long a list to choose from.

So, too, should our garden plants be characteristic. We should not particularly strive for the hardy plants common to every State in the Union, but strive to fill both parks and gardens with vegetation not possible out of doors except in our favored clime. With no blighting frosts to mar and no enshrouding snow to bury our floral beauties, we should have an almost tropical luxuriance at all seasons and at all times. Dignified palms, graceful bamboos and luxuriant bananas should rise through masses of cannas, callas, caladiums or colocasias and lesser plants of tropical nativity until we should have reproduced, as nearly as possible, the jungles of the tropics in a country devoid of the unpleasant heat and many other drawbacks to be found in hot, saturated atmospheres nearer the equator. Build characteristic California gardens and live up to our greatest possibilities.

CYATHEA DEALBATA.

Tree Ferns.

Our climate is too dry for the successful growth of tree ferns unless we give them the coolest and shadiest situations. Among the many we grow, Dicksonia is the hardiest, but is not so popular as the more graceful and larger Alsophila. No more beautiful tree fern is to be found than the Cyathea, but it needs a very humid, cool atmosphere, and we cannot provide the proper conditions in Southern California. We have a few good specimens of Alsophila, but even these are seldom very luxuriant in foliage.

The Matilija Poppy.

Plants, like prophets, are often without honor in their own country, and for many years this truth would fit the case of our Matilija poppy. Every country in the world bought and propagated this remarkable plant until in some countries, notably England, it became at least ten times as common as in California, its native State. During the past few years it has been growing in popularity until at present there is a stronger demand for it than at any other time since its discovery. Its common name comes from a cañon where it grows in large numbers, though it was first found many miles from Matilija Cañon.

Bermuda Grass.

To a Southern Californian, who has come to regard Bermuda grass as a pest, it seems strange to read that it is the best material for lawns in tropical countries. In the November issue of the Philippine Agricultural Review, published by the government, it states that Bermuda grass has been found the best material for park and garden lawns. The roots and stems are chopped up and sown, watered for two weeks, and a fine lawn results. Moving once a month is advised until a fine close sod is obtained. We have many Bermuda-grass lawns in this city, but strange to say, they are not prized by the possessors.

Building Sites.

Southern California is rapidly becoming noted for her fine country homes that, studding the landscape more thickly each year and with increasing numbers, comes an added appreciation of suitable building sites. More attention should be paid to this most important point, for no skill of the landscape designer or gardener can overcome great and serious natural defects, though much may be done to mask objectionable views and lessen all inconsistencies. As a general rule, houses should be placed where they will look best and yet command good views.

Use Ashes in the Garden.

Garden owners should bear in mind that wood ashes, particularly hardwood ashes, have a heavy value as fertilizer, and none should be allowed to leave the premises. Not only are they good for working in to garden soil, but are excellent as a lawn dressing. Roses are improved by frequent applications of hardwood ashes, and for carnations there is no better source of potash and lime. Do not allow wood ashes to be hauled away, but have them scattered evenly but thinly all over the garden.

Stir the Soil.

Extensive experiments have proven that soil manipulation is often more effective in producing crops than the application of heavy doses of fertilizers. If a soil is not in proper physical condition, fertilizers are not available to the crops. If fertilizers are thoroughly worked into the soil and to a considerable depth great benefit will accrue. It should be remembered that these statements do not particularly apply to field crops, but to all soils and crops whether corn and wheat or roses and chrysanthemums. Stir the soil.

The Family of Aroids.

The aroids or order Aroideae is represented here by callas, elephant's ears, Jack-in-the-pulpit, monsteras, philodendrons and many other plants both tropical and hardy. The callas comprise several genera and are generally known as white, yellow, pink, green, black, or spotted callas. They are in botany Richardias, Arums, Dracunculus, Amorphophallus, Sauratum, etc. One who has a full collection of aroids has a group of plants nearly as curious as the tribe of cactus.

Four Doses for Plant Lice.

Inquiries will now be coming in regarding aphids or plant lice, and there are many ways to kill them aside from one recommended by a faker for the small sum of a quarter of a dollar. This party agreed to send directions for their destruction for the sum mentioned. The inquirer received the following by mail: "Take two smooth pressed bricks. Place the lice on the lower one and cover with the other and press down firmly. After this treatment, if any remain alive, take them out and smash them with a hammer." There are other and more effective ways of exterminating plant lice, and in a more wholesale manner. Four methods of procedure are here given; all of them have been tried and found satisfactory

1. Dissolve one pound of whale-oil soap (or any good fish-oil soap) in eight gallons of water. Spray the lice thoroughly or dip the parts containing the lice into the liquid. 2. Steep one pound of tobacco stems, or good, clean tobacco dust, in four gallons of water for two hours; allow to cool, and apply as in preceding case. 3. Dissolve one pound of soap in one gallon of boiling water; while boiling hot add two gallons of kerosene (away from fire) and emulsify the whole by pumping it violently, through a spraying nozzle, back into the vessel containing it, for a few minutes. This will make a stock solution sufficient for thirty gallons of spray material. Apply as in No. 1 above. 4. House plants may be dusted freely several times, two or three days apart, with Pyrethrum, commonly sold as Buhach, or insect powder.

The City Beautiful—Its Avenues, Streets, Parks and Lakes.

STREET TREES AN ASSET.

NEXT IN ESTHETIC IMPORTANCE TO HIGH-CLASS ARCHITECTURE.

NEXT to high-class architecture, a city's chief asset should lie in its street trees. While architecture may claim first rank, that city is most beautiful which is possessed of the greatest number of suitable street trees. But a few days ago an eastern woman visiting in Los Angeles was heard to say: "I think Salt Lake City is the most beautiful place west of the Mississippi, it has so many finely-planted streets."

Viewed from the heights on any side, where detail is lost and the composite whole is considered, no place of the size in California is more beautiful than Riverside, "The Forest City," and street trees are its chief asset. Wherever we hear an opinion expressed regarding a beautiful city we may note, if we but listen, that some remark is made about street trees. Every visitor to Europe, commenting on the fine cities, does not leave off enumerating the chief charms until he has spoken of magnificent avenues and boulevards lined with trees; none are mentioned that are not tree-lined. When one considers both the esthetic and economic value of trees, it is hard to realize that we have people who do not like them. There are those who really would rather see bare streets than well-planted ones. To some these persons are objects of pity, but to a majority they but invoke disgust by a presentation of their views.

MAGNOLIA AVENUE, RIVERSIDE.

Our Disappearing Oaks.

One who has been familiar with the country about Los Angeles for a score of years cannot but note, with deep regret, the gradually-lessening numbers of our live oaks. Live-oak stovewood is still to be found in every fuel yard in the city, and doubtless will be for a number of years to come. We have many fine groves of oaks that are worthy of preservation by the State or Federal governments. A small park of them at Monte Vista, in this county, is so remarkable in contrast with the surrounding country that some effort should be made to preserve them for all time. On the Pomeroy-Hooker ranch, near the Los Angeles River, and at the north end of Cahuenga Pass, there are quite a number of remarkable live oaks, at least one of the number measuring over 100 feet in spread of limbs. These should be in a municipal reservation, as they are on lands adjoining Griffith Park.

Automobiles in Parks.

We are on the eve of a complete reconstruction of our public highways, if the automobile has come to stay, and it has come to stay unquestionably. Reports of road destruction are now common from every quarter, and there is no doubt as to the cause. The New York Park Commissioner seriously discussed shutting out automobiles from the use of the park roadways, but this is only begging the question; it must be squarely met sooner or later, and the automobile provided for. The real question to be solved is how shall funds be provided for reconstruction and how assessed, so that the users of the public highway may be fairly taxed.

And there is no surprise either in this very rapid deterioration of our roadways, because while with horse traffic the fast loads are light loads and the heavy loads, slow, with the automobile the heaviest loads travel as fast or faster than the light ones and with the wheel construction made to claw at the road surface, as it were, disintegration is an almost immediate result. Now it is hardly to be conceived that our road authorities and officials will attempt to construct roads to gratify the users of heavy and high-speed motor vehicles entirely; the cost would be prohibitive; so that in all probability a compromise will come about, and roads will be improved to satisfy a reasonable traffic demand both as regards weight and speed of motors. It may mean, however, that main traveled roads must be built for the heaviest traffic permitted by law to pass over them. Under any circumstances the great problem should be approached with a big share of wisdom in the minds of the men called upon to solve it, and the ultimate decision, taking cost into consideration, may be to summarily check the speed enthusiasm of a goodly number of our citizens.

Municipal Art.

Every step taken by any authoritative body to advance the cause of American art should be welcomed. Often such steps mean in their practical application some slight retrogression, as is the case with all poorly-digested laws, but even this has the advantage of spreading information on the subject, and good subsequently results, from a better appreciation of what is needed by the people at large, who finally compel progress. The necessity of art commissions in all our large cities has been long felt, and in many cases the question has been met, with the result of better public monumental art. But the State of Pennsylvania is taking a larger stride, and a bill to create an art jury prescribes that every city of the first class in the commonwealth shall have an art jury, comprising the Mayor, ex-officio, and eight other members, together with the head of any department of the city, the work of which comes within the jurisdiction of said jury. The jury shall comprise a painter, a sculptor, an architect, a member of the park commission and four other persons not practicing the above professions, but members of the governing body or teachers in corporations running under the laws of the State and conducting schools of art or architecture. The members of the jury must serve without compensation, and shall elect its officers and make its own rules, etc. No work of art or location of same shall become the property of the city until the approval of the jury is obtained, and no public money shall be expended for municipal structures without the jury's approval of such structures.

California a Great Park.

During the month of April, our section of the great State of California will be one vast park so far as appearances are concerned. The copious rains of the past winter most thoroughly saturated the soil and caused the germination of every potent seed. The gently-increasing heat of the sun has been warming these infant seedlings into the vigor of full-grown strength until now hill and dale is covered with an endless variety of brilliant flowers. The same natural influence has produced the best growth on our perennials also and no part of our great park is devoid of floral beauty.

Help Save Niagara.

The pernicious activity of the agents of the power companies renders it still necessary to keep alive on the watch in order to insure the perpetuity of the Falls of Niagara to the people. These agents in various parts of the country appear now to be resorting to the ever popular stereopticon lecture in order to try to establish the absurdity of such a proposition as this—half of the water of the Niagara River withdrawn for power purposes one mile, more or less, above the Falls, will not affect the beauty of the Falls themselves. Such arguments are simply lies, which any high-school boy should readily be able to refute without hesitation. Ordinarily speaking, every gallon of water taken from the river above the Falls to that extent injures the Falls. Every reader interested in the magnificent cataracts at Niagara, and we are sure all are, should show practical interest by communicating with his Representatives at Washington, both in the House and Senate, demanding their vote in favor of the preservation by Federal authority of Niagara. It would be a national crime to destroy such a magnificent natural possession, and solely for commercial purposes.

The Billboard Campaign.

It is a happy consequence in all improvement ideas when they assume national proportions, that judicial sentiment rapidly falls into line with the people's judgment. This is specially marked in the bill-board campaign. In its early days when the courts were occasionally appealed to to check the evil, it was a matter of great uncertainty as to from what point of view the judge would render a decision, the esthetic or commercial, and too often the "immortal dollar" won. Things now, however, are greatly changed, and many vigorous decisions are on record giving a legal value to beauty as an asset of the community.

A Village Sold.

The village of Wilkinsonville, in the eastern part of Sutton, Mass., was sold at public auction. The place was once one of the most important manufacturing villages on the Blackstone River, but of late years the business has gradually dwindled. Besides the mills, which when in operation had 341 looms and produced a weekly average of 2000 pieces of print cloth, the estate consisted of nineteen houses and forty-two tenements, a store, hall and boarding-house. The cotton mill has been idle since 1897. The principal part of the property, consisting of the main mill, smaller mills, four houses, twenty-four acres of land and the water rights, was sold for $4925.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

WATER GLASS AND EGGS.

USE OF SODIUM SILICATE FOR THE PRESERVATION OF HEN FRUIT.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

GEORGE L. PICHARD of Douglas, Ariz., writes as follows for information concerning water glass and its uses in the preservation of hen fruit:

"What is water glass, and how can I make it? How is it used? How often can the same material be used after taking the eggs out, and how long will it keep eggs in good condition?"

Water glass is a soluble alkaline silicate (sodium silicate) which is to be had of any druggist at a cost of from $1.50 to $2 per gallon. Of the many methods for preserving eggs, it is rated among the best, especially where the quantity is not overlarge. One gallon will make enough solution to preserve fifty dozen eggs, thus rendering the cost somewhere a trifle over 1 cent per dozen. Boiled water that has been allowed to cool should be used at the rate of one quart of the solution to fifteen to twenty quarts of water. When the solution is prepared, place in a jar or other vessel, when fresh eggs can be added from time to time until the jar is filled, all the time being sure the top layer is immersed at least two inches. When removing the eggs for packing, they should not be washed, as this operation injures their keeping quality by removing the mucilaginous coating. As the liquid is diminished, simply replenish by adding more water glass and water in the proportions already described.

Eggs can also be preserved in lime water, using thirty gallons of pure water, ten pounds of salt and one-half bushel of finely-slaked lime. Mix thoroughly and allow to stand for two or three days, then remove the pure liquid by dipping or a siphon. Place the eggs therein or the lime water may be poured over them when in another vessel, but be sure all are immersed, the top layer fully two inches deep. Limed eggs possess a decided roughness of shell. Before boiling, limed eggs should be punctured with a steel needle, otherwise they are apt to crack, owing to the pores being closed.

Eggs can also be preserved for several months in dry salt. Be sure the top layer is covered at least two inches deep. Packing in bran has also been found satisfactory.

The one method, however, which gives the best results is cold storage. Indeed, it is now the only method followed where the quantities are along commercial lines. As processes by which a low, even temperature is maintained have been vastly improved, the cold-storage business has become an important factor, not only with hen fruit, but with many other products of the orchard and farm. Whenever available its many advantages should be possessed by the poultry breeder, either by coöperation with a number of breeders in a given locality, or else by taking advantage of the cold-storage plants which are now a feature of all towns and cities of any size. So far its uses have been along commercial lines. For preserving eggs in small quantities away from trade centers it is not available, in which cases the methods described may be found useful.

Eggs stored for future use should preferably be from hens without males in their yards; an infertile egg keeps longer in the natural state than one with germ. Obviously they should be perfectly fresh—if a tainted specimen is placed with fresh ones, it is quite apt to contaminate its neighbor. And lastly they should be absolutely clean, for filth is sure to vitiate the preserving material. By cleanliness is here meant hen fruit that is deposited in clean nests by clean hens. Avoid cracked shells; keep in a moderately cool situation, as, for instance, a dry clean cellar.

Touching on this same question, Consul Maxwell Blake of Dunfermline, in the Consular and Trade Report for March, gives the following method of using the water-glass and lime preservative as used in Great Britain and Scotland:

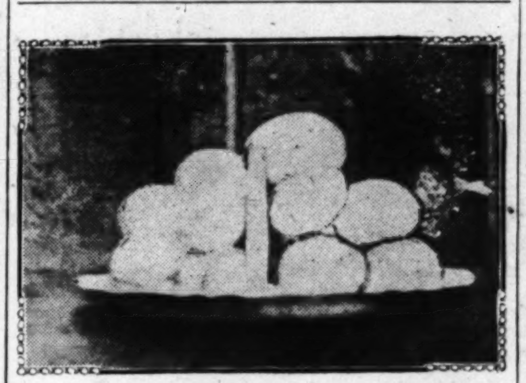
"Mix together in an earthen jar nine parts of boiled water, which has been thoroughly cooled, and one part of glass water. Glass water is obtained by fusing two parts of quartz sand with one of sodium carbonate, adding one-tenth part of small coal. Place the cool cleaned eggs into a jar and cover well with the liquid, continually adding sufficient liquid to keep the eggs entirely covered as others are added. Water glass can be purchased in this country of chemists, and generally bears on the labels the exact proportion to be used, varying from 3 to 10 per cent. Eggs preserved in this way are less brittle in the shell than those preserved in lime water, and will sometimes boil without cracking if a small pin-point aperture is made in them."

If Eggs Went by the Pound.

As long as hen fruit sells by the dozen, the bird that shells out the greatest number in a given time is certainly the money-maker. And until the custom shall be changed, the bird that lays the big egg will have to wait its place in the poultry Temple of Fame. As all experienced breeders know, the Minorcas are the birds that lay big eggs, but that fact alone does not seem to crowd the ever popular White Leghorns very hard. And talking about breeds is rather a "touchy" subject anyhow, but we are not like some poultry breeders who knock every breed but their own. With us, they are all good, only some are better, but we love 'em all, and the one you like the best and does well for you is the one to keep. You may have to change once or twice before your ideal is realized, but when you get it, stick, and don't be talked out of it, or chase rainbow-hued advertisements which lead ultimately to failure. There are those who always fancy white birds, Wyandottes, Rocks, Orpingtons and Minorcas; among whom Henry Grant of San Diego has found the White Minorcas to be his ideal of a fowl that would lose no time getting broody, lay big white eggs and lots of them all the year round, with a large body and delicious meat for eating. In some respects it is a matter of regret that eggs are not sold by the pound, for then the Minorcas would be in the lead.

Artificial Brooder Without Heat.

During the past two years the poultry press has been more or less exercised in the discussion of brooders run without the application of artificial heat. In the language of the manufacturers, these new machines are listed as "Fireless Brooders," the theory and practice being that the animal heat furnished by the chicks is so conserved in these specially-constructed brooders, as to render the lamp, gas jet or electricity, useless. As to the quality of service rendered, the writer cannot speak from experience, though their increase in use would lead one to the opinion that they are a success.



EGGS AND EGGS. ON THE LEFT, LEGHORN; ON THE RIGHT, WHITE MINORCAS.

In view of the experimental work that is now being done with them both on the part of breeders and manufacturers. The Times invites a discussion of their merits in this column. Write us of your failures as well as successes, and if your investigations and observations lead you to detect their weak points as well as their advantages, let us have them for publication. If the Fireless Brooder is successful under average prevailing conditions in Southern California, their use should be encouraged. The saving in artificial heating as well as a great reduction in labor and anxiety entailed by the old-style brooders are certainly economic measures of which the breeders would like to gain specific and reliable information.

An Aggravated Case of Dropsy.

Mrs. Hulda Parker of this city sends in the following inquiry:

"Can you tell me what was the matter with one of my hens? She seemed healthy, could eat all right; she was so fat that she could hardly walk, so I decided to kill her. When I examined the body, it was full of water. I never saw anything like it, and I am an old hand at raising poultry. The water seemed to be all through her, principally in the egg sack, but none in the intestines. There were three fully-developed yolks, but no whites or shells. Can you tell me what the disease was and the cause of it through The Times?"

Judging from your description the bird was suffering from a severe case of dropsy, caused by an accumulation of liquid in the abdominal cavity, and then gradually passing through the system. Killing was probably a wise thing to do, though birds have been relieved by giving Epsom salts, 30 grains, for a purge, then followed by iodide of potassium, 2 grains, twice daily, dissolved in small quantities of water. Dropsy is the result of inflammation of the lining membrane due to parasites, tumors, and various other causes.

Conditions and Food Influence Quality of Eggs.

C. Z. F. Rott of Ontario sends in the following interesting and unusual experience with one of his favorite hens:

"I have a hen that has laid five small eggs in about six weeks. The eggs have a good hard shell perfectly formed, about the size of a good pigeon egg; no yolk or yellow. As I have no trap nests I cannot tell if it is a Leghorn or Black Minorca or White Wyandotte. Can you inform me through The Times Magazine (of which I am a reader, and like your articles very much,) what is the cause of a hen producing such a small egg that contains only the white part of an egg? Maybe the hen is trying to start a new breed of chickens."

In the language of the street, "this is a corker." Specifically we cannot diagnose the case, but we will play around and at it. Thin and water eggs are result of too much sloppy or vegetable foods, and of hens in bad condition. Pale yolks—and we it for granted that though faint, there must be slight evidence of yellow of yolk to the eggs now be considered—result from a want of fattening f Pale eggs with strong shells would indicate someth wrong in the feeding. Very small eggs are often result of hens so fat internally that there is not r enough in the egg passage for one of normal s But these are mere suggestions. Possibly some of readers can give our correspondent more specific info mation.

Poached Eggs and Storage Eggs.

Now that the poultry breeders are seriously con ering some coöperative plan whereby they shall b enabled to more properly grade and market their p uct at better prices and under more favorable cond tions, it is pertinent to call attention to some featu of the egg trade. As every intelligent buyer of e in quantity knows there are "strictly California fr ranch eggs" sold in this market that have no right any such classification. Quantities of eggs that are in cold storage in March and April, are taken out la and sold as fresh ranch hen fruit. And for the mo part they "come through," and the consumer is no the wiser. There is one purpose, however, that th will not do for and that is poaching. If at a hotel restaurant you get a poached egg that does not br and holds its shape well, you may be reasonably s that it is fresh. A commission merchant recently t the writer that dealers often come to him for eggs th will poach, and he has to refuse them, for he kno that even the best of held eggs will not be satisfac

Vertical Transportation.

Vertical transportation in New York has reac enormous proportions, and according to a paper recen read before the Electrical Engineering Society of Colu bia University, twice as many people are carried ver cally as are carried horizontally every twenty-fo hours.

Taking twenty-six of the large office buildings in t lower part of the Borough of Manhattan, all of eight floors or over, this authority states, we find a total 572 floors in all, aggregating a height of approxima one and one-third miles. In these twenty-six buildi there are 116 express elevators traveling an aggreg distance of 275 miles an hour and averaging 243,000 p sengers a day. These same twenty-six buildings h 115 local elevators running approximately the s number of car miles per hour, but carrying about 372, passengers per day. This makes a total of 231 ele tors running 4400 miles carrying a total of 615,000 p sengers per day.

Taking the 8000 elevators used exclusively to ca passengers in the Borough of Manhattan and divid them into groups, allowing for the number of pers carried, we find that they transport approximately 6,8 000 passengers per day. From the last report of t Public Service Commission we learn that only 3,50 are carried per day by surface, elevated and sub cars in the entire city of Greater New York.—[N York Sun.

CALIFORNIA.

As Homer gave to Helen's beauty rare
A master touch in that suggestive line
Which tells how gazed with rapturous eyes benign
The aged of the realm, and called her fair,
And for her sake saw cause to do and dare;
As age, which only beauty's rarest wine
Inflames, drank deep and placed the enduring sig
That though details as to her eyes or hair
Remain unknown; she's still pronounced most fair
So California is stood from out the rest
Of America's fair daughters Fame has blest;
Her southern grace, her spirit of the West,
Her rich adornments for her constant wear, already heard about that Jacobs from Miss Cotesworth, I think she was once engaged to him."

Mr. Stumble thawed. "I see," he said; "say no more, [illegible]. Eh, you new century men! Cyclonic! cyclonic!" He left with a friendly nod, but the haggard lines on Jacobs's face grew deeper, and he followed Mr. Stumble's retreat with a look of suspicion, doubt and anxiety. Suddenly he caught the little widow's eye and saw that she was standing, tugging at her window, and furtively glancing back at him. It was evident that she wanted him, so he went down the aisle.

"Would you mind openin' this window a trifle, sir?" the widow shrilly asked. "I ain't got the muscles I used to have when I was a girl!" She dropped her voice: "I'm wise," she said, "and I'm game, pal. You can depend on me. Will the Jew beef?"

"Confess? I'm afraid so," Jacobs returned as lowly. "It doesn't matter, though. He'll say I'm Gilsdorf, but he won't be believed until a man gets there from Denver."

"Maybe. Sit down a minute. Where is Gilsdorf, anyhow? I know you ain't him. You ain't got his nose."

Jacobs hesitated, uncertain what to say, and, while thinking, he looked back and saw Miss Cotesworth staring at him. She did not drop her gaze, and Jacobs quickly turned; there was something in her expression that he could not fathom.

"We're in a box," Jacobs said to the widow; "it's worse than we figured on, but we can't back out. Gilsdorf, I think, is bound for Mexico."

"I get pinched about Chicago, hey? and you later on in New York?"

"No, you in Jersey City, unless I need protection. The police should have taken suspicion from this train."

"Um." The widow pursed her lips. "Might as well tell me everything. As I said before, I'm game."

"In Chicago, at noon tomorrow, we take the P. and [illegible] Manhattan Flier; that puts us in Jersey City Saturday morning, about 10 o'clock. There I catch the Mediterranean Line boat, and disembark at Lisbon, where I give myself away, am arrested, and held for extradition."

Again the widow pursed her lips. "Ain't there a Chicago mail that leaves Denver after we do and beats us to the Lake? Sure. I wouldn't be surprised if Gilsdorf took your Lisbon boat."

Jacobs thoughtfully frowned. "Right!" he exclaimed, in sudden comprehension. "We disembark at Lisbon, I am arrested, he, unsuspected, sails for Morocco. Funny I didn't think of it before." He sat pondering.

"And say," the widow said again, "there's that elephant-nosed guy in your seat, waiting for you. He's sizing up this confab. Look out, he may be a fly cop. He sticks to you pretty close."

Jacobs nodded. "I'm afraid of him," he said.

The widow covered his retreat with voluble thanks; in passing Miss Cotesworth, he hesitated, making as if to stop. The girl, however, looked troubled and did not speak, so he wearily went on to Mr. Stumble's boorish loquacity. But, whether Mr. Stumble's gossip came from a simple heart or a complex brain, it did not last long, for the train stopped at a siding near Omaha, and a uniformed man suddenly appeared in the Pullman. Jacobs uttered an involuntary oath, and Mr. Stumble [illegible]. A gold-braided official came past the policeman, who remained at his post.

"That damned Jew!" Jacobs said between his teeth. He rose, and turned to see another bluecoat almost behind him.

Suddenly the little widow sprang up with a deep oath, [illegible], gathered up her stiff skirts, and broke for liberty. At the far end of the car, the policeman and his superior shouted, but the widow did not heed. Her flight down the aisle was tempestuous, and her bonnet fell back, dragging with it a white wig. Black, curly hair was exposed, and the fugitive ran into the second policeman's outspread arms.

The car, for a moment, was pandemonium, and the pseudo-widow, struggling and kicking, was dragged down the aisle, even as the little Jew had been dragged and as suddenly carried out of sight.

The police captain followed, loudly explaining to the Pullman conductor. "You see," Jacobs heard him say, "Lincoln had a man who knew Rosendale's face, and knew he wasn't Gilsdorf. Then they telegraphed us that they had the accomplice, and that Gilsdorf was in this sleeper."

Jacobs drew a sigh of relief. The "widow" had shown himself a worthy ally. But suddenly the young man noticed that the tail of Mr. Stumble's eye was watching him curiously.

"Very funny, very odd," said Mr. Stumble, and thereupon, without further words, took himself off to the group of excited passengers on the platform. Jacobs, studiously refraining from glancing in Miss Cotesworth's direction, went to the smoking-room, where he sat brooding.

"Lady wants to see you, sir," said the porter, thrusting his head into the compartment.

Jacobs, in surprise, with unformed fancies knocking at his heart, hurried out. Miss Cotesworth sat in his section, awaiting. She did not turn her head, however, nor did she give him her hand. Her face was pale, tired and haggard.

"Sit down," she said.

Jacobs, struck as pale and as haggard, obeyed her. "I won't try to clear myself," he said; "it's impossible. I have $2000 here in my purse," he continued; "that is what I owe. I was offered this sum for what I'm doing, and I thought—from the first, believe me, I intended it for the bank. Will you take it and give it to the president?"

She did not move. "We'll be at the Omaha station in ten minutes," she said. "I saw Mr. Stumble talking with the police captain who arrested your second accomplice. Is your beard false?"

Jacobs bowed his head.

"Get it off. You must escape before he denounces you. I will join you for the moment, and you may accompany me through the gate."

Again Jacobs bowed his head. "This money?" he suggested.

A dark flush crept into her cheeks. "Never repay that theft," she said, rising, "unless you can give honest dollars." There was no scorn in her voice; only an infinite weariness.

Jacobs took his suit case and returned to the deserted smoking-room. A moment sufficed to remove his beard and wash the spirit gum away. A tall collar and black tie, a ministerial coat and a felt hat from his suit case completely changed his appearance. He thrust the case under a seat, and, as the train neared the station, strolled out upon the platform. The porter came, eyeing him askance, but said nothing. The train stopped, and Miss Cotesworth, a light bag in her hand, met Jacobs with a society smile. He helped her down. No police appeared.

"I am doing this," she said, "not at all for your sake, but for the name's sake. I never expect you to reform. As soon as we pass through the station, you will lose yourself in the city, and I, of course, will go back to mother. With me you will pass unsuspected."

Jacobs nodded. There was nothing to say.

"Wait!" a shrill voice cried. "God, man, don't desert me!"

Mr. Stumble, agile enough now, came pelting. The police were just escorting their captive from a day coach, and, seeing a man running, the captain hurried forward. Jacobs raised a gloved hand and struck Stumble in the face. The immense nose flattened, spread out over the cheeks and into the eyes, and a hooked nose stood out from the smear.

"Gilsdorf!" Jacobs gasped.

"Oh, you traitor!" Gilsdorf screamed.

The murderer, fleeing in blind alarm from his suddenly-enlightened tool, was tripped up by a spectator. A crowd gathered; Miss Cotesworth caught Jacobs by the arm and feverishly tugged him back toward the sleeper.

"I didn't know," Jacobs almost sobbed. "I thought him a detective. He paid me money to protect him!" He snatched his pocket-book and hurled it from him into the eager, long-necked crowd. "I'm not a murderer," he gasped, looking in her face. "And I'm not again a thief. A catspaw—only a catspaw!" With that he turned away.

"Honestly!" her voice rang out clearly over the hubub; "by the work of your hands. Then come home. I'll wait!"

Intelligence of Plants.

STARTLING SIMILARITIES TO ANIMAL ORGANISMS AND ACTIVITIES.

From London Chronicle.

HAVE plants intelligence? Do they think? Can they see, hear, and feel? Is it an unjust reflection upon the vegetable kingdom to call a man a cabbage head? Is there an ethical and humanitarian basis for the park legends warning the public to keep off the grass? How soon will vegetarians who denounce the cannibalism of meat eaters be convicted of cruelty, in devouring their sentient fellow beings, such as potatoes, turnips, and onions? Will the human race become too tender-heated to cut the throats of pallid lilies and to strangle sobbing little pansies in their beds?

Plant Nerves and Eyes.

These questions are not suggested by the belated ravings of an Elizabethan poet or the mystic fancies of a Brahmin thinker getting up an exclusive lecture course at the St. Regis. Scientists of repute and sobriety are responsible for the issue of plant intelligence. Prof. Francis Darwin, son of the illustrious discoverer of evolution, started the ball rolling at the last meeting of the British Association in Dublin, when he declared that plants respond to touch, like animals, have memory, develop habits, and exercise as much free will as any anti-Calvinist.

Next. Prof Harold Wager, the well-known botanist, came along, asserting that the outer skins of many leaves act as eyes, which focus the rays of light on the interior of the leaf, and carry an impression to the plant brain. The lenses of the vegetable eyes, he says, are so accurate that photographs can be taken by means of them. Photographs of men and landscapes, lensed by plant eyes, were exhibited by Prof. Wager.

There was no doubt of plant intelligence from the days of Homer until the scientists of the nineteenth century did away with the last vestiges of anthropomorphism. Science, in wrathful reaction against the miraculous, banished all poetical conceptions, sent wood nymphs and dryads to Coventry, and established the universe on rigid mechanical and business lines. The laughing grain, the weeping willow, and the modest violet were consigned to the limbo of fancy.

A reaction gradually came about, however, owing to the exhaustive botanical researches of such men as Noll, Haberlandt, and Nemec. The simple mechanical explanations were not found sufficient to account for the complex phenomena of plant life. Startling similarities between animal and vegetable organisms were discovered. Prof. Haberlandt published in 1904 his discovery of plant eyes, thus antedating the recent announcement of Prof. Wager.

In support of the intelligence theory, it may be cited that plants constantly move about except when they sleep, avoid obstacles at a distance, send their roots unerringly after water, reach for support with their tendrils, shut their leaves when touched, slant their leaves to avoid excessive sunlight, and sometimes smell and reach after animal food like beasts of prey.

There are 500 species of carnivorous plants. A tree, it is recorded, accidentally planted in an oak crotch, sent down its root to the ground, and the root divided eighteen inches above a stone so as to get over it on either side. Apparently the root solved the problem of dodging the stone a foot and a half before reaching it. The colored hybrid nicotianas open their petals in the day, as if aware that their hues would be wasted on the insectless dark hours when the white variety is open. The adult blue gum tree of Australia turns its leaves edgewise to the zenith to avoid the scorching heat of the sun, while the young shaded tree saves itself this exertion. Many plants have a rhythmic swaying movement in their sleep. Electric light stops their movements, and produces an injurious insomnia. A plant compelled to keep awake looks pale and fagged out. The different sleeping hours of plants have enabled botanists to construct flower clocks. Plants respond to the light, and continue to bend toward it half an hour after the light is withdrawn.

The "Reasoning" of the Plant.

Many instances of vegetable reasoning or something else are given by R. H. Francé in his "Germs of Mind in Plants." The rootlets of plants, which Charles Darwin compared to a brain, have a sense of the nearness of water, called hydrotopism, and they have a sense of gravity, termed geotropism. The tendrils of a hop vine swing in wide circles around a chosen branch. Once they have touched it they seize it in about twenty seconds, and acquire such a hold in an hour that it takes force to tear them away. Then the tendrils curl up like a corkscrew, and this shortening pulls up the vine.

The sensitive plant is proverbial. If a branch is touched, the feathery leaves rise, fold together, and the stem sinks down. A real injury to the branch sends a shudder through the entire plant, which closes every leaf in sympathetic woe. This mimosa is liveliest in its native southern haunts, and seems a little stupefied in northern hot houses.

The flowers of the barberry cunningly compel the bees to perform a useful service. Baited with tiny cups of honey, the six stamens lie down against the yellow petals, and wait for a bee to release the trap, when they spring up and shower him with pollen. The bee acts as involuntary messenger, taking the pollen to another flower. If the employment of insects for fertilization does not seem conclusive evidence of intelligence, there is the case of a Central American acacia which houses a standing army of black ants in holes bored in the thorns, and feeds them with sausage-like growths at the ends of its leaves, which vegetable sausages might be compared to the traveling ration of the German army. The function of the ant army is to defend the trees against bands of leaf-cutting ants, which destroy all other vegetation, and it is said the acacia's soldiers fight in its behalf with valiant success. There is also a species of fern which goes into a mysterious partnership with ants, whom it provides with little dwellings down the sides of its roots.

There are many predatory and tigerish plants, of which the sundew is a notable example. It catches insects in a hairy trap, and digests them with pepsin, the same as human beings and other animals do. The leaf jaws will grasp a pebble, but make no attempt to digest it, and soon the jaws open and let the pebble fall to the ground. Portuguese farmers use the fly-catching drosophyllum instead of mechanical fly traps to clear their houses of insects. In the tropics the stench of decaying insects proclaims the presence of plants with pitcher traps full of prey. A plant without roots that sails in ditches and ponds seeking insects whom it may devour is the Aldrovandi vesiculosa. Unsuspecting water fleas and skippers touch the bristles of its thick-valved leaves once, and no more; they are seized and consumed.

Some Vegetable Sense Organs.

It is the coöperation between the plant parts and the subordination of individual inclinations to the general welfare that argue most strongly for plant intelligence. A number of vegetable sense organs have been discovered by Prof. Haberlandt. He has found that plants are endowed with nerves the same as animals, and these nerves are generally excited by irritable hairs, which are like the whiskers of a cat. The sensitive tendril spurs itself to activity by rubbing its cells against a deposit of crystallized acid; the irritation is produced when it meets an obstacle. The mechanism of various fly traps is based on a hydraulic principle, water pressure being transmitted from cell to cell to operate the valves.

A gravity organ is possessed by all the lower water animals, to enable them to tell when they are standing on their feet or are upside down. The snail carries internally a ball of lime, which rolls in a spherical water pouch, and by rubbing against bristles informs the owner of his position. Similar gravity organs have been discovered in plants by Prof. Haberlandt. There are starch grains stored in large cells, which enable the plant to grow upright. Without these starch kernels, the plant acts as if dizzy, and becomes bent.

Information Needed.

"Why, you are Tom Brien yourself."

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Coals to Newcastle.

A FRIEND from Los Angeles county has sent me a clipping from the Nottinghamshire (England) Guardian, containing a photograph of thirty truck (car) loads of potatoes being dispatched to Tilbury docks for shipment to America. What is becoming of our boasted potato land? Fungous diseases, potato sickness, cornering of crops and the uncertainties of our markets account in great measure for our potato famines. This tuber will not grow of itself, as some of our producers seem to think. It has been doing that very thing on our new lands, but now that considerable skill is required to make the old lands produce potatoes, many of our farmers take to other and easier crops. The English farmers have become the most proficient potato growers in the world, but that does not make the fact of importation less palatable.

An Old, Battered Fraud.

J. E. MEIER of Mountain Pass was exhibiting this week samples of the new Spencer seedless apples, a fruit which is destined to become a great favorite wherever the apple is grown. Mr. Meier has the agency for the sale of the trees, and any inquiry addressed to him will receive prompt attention.

The samples shown by Mr. Meier are preserved, an early and heavy frost having ruined the fresh apples which the company send out as samples. And it certainly is a wonder. The apple is absolutely seedless, of the winter variety. It is red in color, mottled with yellow, and in size and flavor similar to the Baldwin, and an excellent keeper. There is no sign of a core, and it is said that there is fully one-fourth saving on each apple on that account. The tree has no blossom, and it is claimed that worms will not trouble tree or fruit. It would appear that it is the coming moneymaker for horticulturists. The trees will flourish wherever apples are grown.—[Jamestown (Cal.) Magnate.

Interesting Bulletin.

ONE of the best local contributions on the subject of insect control I have ever seen has been published by the Claremont Horticultural Club. It is devoted to the Mealy Bug, which is becoming a great and persistent pest in many of the citrus-growing counties. This treatise has twenty-three pages, numerous photographs and a most convincing and extensive series of articles contributed by practical investigators. These articles were written by Messrs. Baker, Smith, Blanchard, Allen, Carnes, Pease, Bemis and Maskew, and arranged by Prof. Cook and V. V. Leroy. It embraces the proceedings of a meeting of the club held at Claremont on January 18 last, and is the most thorough and valuable publication of the State sent out for a year. Imperial Cotton Planting.

THOSE who think the people of the Imperial Valley have been bluffing about going into the cotton business should read this extract from a letter received from W. E. Wilsie of El Centro. It says: "Considerable cotton seed will be shipped into our county, the bulk of which will come in carload lots, and it being the first season, there are liable to be infringements of the law that are unintentional. For instance, a man came to me recently and said he had 500 pounds of cotton seed shipped to him from Arkansas, and that he had instructed the Southern Pacific agent to turn it over to us on arrival, which he would have done anyway."

Mr. Wilsie further states that a seed firm in Los Angeles is advertising cotton seed for distribution in small quantities. "I sent this firm a copy of the quarantine order and a little later I was in Los Angeles and called on the firm and explained the matter to them. They told me they would obey the order. Today a man brought to my office two small sacks of cotton seed from this firm and said they would ship more seed."

This is the way a quarantine order is often observed by seedsmen and nurserymen. The order was duly issued, signed by the Governor and is the law. But some persons do not care what risk they place upon an industry that even now is so promising as to order seed by the carload. I have asked Mr. Wilsie to destroy all smuggled cotton seed and take the consequences of a suit at law. There will be no suit. Let all join in the protection of the cotton industry of Imperial.

Quick-rotting Manure.

IN the springtime almost every farm yard has a large quantity of débris—straw, stable bedding, leaves, trash of all kinds and fresh manure. To throw all this raw material into a compost heap is to wait months for it to decay sufficiently for use. During this process the trash is lying in the way and also losing a large percentage of its value through vaporization. Some process of reducing this stuff to available manure within a few days may be of value to the fruit grower, especially if he find stable manure and other coarse fertilizers difficult or impossible to secure. Under these conditions it will pay the farmer to go to considerable trouble to reduce the waste stuff about his premises, removing it from cumbering and making it useful at the same time.

A large vat or tank, and a common manure pen large enough to hold the débris are all that is required in the way of appliances. Into the tank or hogshead throw all the soapsuds, barnyard drainage and other strong liquids till the receptacle is half-full. Then add to the vat two bushels lime, all the soot obtainable, four pounds salt, two pounds saltpeter, two bushels fresh wood ashes and five bushels land plaster, with water to make the tank two-thirds full. Place in the manure pen a thick layer of dry grass, straw or waste of any kind, stir the contents of the tank and saturate the layer of waste with the contents. Then another layer and another wetting-down, and so continue till the vat is exhausted. Six or seven barrels of the fluid will decompose ten tons of green manure and two tons of absolutely dry stuff. In two weeks the manure will be in perfect condition, if kept wet every four or five days.

This process was patented many years ago, but the patent has long since expired. Its value lies in the immediate reduction of raw material and in the preservation of the fertilizing ingredients therein contained. The loss in the fermentation of stable manure is immense, making this manure of little fertilizing value, though of great use as a soil correction. As the demand for coarse fertilizers gets more acute, farmers will have to resort to new expedients to maintain the productiveness of their soils. As an offset to the trouble of reducing waste to a useable basis, may be the work of handling 2000 pounds of stable manure for only thirty-two pounds of fertilizer, which is perhaps the average from a ton of stable manure.

California Rampant.

WHATEVER neglect California soil industries may have experienced years ago from the Department of Agriculture these industries are receiving due attention now, as evidenced by the contents of the Agricultural Bill as reported not long since to the United States Senate. The following appropriations tell an interesting story:

The principal items of interest to California are as follows: Improvement of methods of packing and shipping California oranges and deciduous fruits, $22,000; improvement of fruit-storage methods, $7000; eradication of the pear blight, $10,914.33; investigation of diseases of the peach and plum, $6500; establishment of date culture and study of the life history of the date palm, $5310; caprification of the fig and study of figs, $2000; establishment of pistache culture and the study of the pistache nut, $700; breeding new citrus fruits and pineapples, $4110; American hop investigations, $4533.33; study of making industrial alcohol on the farm, $5000; lemon investigation, especially with reference to keeping qualities, $2637.50; field investigations of loco poisoning, $4266.67; laboratory investigation of loco poisoning, $1908.33; investigations of other stock poisoning plants, $4621.90; fiber investigations, California, etc., $6650.

To establish seed-testing laboratory in coöperation with one of the State experiment stations on the Pacific Coast, $2250; breeding cotton for the arid Southwest, $6900; production of alkali and drought-resistant sugar beets, $2500; preparation of a manual of Alaskan flora, $1120; experimental export shipments of fruits, $7000; development of phylloxera-resistant grape stocks, $5000; cactus investigations, $2640; Yuma Experiment Farm, $3577; alfalfa investigations, $7500.

Plant introduction garden, Chico, $21,380; soil surveys, California, $8000; scale insect investigations, $5000; hydrocyanic acid gas investigations, $5000; Argentine ants, $4000; orange and pear thrips, $5600; biological survey of California, $3500; biological survey of Alaska, $2400; inquiry into the relation of wild geese to the grain crop of California, $400; extermination of the English sparrow in Southern California, $500; destruction of ground squirrels in California, $1000; experiment stations, Alaska, $28,000; Hawaii, $28,000; Guam, $15,000; irrigation and drainage investigations, California, $8500.

Farming to the Front.

THE appointment of a commission of able men by the President to inquire into the condition of farming and to make recommendations as to what the government can and should do to aid improvement and extension of the industry is an act that betokens the growing interest in the public mind in that the greatest source of wealth, human happiness, and progress.

It is a fact of history that governments have given attention chiefly to promoting trade, aiding manufacturing, and financial operations, or in other words, favoring capital employed rather than in agriculture. Education in other lines has been more liberally encouraged. Farming has been looked upon as a work that required physical strength more than brain power. As farmers have been and are scattered over the country, it has been deemed impossible to make concentrated effort to apply the means of their instruction in the science and art of their work, and in those matters of commerce and finance that deeply affect their interests. The commercial, financial and professional classes have failed to take that interest in the producers from the soil which would be effective in enhancing their own material wellfare. The Outlook says:

"In our opinion the chief obstacle that the American farmer has to contend with is that the banker, the merchant, the manufacturer, the lawyer, the doctor, the minister, the professor, the artist, the legislator, and the editor know too little about him and his work. We measure the wealth and strength of the United States too much by its rich banks, its enormous factories, its miles of railways, its splendid hospitals, its brilliant theaters, its powerful newspapers, its learned universities. Who has built all these and who maintains them? The farmer. When do railways pass their dividends? When do newspapers lose their subscribers? When banks fall into the hands of receivers? When do play to empty houses? When do doctors fail to their bills? When do the universities suffer for When crops fail."—[Rural Californian.

Warning of Fraud.

THE following letter has been received from P. D. Barnhart:

"The credulity of the American people is something wonderful. It is a profound study for the student of human nature, of the evolution of the mind of man, and his ability to perceive the difference between truth and error.

"The inordinate desire of most of us to acquire wealth quickly, or a living easily without work is the weak point in our mental composition, hence designing fellows who would prey upon us take advantage of this weakness, and appeal to our credulity by speech as smooth as oil or through well-worked advertisements carefully placed in reputable periodicals.

"These thoughts have been suggested by the following advertisement copied from one of the most reliable and widely-circulated periodicals of the United States. The statements are so amazing that even the most credulous will pause, and wonder if such things can be so—then, when surprise has subsided, decide to order a few plants anyway.

"'The Wonderberry, a Luscious Berry Ripening in Three Months from Seed, Luther Burbank's Greatest Creation.'

"If a statement like that is not enough to take the breath away of any man or woman whoever planted a fruit tree or berry seed and grew a tree, shrub or vine, what more would be necessary? Such is the foundation, together with a fine illustration, on which is built the most beautiful air castle of fruit growing, ever gazed upon by the most enthusiastic fruit grower who ever lived. The description of this world beater is as follows:

"'Fruit blue-black like an enormous rich blueberry in looks and taste, unsurpassed for eating raw, cooked, canned or preserved in any form; the greatest garden fruit ever introduced, and equally valuable in hot, dry, cold or wet climates; easiest plant in the world to grow, succeeding anywhere and yielding great masses of rich fruit all summer and fall, and all winter in doors (as a pot plant it is both ornamental and useful.) The greatest boon to the family garden ever known.' Since Adam and Eve were turned out of the Garden of Eden to the present day, has ever such a wonder been heard of? I have omitted the introducer's address, and the publication in which it appears for two reasons: First, if people on this coast who own lands at present uncultivated, for the lack of water and where the weather during six months of the year is hot and dry enough to suit the most fastidious tastes for that sort of climate, the man would not have enough plants to go round no matter how large the stock—and other growers in other parts of the United States would not get a chance to share in his beneficence, for all right-minded people would not hesitate to declare him a public benefactor, even though they paid a good price for the plant and he coined money in the deal. Second, I have some consideration for the physical endurance of the office force of a paper, for were its identity known, they would be worked to death filling orders for copies containing an advertisement like that.

"Is it not about time that a halt was called upon all this foolishness in connection with Burbank's efforts to give to the world something just a little better than it has had in fruits, flowers and vegetables? His name, it seems to the writer, has been used about long enough by designing men to extract hard-earned dollars from people who could ill-afford to part with them for worthless plant life to the average grower. And yet the same old game seems to go on. Gardeners both professional and amateurs, say nothing about the hosts of cultivators of the soil who lay claim to either class—contribute regularly to fill the coffers of those who advertise such impossibilities."

Desert Onion Growing.

THE onion growers in the oases of the Colorado Desert seem to have a pretty good thing by reason of their location in a virtually rainless country. A representative of the Semi-Tropic Produce Company of the Coachella Valley recently visited eastern markets, and on his return was quoted as follows by the Riverside Press:

"Our chief competitor in the eastern market is Texas. The trade, however, prefers the Coachella Valley onion on account of its superior keeping qualities and is willing to pay more for it than for the Texas product. After an onion is matured it will not keep well if allowed to be rained upon. While we have no rains during our onion harvesting season the Texas onion districts do, and most of the Texas onions were wet before being shipped. This is why our onions keep better and are in demand. Heretofore Coachella onions have all been shipped in the Crummer crate, the same crate which is used in Texas. Being put up in the same kind of a package, our onions have been taken for Texas onions. The trade demands a distinctive package so that when they buy Coachella Valley onions they will know that they are getting what they pay for. In order to meet this demand all of the onions we ship this year will go out in the Anaheim crate. Each crate will be labeled 'Salton Sea Brand, Grown in the Rainless Belt.' In this way, our onions will no longer be sold for Texas onions, and they will bring the higher prices their quality deserves. Another advantage of shipping in the Anaheim crate is that the growers will have to pay 6 cents less for each crate than heretofore. This means 12 cents per 100 pounds, or about $30 per car saved in the cost of shipping, which in itself is quite an item. Our Chicago agents, J. Friedham & Co., have on exhibition a crate of Coachella Valley onions shipped last season, which, when I was there recently, was still in perfect condition."—[San Francisco Chronicle.

Potato Diseases.

W. A. ORTON, the government pathologist, who recently made investigation of the soils of California for "potato sickness," has completed his report. It is worth careful perusal by all gardeners engaged in the growing of potatoes. The following extracts from the report are given:

The wilt fungus enters the plant from the soil through the roots or underground stems. The tubers are infected through their stem ends or, rarely, through wounds.

How the fungus spreads from field to field is not fully demonstrated. It may be present in nature in some of these alluvial soils. It is noteworthy that soils of this type appear to be predisposed to infection. One of the principal means by which the wilt has been disseminated is clearly by the use of infected seed tubers. Not only is the local crop usually infected, but the same wilt is very prevalent in Oregon, whence most of the outside seed potatoes are obtained. Unfortunately, nearly all of the area under discussion has become infected. The problem for the future is not so much to check the spread of the disease as to control it where it occurs.

Diseases of the type of potato wilt are very difficult to control. The source of infection and the seat of the disease are underground; hence spraying with fungicide would be ineffective. There is no likelihood that applications of fungicide to the soil would do any good, and Dr. Erwin F. Smith's experiments indicated that fertilizers had little or no restrictive effect on the disease.

Experience has shown that the amount of infection decreases when barley, beans or other crops are grown. Potatoes planted after a short rotation show much less wilt and, while it is doubtful whether the disease can be got rid of entirely by any rotation that would be adopted by San Joaquin growers, there is no question that rotation of crops will continue to be the principal preventive measure in this district until resistant varieties are developed. The most profitable length of rotation remains to be determined by further trials. Comparisons should be made of plots or fields that have been one, two, three and four years in other crops than potatoes.

Under present conditions the entire quantity of potato tops is left in the field, together with thousands of bushels of small and scabby potatoes unfit for marketing. All this refuse affords a breeding-place for the wilt fungus. In consideration of the fact that the next move of the farmer must be to rotate crops to get rid of fungus infection, it would seem a logical precaution to carry off and destroy all vines and culls at once after digging. It must be admitted that there is as yet no evidence that this would be profitable, but the experiment should be undertaken.

The indications are that most of the potatoes in the district referred to are infected with fusarium when planted. It is reasonable to suppose that better results would follow the use of healthy seed, and trials should be made at once to demonstrate this.

Scab, a disease causing rough, pitted tubers, is very prevalent in California, where it is considered the most serious enemy of the crop, since its injuries are brought conspicuously to the attention of the grower by the inforced rejection of the scabby potatoes.

The loss from scab is very heavy. There is, in the first place, a reduction of yield due to the attack of this fungus on the underground portions of the plant, and, secondly, a depreciation in quality. The very scabby potatoes are not marketable, and usually have to be left in the field, as there is at present no starch or alcohol factory to utilize the culls. The writer has roughly estimated that from 5 to 75 per cent. of the crops are rejected on account of scab, the lowest amounts being found on land planted for the first time in potatoes and the highest on old land. Possibly 25 per cent. is an average loss on land previously planted to potatoes. As the annual production of potatoes in San Joaquin county is more than 2,500,000 sacks, the loss from this disease might easily amount to over $300,000 per annum.

The cause of the scab is a minute parasitic fungus. The disease does not develop except where this fungus is present. The amount of scab is, however, greatly influenced by certain soil conditions. The principal factor appears to be the acidity or alkalinity of the land. The scab develops most freely in an alkaline soil and is greatly retarded by acidity. In this respect the San Joaquin county soils are extremely favorable to its development. The amount of moisture also exerts an influence on the disease; it appears to be worse in wet seasons and in wet soils. It is the experience of growers that it varies greatly in different seasons, yet, nevertheless, it can be prevented by excluding the germs of the disease.

(1) Clean Seed.—The most frequent source of infection lies in the seed planted and the experience of eastern growers has been that by disinfecting the seed and by planting in land free from scab a clean crop may be produced. It is therefore of the greatest importance that those California growers who have land not already infected by this disease should seek to keep it healthy by allowing nothing but disinfected seed to be planted.

(2) Rotation of Crops.—Scab tends to diminish when land is planted in crops which do not harbor the parasite. Other root crops, however, such as sugar beets, turnips, etc., must be avoided. The length of time required to free land from scab varies in different sections, but, as a rule, a period of three years will very greatly reduce the amount of disease, though it may not be entirely exterminated after five, or even ten, years.

The principal point to be kept in mind in choosing rotation crops is to increase the amount of organic acids in the soil by plowing under green crops, such as rye, clover, vetch, etc., which by their decay tend to produce an acid reaction in the soil.

(3) Soil Treatment.—The chemical treatment of the soil to reduce scab promises but little. Applications of sulphur at the rate of 300 pounds per acre have been used with some degree of success in Delaware and New Jersey and might give good results in California.

The most effective method of disinfecting seed potatoes is by the use of formaldehyde gas liberated by mixing the commercial solution with potassium permanganate. This method is adapted to the disinfection of large quantities of potatoes in a short time. To use it, an air-tight shed should be constructed of sufficient size to hold whatever quantity it may be desired to treat at one time. This may be made of rough lumber, lined with building paper and provided with a tight door. The potatoes may be treated in sacks, but these sacks must be piled so as to allow a free circulation of air around them.

Manufactured Climate.

THE gardens of Paris get their products on the market weeks before the regular season for them. This forcing of nature is described by Ernest Poole in Success Magazine.

The secret is simply this: The French maraichèrs have manufactured a climate to suit them. As one observer has said, "They have moved the climate of Monte Carlo up to the suburbs of Paris."

Some new prodigy of modern science, this? Not at all. Only enormous expense in money and in time. The gardens, whenever possible, are placed on land with a slope to the south, and are well protected by walls on the north and east, walls built to reflect light as well as to give protection from the northeast winds.

The ground is practically covered with glass, not as in a greenhouse, but by glass frames in the open, "three-light" frames of uniform size, twelve feet by four and a half; and also by glass bells. These, too, are of a uniform size, about the shape of a chapel bell, a little less than seventeen inches in diameter and from fourteen to fifteen inches high. The French call them cloches. You may often see over a thousand frames and over 10,000 glass bells in one two-acre plot in the suburbs of Paris.

A more recent innovation is the employment of hot-water pipes run under the soil, making of the earth a veritable steam-heated hotel, with this essential difference, that the hotel-keeper here is desperately eager, not to keep his guests, but to persuade them to leave on the earliest possible day.

His Suggestion.

Tommie was about to have a children's party. "Mother," he said, "thoughtfully, "it won't look well for me to be stuffing myself when those other kids are here. How will it be if I eat my share before they come?"—[Harper's Bazar.

"Naturopathy" Legalized in California.

DR. CARL SCHULTZ of Los Angeles, who recently returned from Sacramento, brought the important information that the bill licensing naturopathy had passed both houses of the Legislature. The Governor has since signed the bill. Dr. Schultz and his good wife have worked indefatigably for years for such a measure as this. California is now in line with Germany, where the "nature cure" has held a high position for more than half a century.

The bill referred to is "Committee Substitute for Senate Bill No. 26." It was introduced by the Committee on Public Health and Quarantine, on February 24. It is entitled: "An Act to Amend Section Sixteen of an Act Entitled 'An Act for the Regulation of Practice of Medicine and Surgery, Osteopathy, and Other Systems or Modes of Treating the Sick or Afflicted, in the State of California, and for the Appointment of a Board of Medical Examiners in the Matter of Said Regulation.' (Approved March 14, 1907.)"

Following is a copy of the bill:

"Section 1. Section 16 of an act entitled 'An act for the regulation of the practice of medicine and surgery, osteopathy, and other systems or modes of treating the sick or afflicted, in the State of California, and for the appointment of a board of medical examiners in the matter of said regulation,' approved March 14, 1907, is amended to read as follows:

"Section 16. Any person who holds a certificate from the Board of Medical Examiners created by 'An act for the regulation of the practice of medicines and surgery in the State of California, and for the appointment of a board of medical examiners in the matter of such regulation,' which took effect August the first, 1901, or from one of the boards of examiners heretofore existing, under the provisions of 'An act to regulate the practice of medicine in the State of California,' approved April 3, 1876, or an act supplemental and amendatory to said act, which became a law April 1, 1878, shall be entitled to practice medicine and surgery in this State, the same as if it had been issued under this act; any person who holds a certificate from the Board of Osteopathic Examiners of the State of California, under the provisions of 'An act to regulate the practice of osteopathy in the State of California, and to provide for a State Board of Osteopathic Examiners, and to license osteopaths to practice in this State, and to punish persons violating the provisions of this act,' which became a law under constitutional provisions, without the Governor's approval, March 9, 1901, shall be entitled to practice osteopathy in this State, the same as if it had been issued under this act. Any person who holds an unrevoked certificate issued by the board of examiners of the Association of Naturopaths of California, incorporated under the laws of the State of California, August 8, 1904, and who shall be practicing naturopathy prior to the passage of this act, shall be entitled to practice naturopathy in this State, the same as if it had been issued under this act. The Board of Medical Examiners shall endorse said certificate at their first meeting after this act becomes a law, or at any subsequent meeting after this act becomes a law, or at any subsequent meeting of the board, but not later than six months after the passage of this act, by signature of its president and secretary and affixing its official seal. Provided, however, that the holder of such certificate has signed his or her name on the back of said certificate and the president and secretary of the Association of Naturopaths of California, have certified over their respective signatures that the holder of said certificate is the rightful owner of same. But all certificates herein mentioned may be revoked for any unprofessional conduct, in the same manner and upon the same grounds as if they had been issued under this act.

"Sec. 2. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage."

Nature's Medicine.

THE following remarks in regard to the medicinal value of fruit juices are from a lecture delivered in New York by W. H. Dieffenbach, M. D., and published in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette for December, 1908:

"When simple water becomes distasteful to patients, the addition of fruit juices to the water is very grateful to the palate. Those fruit juices (lemon, orange, raspberry, huckleberry, blackberry, pineapple, apple, currant, grape, grape fruit) besides rendering the taste more pleasant, are natural intestinal antiseptics and contain the so-called 'natur-saltze'—natural salts (sodium, potassium, etc.)—which assist in the elimination of carbonic acid gas and prevent deposition of urates, uric acid and other end products of metabolism.

"These fruit juices (contrary to old teaching) are particularly valuable where there is a rheumatic or gouty diathesis. To quote from Gautier (Diet and Dietetics:) 'Their acidity due in a large measure to some acid salts (malates, citrates, tartrates, fumarates, etc.) varies from 0.2 to 1.5 per cent. These salts, with alkaline bases, are transformed in the system by the complete combination of their organic parts into soluble carbonates which alkalize the humors, as we have already said, at the same time by reason of the quantity of water that they provide and their special acidity. These fruits are, moreover, often a little diuretic and laxative, especially if they are not properly ripe.'"

To this it might be added that there is no more wholesome or valuable fruit juice than that of the California orange, which is just now in its prime.

Freak Liquor Legislation.

NOTABLE among the numerous specimens of freak liquor legislation that are being enacted nowadays, is an ordinance introduced before the Board of Trustees of Petaluma, Cal., which makes it unlawful to sell to any female person intoxicants in larger quantities than one glass at a time. Nothing is said in the ordinance as to how long a period of time shall intervene between glasses—or how large the glass may be.

Again, the anti-treating bill, referred to last week, passed the California Assembly by a vote of 42 to 16. The bill provides that every person who treats or furnishes another person, without compensation, any wine, beer, whisky or intoxicating liquor of any kind, in any public saloon or bar room, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

As frequently stated here, the abolition of the absurd and harmful American practice of treating would be a long step in the direction of temperance reform. This, however, must come about through an aroused public opinion. It cannot be effected by legislation.

Bad for the Whelps.

FEARING that an African lioness in the Los Angeles "Zoo" at Eastlake Park would kill two whelps born to her recently, the keeper took them away from her and gave them to a spaniel to nurse. The newspaper report says:

"It is the keeper's plan to leave them with the spaniel for a week or two, and then put them on a diet of beef broth and condensed milk, which makes a perfect substitute for animal milk. Cow's milk would kill the whelps."

Perhaps. You may be sure, however, that a diet of beef broth and condensed milk will kill them. Beef broth is about equivalent in nutritive value to urine, and sterilized milk is, as frequently shown here, a starvation food.

A Good Man Gone.

A WORTHY man has gone over the Great Divide, in the person of George T. Angell of Boston, known as the "Friend of Dumb Animals," and a leader in the humane educational movement in the United States. He died on March 16, at the advanced age of 86. Mr. Angell had been instrumental in the establishment of more than 70,000 "Bands of Mercy." He published a little monthly journal called "Our Dumb Animals."

There is much room for such work in this section of the country, where we see all too much of the Latin disregard of the rights and feelings of animals that has come down from the days of the Roman arena.

Queer Dietetic Ideas.

SEVERAL copies have been received of the little "Mazdaznan" magazine, published (in German) at Leipzig, by David Ammann, formerly of Hollywood, near Los Angeles, who is endeavoring to preach the gospel of Zoroaster, with Otoman Hanish as the Persian sage's prophet. Ammann is now lecturing in Los Angeles.

These Mazdaznan people have some most extraordinary ideas about diet. While some of their ideas are good, others are silly, senseless, and superstitious. For instance, in this magazine we are told that "caviar is one of the most wholesome and nourishing foods, and is particularly recommended for weaklings." On the same page is a statement that the disciples of Zoroaster "very conscientiously observe the law of nature 'Thou shalt not kill.'" Well, now, to obtain the eggs from a sturgeon without killing it would be a delicate and somewhat expensive operation.

Here is an extraordinary recommendation:

"For enlarged liver, cognac with salt, well beaten up, is a good remedy. Only the best quality of cognac should be used."

Wouldn't that shake you up a little?

Just one more: "Raw peanuts are an excellent means of loosening and carrying off mucous matter in colds, coughs, etc." And for promoting dyspepsia.

Parsons' Perils.

A CONGREGATIONAL pastor of Chicago has been warning the divinity students of Rockefeller's Chicago institute against the wiles of women. He tells of "diabolical plots to entrap and ruin men of God who were doing in entire innocence what they deemed to be their duty." He painted a picture of "preachers without guile, beset by designing women seeking whom they might devour." He declared that the average minister is "a lamb for purity and a child so far as knowledge of the world is concerned." For this lamb, he said, countless women were lying in wait.

It is true that ministers of the Gospel, in common with actors and others who are in the limelight, are frequently made the targets of unwise adulation on the part of foolish women.

Just now there is a remarkable movement on the part of several of the churches for the suggestive treatment of disease by the pastors. Might it here be suggested, in all seriousness, and without malice, that men who are so entirely inexperienced as those referred to by this Chicago pastor, are scarcely fit to undertake the task of being physical, mental or spiritual guides to others? The Bible says something about being "wise as serpents, but harmless as doves."

It is probable, however, that this Chicago pastor exaggerated, as pulpiteers sometimes will do, for the sake of creating a mild sensation. Ministers of the Gospel are not all "sissies." They are men, like the rest of us, with human failings, and must be judged by the common standard of humanity.

Weston the Walker.

WESTON, the pedestrian, is another good example of the greater endurance afforded by a non-stimulating, non-flesh dietary. Weston is not now a strict vegetarian, according to reports, but he is most temperate in his diet, eating only twice a day.

On March 14, Weston started from New York on a -mile walk to San Francisco. He was 71 years old on that day.

The Antiseptic Babe.

WE can sterilize his bottles, we can boil his little mug;
We can bake his flannel bandages and disinfect the rug
That envelopes him when he partakes of medicated air,
But there's one impossibility that leaves us in despair—
And not an unjustifiable one, you will allow—
To wit: We fear 'twould never do to sterilize the cow!

We feed the baby Medicus's hygienic dope,
And we wash his face with germicidal antiseptic soap:
And we brush his little toofums—or the place where they will be—
With diluted glyco-thymoline, most sanitarilee;
Then despair to see a milky effervescence supervene
On a countenance which theretofore was surgically clean.

Then although we strive to conquer every septic circumstance,
Yet we greatly fear a ghastly alimentary mischance;
For albeit we bake and boil his things, and scrub, and soak, and souse,
And if in his anatomy forever cleaning house,
The recklessness with which he sucks his tiny little thumb
Imperils much his antiseptic little tum.

We are careful of his hours, we are thoughtful of his toys;
We are mindful of his sorrows, and judicious of his joys;
We are prayerfully considerate of needful discipline,
Our little "Mother's Hand-book" and the precepts writ therein;
And we strive to render sterile all designed for mouth
or tum,
But one frightful danger menaces—we cannot boil his thumb!

Irish Moss Lemonade.

IN "Practical Dietetics" Dr. Pattee recommends the following as a soothing, pleasant drink:

"Take one-fourth cup of Irish moss, wash and let it soak in water. After one-half hour pour off this water and add two cupfuls of boiling water. Cook until syrup, keeping just below the boiling point. If it becomes too thick, add more water. Strain, add four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, and sugar to the taste. It is best served hot."

For sugar in the above receipt substitute honey.

Olive Oil and Cotton Seed Oil.

THE following is from the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette:

"The special agent of the United States Bureau of Manufactures, who has been investigating cotton-seed oil in Norway, reports that fish preservers are beginning to use American cotton-seed oil for packing Norwegian sardines, instead of the more expensive olive oil, and that results have been in most cases very satisfactory. The exact grade of cotton-seed oil best adapted to this purpose has not yet been determined. This information causes us to wonder how much, if any, of the Norwegian cod-liver oil is adulterated with cotton-seed oil. It is doubtless true that cotton-seed oil is freer from putrefactive products and altogether cleaner than cod-liver oil, but it does not contain elements that the cod-liver oil does, elements which have been relied upon for an alternative effect, iodin, phosphorus, etc. It might be well for the United States pure-food inspectors to investigate cod-liver oil."

The editor of the Care of the Body understands that the oil used in packing the sardines put up at San Pedro, near Los Angeles, is part cotton-seed and part olive oil. When used raw, olive oil is the king of oils, but for cooking purposes cotton-seed oil is better, for the reason that olive oil burns at a much lower temperature. Therefore, use olive oil for your salads, and refined cotton-seed oil for cooking. There is a white refined cotton-seed oil on the market in Los Angeles, sold under a trade name. It retails at about $1 a gallon, or about a third the cost of olive oil.

Snoring.

SNORING, like many other troubles, is merely a symptom of some other—and often more serious—ailment. Snoring may be due to a catarrhal condition of the body. That, again, is usually due to the storing up of impurities in the body, and that, yet again, is in most cases due to wrong eating—eating too much, or eating of wrong foods. To this may be added the breathing of foul air, and the lack of thorough elimination of impurities from the body.

The reason that the tendency to snoring usually increases with age is due to the fact that as people grow older (unless they are wise) they accumulate more poison in the system.

From this it may be seen that if you want to cure snoring you must do the same as if you want to cure corns, or consumption—go to the root of the evil. Find out in what way you have been living wrong, and change your habits. That is all there is to it. That is all there ever will be to it. There are local appliances that will stop the noise of your snoring, but they will not remove the cause. Also, in some cases, a surgical operation may be recommended. Such relief will be merely temporary so long as the cause is maintained.

Thoughts Can Kill.

THE following dispatch from Poland, O., recently appeared in The Times:

"'No one of you can tell at what hour death will come,' said the pastor of the Presbyterian Church from his pulpit today. Hardly had he spoken when Mrs. Matilda Williams fell from her seat, dead. She is supposed to have died of heart disease. The service was closed with a prayer by the pastor before Mrs. Williams's body was removed, and then the church was closed for the day."

This woman was probably killed by her pastor. Having an affection of the heart, she would probably have died before long, but there is little doubt that the suggestion given out from the pulpit was the direct cause of her death.

Thoughts and words can make people sick. Thoughts and words can kill. This is not a flight of the imagination, but a solid, sober fact. To this extent the "evil eye" is a reality. Therefore, we should be very careful what sort of suggestions we put forth. Yet you find many fools who have no more sense than to say to a man who is somewhat ailing, "How sick you look!"

The Stage as a Rest Cure.

SOME people have a queer idea of rest. For instance, some people call it a rest to hang for an hour on a strap, in a crowded street car, all the way to the beach. There is no accounting for taste.

One of the queerest ideas of a rest cure was mentioned a few days ago in a dispatch from New York. The daughter of a millionaire, married, and now getting a divorce—which is, as she says, "a fearful lot of trouble"—was declared by her physicians to be suffering from nervous prostration. They said that what she needed was "rest and change," upon which she comments that all she had been having for years and years was rest and change. She says she knew what she needed was something to occupy her mind, so she took a job for a season as a chorus girl in a theater.

Like so many other society butterflies, this woman suffered from a lack of some definite object in life. It does not matter whether you take up the stage, or astronomy, or the collecting of postage stamps, you must have some definite object, either in the shape of work or play, to escape the mental prostration that comes from a dissipation of energies, just as physical prostration comes from the frequent dram drinking.

Underfeeding and Overfeeding.

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "Of people whom we meet under 35 years of age, probably one-third are undereaters. Over 35 years of age probably two-thirds are undereaters. Their appearance indicates this."

This correspondent is absolutely, unequivocally, and diametrically wrong in his statement. On the contrary, as frequently asserted here, it is safe to say that 99 per cent. of civilized persons eat too much—from 50 to 300 per cent. or even more in excess of what is necessary to repair waste and maintain heat and energy.

You cannot always judge from the appearance of people. The greatest gluttons are sometimes walking skeletons. It is not what you shove into the hole in your face that builds flesh, but what you assimilate and turn into blood and tissue. Then, again, many great eaters, living on the cook's products, are really starving themselves, by eating food that is lacking in the essential organic salts. In this way they are in one sense underfed, while at the same time they are eating from two to three times as much as is necessary.

If you are underweight do not begin by eating more. That would most likely result in dyspepsia, and the accumulation of gas, when starch foods are eaten, or the storing up of uric acid, followed by rheumatism and other ailments, when you eat much meat. The thing to do is to increase the natural hunger—and consequently the gastric juice, which accompanies hunger—by breathing more oxygen, also, if you lead a sedentary life, by

When a man doing work cannot eat ordinary natural food, it shows not that there is anything the matter with the food, but that there is something the matter with the man's stomach. Therefore, the proper thing to do is to try to find out what is the matter, and to correct it.

This applies to people who say that they "cannot eat" strawberries or oranges, or natural foods of that kind. This means that their system is probably greatly in need of the medicinal qualities contained in these foods, and that they act as medicines. The thing to do is to persist in eating them until you have overcome the conditions that make them objectionable to you. For instance, you might begin by eating one strawberry, or one section of an orange, three times a day.

In Jail and Out.

THERE was a fire recently at San Quentin penitentiary, which threatened the destruction of a million dollars' worth of State property. Convicts were released from their cells, and worked like Trojans alongside of the guards, no attempt to escape being made. Referring to this incident, a contemporary says:

"The fact that no attempt was made to escape speaks highly for the convicts thus placed at almost complete liberty. It shows that even convicts are not altogether bad."

No, indeed. There are some good men in jail, and there are some mighty bad men outside, who ought to be in jail.

American Girls.

WERE the results not frequently so sad, it would be amusing to note the belief which prevails among so many good American fathers and mothers that their growing girls are different from the girls of other nationalities—that they may safely be allowed opportunities and thrown into temptations that would be regarded as out of the question in other countries.

American girls are composed of the same flesh and blood as the girls of other races. When circumstances are favorable, and the strongest passion in human nature comes into play, similar results are inevitable, much to the astonishment and dismay of misguided parents, who really seem to expect that young people in the glow of health, with warm blood running through their veins, shall be able to resist temptations that their elders would hardly come through unscathed.

Substitutes for Saloons.

THE Southern Pacific Company has adopted the policy of building clubhouses at division points, the main object being to keep its employés away from saloons. This is an excellent idea. The Santa Fé has, for years, had accommodations and comfortable reading-rooms at principal points. It has gone further, and has sent out lecturers to speak on interesting topics from time to time.

The clubhouses so far erected by the Southern Pacific Company for their employés on the Pacific Coast include buildings at Roseville and Dunsmuir, in California, and at Yuma and Tucson in Arizona. There is nothing cheap about the buildings or the furnishings. The cost ranges from $10,000 to $35,000 each, and they are furnished with hot and cold baths, libraries of fiction and reference books, correspondence tables and stationery, billiard and bathrooms, game and recreation rooms, barber shop, cigar counter, a restaurant which is never closed, and large bedrooms.

The Chicago Railway Company is fitting up comfortable and attractive clubrooms for its car men. They will contain libraries, billiard rooms, pool tables, barber shops, bootblack stands, shower baths, and assembly halls, with stages and pianos.

This is an excellent idea. It is not surprising to learn that these clubhouses have been most successful. As frequently suggested in these columns, the good people who are continually roaring about the "rum fiend" and doing impossible politics, could accomplish vastly more good if they would only establish substitutes for the saloon. Think or say what you will about the saying that the saloon is the poor man's club, that saying is absolutely true, all the same. Take, for instance, the gloomy, sloppy weather that we often have in Los Angeles early in the year. Where shall a man go of an evening, who is unmarried, and whose only home, perhaps, is a cold ten by twelve bedroom in a cheap lodging-house. Have you ever seen the "sitting-room" in one of those cheap lodging-houses? It is enough to drive one to worse places than a saloon.

Many men resort to a saloon of an evening not so much for the sake of the liquor—some of them perhaps only drink a couple of glasses of beer during an evening—but for the warmth, and light, and cheerfulness which they find there. Where else are they to go? The Y.M.C.A. has accommodations for a limited number, but there you are expected to be fairly well dressed, and a workingman is often too tired to go and dress up of an evening. Besides, at these establishments there is not the freedom which men find—and have a right to expect—in a saloon.

There were in Los Angeles three or four "temperance coffee houses"—established under the mistaken idea that coffee is less harmful than pure beer or light wine. Not proving a financial success, they were sold by the people who started them, and are now conducted as ordinary restaurants. There should be as many of these as there are saloons, but to make them effective as competitors of the saloons they must be run on a more liberal plan. There should be rooms for smoking. Cigarettes might be barred, first because they are injurious, and second because they smell too pungently, but opportunities should be afforded to those who worship "My Lady Nicotine" to smoke their pipes or cigars.

If you don't let them do so, they will go other places where they can. Billiard tables and pool tables should also be provided. They are excellent and healthy indoor games, affording a certain amount of mild exercise. The fact that poolrooms are often ill-ventilated, and attract a more or less undesirable class of people, is no argument against the game, any more than the fact that many churches are poorly-ventilated is an argument against religion. Cards should also be permitted, gambling for money being barred.

Wealthy and moderately rich people have all these things at their clubs. Why then shouldn't a poor man enjoy them? One thing you may be quite sure of—until you furnish substitutes in which these comforts may be obtained, the saloon will continue to hold its own as a popular resort for the homeless—as well as for some who have homes. You are not going to get a healthy and normal man to listen to a vapid sectarian discourse, or to read a religious tract, when he wants to smoke a pipe and play a game of pinochle.

The Decline in Drugging.

IN a paper read before the Los Angeles County Medical Association a few months ago, Dr. Robert P. McReynolds, of Los Angeles, said:

"We must have a more general recognition of the true value to be placed upon drugs, for the wholesale abuse, dishonesty and ignorance in this line has caused an untold amount of harm. It has been the most potent factor in driving people away from regular physicians, and making them converts to Christian Science and other drugless doctrines. We should adopt a rational middle course between absolute therapeutic nihilism on one hand, and an unwarranted zeal for drug therapy upon the other. It will certainly be a triumphant day for medicine when the general practitioner learns to recognize that the pharmacopoeia contains only a few specifics, and to appreciate the fact that most of his indiscriminate drugging is worse than useless. We all look back with dread and horror upon the nauseating decoctions, the salivating, purging and bleeding of our fathers and grandfathers, but we do not stop and consider that the generations to come may have like cause to regard with repugnance some of the present-day methods."

It is hard for the "regulars" to break entirely away from the drugging superstition. One reason of this is that they do not know of any other way to turn, not having been taught in college the laws of health and disease, and how to aid nature by rational means. As shown in the above quotation, however, there is a constant tendency on the part of the medical fraternity to lessen the amount of drugs they use—drugs which change from year to year, as the fashions in hats change. Some are taking to natural methods, such as fresh air, hydropathy, and diet, while others are taking up suggestion. As the people continue to learn that drugs not only never can cure disease, but actually retard permanent recovery, the doctors will prescribe still less, for when people refuse to take drugs there will be an end to the drugging business.

Asking "why do we give drugs" Dr. J. Goodhart, at a meeting of the British Medical Association a few years ago replied as follows:

"Often not because the disease demands it, but because the patient is not happy till he gets it, too often is not happy even then. They are sometimes given to hide our ignorance, I fear, or to mark time while we watch and wait. They are sometimes given as a dealer on the exchange speculates in 'future,' an enhanced reputation being the windfall that it is hoped to secure, and then we often give drugs as an experiment in the hope that they may do good."

Again, in the Medical Brief for March appeared a somewhat remarkable article by N. Lisca, M.D., an Australian physician, who deplores the absolute failure of drugs and the growing lack of faith in them on part of the medical fraternity. In the course of his article he said:

"The bare, unvarnished truth is that, I will say it again, we have no materia medica worth the name. What we do have is an endless and bewildering list of drugs, old and new, without the shadow of anything like a principle to guide us in the selection of them as medicinal agents; with a certain amount of information as to how they are obtained, how they act on guinea pigs, rabbits, etc., but when we come to their action on the human organism we are told that they 'may' do this or that, 'may' be useful in this or that, and that they are 'said' to have done this or that, but, on the whole, nothing certain, nothing definite, nothing positive, no remedy, in short, with the exception of old identities, that may not turn out to be a miserable failure on the first trial. And that is, whether we like it or not, what we have been in the habit of calling the 'Science of Therapeutics.'"

The best thing Dr. Lisca can recommend as a substitute for this lamentable condition of affairs is that the medical fraternity should go over to homeopathy. Well, that certainly woud be a big improvement, because homeopathic remedies are merely another form of suggestion, but it is only a stepping stone to the time when the belief in drugs of all kinds will give way to a sincere belief in the healing power of nature, when she is given only half a chance.

Sir Frederick Treves, physician to King Edward, and Dr. Schweninger, who was Prince Bismarck's physician, have both emphatically expressed the opinion that poisonous drugs and promiscuous surgical operations have, in many instances, a tendency to create disease rather than to cure it.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell is one of the most eminent physicians in America. He is not only eminent as a physician, but as a writer and in other ways. He has celebrated his eightieth birthday. Our newly-elected president recently stopped at Dr. Mitchell's home in Philadelphia. Dr. Mitchell has said: "Medicine is only palliative, for back of disease lies the cause, and this cause no drug can reach."

Absolutely true, this; also, exactly in accordance with the teaching that has appeared for ten years in the Care of the Body. Hundreds of eminent physicians have testified to the same effect. Indeed, it is mainly your superficial commercial physician, never intended by nature to be a doctor, or the callow youth just out of a medical college, who relies mainly upon the use of poisonous drugs in the treatment of disease.

A School of Vice.

WHILE we are talking about abolishing vice in cities, would it not be a good idea to turn a little attention to the messenger-boy service, which may be described as a practical school of vice?

In European countries they usually have veteran soldiers for such work. That might be too slow for America, but then, if they are slow, they are sure, which American messenger boys are not—always.

Anyway, there is a good opening here for some of the surplus energy of our enterprising reformers.

Getting Up in the Morning.

Lives there a man who has not said,
"Tomorrow I'll get out of bed
At 6 o'clock and get things done
Before the setting of the sun."

Lives there a man who has not said,
At 6 a.m., "How good this bed
Does feel," snores till after eight,
Then wondered how he slept so late.
—[Woman's Home Companion.

Here is an item from the New York World:

"The warning of Dr. Savary of Paris against sudden rising will strike a sympathetic chord in every sluggard. But is there not common sense in his statement that "the strenuous business man who bolts out of bed to his bath tub the moment he opens his eyes renders himself liable to a number of ailments?" Among these ailments Dr. Savary includes madness, which is a question over which alienists may quibble.

"Sudden rising when the house is on fire is credited with the cure of rheumatism of long standing. Even the dumb have spoken on such occasions. These exceptions, no doubt, merely prove the rule. The main proposition seems sound, that the sudden lashing of the faculties into activity at the moment of waking by means of a physical effort and a cold bath is conducive to the very evil results which are sought to be avoided.

"The disposition of modern medical science to hark back to the natural instincts as safe guides is one of the evidences of sane medical progress. The doctors of a former day who cupped, leeched, purged and starved patients would view with amazement the more catholic methods of enlightened practice. Following the decreasing reliance on drugs as sovereign remedies, attention is being paid to the correction of errors of hygiene. Dieting on starvation lines is done away with. Even the fetish of cold water is under suspicion. In this direction of saving common sense is the recognition of the virtue of the desire nature has planted in every human breast to lie about as late as possible."

It is perhaps going rather far to claim that jumping quickly out of bed in the morning leads to insanity. Otherwise, however, Dr. Savary is about right. Especially to be avoided are those loud alarm clocks that suddenly wake a person out of a sound sleep.

Instead of jumping out of bed the moment you open your eyes, lie for ten, fifteen, or twenty minutes. Yawn, stretch, gulp, thump your stomach and bowels, and do some of Sanford Bennett's bed exercises. Then, after you rise—unless you are a particularly hardened sinner—instead of a cold bath, take a rub with a damp towel, or with coarse bath gloves.

You will not lose time in this way. On the contrary, it will increase your working efficiency, and so really save you time. The man who jumps rapidly out of bed and shovels hot cakes, maple syrup and coffee into a stomach full of gas is bound to develop a grouch that will follow him all day. In this case, as in some others, more haste often means worse speed.

ELECTROPODES
COPPER PLATE POSITIVE
ZINC PLATE NEGATIVE
Electropodes are positively guaranteed to cure Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Weak Back, Headache, Backache, Insomnia, Indigestion and all forms of Nervous Ailments.
The Electric current, supplied by Electropodes, absorbs the uric acid in the system—removing the cause of Rheumatism, and strengthening all the inside nerves and tissues of the body.
Electropodes
Electropodes are metal insoles, worn in the heels of the shoes—one is of copper, the other of zinc, forming the two poles of a galvanic battery; the nerves of the body become the connecting wires, over which a gentle flow of electricity courses throughout the entire day.
The Contract
The price of Electropodes is $1.00 a pair, and your druggist signs a contract to refund the purchase price, if they fail to effect a cure in every instance. A less meritorious article could not possibly be sold on this basis. If drugs fail to cure you, try Electropodes.
Buy Electropodes of your druggist, and if he cannot supply you, have him order a pair from
